LONDON, JAN 20-(AP)-SOME WORLD STATESMEN TONIGHT SAID PRIVATELY THAT THE FUTURE OF THE UNITED NATIONS ORGANIZATION HINGED TO A LARGE DEGREE ON THEIR SUCCESS OR FAILURE IN DEALING WITH THE TOUCHY RUSSIAN-IRANIAN DISPUTE.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY OFFICIALS SAID THE WORLD SECURITY COUNCIL WOULD MEET TUESDAY OR EDNESDAY TO DECIDE WHEN IRAN'S C

MEET TUESDAY OR WEDNESDAY TO DECIDE WHEN IRAN'S COMPLAINT--FORMALLY FILED WITH UNO YESTERDAY--SHOULD BE PLACED ON THE COUNCIL'S AGENDA.

MEANWHILE, THE POLITICAL AND SECURITY COMMITTEE CALLED A MEETING FOR TOMORROW TO CONSIDER THE BIG THREE'S PROPOSAL THAT A UNIO COMMISSION BE SET UP TO SAFEGUARD THE WORLD AGAINST THE MISUSE OF ATOMIC ENERGY.

THE AMERICAN DELEGATION HAS ANNOUNCED THAT SEN. TOM CONNALLY, A DELEGATE AND CHAIRMAN OF THE SENATE FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE, WOULD SPEAK, SETTING FORTH AMERICAN POLICIES.

INFORMED SOURCES SAID CONNALLY WOULD REPEAT SECRETARY OF STATE JAMES F. BYRNES' STATEMENT THAT NO AMERICAN ATOM SECRETS WOULD BE REVEALED TO THE COMMISSION UNTIL SAFEGUARDS HAD BEEN CREATED.

SEVERAL BRITISH AND AMERICAN DELEGATES, DECLINING TO BE QUOTED BY NAME, SAID THEY WERE SERIOUSLY CONCERNED OVER THE RUSSIAN-IRANIAN DISPUTE, PLACED BEFORE UNO EVEN BEFORE THE ORGANIZATION'S PEACE-MAKING MACHINERY HAD BEEN SET UP.

WHILE CAUTIONING AGAINST "ALARMISM," THESE OFFICIALS REMARKED THAT UNO WAS BEING CALLED UPON TO DEAL WITH A MAJOR DISPUTE WHILE IN ITS INFANCY, WITHOUT A FULL SET OF PROCEDURAL RULES, WITH NO PRECEDENTS, AND WITH SOME SECTIONS OF WORLD OPINION DUBIOUS OF ITS ABILITIES.

IN INFORMED UNO CIRCLES THE ISSUE WAS CONSIDERED PREGNANT WITH POSSIBILITIES, IN THAT A DECISION AGAINST IRAN COULD WEAKEN THE SMALLER NATIONS' CONFIDENCE IN UNO, AND INACTIVITY COULD LOWER THE PEACE AGENCY IN WORLD PRESTIGE.

COURSES OF ACTION OPEN TO THE COUNCIL INCLUDE:

1--IT COULD PROPOSE CONCILIATORY COURSES FOR THE CONSIDERATION OF IRAN AND RUSSIA.

2--IT COULD DEFER PROPOSALS AND SEND A COMMISSION TO IRAN TO MAKE AN ON THE SCENE STUDY.

A73

THERE ALSO REMAINS THE POSSIBILITY OF A CHANGE OF GOVERNMENT IN IRAN, A DEVELOPMENT WHICH COULD PUT A DIFFERENT COMPLEXION ON THE WHOLE ISSUE. DISPATCHES FROM TEHRAN TONIGHT, HOWEVER, INDICATED THAT PREMIER IBRAHIM HAKIMI, WHO HAS OFFERED TO RESIGN, WOULD REMAIN IN OFFICE AT LEAST ANOTHER MONTH.

IN OFFERING TO QUIT LAST WEEK, HAKIMI SAID HE DID SO BECAUSE HE HAD BEEN UNABLE TO RESOLVE HIS GOVERNMENT'S DISPUTE WITH THE SOVIET UNION, CENTERED AROUND THE PRESENCE OF RED ARMY TROOPS IN THE NORTHERN IRANIAN PROVINCE OF AZERBAIJAN.

AFTER RUSSIA OCCUPIED THE PROVINCE EARLY IN THE WAR TO HELP MAINTAIN A SUPPLY ROUTE FROM THE PERSIAN GULF TO THE SOVIET UNION, A MOVEMENT DEVELOPED WITHIN AZERBAIJAN TO SEPARATE THE AREA FROM IRAN PROPER. THE SEPARATIST MOVEMENT CULMINATED IN A DECLARATION BY AZERBAIJANS LATE LAST YEAR THAT THE PROVINCE HAD BECOME AN AUTONOMOUS STATE.

LONDON, JAN. 20-(AP)-THE MOSCOW RADIO SAID TONIGHT THAT THE NATIONAL GOVERNMENT OF AZERBAIJAN HAD ANNOUNCED ITS DECISION TO ESTABLISH INDEPENDENT TRADE CONNECTIONS WITH FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS. THE BROADCAST SAID THE ACTION WAS TAKEN AS THE RESULT OF ASSERTIONS OF MERCHANTS IN THE PROVINCE THAT THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT HAD TAKEN REPRESSIVE MEASURES AGAINST THEM. IT WAS ALSO REPORTED THAT A COMMISSION HAD BEEN FORMED FROM REPRESENTATIVES OF THE MINISTRIES OF TRADE, ECONOMICS AND FINANCE TO ESTABLISH FOREIGN TRADE CONNECTIONS.

A SECOND UNITED STATES PLANE LANDED AT CHINFENG FIELD THURSDAY WITH A CEASE FIRE TEAM CAPTAINED BY COL. RAYMOND R. TOURTILLOT. THE PLANE REMAINED OVERNIGHT AND RETURNED ON SCHEDULE THE NEXT DAY.

IT WAS UNDERSTOOD THAT RUSSIAN AUTHORITIES HAD BEEN NOTIFIED IN ADVANCE THAT THE CEASE FIRE TEAM WAS ARRIVING AND HAD MADE PREPARATIONS FOR THEM. THE PLANE BEING HELD WAS ON RECONNAISANCE FLIGHT JANUARY 14 TO CHECK CONDITION OF THE AIR FIELD AND NO ADVANCE NOTICE WAS SENT TO THE RUSSIANS.

Russia Asks UNO To Crack Down On Britain

'INTERNAL INTERFERENCE' AND 'MILITARY ACTIONS IN GREECE, JAVA CHARGED

Moscow And Ukraine Put Complaints Up To Security Council—14 Killed In Greek Insurrection; Leftists Blame British

Two fresh international disputes confront the UNO Security Council as Russia and Soviet Ukraine ask for an investigation of British "military actions" and "internal interference" in Greece and Java.

Fourteen hostages have been slain in Greece by insurgent Rightists. Leaders of the Left Wing party claim British directly or indirectly supplied weapons to Right Wing elements for the terrorism.

Possible Serious Split Among Five Big Powers Seen

Informed Iran quarters think Cabinet will be succeeded by one which might receive favor of Russia.. (14 RIS) Page 12

London, Jan. 21 (AP)—Russia and the Soviet Ukraine asked the United Nations Security Council tonight to "put an end" to what they termed "military actions" and "internal interference" by Great Britain in Greece and Java.

The complaints suggested a possible serious split among the five great powers—United States, Russia, Great Britain, France and China—who are permanent members of the Security Council and who each exercise veto power.

"Tit-For-Tat" Reaction

There was no immediate official comment from British authorities on the development. British, as well as American and Greek delegates, appeared taken completely by surprise. Diplomatic sources doubted a special meeting of the Security Council would be called to discuss the requests and suggested it would convene in regular session on Wednesday or Thursday.

One British spokesman said his first reaction was that the Russians were playing "tit for tat"—introducing complaints against the British to balance an Iranian protest against Russian interference in northern Iran.

The spokesman said emphatically, however, that the British had nothing to do with the filing of the Iranian complaint.

A Hand In Greek Affairs

The British have taken the position that their forces were in Java solely to disarm surrendered Japanese, as assigned by General MacArthur, and were attempting to maintain order there while the Indonesians and the Netherlands Government threshed out their differences.

Thus two fresh international disputes, in addition to the complaint lodged earlier by Iran against Russia, confronted the security council set up only last week as the United Nations organ empowered to keep the world's peace by force if necessary.

Earlier, the political and security committee of the United Nations Assembly approved establishment of a special commission to devise controls for atomic energy, shortly after a United States delegate made it clear that secrets of America's atom bomb technique would be protected.

Both the Greek and Indonesian disputes, like the Russo-Iranian rift, involve members of the 11-nation security council.

Great Britain has taken a hand in Greek affairs and British forces are being used in Java, where native Indonesians proclaimed a republic in defiance of Dutch claims to sovereignty.

Britain and Russia are permanent members of the Security Council, each with a veto power. Netherlands is not a permanent member and lacks power of veto.

Russian Letter To UNO

Russia, in a letter to Gladwyn Jebb, executive secretary of the United Nations Organization, said:

"Maintenance of British troops in Greece after the end of the war cannot now be explained by the necessity for protecting the communications of British troops in defeated countries.

"Maintenance of British troops in Greece has become a means of pressure on the internal situation in the country, which is not seldom used by reactionary elements against democratic forces of a country."

The Ukrainians, on instructions of their Government, drew the Security Council's attention to the Indonesian situation by stating:

"In the opinion of the Ukrainian Government, this situation creates a state of threat to the maintenance of international peace and security.

"As is known in that country (Indonesia) several months of military actions directed against the local population have been waged in which British forces as well as the Japanese enemy armed forces are taking part."

In the earlier action on the atom bomb, the political and security committee, under major-power pressure for quick legislation, overrode a lone Philippine protest against "railroading" tactics and it seemed likely tonight that the atomic energy would be constituted by mid-week.

U. S. Senator Tom Connally, U. S. delegate and chairman of the foreign relations committee of the U. S. Senate, told the committee that the proposed commission could not make any country yield any atomic secret or take any other action. He explained that the commission would be able only to make recommendations.

The atom development came as two governments prominent in the birth of the United Nations, the French and Iranian, fell over the week-end, creating new problems for the infant organization.

The resignation of Gen. de Gaulle as head of the French government was seen in some sections of the French delegation as possibly meaning a complete reversal of foreign policy with a closer alignment with Russia on issues before the UNO.

Fraser Makes Demand

While France stood without a settled government, Prime Minister Peter Fraser of New Zealand demanded that France and South Africa turn their mandates over to the world peace agency's trusteeship council immediately.

Speaking before the trusteeship committee, Fraser declared that "morally, no nation has a right to misappropriate territory put in its trust" and he asserted both countries had shown hesitancy in turning over their mandates.

France has said it would consider turning over its African mandates in Togoland and the Cameroons, provided satisfactory agreements could be worked out. South Africa has told UNO that its mandate, the former German colony of Southwest Africa, would determine its own future.

make any country give up any atomic secrets or take any other action. The commission will be able only to make recommendations, he explained.

45 Votes Cast For It

Forty-six votes were cast for the resolution approving creation of the commission. Chairman Dmitri Maniulsky of the Ukraine delegation said that the action was unanimous. However, the delegate from the Philippines, Tomas Cabili, abstained after he had protested against what he called an effort to "railroad" the resolution.

Andrei Gromyko, Soviet delegate; Ernest Bevin, British Foreign Secretary, and Connally urged the committee to act immediately, and Bevin repeatedly arose to demand an approving vote.

Pole Makes Plea

Just before the vote Zygmunt Modzielewski of Poland, said there must be "solemn and concrete assurances that atomic energy would never be used for destruction, but on the contrary would be used always for peaceful development of the world's economy and raising the standard of human lives."

Under normal procedure the question will go to the full Assembly for final action after the Security Committee makes a recommendation.

Vandenberg Satisfied

Connally's statement explaining that the commission would be authorized only to make recommendations followed an early controversy between Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and Secretary Byrnes when Vandenberg questioned whether American atomic secrets were adequately safeguarded. Later Vandenberg said the assurances given by Byrnes at the time and incorporated in Connally's statement satisfied him.

The meeting of the Political and Security Committee was the first of a long series of committee sessions today as the UNO moved into a new phase of its organizational work.

Quick Action Urged

The United States, Britain and Russia had called for quick committee action on the resolution drawn up in the Foreign Ministers' Christmas conference in Moscow, which provided that the atomic commission work under the Security Council rather than the 51-nation assembly.

The resolution called for exchange of basic scientific information among nations, establishment of controls for peaceful uses of atomic energy, elimination of atomic power as a mass destruction weapon and provision for inspection and other safeguards.

De Gaulle Move Studied

Behind the scenes, interest centered on two problems—Gen. Charles de Gaulle's resignation as head of the French Government and the Iranian appeal to the Security Council to intervene in Iran's troubles with Russia.

The Security Council showed no inclination to rush into the Iranian question, but there was speculation among delegates that if de Gaulle is succeeded by a Communist, as some suggested, the power lineup of the UNO would be materially altered.

[Meanwhile, Trade radio said that resid[illegible]Trieste had dispatched tele[illegible]ms to Edvard Kardelj, head of the Yugoslav delegation, protesting that the status of the disputed border city must not be settled by internationalization.]

Atomic Control Plan Is Approved By UNO Council

London, Jan. 21 [Reuter]—The Security Council of UNO was expected to hold an informal meeting this afternoon to discuss the best method of dealing with the Russo-Iranian dispute. A formal meeting of the full Security Council is not expected to take place before Wednesday when the Iranian question will be the first item on the agenda.

London, Jan. 21 (AP)—Creation of a special commission to devise controls for atomic energy was approved by the Political and Security Committee of the United Nations Assembly today after one 30-minute discussion.

The action was taken after Senator Connally (D., Texas), of the American delegation, said the commission will not have power to

Soviet, Ukrainian Notes

LONDON, Jan. 21 (AP)—The following are the texts of the Russian and Soviet Ukrainian letters asking the United Nations Security Council to consider the troubled situations in Greece and Indonesia:

The Russian Letter

Dear Mr. Chairman:

The delegation of the Soviet Union, acting on the instructions of the Soviet Government, in accordance with Article 35 of the Charter of the United Nations, considers it necessary to discuss in the Security Council the situation which has arisen in Greece.

The maintenance of British troops in Greece after the end of the war cannot now be explained by necessity for protecting the communications of British troops in defeated countries.

Moreover, the maintenance of British troops in Greece becomes a means of pressure on the internal situation in the country, which is not seldom used by reactionary elements against the democratic forces of a country.

This situation, which means internal interference in the affairs of Greece with the aid of armed forces of a foreign power, has created a tension which is fraught with great consequences for the Greek people as well as for the maintenance of peace and security.

In view of the circumstances referred to above, the Soviet asks the Security Council to discuss this question and take such measures as are provided for in the Charter in order to put an end to the existing situation.

Yours sincerely,

ANDREI GROMYKO,
Acting Chief of the Soviet Delegation.

The Ukrainian Letter

Dear N. Makin [Norman J. O. Makin, Australian delegate and chairman of the Security Council]:

The delegation of the Ukrainian Socialist Republic to the first session of the Assembly of the United Nations, acting on instructions of their Government, draws attention of the Security Council, under Article 35 (1) of the Charter of the organization, to the situation which has arisen in Indonesia.

As is known in that country several months of military actions directed against the local population have been waged, in which British troops as well as Japanese enemy armed forces are taking part.

In the opinion of the Ukrainian Government this situation has created a state of threat to the maintenance of international peace and security, which is covered by Article 34 of the Charter.

The Ukrainian delegation asks the Security Council to carry out the necessary investigations and take measures provided by the Charter in order to put an end to the present situation.

Yours sincerely,

DMITRY MANUILSKY,
Chief Delegate of the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic.

Statement by Connally

LONDON, Jan. 21 (AP)—The text of a statement made by Senator Tom Connally to the United Nations Political and Security Committee on the power of the atomic energy commission follows:

The combined efforts of the United States, Great Britain and Canada during the war resulted in great scientific discoveries in the field of atomic energy. The world importance of the problems presented by these discoveries was the subject of a declaration made by the heads of governments of these three States at Washington on Nov. 15, 1945.

That declaration proposed the establishment of a commission under the United Nations Organization to study these problems. As a result of discussions at Moscow in December the Soviet Union agreed to join in the sponsorship of a resolution for the establishment of such a commission to be presented to the General Assembly at its first session. It was further agreed that France, China and Canada should also be invited to join in the sponsorship of the resolution, and they have agreed to do so.

The proposed resolution therefore has been presented on behalf of all the permanent members of the Security Council and Canada. The commission is intended to inquire into all aspects of the problems presented by the discovery of atomic energy and by the other forces capable of use for mass destruction. Its object is to study and recommend measures which will permit and promote the use of these forces for peaceful and humanitarian purposes under security conditions which will protect the world against their use for destructive purposes.

To Make Recommendations

In performing its work the commission must obviously operate within the framework of powers conferred upon the United Nations Organization by its Charter. It is authorized to make recommendations, but not to compel action upon the part of any States. Each State will be free to consider the [illegible]ptance or rejection of the co[illegible]tion's recommendations in a[illegible]iance with its own constitut[illegible] processes.

As Sec[illegible] of State Byrnes stated on [illegible]30 after returning from Mo[illegible] "The four objectives set [illegible] in the proposed resolution [illegible]lishing the commission a[illegible] intended to indicate the order in which they are to be considered. In particular, it was intended and is understood that the matter of safeguards will apply to the recommendations of the commission in relation to every phase of the subject, and at every stage, indeed, at the root of the whole matter lies the problem of providing the necessary safeguards."

The resolution recognized the interest and deep concern of all mankind in working out a lasting solution for this profoundly important problem by providing that the commission should be established by the General Assembly. In this way, as President Truman recently said, "all nations would have a voice in selecting the proposed commission."

However, the only known use of atomic energy at present is for mass destruction on a scale unparalleled in the history of warfare. In view of the transcendent importance of the security aspects of the problems raised by the discovery of atomic energy the resolution provides that the commission shall submit its reports and recommendations to the Security Council.

The Security Council is authorized to give directions to the commission in matters affecting security, and it may restrain publication of reports detrimental to peace and security. But such action requires the affirmative vote of seven members of the Security Council, including the concurring votes of the permanent members. It is clear, therefore, that failure of the Security Council to act cannot block the work of the commission.

It is the earnest belief of the United States Government that this resolution will enable the commission to perform its work effectively and without delay. The delegation of the United States strongly urges that this committee promptly recommend that the General Assembly approve the resolution.

Italian Official Plans World Socialist Group

London, Jan. 21 (AP)—Vice Premier Pietro Nenni, of Italy, said today the Italian Socialist party would participate with British and French Socialists in organizing a new Socialist International.

Nenni, who heads the Italian Socialist party, has spent nearly a week here conferring with British Labor party and Government leaders.

He said Socialists from many countries would meet here in April to plan a world Socialist congress in 1947 and that offices would be set up in London after the April meeting.

"The proposed congress would operate on the same basis as the previous Socialist International," he said, "and would seek to improve conditions of the working class in Europe."

Nenni said the international's scope would be made world-wide if Socialist groups in other countries affiliated themselves with it.

Belgians Reject Request by Leopold

London, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—The Brussels Radio said today that the Belgian Government had rejected a request by King Leopold that the question of his return to the throne be submitted to a national referendum following the forthcoming general elections. Leopold now is in Switzerland.

CZECH GENERALS EXECUTED

LONDON, Jan. 21—(AP) Two Czechoslovak Gendarmerie generals were convicted by the National Court at Prague of war crimes today and were executed a few hours later, the Prague Radio said.

The generals who went to trial Jan. 15 were Otto Elsnic, 65, accused of betraying [illegible] friends to the Gestapo, and Robert Richtermoc, 70, charged with intiating a plan which forced 400,000 Czechs into the German army.

Communists Seek De Gaulle's Post As President Of France

Paris, Jan. 21 (AP)—French Communists asked the Socialist party tonight to join in a Communist led two-party government and proposed their own party's secretary general, Maurice Thorez, Minister of State, to succeed Gen. Charles de Gaulle as interim President of France.

The strong possibility remained, meanwhile, that de Gaulle, far from retiring completely from political life, might emerge as the head of some new party in the national elections next spring, after the Constituent Assembly has drawn up a constitution for the Fourth Republic. A statement made by his private secretary that de Gaulle would retire was described by sources close to de Gaulle as a "political blunder."

Gets De Gaulle Letter Today

The Constituent Assembly will meet tomorrow afternoon to hear de Gaulle's letter of resignation as head of the provisional republic, but it was thought likely that action on the choice of a successor might be put off until Wednesday.

The Communists proposed Thorez openly, but the way was left clear for choice of a Socialist president when Thorez himself asserted his own candidacy was "not irrevocable."

The Communist proposal for a two-party government was made in a letter from Communist Leader Jacques Duclos to the Socialists, in which he said the Popular Republicans (MRP) had rejected a similar offer.

Following an evening meeting of the MRP's parliamentary group it was stated the MRP had not formally declined the Communist proposition, but that a final decision would await tomorrow morning's meeting of the party's directors.

At the same time it was made clear the majority of the party's members opposed participation in a Communist Front government, but were more favorable to a Socialist Cabinet.

The Communists and Socialists now appear closer together than at any time since the summer, when the Socialists rejected a proposed fusion of the two worker parties. As in other two crises in the last two months, the Socialists held the key position. Previously they refused persistently to ally themselves with the Communists at the expense of the MRP, or with the MRP at the expense of the Communists.

Under Communist Attack

The MRP has been under constant Communist attack as "reactionary" and a haven for former Rightists.

Ostensibly de Gaulle resigned because his work of preparing the way for organization of the Fourth Republic was finished, but one of the immediate reasons palpably was the Communist-Socialist agreement to work jointly on a draft of the constitution which would reduce the President to the status of figurehead. De Gaulle opposed it.

The largest of France's three major parties, the Communists pinned their hope for political control upon Thorez. They had advanced him before there was any indication of a definite choice of candidate either by the Socialists or the MRP.

De Gaulle Decision Held Final

There was little doubt of the finality of de Gaulle's resignation. He left for his suburban Neuilly home in the afternoon and apparently intended to stay there for some time.

Part of the strength of the long, lean war leader, who stepped down only two months after the Constituent Assembly elected him, came from a reluctance on the part of any of the three big parties to assume responsibility for direction of the Government during the difficult reconstruction period which finds most of France still cold, hungry and discontent.

This was evident at the time of de Gaulle's election, when he threatened to resign because of Communist demands for one of three key policy-making Cabinet posts. It was evident again in the New Year's Day crisis, when de Gaulle threatened to step down because of Socialist demands for a deep slash in the army budget.

Herriot As Possible Successor

Among the possibilities for successor to de Gaulle is Edouard Herriot, three times a Premier of France and a veteran parliamentarian. He is chairman of the once-powerful Radical Socialist party, now reduced to the status of a minor party. His selection would be tantamount to choosing a neutral, should agreement be reached on a three-party Government.

Thorez, 45-year-old former coal miner, has been Communist secretary general for fifteen years. At the start of World War II, he fled to Russia, stating he feared the Government of Premier Edouard Daladier. He was condemned for desertion by an army court, but in 1944 was pardoned by de Gaulle and he returned to France. His citizenship rights were restored by decree just before the elections of last October.

Vincent Auriol, another outgoing Minister of State, who fled from London with Foreign Minister Georges Bidault when the crisis broke, for many years has been parliamentary secretary of the Socialist party. His party is the smallest of the three major ones but has held the strategic middle position.

Reds Call to French Socialists

Plea for Coalition to Replace De Gaulle Comes as Blum Praises Communists.

Paris, Jan. 21 (A. P.)—The Communists tonight proposed to the Socialists the formation of a Communist-Socialist Government headed by a Communist to succeed Gen. de Gaulle who yesterday resigned as President of the French Provisional Government.

The Communists, largest single party in the Constituent Assembly, proposed for President the 45-year-old former coal miner, Maurice Thorez, Minister of State in the DeGaulle Cabinet and secretary-general of the French Communist party for fifteen years. The offer to the Socialists was made by the Communist leader, Jacques Duclos, who said that the third largest party in the Assembly, the Popular Republicans, had refused to participate in a Communist-led Government.

Fled France in 1939.

Thorez, who fled to Russia at the start of the war to escape the Daladier Government's anti-Red drive, was charged with desertion from the Army, but was pardoned by De Gaulle and allowed to return to France in 1944.

Today, apparently, the Communists and the Socialists stood closer that at any time since last summer when the Socialists rejected a fusion of their two parties. The former Socialist Premier, Leon Blum, wrote in La Populaire today: "The best Chief of Government, the best formula of government, will be that which can today facilitate the union of democrats. . . . Such, I aver, is the spirit of our party. I am sure that it is also that of our Communist comrades."

De Gaulle stepped down from the presidency with an announcement that he considered he had completed the task of "leading the country toward liberation, victory and sovereignty."

Letter Is Quoted

In a letter of resignation addressed to Félix Gouin, president of the Constituent Assembly, he said:

"If I agreed to remain at this Government post after November 13, 1945, it was to respond to the unanimity with which the national Constituent Assembly addressed itself to me to take care of a necessary transition. Today that transition has been effected. Besides, France, after great trials, no longer is in an alarming situation. . . ."

Party leaders met in a special conference and were expected to call the Assembly into session either later today or tomorrow.

Radio Talk Off

De Gaulle canceled a radio talk to the nation that he had scheduled for tonight, and reportedly left Paris, presumably for seclusion in the country while he waited for the Constituent Assembly to act on his resignation.

Although his secretary said the resignation was "irrevocable," some political sources predicted de Gaulle might be prevailed upon to form a new government or to reconsider his resignation. The latter sources said the announcement he would retire from public life had been "a political gaffe (blunder")

There were some reports that the resignation might be rejected by the Assembly. Other quarters said that if the resignation were accepted de Gaulle might run again this time as head of his own party. Heretofore he has stood alone, without a party.

Thorez Proposed

The Communists, after holding a conference with representatives of the more conservative Popular Republican Movement party (MRP), announced that they would demand that a Communist be elected provisional president. They immediately advanced the name of their Minister of State, Maurice Thorez, as de Gaulle's successor.

Vincent Auriol, the Socialist Minister of State, was considered another likely candidate in authoritative political circles, which also talked of a Socialist-Communist government headed by a Radical-Socialist, perhaps prewar Premier Edouard Herriot.

Four Reasons Advanced

Four reasons were advanced for de Gaulle's resignation:

1. His unalterable opposition to the proposed draft of a constitution on which the Socialists and Communists are working, leaving the MRP outside.

2. Resentment at continued Communist efforts to achieve a new Popular Front in a fulier alliance with the Socialists, the Radical-Socialists and other leftist parties, at the expense of the MRP.

3. Resentment at attacks on the Government for the food situation and for the expenses of the army.

4. His lack of desire to head anything but a tripartite government.

Army Budget Crisis

De Gaulle's action came after 48 hours of conferences with party leaders, and followed Communist and Socialist demands for an additional cut of twenty per cent in the budget for the Army.

The crisis began New Year's Day, but was resolved at that time by a compromise calling for an immediate reduction of five per cent in the Army budget, and a subsequent cut of twenty per cent if the Government did not effect a reorganization of the forces to operate more economically by February 15.

The new crisis was said to have arisen when de Gaulle changed his mind on the compromise "because of the tension of the world situation as revealed at the London United Nations conference."

Details Reported

The 55-year-old provisional president was said to have stated his position to the cabinet on a take-it-or-leave-it basis.

An authoritative source said that when opposition persisted, de Gaulle then told the Cabinet:

"I have had enough. I do not want to assume direction of a government in which political parties or groups do not cease to attack me."

A Weaker Presidency

Communists and Socialists, who joined forces on the army issue, subsequently announced an alliance on a proposed constitution which would strip most of the powers from the presidency.

De Gaulle, leader of Free French forces in the war against the Axis, was elected November 13 by the Constituent Assembly as interim president.

From the very day I undertook the duty of leading the country toward its liberation, victory and sovereignty, I considered that my task should end when national representative government would return and the parties thereby would find themselves in a position to assume their responsibilities.

If I agreed to remain at this Government post after Nov. 13, 1945, it was to respond to the unanimity with which the National Constituent Assembly addressed itself to me to take care of a necessary transition. Today that transition has been effected.

Besides, France, after great trials, no longer is in an alarming situation. Certain sufferings still weigh on the French people and serious problems remain, but the life itself of the French is essentially assured. Economic activity is getting back on its feet, our territories are in our hands, we have set foot again in Indo-China, public peace is not troubled.

Abroad, in spite of the disquiet that persists, independence is firmly established. We hold the Rhine. We are participating in the front row in international organization. It is in Paris that the first peace conference is due to assemble in the spring.

In retiring, I express the profoundly sincere wish that the Government which will follow the one I have had the honor of heading succeeds in the task that remains to be accomplished to insure the destinies of the land permanently.

Kindly accept, Mr. Chairman, the assurance of my high regard.

—CHARLES DE GAULLE

UNO on the Alert.

London, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Behind the scenes at today's meetings of UNO committees, sharp interest in Gen. De Gaulle's resignation as President of France was reported. There was speculation among the delegates that if De Gaulle is succeeded by a communist, the power line-up in the UNO would be materially altered.

GERMAN ELECTOR IGNORE RED PART

FRANKFURT, Germany, Jan. 21 (AP) Final returns in the first free, secret election in Germany since Hitler took control gave the edge today to the moderately Leftist Social Democrats, with the Christian Democratic Party running second.

The election yesterday in 1,200 communities of Greater Hesse for the choice of village councils went off quietly under the direction of German authorities.

The Social Democrats, with a mild socialistic platform, received 146,508 votes out of a total of 376,794 cast. The Christian Democrat party which ranks about center in the political lineup received 99,591 votes.

The Communists on the extreme left and the Liberal Democrats on the extreme right ran far behind in this traditionally conservative agricultural area. The Communists polled 16,608 and the Liberal Democrats 5,662 votes.

The orderliness of the election and the big vote turned out were hailed by military government officials as a sign that "democracy is not dead in Germany."

Similar local elections are scheduled for next Sunday in 10,000 other small communities of the American zone.

The elections involve only communities under 20,000 population in the American zone. Larger cities will vote in the spring with state-wide elections to follow at a date not yet announced.

83 P. C. VOTE CAST IN REICH

German Villages Hold First Elections in 13 Years.

Frankfurt, Germany, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Final returns of the first free elections held in Germany in thirteen years showed today that 83 per cent of the qualified voters exercised their franchise yesterday in balloting in which the Social Democrats set the pace.

The Social Democrats with a mildly Socialistic platform garnered 146,508 votes of a total of 376,794 cast in 1,200 communities in Greater Hesse, which elected village councils. Similar local elections are scheduled in 10,000 other communities in the American occupation zone next Sunday.

The Christian Democratic party, which ranks about center in the new German political line-up, ran second to the moderately leftist Social Democrats, with 99,591 votes. The Communists, at the extreme Left, and the Liberal Democrats, at the extreme Right, ran far behind in the traditionally agricultural area, where the elections were held. The Communists polled 16,608 and the Liberal Democrats 5,662 votes.

Independent candidates won 92,383 votes, substantiating the predictions by German politicians and military government officials that these local elections would not be very significant of German political trends. The military government, which supervised the tabulation, said that many contests were decided on personalities rather than on political partisanship, just as local elections are in the United States.

The voting was under the supervision of the German authorities and no instance of trouble was reported. The elections involved only communities with fewer than 2,000 inhabitants. The larger towns and cities will vote in the spring, and statewide elections will be held later. The inexperience of the Germans with secret ballots was reflected in the nearly 5 per cent of ballots invalidated for improper marking. About 8 per cent of those of age were barred from voting because of their former activity as Nazis.

George Lyster, redeployment officer of the European theater, said today. Lyster estimated about 50,000 brides and dependents are awaiting passage from all countries of Europe.

FRENCH SAY NAZIS LOOTED EUROPE

NUERNBERG, Germany, Jan. 21 —(AP) The French, portraying in great detail what they called the greatest looting scheme in history, charged today before the International Military Tribunal that the Nazis deliberately stripped Western Europe of industrial resources to the extent of sending whole factories and tramway systems to the Reich.

The French prosecutors said they expected to spend the entire week telling the tribunal which is trying 22 ranking Nazis as war criminals the story of what the French said was a deliberate plan for seizing Western Europe's material wealth.

Specifically, they said that in March, 1943, the Nazis requisitioned an important Dutch factory which was transported, complete with all machines, technical installations, tools and designs, to the neighborhood of Brunswick for the Hermann Goering Works.

Further, they charged that the Nazis sent street cars, rails, trolley wires, buses and rolling stock to the Reich from Norway and Denmark.

The prosecution also charged that Hermann Goering and other Nazi leaders sponsored a gigantic German purchasing program on black markets in France and other occupied countries.

The French said this wild black market buying was intended to strip every scrap of food and vital materials from those countries, even though it might mean famine for the victims.

It was charged that the Nazis levied huge sums, ostensibly as occupation costs, in all countries. In Norway, they were said to have forced the citizens of certain towns to pay indemnity for the British air raids while in Holland the asserted recalcitrance of the Dutch was punished by heavy fines on entire communities.

Nazis' Black-Mart 'Spree' Is Told

Nuernberg, Germany, Jan. 21 (AP)—Eager to strip occupied Western countries of every scrap of food, even though it might mean famine, Hermann Goering and other Nazi leaders sponsored a huge German purchasing program on black market in France and other occupied territories, the International Military Tribunal was told today.

The wild black-market spree—into which the Nazis poured billions of francs seized from the French ostensibly to cover occupation costs—reached ludicrous proportions in 1942, with various German agencies bidding against one another, French war-crime prosecutors charged.

Goering Intervenes

Goering finally intervened with a demand that the black-market dealings of the Wehrmacht and other German groups be centralized and "regularized" on a grand scale the prosecution continued.

A secret report by Nazi Col. J Veltjens, director under Goering of the economic exploitation, said purchases up to November 20, 1942 aggregated well over a billion reich marks. Of the total, 929,000,000 were in France, 103,881,000 in Belgium, 73,685,000 in the Netherlands, and a little over a million in Yugoslavia. The report was introduced by Charles Gerthoffer, assistant French prosecutor.

Plans Of French

[The mark was quoted at about 40 cents in late 1941.]

The French said they expected to spend the entire week detailing the story of what they called the greatest looting scheme in history, the systematic Nazi seizure of the material wealth of western Europe.

Next week, they said, they will begin to summon witnesses to testify to Nazi atrocities in slave-labor and prisoner-of-war camps.

TOP NAZI DOCTORS SOUGHT FOR TRIAL

30 Held Responsible In Death Of 600,000 'Useless Eaters'

Nuernberg, Germany, Jan. 21 (AP). United States authorities said tonight they sought the full identification and arrest of 30 top-ranking Nazi doctors held responsible for the wanton killing of approximately 600,000 "useless eaters" and "unproductive people" in five years for the sake of the German war effort.

Members of the American prosecution in the international war crimes trial of leading Nazis said confiscated papers showed the doctors masked scientific murder operations as a foundation for asylum care.

An American inquiry was made into the sinister "welfare" institutions controlled by Wilhelm Frick, former Minister of the Interior and one of the present defendants.

"House Of Mystery" Center

The prosecution said papers disclosed that the foundation was set up in a "house of mystery" at Tiergartenstrasse 4, Berlin, in 1939.

German insane were to be the first executed when the program under way in 1940, the papers showed, but soon the only requirement for execution became physical inability to work.

Available data indicated some 600,000 persons, of whom less than ten per cent were insane, and fifteen per cent were cripples, were destroyed. The remainder, the papers made it appear, were regarded by the high Nazi policy makers as "unproductive" and therefore better dead than using up German food resources."

Displaced Americans To Get Food Packages

Berlin, Jan. 21 (AP)—Some 300 American displaced persons in the Berlin area were informed today of a grant of a semi-monthly food package.

Responsible for details of the distribution is Miss Mary Ann Weber, of 1935 Vine street, Baltimore.

Registered Americans qualifying for these gift packages are chiefly persons who for family, or other cogent reasons, were unable to leave Germany when the war began and kept up their establishments, so that there is no need for affording them refuge in an UNRRA center for displaced persons.

The first of the two monthly packages consists of one half pound of cheese, seven ounces of biscuits, a choice of a 12-ounce tin of chopped ham, or corned beef; one half pound of sugar. The second package consists of one pound of oleomargarine, six ounces of liver pate, one can of salmon or two tins of sardines, six ounces of jam and one chocolate ration bar.

Added to these packages is one pound of powdered milk for children under 6 years of age.

Thus far, General Cannon declared in a statement yesterday, his command has been able to fulfill its duties only through "the yeoman work of the few experienced men left."

GREEK RIGHTISTS KILL HOSTAGES, REFUSE TO YIELD

ATHENS, Jan. 21 — (AP) Fourteen hostages have been killed by members of an Extreme Right Wing group who have barricaded themselves in a mountain village 10 miles northwest of Kalamai (Kalamata) after rejecting a surrender ultimatum, the Greek government said tonight.

The ultimatum gave the insurgents until 4 p.m., tomorrow to surrender to government troops.

Meanwhile the KKE, political bureau of the Left Wing party, issued a statement accusing the British of responsibility for "Monarcho-Fascist terrorism in Greece" by directly or indirectly supplying weapons to Right Wing elements.

The anouncement called upon the people to proclaim a general strike and take up arms.

Skirmishing Reported

In Kalamai itself, order was restored fully, the government said, after the arrival of substantial reinforcements, but skirmishing was reported on the outskirts of the city between government forces and rebel Monarchist groups.

Minister of Public Order Stamatis Merkouris ordered troops and gendarmerie to rescue 150 hostages he said were held in the barricaded mountain position by the Right Wing insurgents. The Bishop and Mayor of Kalamai appealed without success for release of the hostages, taken in a Kalamai raid yesterday.

Merkouris said earlier a state of near anarchy had engulfed the area of Kalamai and that martial law had been proclaimed in Southern Pelopponnesus. The Greek destroyer Crete opened fire on forces of the Royalists in Kalamai.

The Monarchists, reported to number about 2,200 men, were said to be well equipped. Most of them were uniformed, the minister said.

Merkouris dispatched a battalion of motorized troops and 200 police to the port city after armed members of the Monarchist organization identified by the symbol "X" seized 200 civilians in a bloody raid yesterday.

Centering their attacks on police headquarters, the raiders freed 32 suspects who had been held in the slaying of four supporters of the Left-Wing EAM (National Liberation Front) last week.

Merkouris said 700 of the insurrectionists marched on the public prosecutor's office in Kalamai, but were driven off by police and national guardsmen who had barricaded themselves in the prison and other public buildings. No estimate of casualties for either side was available.

EAM Supporters Held

The police and guardsmen, Merkouris said, were under orders to protect all public buildings, but particularly the prison, where a number of EAM supporters are held.

Apparently the rebels swiftly seized control of the Southern Pelopponnesus port. Leaflets announcing the imposition of martial law had to be dropped on Kalamai and neighboring towns from planes. The captain of the destroyer which opened fire on the rebels said the Monarchists were attempting to capture Kalamai civilians.

The prefect of Kalamai, in a telephone report to Athens, said the revolt broke out in reprisal for the slaying by Communists last week of one of the leaders of the "X" group, his two-year-old son and two other Royalists.

BIG-SCALE BATTLE FOUGHT IN GREECE

Athens, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Government forces fought an estimated 2,200 Monarchist insurrectionists today in Southern Greece and the Minister of Public Order Stamatis Merkouris, said that the Peloponnesus had been brought to the verge of anarchy. He declared martial law in the region and sent a battalion of motorized troops and 200 gendarmes to Kalamai (Kalamata) where he said the "X" Monarchist organization seized 200 civilians in a bloody raid on the port city yesterday.

Leaflets announcing martial law in the southern Peloponnesus seaport and neighboring towns were dropped by plane, indicating the rebels retained control. The rebels were identified as members of a monarchist organization. A battalion of motorized troops and a company of gendarmes were reported dispatched to the scene.

The trouble apparently stemmed from the slaying of four supporters of the left wing EAM organization near Sparta last week. Merkouris said the rebels stormed the Kalamai jail and liberated thirty-two persons held as suspects in the slaying.

Government Criticized

Athens, Jan. 21 (AP)—The government of Prime Minister Sophoulis, which has set March 31 as the date for general elections, found itself under fire from Left Wing leaders today for alleged failure to take the necessary measure to insure an honest poll of public opinion.

Left Wing followers at a mass meeting in Athens Stadium yesterday adopted resolutions criticizing the Government's policies and objecting to "intervention of foreign reactionaries." Left Wing spokesmen recently have been highly critical of British influence in Greece.

Kerr in Moscow On Way to Java

Moscow, Jan. 21 (A. The British Embassy said he would depart for Java in a few days.

NEW BARON MADE

Greek Leftists In Moscow

The delegation is visiting factories and conferring with trades union leaders in the Soviet Union.

Outlook For Iran Government

Tehran, Jan. 21 (AP)—Ibrahim Hakimi resigned as Premier of Iran, and today some informed quarters predicted his Cabinet would be succeeded by one which might gain the favor of the Soviet Union.

[In London, Nasruliah Entezam, Iranian delegate to the United Nations General Assembly, said in an interview the resignation "may mean the institution of direct negotiations with Russia" looking toward solution of the dispute over northwestern Azerbaijan province, where separatists have set up an automonous government.]

The elderly statesman, who led his Government in attempts to resolve the dispute with the Soviet Union over Azerbaijan, said he presented his resignation to the Shah last night in a private audience at the palace. Some informed observers believed the Shah might ask Hakimi to form a new government.

May Affect Iranian Appeal

"I have succeeded in placing Iran's case before the United Nations Organization and am now ready to step down," Hakimi said in an interview. He referred to the Iranian delegation's formal appeal to the United Nations Security Council to investigate the dispute over Azerbaijan.

The opinion was voiced in London that now the Soviet-Iranian dispute might be taken out of the hands of the Security Council, to which it was referred last Saturday when Iran's delegation charged Soviet "interference" in Azerbaijan affairs. The appeal would not stand if a new government should back down from the position taken by the Hakimi Canibet. However, until they hear otherwise, the Iranian delegation planned to proceed with the Security Council appeal.

Critic Praises Premier

Announcing the Shah's acceptance of the resignation, the speaker of the Majlis (Parliament) announced that the members would convene tomorrow to consider the organization of a new government.

A court spokesman said the Shah was "studying the problem" of a successor to Hakimi, but that "his selection of course will depend upon which of the aspirants will be able to muster a majority in Parliament."

Dr. F. Mossadehg, fiery critic of Hakimi in the last few weeks, praised the outgoing Premier in a Parliament speech for "patriotic action in sacrificing his personal position for the good of his country."

Resignation Was Predicted

Mossadehg suggested Hakimi's successor should "place Iran's problem before the United Nations Organization only in the event direct negotiations with Tabriz (Azerbaijan capital) and Moscow proved fruitless."

Hakimi's resignation had been predicted for several weeks, because of the separatist move in the northwest. Reports were widespread that pressure would be brought to bear because of conditions in Azerbaijan, and that Hakimi would be succeeded by a government more favorable to the views of the Soviet Union, whose border touches the province.

New Outbreaks Reported

Announcement of the resignation came as dispatches of the Soviet news agency Tass reaching here reported new widespread outbreaks which extended to the southern provinces, remote from Azerbaijan. There was no official confirmation.

Prominently mentioned among the possible successors to Hakimi is Qavan Ahmed Sultaneh, a former Premier who is a large landowner in Russian-occupied northern Iran. Many members of the Majlis said Sultaneh would be the person most acceptable to the Soviet Union, and that it was possible he could gain Soviet favor for his Government.

Hakimi's decision at this time came as a surprise to his supporters in the capital. While his resignation had been predicted, supporters of the Premier recalled that only yesterday a series of political moves had assured Hakimi of at least 30 more days in power.

PREMIER HAKIMI OF IRAN RESIGNS

Tehran, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Premier Ibrahim Hakimi resigned last night after asserting his efforts to negotiate with the Russians over Azerbaijan had failed. Hakimi's fall was foreshadowed last week when he told Parliament that his foreign policy had failed. He said efforts to negotiate with the Russians were unavailing and that he proposed to present the case to the United Nations Organization.

Today Hakimi said he had told the Shah he had succeeded in placing Iran's case before the United Nations Organization and I am now ready to step down."

Many observers expressed the opinion that Mohammed Reza Pahlavi would ask Haikimi to form a new Government. However, three other men have been mentioned as his possible successors. They are former Premier Qavan Ahmad Sultaneh; Ali Khan Mansur, Governor of Kohrassan, and former Premier Pirnea.

Possible UNO Action

London, Jan. 21 (AP)—The Iranian delegate to the United Nations Assembly, Nasrulah Entezam, said today that the resignation of Iranian Premier Hakimi "may mean the institution of direct negotiations with Russia" to settle Iran's dispute with the Soviet Union.

The Iranians have protested alleged Russian interference in Iran's internal affairs.

MARSHALL URGED AS CHINA ARBITER

CHUNGKING, Jan. 21—(AP) Gen. George C. Marshall, special American envoy who arranged the Chinese truce, may be invited to act as mediator on government reorganization problems now before the political consultative conference, informed Chinese said today.

Marshall returned to Chungking today from a short visit in Shanghai, where he conferred with Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, commander of U. S. forces in the China theater.

The political conference, now working through subcommittees to try to create a government representative of all parties, was said to favor deferring any call to Marshall as arbiter so long as there remained any hope of solving their differences unaided.

It was conceded, however, that there was little chance of settling such questions as reorganization of the state council before the Wednesday deadline for adjournment.

Chinese observers thought it almost certain that Marshall at least would be called upon to help in the unification and reorganization of Chinese military forces, now being studied by a committee of two National Government generals and one Communist.

The struggle between government and Communist forces in the field today, eight days after the truce took effect, appeared to have degenerated into a series of skirmishes.

party proposal for broadening the Government was unacceptable. The Communists offered a six-point counterproposal.

Agree In Principle

The committee's views were expressed in its official organ, the Emancipation Daily, which said it agreed in principle with broadening the scope of the Government, but offered these alternatives:

1. Thorough abolition of all nominal or virtual interference by the Kuomintang in all government, central to district.
2. Equality of all parties and groups, with fair representation in government.
3. No party to occupy more than one third of the seats in the Government.
4. The Supreme Political Organ (National Council) should have full powers, including the appointment of top administrative personnel.
5. Reform of the Central organization must take place at the same time provincial, county and district administrative machinery is democratized.

Free Elections At Once

6. Free elections based on universal suffrage and a board democratic basis should be held immediately to convene a National Assembly, frame a constitution and set up a permanent coalition government.

The Yenan newspaper asserted that the Central Government appeared willing to appoint "only several non-Kuomintang party members to the National Government Council as a bargain for maintaining one-party rule."

Associated Press Correspondent John Roderick reported from Yenan that the Communist China news agency charged that Central Government troops wrested two towns on the Yangtze, Paipu and Hsingjen, from Red forces last Monday and Wednesday, after the truce deadline.

5 China Provinces Report Battles

Chungking, Jan. 21 (AP)—Skirmishes were reported today in five North China provinces, a week after the truce deadline, but all appeared to be of small scale.

The provinces named were Suiyan, Hopei, Honan, Shansi and Kiangsu. Both the Central Government and the Communists held the other responsible.

In Yenan, the Chinese Communist Central Committee announced that the Kuomintang (National)

Shang, Chiang Aide, To Attend Big 5 Talks

Chungking, Jan. 21 (AP)—Gen. Shang Chen, chief aide de camp to Gen Chiang Kai-shek and former chief of the Chinese military mission to Washington, today was appointed to head the Chinese delegation to the forthcoming Big Five military conference in London.

Gen. Ho Ying-chin, commander in chief of the Chinese Army, was to have headed the mission but for undisclosed reasons will not go to London.

CHINESE TOLD TO DRAW BACK

Truce Commission Sets Rule For Rival Forces Still Fighting

Peiping, Jan. 21 (AP)—Executive headquarters of the new truce commission, in its second general directive, today ordered both Chinese Communist and National Government troops in zones of conflict to withdraw at least 20 miles, or one full day's march, from the points of combat.

As soon as the forces break off fighting and are separated, field commanders are further instructed, positions that the two sides held on the night of January 13 are to be restored. It was on the night of January 13 that the truce was to have taken effect.

Planes Scatter Leaflets

The new directive came at a time when there were many reports of violation of the cease-fire orders. Not all of them, however, could be confirmed. American Army and Marine planes, nevertheless, were scattering cease-fire leaflets throughout five provinces of north and central China.

In all, 215,000 leaflets were dropped on 31 towns in Shansi, Hopeh, Shantung, Honan and Kiangsu provinces. Another 145,000 leaflets and 100,000 copies of the second general directive will be dropped over the 31 towns tomorrow.

The new order has been transmitted by radio to senior commanders of government and Communist forces, and is being disseminated by them, as well as by civil radio and newspapers.

Executive headquarters also announced today that a mobile field team is scheduled to be dispatched from Shanghai to Canton. This is the eighth headquarters "truce team" to be sent out, and the first to go south of the Yangtze River.

U. S. UNITS IN CHINA NOW 'STABILIZERS'

Bates of House Committee Says in Tientsin That Marines Will Stay to Insure Peace

TIENTSIN, Jan. 21 (AP)—American marines probably will be kept in North China as a "stabilizing force" now that the repatriation of the Japanese has been turned over to the Chinese, Representative George J. Bates of Massachusetts, a member of the House Naval Affairs Committee, said here today. He is in Tientsin with a Naval Affairs subcommittee.

"The marines may be kept here some time longer as a stabilizing force while the good offices of the United States Government are being used to reconcile the two Chinese forces into peaceful settlement," he said.

"We are interested in a permanent world peace. We are of the conviction that unless we lend a hand, another world conflagration may be in the making."

The Naval Affairs Committee, he said, is interested in the disposal of surplus naval material, inspection of navy installations in the Pacific, demobilization of the armed forces and general conditions in the Pacific areas captured or retaken from the Japanese.

"Now that China is being freed of the Japanese," he said, "we want to lay the foundations of a new government in China. We don't interfere in Chinese affairs, only in so far as those internal affairs of China concern world peace.

"I don't know how long the settlement of China's affairs will take, but progress is being made. How long the marines remain in China depends on how much cooperation we get from the Chinese in establishing the kind of government which will guarantee the world against future wars."

State Department's View

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21 (AP)—The State Department reiterated today that United States forces were in China only to assist in disarming and repatriating Japanese troops.

In response to a question growing out of a statement by Representative Bates in Tientsin that repatriation of the Japanese had been turned over to the Chinese and that the marines in North China now constituted a "stabilizing force," an official of the department said:

(1) Technically the responsibility for disarming and repatriating the Japanese in China had always rested with the Government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek;

(2) A number of policy statements since the surrender, including the communiqué of the Big Three Foreign Ministers of Moscow, had emphasized that the American forces where in China only to assist Generalissimo Chiang in carrying out these obligations;

(3) Statements of President Truman and Secretary of State Byrnes had stressed that United States forces would be withdrawn from China as soon as the repatriation of Japanese was completed or whenever the Chinese Government might indicate it was in position to do the job alone.

"That is what the policy has been, what it is now, and what it will be," the spokesman told a news conference.

Get Authority for Trial

Shanghai, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—China Theater war crimes officers today received authority from Washington to appoint a military commission to try Japanese accused of atrocities against Americans.

Arraignment of nineteen Japanese in connection with the torture parade and cremation of three Yank B-29 flyers at Hankow on December 16, 1944, probably will begin Wednesday.

Lieut.-Col. Willis A. West of Portland, Ore., will be the chief prosecutor in the trials which will start about two weeks after the arraignments. The names of the American victims at Hankow have never been fully established and will not be used during the arraignment or trial.

The top-ranking Japanese prisoner will be Major-Gen. Masataka Kaburagi, former Chief of Staff of the Japanese Thirty-fourth Army, who is accused of ordering the torture march through Hankow.

The Hankow case will be followed by the trials of seven Japanese officers charged with the execution of three Doolittle flyers in October, 1942.

Mine Kills British Soldier

BATAVIA, Java, Jan. 21 (AP).—One British soldier was killed and four were wounded today south of Soerabaja in eastern Java, as stubborn resistance from Indonesian Nationalists forced the withdrawal of British patrols.

The British casualties were sustained when a weapons carrier was mined.

In the Bandoeng area southeast of Batavia there was some firing around the perimeter of Nationalist positions, and Dutch reports said Indonesians were throwing up roadblocks east of the city.

Indonesians Erect Defenses

Batavia, Jan. 21 (AP)—British authorities reported today that defense positions were being erected by Indonesians south of a railway line near Bandoeng and that Indonesians were continuing to evacuate the southern part of that town. Two British patrols were forced by artillery fire to withdraw from a point south of Soerabaja.

400 JAP WAR PLANTS SEIZED

MacArthur Thwarts Undercover Reconversion Scheme

Tokyo, Jan. 21 (AP)—Japanese efforts to engineer an undercover reconversion of war-production machinery to peacetime profit making were halted today by General MacArthur, who seized nearly 400 war plants and ordered the Government to cease removal of equipment from their premises.

The seized plants included 265 aircraft and parts factories listed by the Allied Reparations Commission as "first priority material" for removal to other nations, and 129 other factories, navy arsenals and war laboratories.

Reconversion Permits Canceled

MacArthur ordered cancellation of all previously issued permits for reconversion of individual factories, except those "immediately and absolutely essential to the civil economy."

Guards were placed on the seized properties and their commanders were instructed to remember that the plants probably would be taken as reparations "and consequently should not be allowed to acquire importance in the Japanese economy."

[H. D. Maxwell, of Tacoma, deputy chief of the American Reparations Commission, arriving at Hamilton Field, Cal., after a survey of Japanese industrial assets, said Japan had a surplus of industrial capacity despite air-raid damage and could pay "more than we expected."]

Trial Courtroom Selected

Selection of a courtroom for the trial of Japan's top war-crimes suspects, tentatively scheduled to begin March 1, was announced today by Chief Prosecutor Joseph B. Keenan. It is a large auditorium in the War Ministry building—a few feet from the conference rooms used by Premier Hideki Tojo and his leading generals during the heyday of Japanese military success.

The international tribunal will be seated on the stage of the auditorium, so that press and spectators will have a clear view of the proceedings.

Public relations officers said the War Ministry building was the only available site for the trials in Tokyo. Requisitioning of the Diet building for this purpose was ruled out by MacArthur's policy of avoiding disruption of normal Government functions so far as ible.

394 WAR FIRMS OF JAPS SEIZED BY MACARTHUR

Allied Command Indicates Many Will Be Used as Reparations.

ALL PLACED UNDER GUARD

Order Discloses Nipponese Have Allowed Valuable Machines to Deteriorate.

(SPENCER)

Tokyo, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—War plants which equipped Japan's losing bid for conquest were seized and placed under guard today by Gen. MacArthur, who indicated many of the factories would go to Allied nations as reparations.

The Allied command took over 394 Japanese aircraft plants, Army and Navy arsenals and war laboratories. Among these were 265 aircraft and parts plants listed by the Allied Reparations Commission as "first priority material" for removal to other nations.

MacArthur ordered cancellation of any previous permits to the designated installations for conversion to peacetime production, unless the installations were "immediately and absolutely essential to the civil economy." Commanders given custody of the installations were told to consider the "probability that these plants will be taken as reparations and consequently should not be allowed to acquire importance in the Japanese economy."

Machinery Removed.

The directive disclosed that in some instances the Japanese had removed machinery from plants and that equipment valued at millions of dollars had been allowed to deteriorate. The Japanese Government was ordered to cease removals immediately and place guards around the buildings.

[The amount and extent of the indemnity Japan is to pay are to be established soon, H. D. Maxwell of Tacoma, deputy chief of the American Reparations Commission, said on arriving at Hamilton Field, Cal., from Japan. Maxwell, returning with ten other members of the commission, said Japan has a surplus in industrial capacity despite air raid damage and can pay "more than we expected."]

As part of the Allied program to restore Japan to peacetime pursuits, Sixth Army troops now consolidated with the Eighth Army, were estimated to have eliminated more than one-third of Japanese war materiel on Southern Honshu, Kyushu and Shikoku in three months. Lieut.-Col. Clinton A. Waggoner, ordnance officer of La Porte, Tex., said the matterial destroyed included artillery pieces, planes, tanks, midget submarines, poison gases, bombs, rockets and rocket launchers, and ammunition.

Plants Deteriorating.

Major J. A. O'Hearn of Boston, chief of the industrial division of headquarters economic and scientific section, said the directive taking over the war plants was intended not only to stop removal of machinery, but also to accomplish the return of whatever has been removed.

"The deterioration of machinery and equipment in the installations is pretty widespread," he said. "We want to stop it. They also have been taking machinery to warehouses and just piling it up."

MacArthur's directive gave the Japanese seventy-two hours after its receipt in which to report to American commanders and receive orders for carrying out the provisions.

Denies Report About Peers.

On the political side, a story in the newspaper Yomiuri Hochi that the Government had decided to abolish the entire peerage system drew an official denial.

"That is not planned at present, although it might happen later," Chief Cabinet Secretary Wataru Narahashi said in an interview.

Narahashi said the Government's proposed revision of the House of Peers, to be submitted at a special Diet session after the forthcoming national election would reduce the number of titled members in that Chamber from 200 to 30.

Religious Figures Seen As Jap Candidates

Tokyo, Jan. 21 (AP)—Jiji News Agency said that both Shinto and Buddhist priests and other religious leaders will seek election to the Japanese Diet in Japan's general elections.

Entrance of religious figures into political race was seen as an outgrowth of Allied directives abolishing state Shintoism and Government restrictions on religious activities.

Textile Experts Arrive In Japan

Tokyo, Jan. 21 (AP)—Five American and two British Empire textile experts arrived today to join General MacArthur's special staff on the economic-scientific section.

They were H. Wickliffe Rose, of Philadelphia; Frank Rowe, Jr., of Danville, Va.; Fred Taylor, of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C.; Frank Winterbottom, of Manchester, England, and Bharat Ram, from India.

Jap Heat For Yanks In China

Tokyo, Jan. 21 (AP)—Allied headquarters ordered the Japanese Government today to send 2,000 electric heaters to China to warm American occupation forces there—the proceeds to be made available to Japan for payment of essential imports.

Says 50 Prisoners Died.

Yokohama, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Kaichi Hirate, former Japanese prison camp commandant, testified today at his trial on charges of mistreating Allied soldiers that about fifty prisoners died in the two Hokkaido camps he commanded.

Hirate, accused of responsibility for the deaths of four Allied prisoners, told the United States Military Commission trying him that forty-three men died early in his command. This, he said, was because "the prisoners who first arrived from Indonesia were particularly weak and it was tantamount to receiving sick men."

Hirate testified he received a number of complaints from prisoners that they were mistreated by employees of companies to whom they were farmed out as laborers. He said he asked the managements to punish such workers for these acts.

11,000,000 Jap Bullets Destroyed In A Day

Fukuoka, Japan, Jan. 21 (AP)—Thirty-second Division patrols under Lieut. Allen H. Moran, of Roanoke, Va., destroyed 11,000,000 rounds of Japanese small-arm ammunition one day last week.

It was a record in destruction of Japan's war potential by the patrols exploring caves, warehouses and places previously overlooked.

6,500 Yanks Join New Vet Association

Kure, Japan, Jan. 21 (AP)—More than 6,500 officers and enlisted men have joined the new 41st Infantry Division Association and the total membership is expected to exceed 10,000, Mast. Sergt. Frank W. Kerr, Seattle, president of the association, announced.

The association's initial program is to sponsor the compilation and publication of the division's history from its entry into Federal service until its inactivation last December 31.

Officers of the association will be established somewhere in the United States Pacific Northwest. The division when taken into Federal service was a National Guard organization, with units from states in that region.

Case Against Hicswa Is Told

Two Attacks Were Charged to Jersey G. I. Whose Friends Say Japs Liked Him.

Nara, Japan, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Buddies of Pfc. Joseph E. Hicswa, 20-year-old G. I. of Wallington, N. J., under sentence of death for the fatal stabbing of two Japanese civilians, said that he was a likable chap who got along well with the Japanese people, and his superior officer, Capt. G. B. Welsh Jr. of New Orleans, who expects to be a witness when Hicswa's case comes up for review, said: "We used him as a pusher in cases where we were working with the Japanese because he got on so well with them.

"He never gave us a bit of trouble except for two minor violations. He was a hard worker, his character and efficiency were excellent," Walsh added yesterday.

Pvt. William E. Rourke, Bridgeport, Conn., said: "Everybody in the battery liked him. He got along with the Japanese better than anybody in the battery."

T/S. Hugh Ward of Double Springs, Ala., said: "He was as good a friend as we had in the battery. I don't think he did it, but if he did, the sentence was darned heavy."

Pfc. Alexander Pappas of Elkhart, Ind., said: "I did K. P. with Joe at the battery, and our Japanese help liked him the best of all."

As Told at Trial.

Roy Roberts, Associated Press correspondent, reported from Osaka yesterday the following outline of the case as it was presented by witnesses at Hicswa's court-martial:

On November 24, Hicswa and friends packed their gear preparatory to departing for a replacement depot at Nagoya to return to the United States. There Hicswa intended to take a furlough merited through his reenlistment on November 22. After packing, witnesses testified, the soldiers began drinking Japanese beer, whiskey, sake and American beer.

About 8 P. M. Hicswa left quarters with two friends and went about a mile away to Nara Park, temple grounds in the city of Nara. There the men saw two Japanese.

Witnesses said that Hicswa, without warning, cried: "Let's get 'em." Both Japanese ran. Witnesses said that Hicswa caught one and inflicted twenty stab wounds to the full eight-inch depth of a bayonet. The Japanese fell screaming.

Same Attack Repeated.

Witnesses said that friends pulled Hicswa away and the trio walked on, leaving the victim.

Fifteen minutes later another Japanese was seen, and, according to evidence presented, Hicswa, again without any exchange of words, inflicted the same treatment.

Japanese civilians reported the killings to the Japanese police next morning and they in turn notified the military. The two bodies were found. Two soldiers' caps were found nearby.

Witnesses said that the Military Police found a bloody jacket and trousers in a latrine near Hicswa's barracks and a bloody bayonet in a pipe. Hicswa was arrested and the two other soldiers were traced.

The trial required four days and was held before eight officers. The Army declined to give the names of Hicswa's two companions.

KOREA BOY SCOUTS OUTLAWED BY U. S.

Seoul, Korea, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—The disbandment of all unofficial armies in Korea, including the Korean Boy Scouts—who have no connection with the International Boy Scouts organization—was ordered today by Major-Gen. Archer L. Lerch, Military Governor of the American occupied area of this country.

The Army meanwhile continued its investigation of the rioting between Left and Right wingers on Friday night and Saturday which cost the lives of two Koreans and caused the injury of many others. Officers explained that the Korean Boy Scouts range in age from 13 to 29 years, that 10 per cent were married and that apparently they were hired out by their leaders to various factions.

The situation in Korea was quiet after the rioting last week as the Joint American Soviet Commission resumed its conferences.

Hirohito's Stallion Proves Bum Sailor

Los Angeles, Jan. 21 (AP)—Matsushimo, Hirohito's celebrated white horse, is a bum sailor.

So today an army vet put him on the sulpha cure, intent on staving off a cold apparently caused by seasickness.

Matsushimo, which Admiral William F. (Bull) Halsey once promised to ride through Tokyo's streets but never did, contracted mal de mer two days out of Yokohama, Lieut. Dick Ryan reported, and was a sick stallion the rest of the way. Owner Ryan and the steed arrived yesterday aboard the transport Golden Eagle.

Capt. Percy Aldrich, veterinarian at the port of embarkation, took over Matsushimo's care. Ryan later hopes to take him to his Oceanside (Cal.) ranch.

U.S. Officers To Get Aussie Secretaries

Canberra, Jan. 21 (AP)—American army officers in Manila probably will get Australian secretaries after all, but they'll not be any of the fifteen girls sent to the Philippines recently and returned at the request of the Australian Government.

Immigration Minister Arthur Calwell said passports would be issued to secretaries nominated for the posts, but none to any of the original fifteen recalled because of leaving without passports or income-tax clearances.

Union 'Ban' On Aussie Brigadier Is Lifted

Canberra, Jan. 21 (AP)—The Canberra Trades and Labor Council has lifted its boycott against Brigadier Derek Schreiber, permitting the resumption of normal deliveries and services to the household of the officer, chief of staff to the Duke of Gloucester, Governor General of Australia.

The ban was lifted after Schreiber's former chauffeur, former Corporal E. C. Fields, was assured of reinstatement in his job as a hotel barman, from which union leaders asserted he had been discharged because of the brigadier's "influence." Schreiber denied the council's charge.

11 Items Dropped In Homma Trial

Manila, Jan. 21 (AP) — Eleven minor specifications to the 48 charges against Lieut. Gen. Masaharu Homma were stricken today as the prosecution rested its case and the war crimes trial of the Japanese commander was recessed for one week.

In an effort to speed up the proceedings, the prosecution had not presented witnesses concerning the eleven items, all of which dealt with scattered atrocities by troops under Homma's command at the time of the Philippines conquest.

The major charges, including responsibility for the Bataan Death March, and the deadly conditions in the Cabanatuan prison, still stand.

Accused By Wainwright

San Antonio, Texas, Jan. 21 (AP)—Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright said today he held Lieut. Gen. Masaharo Homma "responsible" for the infamous death march and other atrocities in the Philippines.

At his first news conference after taking command of the 4th Army at Fort Sam Houston here Saturday, the hero of Corregidor branded as a "lie" the statement of a Japanese lieutenant who said his prison camp was run so well that "I even received words o fpraise from General Wainwright.

The Jap officer, Lieut. Kei Yuri, was speaking of the Omuta Camp on Kyushu Island.

"I was never in the camp he mentions," General Wainwright said.

General Wainwright was a prisoner of the Japanese from May, 1942, to August, 1945. He said he was treated "very well" at one prison camp, but added that "at no place were we ever given good food."

HOMMA TRIAL IS RECESSED

Prosecution Rests Case Against Jap.

Manila, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—The war crimes trial of Lieut.-Gen. Masaharu Homma was recessed today for a week after the prosecution had completed its case against the one-time commander of the Japanese armies of the Philippines. Defense counsel was successful in a motion to strike out eleven of the forty-eight specifications with which Homma was charged. All the dismissed specifications were minor in character, relating to small scale atrocities and executions.

Two army career officers concluded the prosecution case. Both were survivors of the Death March from Bataan. Col. John B. Pugh of Washington, D. C., who was Gen. Wainwright's senior aid and Major Achilles Tisdelle of Chicago, who was aid to Maj-Gen E. P. King Jr., signer of the surrender terms with the Japanese were the witnesses. They had been flown from the United States to appear at the trial.

Tisdelle testified that the Death March was entirely unnecessary since the Americans had retained enough transport to have carried the entire surviving garrison. He also said that the Japanese had refused completely to discuss surrender terms with the Americans, or to give any consideration to treatment of prisoners, asserting: "We are not barbarians."

The Death March started shortly after the statement was made.

FILIPINOS RENOMINATE OSMENA FOR PRESIDENT

MANILA, Jan. 21.—(AP) President Sergio Osmena was nominated today by the Regular Wing of the Nacionalista Party to succeed himself as the Philippines chief executive at the April 23 election.

The Liberal Wing of the [illegible] nominated Manuel Roxas a presidential candidate on Saturday. Roxas, now president of the Senate split recently with Osmena after years of political friendship.

Osmena Nominated By Loyalist Wing

Manila, Jan. 21. (AP)—The old guard Loyalist wing of the Nacionalista party today nominated President Sergio Osmena for re-election by acclamation, and adopted a New Deal program which recognized "the right of every Filipino to a wage which not only permits him to live, but live well."

The program was considerably more liberal than observers had expected the Loyalists to adopt. Proposals for rehabilitation of the Philippines included extension of long term Government credits for rebuilding homes and small businesses.

TERMS DRAFTED FOR AIRBASE USE

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Jan. 21—(AP) A general agreement was reached today by British and American aviation conference delegates on terms for commercial use of United States military airfields and bases leased from Britain in 1940. Terms were not disclosed, however, pending submission of the final draft to Washington and London.

Vice Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, adviser to the U. S. delegation at the conference, before leaving today for Washington, said detailed arrangements had "been agreed upon in a manner which protects the interests of the U. S. Army and Navy and will, I believe, be very satisfactory both to airlines and to local civil authorities."

Consideration of the plan by Washington and London is expected to take several days, after which the conference here will take final action on the agreement.

Truman Asks Wage Rises and Price Control, Same Taxes, 50% Budget Cut, Draft Extension

Drop In National Debt Predicted; First In 17 Years

JAN 22 1946

Washington, Jan. 21 (AP)—President Truman presented a $35,860,000,000 Federal budget to Congress today with his assurance that for the first time in seventeen years no increase in the national debt will take place.

Military expenditures and the aftermath of war account for almost three fourths of the budget total.

The President estimated that the Government will raise $31,513,000,000 toward meeting the bill for the fiscal year beginning July 1, thus leaving a deficit of $4,347,000,000.

Treasury Balance Cut

The deficit, however, will be taken care of, he said, "by a reduction in the very substantial balance which will be in the Treasury during the next fiscal year." In fact, the debt itself will be pared from its present $278,000,000,000 to $271,000,000,000 eighteen months hence.

Mr. Truman, however, called for taxes to be held at present levels.

"Inflationary pressures still appear dangerously powerful," he told Congress in his annual budget message, "and ill-advised tax reduction would operate to strengthen them still further.

"This not the time for tax reduction."

Cutbacks In 1946

Comparing the new 1947 budget with the current one, the Chief Executive said that with war-spending cutbacks the total for the 1946 fiscal year now is estimated at $67,200,000,000. Receipts are placed at $38,600,000,000, leaving a deficit of $28,600,000,000.

Salient features of the 1947 budget:

1. National defense, occupation and war liquidation will cost $15,000,000,000, including $1,200,000,000 for UNRRA.

2. Veterans' pensions and benefits are set down for $4,208,000,000.

3. $5,000,000,000 is earmarked for servicing the war-swollen national debt.

Atom Total Secret

4. Provision is made for continued work in the field of atomic energy, but this is a secret item and the funds involved were not disclosed.

5. International financial programs will require $2,754,000,000. These include the Bretton Woods agreements, Export-Import Bank operations and expenditures arising from the proposed loan of $3,750,000,000 to Britain.

6. General Government running expenses are estimated at $1,565,000,000, exclusive of Army and Navy, agricultural aids, public works and social security payments.

7. More than $2,000,000,000 is included for aids to agriculture and for the Commodity Credit Corporation, largely for price stabilization and price support resulting from the war food-production program.

Not Based On Boom

Mr. Truman said his budget estimates "are based on the assumption of generally favorable business conditions but not on an income reflecting full employment and high productivity that we hope to achieve. In future years the present tax system, in conjunction with a full-employment level of national income, could be expected to yield more than $30,000,000,000, which is substantially above the anticipated peacetime level of expenditures."

In one reference to future budgets, he observed: "They can hardly be expected to be reduced to less than $25,000,000,000."

The budget message was unique in one respect. For the first time it included not only the customary estimates based on existing law, but also tenative estimates to provide for proposed legislation recommended by the President in his companion report on the state of the Union.

Legislative Program

These recommendations include: Universal military training, stock piling of strategic materials, adequate salaries for all Government workers, a comprehensive program of scientific research, the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence project, extension of crop insurance, a "full employment" law, health and medical-care program, an increase in unemployment-insurance benefits and a federal airport-development program.

The Chief Executive noted that the 1947 budget was "about a third of the budgets for global war, although nearly four times the pre-war budgets."

Details of the army and navy budgets, which total $13,000,000,000, were not included in the President's message. He used overall figures, saying he would transmit detailed recommendations in the spring.

Allowances Cut

He noted that "although allowances for occupation, demobilization and defense are drastically reduced in the fiscal year 1947, they will still amount to 42 per cent of the total budget. The so-called 'aftermath of war' expenditures account for a further 30 per cent of the total."

Mr. Truman said his over-all defense estimates made provision "that we keep abreast of scientific and technical advances." Allowance was made, he said, "for military research, limited procurement of weapons in development of state and "for maintenance of our war expanded naval and merchant fleets."

War Loans End

Discussing borrowing and the public debt, he said:

"The successful conclusion of the Victory Loan marked the end of war borrowing and the beginning of the transition to the postwar debt management.

"Because of the success of the Victory Loan, I am happy to report that the Treasury will not need to borrow any new money from the public during the remainder of the fiscal year except through regular sales of savings bonds and savings notes.

Debt Reduction

"Furthermore, a part of the large cash balance now in the Treasury will be used for debt redemption, so that the public debt which now amounts to $278,000,000,000 will decrease by several billion dollars during the next eighteen months."

[Elsewhere the budget message showed the anticipated reduction in the debt to be $7,000,000,000 for the period mentioned. The Treasury balance now is nearly $25,000,000,000.]

The Chief Executive remarked that "it is good to move toward a balanced budget and a start on the retirement of the debt at a time when demand for goods is strong and the business outlook good. These conditions prevail today. Business is good and there are still powerful forces working in the direction of inflation."

Truman Is Cautious

Although Mr. Truman spoke only of "moving" toward a balanced budget, White House officials took the view that the budget he submitted was virtually balanced. They pointed out that estimates to cover the cost of legislation recommended but not yet enacted accounted for most of the indicated $4,300,000,000 deficit.

Under old-budget procedure, they said, such estimates would not have been included, so receipts and expenditures would be close to balancing.

These officials disclosed that the new budget is based on estimates of a national income of between $135,000,000,000 and $140,000,000,000 and a gross national product of between $170,000,000,000 and $178,000,000,000.

Start Of Period

At the start of reconversion in the period from October to December, 1945, the budget message said, income payments were at the rate of $132,000,000,000 a year, and the gross national product at a rate of $182,000,000,000 annually.

These figures were cited by Mr. Truman when he said it had "become essential to formulate and consider the Federal budget in the light of the nation's budget as a whole."

"The wartime annual rate of Federal expenditures has been reduced by $32,000,000,000," he pointed out, "while the nation's budget total has dropped only half as much. The drop in total value of production and services has been less drastic because increasing private activities have absorbed in large measure the manpower and materials released from war production and war services."

Public Works Included

The budget carries substantial provision for public works. The President said "an estimated $1,740,000,000 will be expended in the fiscal year 1947 for direct Federal public works and for loans and grants for public works."

Other message items of interest:

Tax refunds of approximately $1,585,000,000 will be paid to individuals and corporations during the 1947 fiscal year.

"Benefit payments out of old-age and survivors' insurance during 1947 are estimated at $407,000,000, while withdrawals by states from the unemployment trust fund for compensation benefits are expected to total $1,000,000,000. These disbursements are financed out of Social Security contributions."

Sale Of Surpluses

War material and supplies originally costing $50,000,000,000 ultimately will be declared surplus. Thus far $2,300,000,000 of this amount has been disposed of in sales yielding $600,000,000.

"In the past three months private exports have been slightly in excess of imports for the first time since 1941."

"Total capital outlays for resource development are estimated at $653,000,000 in the fiscal year 1947 as compared with $452,000,000 in 1946."

"The Federal-expenditure estimates for the fiscal year 1947 include $53,000,000 for new construction in rivers, harbors and the Panama Canal, and $291,000,000 for highways and grade-crossing elimination, assuming that the states expend some $275,000,000 on the Federal aid system."

Increased funds were recommended for civil aeronautics promotion, business and manufacturing censuses, and other expanded business services of the Department of Commerce, and the collection of internal revenue in the Treasury Department.

Concern Over Strikes Is Voiced; Inflation Is Held Chief Worry

President's Aim Is Lower Priced Goods Made by Higher Paid Workers.

WOULD RENEW PRICE CONTROL

Says Loan to Britain Would Ease Her Transition Problem—Calls for More Food Subsidies.

Washington, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—President Truman asked Congress today to get behind a sweeping program he said will promote greater output of lower-cost goods by higher paid workers. And he cautioned that "voices of disunity" which "are beginning to cry aloud again . . . must not prevail."

In a 25-000-word document combining for the first time both lawmaking and budget recommendations, the Chief Executive mixed expressions of optimism over business and job potentialities with fresh warnings against inflation and concern over "major strikes."

In the "State of the Union" portion of his message, Mr. Truman termed establishment of a "fair wage structure" the "most serious difficulty" in the path of reconversion and expansion, adding:

"The ability of labor and management to work together, and the wage and price policies which they develop, are social and economic issues of first importance."

As to Labor and Management.

He said labor and management must establish "better human relationships," and—apparently mindful of his recent fruitless efforts to avert the nation-wide steel strike—declared:

"No Government policy can make men understand each other, agree, and get along unless they conduct themselves in a way to foster mutual respect and good will.

"The Government can, however, help to develop machinery which, with the backing of public opinion, will assist labor and management to resolve their disagreements in a peaceful manner and reduce the number and duration of strikes."

Mr. Truman said most industries and most companies "have adequate leeway within which to grant substantial wage increases."

Elaborating on his higher wage theory, he said:

"Good wages means good markets. Good business means more jobs and beter wages. Substantial wage increases are good business for business because they assure a large market for their products; substantial wage increases are good business for labor because they in crease labor's standard of living; substantial wage increases are good business for the country as a whole because capacity production means an active, healthy, friendly citizenry enjoying the benefits of democracy under our free enterprise system."

The President said further on this point:

"If we manage our economy properly, the future will see us on a level of production half again as high as anything we have ever accomplished in peacetime. Business can in the future dox fiscal policy would counsel, or leaving it approximately at its present level as certain Left-wing schools of economic thought now advocate. He merely expressed confidence in the ability of the nation ot "manage" this burden.

Further Confusion.

Under any administration a presidential budget is, at best, a confusing combination of fiscal legerdemain, wishful thinking, and inspired guesswork, but President Truman, in the calculations presented to Congress today added further confusion to the document by departing from standard budgetary practice and including in his estimates a part—but not all—of the initial cost of the elaborate legislative program recommended elsewhere in his voluminous annual message.

To the estimated expenses of government under existing legislation he added $3,000,000,000 to cover preliminary costs of some of his new proposals. He confessed that in doing this he had not taken into account some of his more elaborate projects, such as health insurance, and he flatly refused to give newsmen any breakdown of his estimates that would show how much each of his legislative proposals would cost, or which ones were covered. With honest candor, however, he inserted in his message an obscure sentence of warning that these estimates were for the coming fiscal year only and that due consideration had been given to the length of time it would take up to set up the necessary machinery and organization under the proposed new laws. Therefore, in future years, the cost of these items would be substantially larger.

Under these circumstances, it is impossible to discern in his message any factual and exact picture of what the Government's fiscal position will be in the coming year, which begins on July 1. It can only be said that if Congress enacts all of the Truman program, Government expenses next year will be higher than the budget estimates presented today, and in future years will be vastly larger as to these particular items. If, on the other hand, Congress approves none of the new proposals, expenses will be $3,000,000,000 lower than the totals carried in the Truman budget, and the deficit will be cut to under $1,500,000,000.

Since Congress at the moment is ill-disposed toward the bulk of these new legislative proposals, and since an examination of the budget estimates in detail suggests broad fields in which economics might be practiced, it is possible that this first Truman budget may afford the legislators the best opportunity they have had in seventeen years to balance expenditures and receipts and to wipe out the deficit.

If they should decide to pursue this course, however, it would be in defiance of the President and not in co-operation with him.

Two Possibilities.

The cold facts and figures of the Truman budget, therefore, are:

(Under proposed new legislation.)

Expenses	$35,860,000,000
Receipts	31,513,000,000
Deficit	4,347,000,000

(Under existing legislation only.)

Expenses	$32,860,000,000
Receipts	31,513,000,000
Deficit	1,347,000,000

In dealing with the expenditure side of the budget President Truman has fashioned his fiscal policy with a lavish hand. Although the nation will have been at peace for more than ten months by the time the new fiscal year begins, he estimates that national defense and war liquidation will eat up 42 per cent of the total budget. Under this head, the Government will spend ten times as much as it did in pre-Pearl Harbor years, and will use 10 per cent of the total national income—that is, 10 per cent of the total earnings of all the people and all the enterprises in the country.

For the aid of foreign nations he contemplates loans and grants totaling more than $17,000,000,000, of which less than one-third would be paid out during the current and the coming fiscal years, leaving more than two-thirds to come out of future budgets, as yet undrafted.

For the ordinary peacetime expenditures of the national government he calculates a rise of 30 per cent on the basis of existing legislation; with the addition of another 30 per cent if Congress should adopt his current proposals.

Kinds of Expenses.

Analyzed by broad categories his estimates of expenses are as follows:

Expenses	(In billions of dollars)
Defense, war, and war liquidation	$15.0
War's aftermath (veterans, interest, tax refunds)	10.792
International finance (under existing laws)	1.254
International finance (under proposed laws)	1.5
Other activities (under existing laws)	5.813
Other activities (under Truman proposals)	1.5
Total	$35.860

A study of the detailed items under these headings indicates that President Truman has used the term "national defense" loosely and that it covers many expenditures by normal peacetime agencies of the Government for services that have only the most tenuous and remote connection with the actual defense of the nation. In fact, one-fifth of the $15,000,000,000 total listed for national defense will be scattered among agencies outside the War and Navy departments. For example, $1,000,000,000 will go to the office of the President for use by the so-called war agencies such as the OPA. Again, $17,500,000 will go to Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, to be spent largely on day nurseries.

A sizable chunk of money will be used in laying up ships of the wartime merchant fleet, which was expanded to five times its pre-war size, yet elsewhere in the budget the President calls for an expenditure of $84,000,000 for the construction of additional merchant vessels "to round out" this fleet.

In all, the President concedes that only about one-third of the national defense expenditures will actually go for pay, subsistance, travel and miscellaneous expenses of the armed forces. Another third will be used for military research, procurement and development of weapons and construction. Some of it will go to feed the enemy in American occupied zones and to prevent the spread of disease there.

If Congress is disposed to "get tough" about the budget in a sustained, pre-election, economy drive, it may curtail some of these national defense expenditures sharply.

As for the category which the President calls "aftermath of war," there is little room for congressional objection. Interest on the public debt accounts for $5,000,000,000 of the total, and is not expected to increase beyond that in future years, as the public debt itself has reached its peak, in the President's opinion. Veterans benefits and pensions have already mounted to more than $4,000,000,000 and the President proposes, by still further legislation, to tack more than $500,000,000 additional onto this sum. The balance of these "aftermath" outlays will go for tax refunds, a little more than half of which will be to individuals.

For Foreign Nations.

The approved and projected contributions of the American taxpayer to the welfare of foreign nations mount to almost fantastic totals under the long range program set forth in the budget. In summary they are:

Loans and Grants.	(In billions of dollars.)
UNRRA	$2.6
Export Import Bank	3.5
Bretton Woods Monetary Fund	2.75
Bretton Woods, International Bank	3.175
British Loan (awaiting Congress action)	3.75
*Lend-lease credit to Britain	.65
*Other Lend-lease credits	.675
Total	$17.1

(*These two items have already been advanced in the form of Lend-lease goods and involve no further cash outlay by the American Treasury.)

Of this total, the President would spend about $2,500,000,000 in the current fiscal year 1946; and about $2,750,000,000 in the new year 1947. Failure of Congress to approve the British loan would cut these cash outlays down by $1,500,000,000 in 1947. Other commitments shown in the above table, however, have already been approved by Congress and are not subject to curtailment. President Truman, in fact, warned that he may at a later date call for a further increase in the lending capacity of the Export-Import Bank.

As for the normal peace time expenditures of the Government, the President has dealt with these unstintingly. He proposes a vast program of public works which would cost $1,750,000,000 in the coming year, or about as much as was spent for work relief and boondoggling in the pump-priming days of deepest depression under President Roosevelt.

He commits himself to a broad program of agricultural subsidy and farm price support payments which will cost more than $2,000,000,000, twice the total amount expended for the same purpose in the pre-war depression years.

Nearly all the old-line executive agencies find themselves "in the money" under the new budget, moreover. Even the weather will cost more. The Weather Bureau spent $2,500,000 more this year than it did last; and it will spend another $2,500,000 more next year than it did this one.

The Truman budget, moreover, affords an interesting insight into the administration's sense of values and the trend toward social welfare and uplift. For example, it will cost $36,500,000 to run the entire congressional establishment next year, including the House, the Senate, upkeep on the Capitol, the Botanic Gardens, the Library of Congress and the Government Printing Office; while the adminstration will spend $50,000,000 on the Federal school lunch and milk program alone.

It will cost more to run the Library of Congress than the taxpayers will spend on the entire United States Senate. Moreover, the expenses of the Senate will be curtailed by nearly $500,000, while the expenses of the library will go up nearly $1,000,000.

Again, the budget contemplates that the National Labor Relations Board alone will spend six times as much money as the whole United States Supreme Court. These random illustrations are typical, and they indicate that—apart from the heavy outlays for national defense, America's largesse abroad, and the unavoidable costs of the aftermath of war—the executive agencies on the domestic front will bask in luxury as usual, even if Congress declines to pass the full employment bill, the increased unemployment compensation measure and other items of the Truman legislative program which would add another $1,500,000,000 to the normal peacetime expenses of the Government.

On the income side of the ledger the Truman budget presented a gloomy picture of crushing tax burdens for all time to come.

Estimating total receipts, exclusive of social security and other employment levies, at $31,500,000,000, the President called for the collection of $29,000,000,000 in direct taxes upon individuals and corporations. It is literally true, of course, that there is not that much money in America—at least, not that much cash. All the currency in all the pockets of all the people and in all the sugar bowls, stockings, cash drawers, safes, vaults and banks in the land totals only $25,000,000,000; so the Government must take it all and more in the single year that lies ahead.

Today all the deposits in all the commercial banks in America and in all the mutual savings banks total $129,000,000,000; and of this gigantic hoard the Government will take approximately one-quarter in order to meet its requirements for a single year.

Looking to the future, President Truman saw little hope of relief for the taxpayer. He warned Congress not to reduce taxes in the year ahead, and indicated that unless full employment can be achieved and the whole economic system can reach unprecedented levels of activity, there was little prospect of any real tax reduction ever.

There was virtually no possibility, he said, that Government expenses could ever again be cut below $25,000,000,000 a year, and he anticipated that the Government's income, under existing tax rates, would be only about $27,000,000,000 annually after the sales of surplus war property have been completed.

This, it appears, would leave only a $2,000,000,000 surplus to be applied to the public debt, which means that 135 years from now, in 2081 A. D., the debt would be discharged — provided, of course, that Government expenditures were never permitted to rise, and that Government receipts never fell off, and that no wars, depressions or other emergencies arose in the interim.

Permitting one ray of hope and encouragement to escape from his budgetary Pandora's box, President Truman added that in future years the present tax rates might be expected to yield more than $30,000,000,000 if a "full employment level of national income" could be achieved.

As for deficit and the public debt the President declined to let the problem worry him overmuch, although it remained a matter of deep concern to some of the more orthodox fiscal minds in both Houses of Congress.

During the war the Treasury needed large amounts of cash on hand to meet the tremendous expenditures it made each day. The Government therefore borrowed money beyond its immediate needs in order to build up an adequate supply of cash in the Treasury.

Thus, three weeks ago the Treasury had $26,000,000,000 in its cash drawer, which is far more than it will need for the peacetime operations that lie ahead. President Truman, his budget discloses, plans to apply nearly $23,000,000,000 of this to meet part of the deficit of the current fiscal year, all of the deficit forecast for the coming year and to shave $7,000,000,000 off the statutory public debt.

At the end of the fiscal year 1947, therefore, there will be only a little more than $3,000,000,000 in the Treasury's cash drawer and the statutory public debt will be $271,000,000,000, instead of $278,000,000,000 as it is today.

U. S. Goal Will Be to Preserve Peace, Says Truman in First Post-War Message

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21—(AP) President Truman today laid down an American foreign policy to preserve peace on the basis of "justice no less than upon power" but he served firm notice that this country will refuse to sacrifice "its ideals or its vital interests" when difficulties arise among the United Nations.

Citing 1946 as the "year of decision" for the gigantic problems perplexing the world, Mr. Truman told Congress in the first peacetime state-of-the-Union message in five years that "the whole power and will and wisdom" of this nation must be rallied "to contribute to and to influence" international action."

Move Toward Peace

With words of confidence, he saw in the first General Assembly of the United Nations "the real beginning of our bold adventure toward the preservation of world peace, to which is bound the dearest hope of men."

But the chief executive emphasized that formation of the new international organization constitutes only a "minimum essential beginning" toward that goal. And he said economic collaboration must be carried on as carefully and as comprehensively as the political and security measures.

"Our ultimate security," he said "requires more than a process of consultation and compromise. . . requires that we begin now to develop the United Nations organization as the representative of the world as one society."

To Aid Smaller Nations

To the smaller nations, Mr. Truman pledged United States support to see that they have a voice in international councils and a hand in making the peace treaties with Germany and Japan.

Once again he outlined the 12 point fundamental foreign policy of the United States which he first presented last October 27 in New York. At that time he renounced for this country any territorial expansion or selfish advantage and supported the eventual return of sovereign rights and self government to all peoples.

Following this reiteration today, the President dealt specifically with Germany, Japan and the Far East, Korea and Palestine.

Acknowledging that the Allied Control council in Germany "has not met with unqualified success," he added that it has made "encouraging progress in the face of most serious difficulties." He said he intended "at the earliest practicable date" to transfer control of American-occupied territory from military to civilian personnel.

At the same time, however, Mr. Truman made it clear that "effective control will be maintained in Germany until we are satisfied that the German people have regained the right to a place of honor and respect."

He told Congress that "in order that neither Germany nor Japan will again be in a position to wage aggressive warfare, the armament making potential of these countries is being dismantled and fundamental changes in their social and political structures are being effected."

Democracy Fostered

"Democratic systems are being fostered to the end that the voice of the common man may be heard in the councils of his government," the President said.

In Japan, Mr. Truman went on, the United States "with the full approval of its partners, has retained primary authority and primary responsibility. It will continue to do so until the Japanese people, by their own freely expressed choice, choose their own form of government."

"Our basic policy in the Far East," he said, "is to encourage the development of a strong, independent, united and democratic China."

Similarly, he said again that the United States intends to speed as rapidly as possible the restoration of the sovereignty of Korea and establishment, through free elections, of a democratic government.

The chief executive touched briefly on the problems of the hungry and homeless lands, commending Congress for its appropriations to UNRRA and saying that this country had taken the lead, "modest though it is," in admitting refugees and displaced persons from Europe under existing immigration quotas. He did not go beyond previous statements in the Palestine controversy, declaring that the problem now is under study by a British-American commission.

Insistent that this nation's diplomatic policy must be linked to a foreign economic policy, he said the latter must have a three-way target: Promoting this country's prosperity, aiding in the restoration and expansion of world markets, and "contributing thereby to world peace."

Relief Efforts to Continue

"We shall continue our efforts," he said, "to provide relief from the devastation of war, to alleviate the sufferings of displaced persons, to assist in reconstruction and development, and to promote the expansion of world trade."

Turning to the proposed $3,750,000,000 loan to Britain, Mr. Truman said extension of that credit would enable the United Kingdom to avoid "discriminatory trade arrangements of the type which destroyed freedom of trade during the 1939's"—a factor which, he argued, alone justifies the action.

The chief executive said the Export-Import bank already has negotiated loans of about $1,010,000,000 for the fiscal year of 1946 to assist other countries in restoring their economies. He added an additional $195,000,000 probably would be committed "shortly."

Mr. Truman incorporated in his 1946 legislative progre two foreign policy measures—one permitting the Maritime commission to sell ships at home and abroad, the other repealing the Johnson act which forbids credits to countries in default on previous loans.

HAWAII URGED AS 49TH STATE

Truman Also Asks Congress Action To Admit Alaska

Washington, Jan. 21 (AP)—Immediate congressional action to make Hawaii the forty-ninth state of the Union was urged today by President Truman.

In his message to the nation's lawmakers, the Chief Executive asked also that Alaska be admitted as a state as soon as it is certain the people there desire it.

Mr. Truman said the people of the Virgin Islands should be given an increasing measure of self-government, and he called for legislation to speed the economic rehabilitation of the Philippines.

Perplexing Problem

Speaking of territories and island possessions, Mr. Truman said:

"The major governments of the world face few problems as important and as perplexing as those relating to dependent peoples.

"This government is committed to the democratic principle that it is for the dependent peoples themselves to decide what their status shall be.

"To this end I asked the Congress last October to provide means by which the people of Puerto Rico might choose their form of government and ultimate status with respect to the United States.

"I urge, too, that the Congress promptly accede to the wishes of the people of Hawaii that the territory be admitted to statehood in our Union, and that similar action be taken with respect to Alaska as soon as it is certain that this is the desire of the people of that great territory.

Philippines Discussed

"The people of the Virgin Islands should be given an increasing measure of self-government.

"We have already determined that the Philippine Islands are to be independent on July 4, 1945. The ravages of war and enemy occupation, however, have placed a heavy responsibility upon the United States.

"I urge that the Congress complete, as promptly and generously as may be possible, legislation which will aid economic rehabilitation for the Philippines.

"This wil be not only a just acknowledgement of the loyalty of the people of the Philippines, but it will help to avoid the economic chaos which otherwise will be their heritage from our common war.

"Perhaps no event in the long centuries of colonialism gives more hope for the pattern of the future than the independence of the Philippines.

Truman's Program for Prosperity Praised, Assailed by Congressmen

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21—(AP) President Truman submitted to Congress today a program calling for higher pay, lower prices and unchanged taxes, backed by a budget forecasting the first cut in the national debt since 1930.

The President informed Congress in a message that within the next 18 months $7,000,000,000 will be sliced from the $278,000,000,000 debt, even though the budget won't be balanced.

The outlook for business is good, he said. But he warned of "pitfalls" ahead.

He asked Congress to help sidestep them, to avert "national disaster" by continuing price controls.

Mr. Truman voiced "concern" over inflationary pressures, and over major strikes which he said might apply a "heavy brake" to reconversion.

President Cautions

He cautioned that deaf ears must be turned toward "voices of disunity," stilled in wartime, but now "beginning to cry aloud again."

"They seek only to do us mischief," he said. "They must not prevail."

As shifts of Senate and House reading clerks droned for hours through the bulky message, Congressmen listened with varied reactions. Most Republicans were critical. Most Democrats found things to praise but objected to one or more of the President's legislative proposals.

Senator Taft (R-Ohio) termed figures on the budget deficit "somewhat misleading" and said it "is not true" the debt will be reduced. He said the budget "contains increases for every peacetime department, and still proposes to spend $13,000,000,000 for the Army and Navy."

Chairman George (D-Ga.) of the Senate Finance committee suggested the budget could be balanced in the 1948 fiscal year through rigid economy and a reduction in Federal employes.

Senator Mead (D-N.Y.) called Mr. Truman's economic program "sound and necessary."

Senator Bridges (R-N.H.) said it was "a message on the sorry State of the Union," while Senator Ferguson (R-Mich.) declared the President "is sooting a shotgun."

Rep. Clark (D-N.C.) was "disposed to go along with the President's program as far as I can, but thought not all of his suggestions drive in the same direction."

Senator Huffman (D-Ohio) said that "generally I'm for the program, but there are some things I can't support."

House Republican Leader Martin (R-Mass.) remarked that "it is good to see the budget heading in the direction of a balance." But what counts most, he said, is what the score sheet shows when the record is completed, not what the message says.

Ray Ogg, legislative representative, said the Farm Bureau held the view that consumers, for whose benefit he said the wartime subsidies were started, were able now to absorb any price increases which would follow removal of the subsidies.

"It is time," Ogg said, "that we stop paying part of the nation's grocery bill out of the public treasury."

Ogg accused the administration of using two economic yardsticks—"one for labor and another for agriculture." He said that the government was allowing wage increases of "4 to 5 times" the cost of the subsidies, but "quibbles over very slight increases in food prices—increases which would give the farmer no more than he had been getting."

Grange, Farm Bureau Want Food Subsidies to End in June

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21—(AP)—Two major farm organizations served notice tonight they would oppose continuation of food subsidies.

The wartime payments, costing the government an estimated $1,798,000,000 yearly, are due to expire June 30. But President Truman urged in his message to Congress today that they be continued. The President calculated that the cost of food would rise eight per cent and the cost of living three per cent if the subsidies ended.

Representatives of the National Grange and the American Farm Bureau Federation said these organizations would insist that the government stick to an earlier promise to end the subsidies by June 30.

Schedule Announced

Last November the government announced a schedule for this purpose. At that time, stabilization officials said they expected food prices to decline so that subsidies could be dropped without an increase in food prices.

"As matters stand today," the President said, "food prices are pressing against the ceilings. The expected decline in food prices has not occurred, nor is it likely to occur for many months to come."

Grange Urges Halt

Similar views were expressed by Fred Bailey, legislative representative of the Grange.

"The Grange feels," he said, "that if the government allows inflationary raises in industrial cost, it cannot expect farm prices to stay where they are."

Mr. Truman recommended appropriations for the agriculture department which, with funds already available, would allow it to spend $3,435,500,000 during the fiscal year beginning July 1. Expenditures for the current year are expected to total about $2,992,000,000.

The expenditures would include about $1,500,000,000 for food subsidies and farm price supports; $800,000,000 for purchases of food and farm products for export to relief areas abroad; $784,000,000 for regular research, regulatory, economic and soil conservation activities; and $351,000,000 in loans by the rural electrification administration and the farm security administration.

The $800,000,000 relief exports would be a part of UNRRA operations.

Truman's 26-Point Program

Washington, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—President Truman asked Congress in his message today to enact twenty-six pieces of legislation, five of which were new and the other twenty-one items which he had previously recommended.

The five new proposals were:

1. Extension of the price control act for one year from next June 30.
2. Extension for the second war powers act, including priority and inventory controls, beyond June 30, presumably another six months.
3. Continuation of food subsidies beyond June 30 with the proviso that they stop if the cost of living declines below present levels.
4. Legislation creating a permanent housing agency.
5. Extension of the draft should the campaign for volunteers prove inadequate.

Here are the twenty-one measures Mr. Truman listed by numbers:

1. A law to give fact-finding boards greater powers in labor disputes.
2. A full employment bill such as that passed by Senate.
3. Supplementing unemployment insurance benefits.
4. A permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee.
5. Raising the statutory minimum from 40 to 65 cents an hour now, to 70 cents after one year, and to 75 cents after two years.
6. A scientific research agency.
7. A health and prepaid medical care program.
8. Universal military training.
9. Increased Federal salaries.
10. Presidential succession legislation.
11. Unification of the armed services.
12. A law to cover domestic use and control of atomic energy.
13. Retention of Federal control over the United States Employment Service at least until June 30, 1947.
14. Increased unemployment allowances for veterans.
15. Social security coverage for veterans for their term of military service.
16. Extension of crop insurance.
17. Authority to sell surplus merchant ships and to charter vessels both here and abroad.

Executive Outlines His Program For Legislation and Finances

From the Herald Tribune Bureau

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The complete text of the message of the President on the State of the Union and Transmitting the Budget for 1947, as delivered in Congress today, follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

A quarter century ago the Congress decided that it could no longer consider the financial programs of the various departments on a piecemeal basis. Instead it has called on the President to present a comprehensive Executive Budget. The Congress has shown its satisfaction with that method of extending the budget system and tightening its controls. The bigger and more complex the Federal program, the more necessary it is for the Chief Executive to submit a single budget for action by the Congress.

At the same time, it is clear that the budgetary program and the general program of the government are actually inseparable. The President bears the responsibility for recommending to the Congress a comprehensive set of proposals on all government activities and their financing. In formulating policies, as in preparing budgetary estimates, the nation and the Congress have the right to expect the President to adjust and co-ordinate the views of the various departments and agencies to form a unified program. And that program requires consideration in connection with the budget, which is the annual work program of the government.

Efficiency Is Vital

Since our programs for this period which combines war liquidation with reconversion to a peace-time economy are inevitably large and numerous, it is imperative that they be planned and executed with the utmost efficiency and the utmost economy. We have cut the war program to the maximum extent consistent with national security. We have held our peace-time programs to the level necessary to our national well-being and the attainment of our post-war objectives. Where increased programs have been recommended, the increases have been held as low as is consistent with these goals. I can assure the Congress of the necessity of these programs. I can further assure the Congress that the program as a whole is well within our capacity to finance it. All the programs I have recommended for action are included in the budget figures.

For these reasons I have chosen to combine the customary Message on the State of the Union with the annual budget message, and to include in the budget not only estimates for functions authorized by the Congress, but also for those which I recommend for its action.

I am also transmitting herewith the fifth quarterly report of the Director of War Mobilization and Reconversion. It is a comprehensive discussion of the present state of the reconversion program and of the immediate and long-range needs and recommendations.

This constitutes, then, as complete a report as I find it possible to prepare now. It constitutes a program of government in relation to the nation's needs.

Cites Economic Issues

With the growing responsibility of modern government to foster economic expansion and to promote conditions that assure full and steady employment opportunities, it has become necessary to formulate and determine the government program in the light of national economic conditions as a whole. In both the executive and the legislative branches we must make arrangements which will permit us to formulate the government program in that light. Such an approach has become imperative if the American political and economic system is to succeed under the conditions of economic instability and uncertainly which we have to face. The government needs to assure business, labor and agriculture that government policies will take due account of the requirements of a full employment economy. The lack of that assurance would, I believe, aggravate the economic instability.

With the passage of a full-employment bill which I confidently anticipate for the very near future, the executive and legislative branches of government will be empowered to devote their best talents and resources in subsequent years to preparing and acting on such a program.

I. From War to Peace— The Year of Decision

In his last Message on the State of the Union, delivered one year ago, President Roosevelt said:

This new year of 1945 can be the greatest year of achievement in human history.

1945 can see the final ending of the Nazi-Fascist reign of terror in Europe.

1945 can see the closing in of the forces of retribution about the center of the malignant power of imperialistic Japan.

Most important of all—1945 can and must see the substantial beginning of the organization of world peace.

All those hopes, and more, were fulfilled in the year 1945. It was the greatest year of achievement in human history. It saw the end of the Nazi-Fascist terror in Europe, and also the end of the malignant power of Japan. And it saw the substantial beginning of world organization for peace. These momentous events became realities because of the steadfast purpose of the United Nations and of the forces that fought for freedom under thir flags. The plaint fact is that civilization was saved in 1945 by the United Nations.

Our own part in this accomplishment was not the product of any single service. Those who fought on land, those who fought on the sea, and those who fought in the air deserve equal credit. They were supported by others millions in the armed forces who through no fault of their own could not go overseas and who rendered indispensable service in this country. They were supported by millions in all levels of government, including many volunteers, whose devoted public service furnished basic organization and leadership. They were also supported by the millions of Americans in private life—men and women in industry, in commerce, on the farms, and in all manner of activity on the home front—who contributed their brains and their brawn in arming, equipping, and feeding them. The country was brought through four years of peril by an effort that was truly national in character.

Tribute to War Dead

Everlasting tribute and gratitude will be paid by all Americans to those brave men who did not come back, who will never come back—the 330,000 who died that the Nation might live and progress. All Americans will also remain deeply conscious of the obligation owed to that larger number of soldiers, sailors and marines who suffered wounds and sickness in their service. They may be certain that their sacrifice will never be forgotten or their needs neglected.

The beginning of the year 1946 finds the United States strong and deservedly confident. We have a record of enormous achievements as a democratic society in solving problems and meeting opportunities as they developed. We find ourselves possessed of immeasurable advantages—vast and varied natural resources; great plants, institutions and other facilities; unsurpassed technological and managerial skills; an alert, resourceful and able citizenry. We have in the United States Government rich resources in information, perspective and facilities for doing whatever may be found necessary to do in giving support and form to the widespread and diversified efforts of all our people.

And for the immediate future the business prospects are generally so favorable that there is danger of such feverish and opportunistic activity that our grave post-war problems may be neglected. We need to act now with full regard for pitfalls; we need to act with foresight and balance. We should not be lulled by the immediate alluring prospects into forgetting the fundamental complexity of modern affairs, the catastrophe that can come in this complexity, or the values that can be wrested from it.

Crucial Problems Ahead

But the long-range difficulties we face should no more lead to despair than our immediate business prospects should lead to the optimism which comes from the present short-range prospect. On the foundation of our victory we can build a lasting peace, with greater freedom and security for mankind in our country and throughout the world. We will more certainly do this if we are constantly aware of the fact that we face crucial issues and prepare now to meet them.

To achieve success will require both boldness in setting our sights and caution in steering our way on an uncharted course. But we have no luxury of choice. We must move ahead. No return to the past is possible.

Our nation has always been a land of great opportunities for those people of the world who sought to become part of us. Now we have become a land of great responsibilities to all the people of the world. We must squarely recognize and face the fact of those responsibilities. Advances in science, in communication, in transportation, have compressed the world into a community. The economic and political health of each member of the world community bears directly on the economic and political health of each other member.

The evolution of centuries has brought us to a new era in world history in which manifold relationship between Nations must be formalized and developed in new and intricate ways.

The United Nations Organization now being established represents a minimum essential beginning. It must be developed rapidly and steadily. Its work must be amplified to fill in the whole pattern that has been outlined. Economic collaboration, for example, already charted, now must be carried on as carefully and as comprehensively as the political and security measures.

It is important that the nations come together as states in the Assembly and in the Security Council and in the other specialized assembles and councils that have been and will be arranged. But this is not enough. Our ultimate security requires more than a process of consultation and compromise.

It requires that we begin now to develop the United Nations Organization as the representative of the world as one society. The United Nations Organization, if we have the will adequately to staff it and to make it work as it should, will provide a great voice to speak constantly and responsibly in terms of world collaboration and world well-being.

There are many new responsibilities for us as we enter into this new international era. The whole power and will and wisdom of our government and of our people should be focused to contribute to and to influence international action. It is intricate, continuing business. Many concessions and adjustments will be required.

The spectacular progress of science in recent years makes these necessities more vivid and urgent. That progress has speeded internal development and has changed world relationships so fast that we must realize the fact of a new era. It is an era in which affairs have become complex and rich in promise. Delicate and intricate relationships, involving us all in countless ways, must be carefully considered.

Urges Co-operation

On the domestic scene, as well as on the international scene, we must lay a new and better foundation for co-operation. We face a great peace-time venture; the challenging venture of a free-enterprise economy making full and effective use of its rich resources and technical advances. This is a venture in which business, agriculture, and labor have vastly greater opportunities than heretofore. But they all also have vastly greater responsibilities. We will not measure up to those responsibilities by the simple return to "normalcy" that was tried after the last war.

The general objective, on the contrary, is to move forward to find the way in time of peace to the full utilization and development of our physical and human resources that were demonstrated so effectively in the war.

To accomplish this, it is not intended that the Federal government should do things that can be done as well for the nation by private enterprise, or by state and local governments. On the contrary, the war has demonstrated how effectively we can organize our productive system and develop the potential abilities of our people by aiding the efforts of private enterprise.

As we move toward one common objective there will be many and urgent problems to meet.

Industrial peace between management and labor will have to be achieved—through the process of collective bargaining—with government assistance, but not government compulsion. This is a problem which is the concern not only of management, labor and the government but also the concern of every one of us.

Private capital and private management are entitled to adequate reward for efficiency, but business must recognize that its reward results from the employment of the resources of the nation. Business is a public trust and must adhere to national standards in the conduct of its affairs. These standards include as a minimum the establishment of fair wages and fair employment practices.

Labor Responsibilities

Labor also has its own new peace-time responsibilities. Under our collective bargaining system, which must become progressively more secure, labor attains increasing political as well as economic power, and this, as with all power, means increased responsibility.

The lives of millions of veterans and war workers will be greatly affected by the success or failure of our program of war liquidation and reconversion. Their transition to peace-time pursuits will be determined by our efforts to break the bottlenecks in key items of production, to make surplus property immediately available where it is needed, to maintain an effective tion and adequate medical care must be generally available. Every family should have a decent home. The new economic bill of rights to which I have referred on previous occasions is a charter of economic freedom which seeks to assure that all who will may work toward their own security and the general advancement; that we become a well-house people, a well-nourished people, an educated people, a people socially and economically secure, an alert and responsible people.

These and other problems which may face us can be met by the co-operation of all of us in furthering a positive and well-balanced government program—a program which will further national and international well-being.

national employment service, and many other reconversion policies. Our obligations to the people who won the war will not be paid if we fail to prevent inflation and to maintain employment opportunities.

While our peace-time prosperity will be based on the private enterprise system, government can and must assist in many ways. It is the government's responsibility to see that our economic system remains competitive, that new businesses have adequate opportunities, and that our national resources are restored and improved. Government must realize the effect of its operations on the whole economy. It is the responsibility of government to gear its total program to the achievement of full production and full employment.

Our basic objective—toward which all others lead—is to improve the welfare of the American people. In addition to economic prosperity, this means that we need social security in the fullest sense of the term: the people must be protected from the fear of want during old age, sickness, and unemployment. Opportunities for a good educa-

Early in 1945, at Yalta, the three major powers broadened and solidified this base of understanding. There fundamental decisions were reached concerning the occupation and control of Germany. There also a formula was arrived at for the interim government of the areas in Europe which were rapidly being wrested from Nazi control. This formula was based on the policy of the United States that people be permitted to choose [illegible] own form of government by own freely expressed choice, without interference from any foreign source.

At Potsdam, in July 1945, Marshal Stalin, Prime Ministers Churchill and Attlee, and I met to exchange views primarily with respect to Germany. As a result, agreements were reached which outlined broadly the policy to be executed by the Allied Control Council. At Potsdam there was also established a Council of Foreign Ministers which convened for the first time in London in September. The Council is about to resume its primary assignment of drawing up treaties of peace with Italy, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary, and Finland.

II. The Federal Program

International Affairs

1. Foreign Policy

The year 1945 brought with it the final defeat of our enemies. There lies before us now the work of building a just and enduring peace.

Our most immediate task toward that end is to deprive our enemies completely and forever of their power to start another war. Of even greater importance to the preservation of international peace is the need to preserve the war-time agreement of the United Nations and to direct it into the ways of peace.

Long before our enemies surrendered, the foundations had been laid on which to continue this unity in the peace to come. The Atlantic meeting in 1941 and the conferences at Casablanca, Quebec, Moscow, Cairo, Tehran and Dumbarton Oaks each added a stone to the structure.

In addition to these meetings, and in accordance with the agreement at Yalta, the Foreign Ministers of Great Britain, the Soviet Union, and the United States conferred together in San Francisco last spring, in Potsdam in July, in London in September and in Moscow in December. These meetings have been useful in promoting understanding and agreement among the three governments.

Simply to name all the international meetings and conferences is to suggest the size and complexity of the undertaking to prevent international war in which the United States has now enlisted for the duration of history.

It is encouraging to know that the common effort of the United Nations to learn to live together did not cease with the surrender of our enemies.

When difficulties arise among us, the United States does not propose to remove them by sacrificing its ideals or its vital interests. Neither do we propose, however, to ignore the ideals and vital interests of our friends.

Last February and March an Inter-American Conference on Problems of War and Peace was held in Mexico City. Among the many significant accomplishments of that conference was an understanding that an attack by any country against any one of the soverign American republics would be considered an act of aggression against all of them; and that if such an attack were made or threatened, the American republics would decide jointly, through consultations in which each republic has equal representation, what measures they would take for their mutual protection. This agreement stipulates that its execution shall be in full accord with the Charter of the United Nations Organization.

The first meeting of the General Assembly of the United Nations now in progress in London marks the real beginning of our bold adventure toward the preservation of world peace, to which is bound the dearest hope of men.

We have solemnly dedicated ourselves and all our will to the success of the United Nations Organization. For this reason we have sought to insure that in the peacemaking the smaller nations shall have a voice as well as the larger states. The agreement reached at Moscow last month preserves this opportunity in the making of peace with Italy, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland. The United States intends to preserve it when the treaties with Germany and Japan are drawn.

Supports U. N. O.

It will be the continuing policy of the United States to use all its influence to foster, support and develop the United Nations Organization in its purpose of preventing international war. If peace is to endure it must rest upon justice no less than upon power. The question is how justice among nations is best achieved. We know from day-to-day experience that the chance for a just solution is immeasurably increased when every one directly interested is given a voice. That does not mean that each must enjoy an equal voice but it does mean that each must be heard.

Last November Prime Minister Attlee, Prime Minister MacKenzie King and I announced our proposal that a commission be established within the framework of the United Nations to explore the problems of effective international control of atomic energy.

The Soviet Union, France and China have joined us in the purpose of introducing in the General Assembly a resolution for the establishment of such a commission. Our earnest wish is that the work of this commission go forward carefully and thoroughly, but with the greatest dispatch. I have great hope for the development of mutually effective safeguards which will permit the fullest international control of this new atomic force.

Atom Bomb Policy

I believe it possible that effective means can be developed through the United Nations Organization to prohibit, outlaw and prevent the use of atomic energy for destructvie purposes.

The power which the United States demonstrated during the war is the fact that underlies every phase of our relations with other countries. We cannot escape the responsibility which it thrusts upon us. What we think, plan, say and do is of profound significance to the future of every corner of the world.

The great and dominant objective of United States foreign policy is to build and preserve a just peace. The peace we seek is not peace for twenty years. It is permanent peace. At a time when massive changes are occurring with lightning speed throughout the world it is often difficult to perceive how this central objective is best served in one isolated complex situation or another. Despite this very real difficulty, there are certain basic propositions to which the United States adheres and to which we shall continue to adhere.

One proposition is that lasting peace requires genuine understanding and active co-operation among the most powerful nations. Another is that even the support of the strongest nations cannot guarantee a peace unless it is infused with the quality of justice for all nations.

No Territorial Gains

On Oct. 27, 1945, I made, in New York City, the following public statement of my understanding of the fundamental foreign policy of the United States. I believe that policy to be in accord with the opinion of the Congress and of the people of the United States. I believe that that policy carries out our fundamental objectives.

1. We seek no territorial expansion or selfish advantage. We have no plans for aggression against any other state, large or small. We have no objective which need clash with the peaceful aims of any other nation.

2. We believe in the eventual return of sovereign rights and self-government to all peoples who have been deprived of them by force.

3. We shall approve no territorial changes in any friendly part of the world unless they accord with the freely expressed wishes of the people concerned.

4. We believe that all peoples who are prepared for self-government should be permitted to choose their own form of government by their own freely expressed choice, without interference from any foreign source. That is true in Europe, in Asia, in Africa, as well as in the Western Hemisphere.

5. By the combined and co-operative action of our war allies we shall help the defeated enemy states establish peaceful democratic governments of their own free choice. And we shall try to attain a world in which Nazism, Fascism and military aggression cannot exist.

6. We shall refuse to recognize any government imposed upon any nation by the force of any foreign power. In some cases it may be impossible to prevent forceful imposition of such a government. But the United States will not recognize any such government.

7. We believe that all nations should have the freedom of the seas and equal rights to the navigation of boundary rivers and waterways and of rivers and waterways which pass through more than one country.

8. We believe that all states which are accepted in the society of nations should have access on equal terms to the trade and the raw materials of the world.

9. We believe that the sovereign states of the Western Hemisphere, without interference from outside the Western Hemisphere, must work together as good neighbors in the solution of their common problems.

10. We believe that full economic collaboration between all nations, great and small, is essential to the improvement of living conditions all over the world, and to the establishment of freedom from fear and freedom from want.

11. We shall continue to strive to promote freedom of expression and freedom of religion throughout the peace-loving areas of the world.

12. We are convinced that the preservation of peace between nations requires a United Nations Organization composed of all the peace-loving nations of the world who are willing jointly to use force, if necessary, to insure peace.

That is our foreign policy.

We may not always fully succeed in our objectives. There may be instances where the attainment of those objectives is delayed. But we will not give our full sanction and approval to actions which fly in the face of these ideals.

Future of Germany

The world has a great stake in the political and economic future of Germany. The Allied Control Council has now been in operation there for a substantial period of time. It has not met with unqualified success. The accommodation of varying views of four governments in the day-to-day civil administration of occupied territory is a challenging task. In my judgment, however, the council has made encouraging progress in the face of most serious difficulties. It is my purpose at the earliest practicable date to transfer from military to civilian personnel the execution of United States participation in the government of occupied territory in Europe. We are determined that effective control shall be maintained in Germany until we are satisfied that the German people have regained the right to a place of honor and respect.

On the other side of the world, a method of international cooperation has recently been agreed upon for the treatment of Japan. In this pattern of control, the United States, with the full approval of its partners, has retained primary authority and primary responsibility. It will continue to do so until the Japanese people, by their own freely expressed choice, choose their own form of government.

Our basic policy in the Far East is to encourage the development of a strong, independent, united, and democratic China. That has been the traditional policy of the United States.

Praises China Accord

At Moscow, the United States, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and Great Britain agreed to further this development by supporting the efforts of the national government and non-governmental Chinese political elements in bringing about cessation of civil strife and in broadening the basis of representation in the government. That is the policy which General Marshall is so ably executing today.

It is the purpose of the government of the United States to proceed as rapidly as is practicable toward the restoration of the sovereignty of Korea and the establishment of a democratic government by the free choice of the people of Korea.

At the threshold of every problem which confronts us today in international affairs are the appalling devastation, hunger, sickness and pervasive human misery that mark so many areas of the world.

By joining and participating in the work of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration the United States has directly recognized and assumed an obligation to give such relief assistance as is practicable to millions of innocent and helpless victims of the war. The Congress has earned the gratitude of the world by generous financial contributions to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

We have taken the lead, mod-

Japan, have been those of occupation and military government. In addition we have given much-needed aid to the peoples of the liberated countries.

The end of the war in Europe found Germany in a chaotic condition. Organized government had ceased to exist, transportation systems had been wrecked, cities and industrial facilities had been bombed into ruins. In addition to the tasks of occupation we had to assume all of the functions of government. Great progress has been made in the repatriation of displaced persons and of prisoners of war. Of the total of 3,500,000 displaced persons found in the United States zone only 460,000 now remain.

The extensive complications involved by the requirement of dealing with three other governments engaged in occupation and with the governments of liberated countries require intensive work and energetic cooperation. The influx of some two million German refugees into our zone of occupation is a pressing problem, making exacting demands upon an already overstrained internal economy.

Improvements in the European economy during 1945 have made it possible for our military authorities to relinquish to the governments of all liberated areas, or to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, the responsibility for the provision of food and other civilian relief supplies. The Army's responsibilities in Europe extend now only to our zones of occupation in Germany and Austria and to two small areas in northern Italy.

By contrast with Germany, in Japan we have occupied a country still possessing an organized and operating governmental system. Although severely damaged, the Japanese industrial and transportation systems have been able to insure at least a survival existence for the population. The repatriation of Japanese military and civilian personnel from overseas is proceeding as rapidly as shipping and other means permit.

War Trials Hailed

In order to insure that neither Germany nor Japan will again be in a position to wage aggressive warfare, the armament-making potential of these countries is being dismantled and fundamental changes in their social and political structures are being effected. Democratic systems are being fostered to the end that the voice of the common man may be heard in the councils of his government.

For the first time in history the legal culpability of war-makers is being determined. The trials now in progress in Nuernberg—and those soon to begin in Tokyo—bring before the bar of international justice those individuals who are charged with the responsibility for the sufferings of the last six years. We have high hope that this public portrayal of the guilt of these evildoers will bring wholesale and permanent revulsion on the part of the masses of our former enemies against war, militarism, aggression and notions of race superiority.

4. Demobilization of Our Armed Forces

The cessation of active campaigning does not mean that we can completely disband our fighting forces. For their sake and for the sake of their loved ones at home, I wish that we could. But we still have the task of clinching the victories we have won—of making certain that Germany and Japan can never again wage aggressive warfare, that they will not again have the means to bring on another world war. The performance of that task requires that together with our allies, we occupy the hostile areas, complete the disarmament of our enemies and take the necessary measures to see to it that they do not rearm.

As quickly as possible we are bringing about the reduction of our armed services to the size required for these tasks of occupation and disarmament. The Army and the Navy are following both length-of-service and point systems as far as possible in releasing men and women from the service. The points are based chiefly on length and character of service, and on the existence of dependents.

More than five million from the Army have already passed through the separation centers.

The Navy, including the Marine Corps and the Coast Guard, has discharged over one and a half million.

Of the twelve million men and women serving in the Army and Navy at the time of the surrender of Germany, one-half have already been released. The greater part of these had to be brought back to this country from distant parts of the world.

Of course there are cases of individual hardship in retention of personnel in the service. There will be in the future. No system of such size can operate to perfection. But the systems are founded on fairness and justice, and they are working at full speed. We shall try to avoid mistakes, injustices and hardship—as far as humanly possible.

Shipping No Barrier

We have already reached the point where shipping is no longer the bottleneck in the return of troops from the European theater. The governing factor now has become the requirement for troops in sufficient strength to carry out their missions.

In a few months the same situation will exist in the Pacific. By the end of June, nine out of ten who were serving in the armed forces on V-E Day will have been released. Demobilization will continue thereafter, but at a slower rate, determined by our military responsbilities.

Our national safety and the security of the world will require substantial armed forces, particularly in overseas service. At the same time it is imperative that we relieve those who have already done their duty, and that we relieve them as fast as we can. To do that, the Army and the Navy are conducting recruiting drives with considerable success.

The Army has obtained nearly 400,000 volunteers in the last four months, and the Navy has obtained 80,000. Eighty per cent of these volunteers for the regular service have come from those already with the colors. The Congress has made it possible to offer valuable inducements to those who are eligible for enlistment. Every effort will be made to enlist the required number of young men.

The War and Navy Departments now estimate that by a year from now we still will need a strength of about two million, including officers, for the armed forces—Army, Navy and Air. I have reviewed their estimates and believe that the safety of the nation will require the maintenance of an armed strength of this size for the calendar year that is before us.

In case the campaign for volunteers does not produce that number, it will be necessary by additional legislation to extend the selective service act beyond May 16, the date of expiration under existing law. That is the only way we can get the men and bring back our veterans. There is no other way. Action along this line should not be postponed beyond March, in order to avoid uncertainty and disruption.

Domestic Affairs

1. The Economic Outlook

Prophets of doom predicted that the United States could not escape a runaway inflation during the war and an economic collapse after the war. These predictions have not been borne out. On the contrary, the record of economic stabilization during the war and during the period of reconversion has been an outstanding accomplishment.

We know, however, that nothing is as dangerous as overconfidence in war or in peace. We have had to fight hard to hold the line. We have made strenuous efforts to speed reconversion. But neither the danger of a post-war inflation nor of a subsequent collapse in production and employment is yet overcome. We must base our policies not on unreasoning optimism or pessimism but upon a candid recognition of our objectives and upon a careful analysis of foreseeable trends.

Any precise appraisal of the economic outlook at this time is particularly difficult. The period of demobilization and reconversion is fraught with uncertainties. There are also serious gaps in our statistical information. Certain tendencies are, however, fairly clear and recognition of them should serve as background for the consideration of next year's Federal program. In general, the outlook for business is good, and it it likely to continue to be good—provided we control inflation and achieve peace in management-labor relations.

Sees Production Rise

Civilian production and employment can be expected to increase throughout the next year. This does not mean, however, that continuing full employment is assured. It is probable that demobilization of the armed forces will proceed faster than the increase in civilian employment opportunities. Even if substantial further withdrawals from the labor market occur, unemployment will increase temporarily. The extent to which this unemployment will persist depends largely on the been completed with the United Kingdom. Negotiations with other lend-lease countries are in progress. In negotiating these agreements, we intend to seek settlements which will not encumber world trade through war debts of a character that proved to be so detrimental to the stability of the world economy after the last war.

We have taken steps to dispose of the goods which on V-J Day were in the lend-lease pipeline to the various lend-lease countries and to allow them long-term credit for the purpose where necessary. We are also making arrangements under which those countries may use the lend-lease inventories in their possession and acquire surplus property abroad to assist in their economic rehabilitation and reconstruction. These goods will be accounted for at fair values.

The proposed loan to the United Kingdom, which I shall recommend to the Congress in a separate message, will contribute to easing the transition problem of our major partners in the war. It will enable the whole sterling area and other countries affiliated with it to resume trade on a multilateral basis. Extension of this credit will enable the United Kingdom to avoid discriminatory trade arrangements of the type which destroyed freedom of trade during the 1930's. I consider the progress toward multilateral trade which will be achieved by this agreement to be in itself sufficient warrant for the credit.

Notes World Reaction

The view of this government is that, in the longer run, our economic prosperity and the prosperity of the whole world are best served by the elimination of artificial barriers to international trade, whether in the form of unreasonable tariffs or tariff preferences or commercial quotas or embargoes or the restrictive practices of cartels.

The United States government has issued proposals for the expansion of world trade and employment to which the government of the United Kingdom has given its support on every important issue. These proposals are intended to form the basis for a trade and employment conference to be held in the middle of this year. If that conference is a success, I feel confident that the way will have been adequately prepared for an expanded and prosperous world trade.

We shall also continue negotiations looking to the full and equitable development of facilities for transportation and communications among nations.

The vast majority of the nations of the world have chosen to work together to achieve, on a co-operative basis, world security and world prosperity. The effort cannot succeed without full co-operation of the United States. To play our part, we must not only resolutely carry out the foreign policies we have adopted but also follow a domestic policy which will maintain full production and employment in the United States. A serious depression here can disrupt the whole fabric of the world economy.

3. Occupied Countries

The major tasks of our military establishment in Europe following V-E Day, and in the Pacific since the surrender of Japan, have been those of occupation and military government. In addition we have given much-needed aid to the peoples of the liberated countries.

The end of the war in Europe found Germany in a chaotic condition. Organized government had ceased to exist, transportation systems had been wrecked, cities and industrial facilities had been bombed into ruins. speed of industrial expansion and the effectiveness of the policies of the Federal government.

Along with extraordinary demand there are still at this time many critical shortages resulting from the war. These extraordinary demands and shortages may lead to a speculative boom, especially in the prices of securities, real estate, and inventories.

Therefore, our chief worry still is inflation.

While we control this inflationary pressure we must look forward to the time when this extraordinary demand will subside. It will be years before we catch up with the demand for housing. The extraordinary demand for other durable goods, for the replenishment of inventories, and for exports may be satisfied earlier. No backlog of demand can exist very long in the face of our tremendous productive capacity. We must expect again to face the problem of shrinking demand and consequent slackening in sales, production and employment. This possibility of a deflationary spiral in the future will exist unless we now plan and adopt an effective full employment program.

2. General Policies — Immediate and Long-Range

During the war, production for civilian use was limited by war needs and available manpower. Economic stabilization required measures to spread limited supplies equitably by rationing, price controls, increased taxes, savings bond campaigns and credit [illegible] with the surrender [illegible] mies, economic stabili[illegible] quires that policies be directed toward promoting an increase in supplies at low unit prices.

We must encourage the development of resources and enterprises in all parts of the country, particularly in underdeveloped areas. For example, the establishment of new peacetime industries in the Western states and in the South would, in my judgment, add to existing production and markets rather than merely bring about a shifting of production. I am asking the Secretaries of Agriculture, Commerce and Labor to explore jointly methods for stimulating new industries, particularly in areas with surplus agricultural labor.

We must also aid small business men and particularly veterans who are competent to start their own businesses. The establishment and development of efficient small business ventures, I believe, will not take away from, but rather will add to, the total business of all enterprises.

Even with maximum encouragement of production, we cannot hope to remove scarcities within a short time. The most serious deficiencies will persist in the fields of residential housing, building materials and consumers' durable goods. The critical situation makes continued rent control, price control and priorities, allocations and inventory controls absolutely essential. Continued control of consumer credit will help to reduce the pressure on prices of durable goods and will also prolong the period during which the backlog demand will be effective.

While we are meeting these immediate needs we must look forward to a long-range program of security and increased standard of living.

Full Employment

The best protection of purchasing power is a policy of full production and full employment opportunities. Obviously, an employed worker is a better customer than an unemployed worker. There always will be, however, some frictional unemployment. In the present period of transition we must deal with such temporary unemployment as results from the fact that demobilization will proceed faster than reconversion or industrial expansion. Such temporary unemployment is probably unavoidable in a period of rapid change. The unemployed worker is a victim of conditions beyond his control. He should be enabled to maintain a reasonable standard of living for himself and his family.

The most serious difficulty in the path of reconversion and expansion is the establishment of a fair wage structure.

The ability of labor and management to work together, and the wage and price policies which they develop, are social and economic issues of first importance.

Both labor and management have a special interest. Labor's interest is very direct and personel because working conditions, wages, and prices affect the very life and happiness of the worker and his family.

Management has a no less direct interest because on management rests the responsibility for conducting a growing and prosperous business.

But management and labor have identical interests in the long run. Good wages mean good markets. Good business means more jobs and better wages. In this age of co-operation and in our highly organized economy the problems of one very soon become the problems of all.

Role of Government

Better human relationships are an urgent need to which organized labor and management should address themselves. No government policy can make men understand each other, agree, and get along unless they conduct themselves in a way to foster mutual respect and good will.

The government can, however, help to develop machinery which, with the backing of public opinion, will assist labor and management to resolve their disagreements in a peaceful manner and reduce the number and duration of strikes.

All of us realize that productivity—increased output per man—is in the long run the basis of our standard of living. Management especially must realize that if labor is to work wholeheartedly for an increase production, workers must be given a just share of increased output in higher wages.

Most industries and most companies have adequate leeway within which to grant substantial wage increases. These increases will have a direct effect in increasing consumer demand to the high levels needed. Substantial wage increases are good business for business because they assure a large market for their products; substantial wage increases are good business for labor because they increase labor's standard of living; substantial wage increases are good business for the country as a whole because capacity production means an active, healthy, friendly citizenry enjoying the benefits of democracy under our free enterprise system.

Labor and management in many industries have been operating successfully under the government's wage-price policy. Upward revisions of wage scales have been made in thousands of establishments throughout the nation since V-J Day. It is estimated that about six million workers, or more than 20 per cent of all employees in non-agricultural and non-governmental establishments, have received wage increases since Aug. 19, 1945. The amounts of increases given by individual employers concentrate between 10 and 15 per cent, but range from less than 5 per cent to over 30 per cent.

The United States Conciliation Service since V-J Day has settled over 3,000 disputes affecting over 1,300,000 workers without a strike threat and has assisted in settling about 1,300 disputes where strikes were threatened which involved 500,000 workers. Only workers directly involved, and not those in related industries who might have been indirectly affected, are included in these estimates.

Assesses Wage Policy

Many of these adjustments have occurred in key industries and would have seemed to us major crises if they had not been settled peaceably.

Within the framework of the wage-price policy there has been definite success, and it is to be expected that this success will continue in a vast majority of the cases arising in the months ahead.

However, every one who realizes the extreme need for a swift and orderly reconversion must feel a deep concern about the number of major strikes now in progress. If long continued, these strikes could put a heavy brake on our program.

I have already made recommendations to the Congress as to the procedure best adapted to meeting the threat of work stoppages in nation-wide industries without sacrificing the fundamental rights of labor to bargain collectively and ultimately to strike in support of their position.

If we manage our economy properly, the future will see us on a level of production half again as high as anything we have ever accomplished in peace time. Business can in the future pay higher wages and sell for lower prices than ever before. This is not true now for all companies, nor will it ever be true for all, but for business generally it is true.

Relies on Bargaining

We are relying on all concerned to develop, through collective bargaining, wage structures that are fair to labor, allow for necessary business incentives, and conform with a policy designed to "hold the line" on prices.

Production and more production was the byword during the war and still is during the transition from war to peace. However, when deferred demand slackens, we shall once again face the deflationary dangers which beset this and other countries during the 1930's. Prosperity can be assured only by a high level of demand supported by high current income; it cannot be sustained by deferred needs and use of accumulated savings.

Warns on Excesses

If we take the right steps in time we can certainly avoid the disastrous excesses of runaway booms and headlong depressions. We must not let a year or two of prosperity lull us into a false feeling of security and a repetition of the mistakes of the 1920's that culminated in the crash of 1929.

During the year ahead the government will be called upon to act in many important fields of economic policy from taxation and foreign trade to social security and housing. In every case there will be alternatives. We must choose the alternatives which will best measure up to our need for maintaining production and employment in the future. We must never lose sight of our long-term objectives: the broadening of markets — the maintenance of steadily rising demand. This demand can come from only three sources: consumers, businesses or government.

In this country the job of production and distribution is in the hands of business men, farmers, workers and professional people —in the hands of our citizens. We want to keep it that way. However, it is the government's responsibility to help business, labor and farmers do their jobs.

There is no question in my mind that the government, acting on behalf of all the people, must assume the ultimate responsibility for the economic health of the nation. There is no other agency that can. No other organization has the scope or the authority, nor is any other agency accountable, to all the people. This dose not mean that the government has the sole responsibility, nor that it can do the job alone, nor that it can do the job directly.

Offers Tax Plan

All the policies of the Federal government must be geared to the objective of sustained full production and full employment —to raise consumer purchasing power and to encourage business investment. The programs we adopt this year and from now on will determine our ability to achieve our objectives. We must continue to pay particular attention to our fiscal, monetary and tax policy, programs to aid business—especially small business—transportation, labor - management relations and wage-price policy, social security and health, education, the farm program, public works, housing and resource development, and economic foreign policy.

For example, the kinds of tax measures we have at different times — whether we raise our revenue in a way to encourage consumer spending and business investment or to discourage it—have a vital bearing on this question. It is affected also by regulations on consumer credit and by the money market, which is strongly influenced by the rate of interest on government securities. It is affected by almost every step we take.

In short, the way we handle the proper functions of government, the way we time the exercise of our traditional and legitimate governmental functions, has a vital bearing on the economic health of the nation.

These policies are discussed in greater detail in the accompanying Fifth Quarterly Report of the Director of War Mobilization and Reconversion.

3. Legislation Heretofore Recommended and Still Pending

To attain some of these objectives and to meet the other needs of the United States in the reconversion and post-war period I have from time to time made various recommendations to the Congress.

In making these recommendations I have indicated the reasons why I deemed them essential for progress at home and abroad. A few—a very few—of these recommendations have been enacted into law by the Congress. Most of them have not. I here reiterate some of them, and discuss others later in this message. I urge upon the Congress early consideration of them. Some are more urgent than others, but all are necessary.

4. Policies in Specific Fields

(a) Extension of Price Control Act

Today inflation is our greatest immediate domestic problem. So far, the fight against inflation has been waged successfully. Since May, 1943, following President Roosevelt's "hold the line" order and in the face of the greatest pressures which this country has ever seen, the cost of living index has risen only 3 per cent. Wholesale prices in this same period have been held to an increase of 2½ per cent.

This record has been made possible by the vigorous efforts of the agencies responsible for this program. But their efforts would have been fruitless if they had not had the solid support of the great masses of our people. The Congress is to be congratulated for its role in providing the legislation under which this work has been carried out.

On V-J Day it was clear to all thinking people that the danger of inflation was by no means over. Many of us can remember vividly our disastrous experience following World War I. Then the very restricted war-time controls were lifted too quickly, and as a result prices and rents moved more rapidly upward. In the year and a half following the armistice, rents, food, and clothing shot to higher and still higher levels.

When the inevitable crash occurred less than two years after the end of the war, business bankruptcies were widespread. Profits were wiped out. Inventory losses amounted to billions of dollars. Farm income dropped by one-half. Factory pay rolls dropped 40 per cent, and nearly one-fifth of all our industrial workers were walking the streets in search of jobs. This was a grim greeting, indeed, to offer our veterans who had just returned from overseas.

When I addressed the Congress in September, I emphasized that we must continue to hold the price line until the production of goods caught up with the tremendous demands. Since then we have seen demonstrated the strength of the inflationary pressures which we have to face.

Retail sales in the closing months of 1945 ran 12 per cent above the previous peak for the season, which came in 1944. Prices throughout the entire economy have been pressing hard against the price ceilings. The prices of real estate, which cannot now be controlled under the law, are rising rapidly. Commercial rents are not included in the present price control law and, where they are not controlled by state law, have been increasing, causing difficulties to many business men.

Backs Price Controls

It will be impossible to maintain a high purchasing power or an expanding production unless we can keep prices at levels which can be met by the vast majority of our people. Full production is the greatest weapon against inflation, but until we can produce enough goods to meet the threat of inflation the government will have to exercise its war-time control over prices.

I am sure that the people of the United States are disturbed by the demands made by several business groups with regard to price and rent control.

I am particularly disturbed at the effect such thinking may have on production and employment. If manufacturers continue to hold back goods and decline to submit bids when invited—as I am informed some are doing—in anticipation of higher prices which would follow the end of price control, we shall inevitably slow down production and create needless unemployment. On the other hand, there are the vast majority of American business men who are not holding back goods, but who need certainty about the government pricing policy in order to fix their own long-range pricing policies.

Business men are entitled, therefore, to a clear statement of the policy of the government on the subject. Tenants and housewives, farmers and workers—consumers in general—have an equal right.

We are all anxious to eliminate unnecessary controls just as rapidly as we can do so. The steps that we have already taken in many directions toward that end are a clear indication of our policy.

Calls for Renewal of Law

The present price-control act expires on June 30, 1946. If we expect to maintain a steady economy we shall have to maintain price and rent control for many months to come. The inflationary pressures on prices and rents, with relatively few exceptions, are now at an all-time peak. Unless the price-control act is renewed there will be no limit to which our price levels would soar. Our country would face a national disaster.

We cannot wait to renew the act until immediately before it expires. Inflation results from psychological as well as economic conditions. The country has a clear right to know where the Congress stands on this all-important problem. Any uncertainty now as to whether the act will be extended gives rise to price speculation, to withholding of goods from the market in anticipation of rising prices and to delays in achieving maximum production.

I do not doubt that the Congress will be beset by many groups who will urge that the legislation that I have proposed should be either eliminated or modified to the point where it is nearly useless. The Congress has a clear responsibility to meet this challenge with courage and determination. I have every confidence that it will do so.

I strongly urge that the Congress now resolve all doubts and as soon as possible adopt legislation continuing rent and price control in effect for a full year from June 30, 1946.

(b) Food Subsidies

If the price line is to be held, if our people are to be protected against the inflationary dangers which confront us, we must do more than extend the price-control act. In September we were hopeful that the inflationary pressures would by this time have begun to diminish. We were particularly hopeful on food. Indeed, it was estimated that food prices at retail would drop from 3 to 5 per cent in the first six months following the end of the war.

In anticipation of this decline in food prices, it was our belief that food subsidies could be removed gradually during the winter and spring months, and eliminated almost completely by June 30 of this year. It was our feeling that the food subsidies could be dropped without an increase to the consumer in the present level of food prices or in the overall cost of living.

As matters stand today, however, food prices are pressing hard against the ceilings. The expected decline in food prices has not occurred, nor is it likely to occur for many months to come. This brings me to the reluctant conclusion that food subsidies must be continued beyond June 30, 1946.

If we fail to take this necessary step, meat prices on July 1 will be from 3 to 5 cents higher than their average present levels; butter will be at least 12 cents a pound higher, in addition to the 5 cents a pound increase of last fall; milk will increase from 1 to 2 cents a quart; bread will increase about 1 cent a loaf; sugar will increase over 1 cent a pound; cheese, in addition to the increase of 4 cents now planned for the latter part of this month, will go up an additional 8 cents. In terms of percentages we may find the cost-of-living index for food increased by more than 8 per cent, which in turn would result in more than a 3 per cent increase in the cost of living.

If prices of food were allowed to increase by these amounts, I must make it clear to the Congress that, in my opinion, it would become extremely difficult for us to control the forces of inflation.

None of us likes subsidies. Our farmers, in particular, have always been opposed to them.

But I believe our farmers are as deeply conscious as any group in the land of the havoc which inflation can create. Certainly in the last eighteen months there has been no group which has fought any harder in support of the government's price-control program. I am confident that, if the facts are placed before them and if they see clearly the evils between which we are forced to choose, they will understand the reasons why subsidies must be continued.

The legislation continuing the use of food subsidies into the new fiscal year should be tied down specifically to certain standards. A very proper requirement, in my opinion, would be that subsidies be removed as soon as it is indicated that the cost of living will decline below the present levels.

(c) Extension of War Powers Act

The second war powers act has recently been extended by the Congress for six months instead of for a year. It will now expire, unless further extended, on June 30, 1946. This act is the basis for priority and inventory controls governing the use of scarce materials, as well as for other powers essential to orderly reconversion.

I think that this administration has given adequate proof of the fact that it desires to eliminate war-time controls as quickly and as expeditiously as possible. However, we know that there will continue to be shortages of certain materials caused by the war, even after June 30, 1946. It is important that business men know now that materials in short supply are going to be controlled and distributed fairly as long as these war-born shortages continue.

I, therefore, urge the Congress soon to extend the second war powers act. We cannot afford to wait until just before the act expires next June. To wait would cause the controls to break down in a short time and would hamper our production and employment program.

(d) Small Business and Competition

A rising birth rate for small business, and a favorable environment for its growth, are not only economic necessities but also important practical demonstrations of opportunity in a democratic free society. A great many veterans and workers with new skills and experience will want to start in for themselves. The opportunity must be afforded them to do so. They are the small business men of the future.

Actually when we talk about small business we are talking about almost all of the nation's individual businesses. Nine out of every ten concerns fall into this category, and 45 per cent of all workers are employed by them. Between 30 and 40 per cent of the total value of all business transactions are handled by small business.

It is obvious national policy to foster the sound development of small business. It helps to maintain high levels of employment and national income and consumption of the goods and services that the nation can produce. It encourages the competition that keeps our free enterprise economy vigorous and expanding. Small business, because of its flexibility, assists in the rapid exploitation of scientific and technological discoveries. Investment in small business can absorb a large volume of savings that might otherwise not be tapped.

Small Business Program

The government should encourage and is encouraging small-business initiative and originality to stimulate progress through competition.

During the war the Smaller War Plants Corporation assisted small concerns to make a maximum contribution to victory. The work of the Smaller War Plants Corporation is being carried on in peace time by the Federal Loan Agency and the Department of Commerce. The fundamental approach to the job of encouraging small concerns must be based on:

1. Arrangements for making private and public financial resources available on reasonable terms.

2. Provision of technical advice and assistance to business as a whole on production, research and management problems. This will help equalize competitive relationships between large and small companies, for many of the small companies cannot afford expensive technical research, accounting and tax advice.

3. Elimination of trade practices and agreements which reduce competition and discriminate against new or small enterprises.

We speak a great deal about the free enterprise economy of our country. It is competition that keeps it free. It is competition that keeps it growing and developing. The truth is that we need far more competition in the future than we have had in the immediate past.

By strangling competition

monopolistic activity prevents or deters investment in new or expanded production facilities. This lessens the opportunity for employment and chokes off new outlets for idle savings. Monopoly maintains prices at artificially high levels and reduces consumption which, with lower prices, would rise and support larger production and higher employment. Monopoly, not being subject to competitive pressure, is slow to take advantage of technical advances which would lower prices or improve quality. All three of these monopolistic activities very directly lower the standard of living—through higher prices and lower quality of product—which free competition would improve.

The Federal government must protect legitimate business and consumers from predatory and monopolistic practices by the vigilant enforcement of regulatory legislation. The program will be designed to have a maximum impact upon monopolistic bottlenecks and unfair competitive practices hindering expansion in employment.

Anti-Trust Action

During the war, enforcement of anti-monopoly laws was suspended in a number of fields. The government must now take major steps not only to maintain enforcement of anti-trust laws but to encourage new and competing enterprises in every way. The deferred demand of the war years and the large accumulations of liquid assets provide ample incentive for expansion. Equalizing of business opportunity under full and free competition, must be a prime responsibility in the reconversion period and in the years that follow. Many leading business men have recognized the importance of such action both to themselves and to the economy as a whole.

But we must do more than break up trusts and monopolies after they have begun to strangle competition. We must take positive action to foster new, expanding enterprises. By legislation and by administration we must take specific steps to discourage the formation or the strengthening of competition-restricting business. We must have an over-all anti-monopoly policy which can be applied by all agencies of the government in exercising the functions assigned to them—a policy designed to encourage the formation and growth of new and freely competitive enterprises.

Among the many departments and agencies which have parts in the program affecting business and competition, the Department of Commerce has a particularly important role. That is why I have recommended a substantial increase in appropriations for the next fiscal year for this department.

Objectives for Agency

In its assistance to industry, the Department of Commerce will concentrate its efforts on these primary objectives: Promotion of a large and well balanced trade; provision of improved technical assistance and management aids, especially for small enterprises; and strengthening of basic statistics on business operations, both by industries and by regions. To make new invention and discoveries available more promptly to all businesses, small and large, the department proposes to expand its own research activities, promote research by universities, improve Patent Office procedures, and develop a greatly expanded system of field offices readily accessible to the businesses they serve.

Many gaps exist in the private financial mechanism, especially in the provision of long-term funds for small and medium sized enterprises. In the peacetime economy the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will take the leadership in assuring adequate financing for small enterprises which cannot secure funds from other sources. Most of the funds should and will be provided by private lenders; but the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will share any unusual risks through guaranties of private loans, with direct loans only when private capital is unwilling to participate on a reasonable basis.

(e) Minimum Wage

Full employment and full production may be achieved only by maintaining a level of consumer income far higher than that of the pre-war period. A high level of consumer income will maintain the market for the output of our mills, farms and factories, which we have demonstrated during the war years that we can produce. One of the basic steps which the Congress can take to establish a high level of consumer income is to amend the fair labor standards act to raise substandard wages to a decent minimum and to extend similar protection to additional workers who are not covered by the present act.

Substandard wages are bad for business and for the farmer. Substandard wages provide only a substandard market for the goods and services produced by American industry and agriculture.

At the present time the fair labor standards act prescribes a minimum wage of 40 cents an hour for those workers who are covered by the act. The present minimum wage represents an annual income of about $800 to those continuously employed for fifty weeks—clearly a wholly inadequate budget for an American family. I am in full accord with the proposal now pending in the Congress that the statutory minimum be raised immediately to 65 cents an hour, with further increases to 70 cents after one year and to 75 cents after two years. I also favor the proposal that the industry committee procedure be used to set rates higher than 65 cents an hour during the two-year interval before the 75-cent basic wage would otherwise become applicable.

For Higher Wages

The proposed minimum wage of 65 cents an hour would assure the worker an annual income of about $1,300 a year in steady employment. This amount is clearly a modest goal. After considering cost-of-living increases in recent years, it is little more than a 10-cent increase over the present legal minimum. In fact, if any large number of workers earn less than this amount, we will find it impossible to maintain the levels of purchasing power needed to sustain the stable prosperity which we desire. Raising the minimum to 75 cents an hour will provide the wage earner with an annual income of $1,500 if he is fully employed.

The proposed higher minimum wage levels are feasible without involving serious price adjustments or serious geographic dislocations.

Today about 20 per cent of our manufacturing wage earners—or about 2,000,000—earn less than 65 cents an hour. Because wages in most industries have risen during the war, this is about the same as the proportion—17 per cent—who were earning less than 40 cents an hour in 1941.

I also recommend that minimum wage protection be extended to several groups of workers not now covered. The need for a decent standard of living is by no means limited to those workers who happen to be covered by the act as it now stands. It is particularly vital at this period of readjustment in the national economy and readjustment in employment of labor to extend minimum wage protection as far as possible.

Lifting the basic minimum wage is necessary, it is justified as a matter of simple equity to workers, and it will prove not only feasible but also directly beneficial to the nation's employers.

(f) Agricultural Programs

The farmers of America generally are entering the crop year of 1946 in better financial condition than ever before. Farm mortgage debt is the lowest in thirty years. Farmers' savings are the largest in history. Our agricultural plant is in much better condition than after World War I. Farm machinery and supplies are expected to be available in larger volume, and farm labor problems will be less acute.

The demand for farm products will continue strong during the next year or two because domestic purchases will be supplanted by a high level of exports and foreign relief shipments. It is currently estimated that from 7 to 10 per cent of the total United States food supply may be exported in the calendar year 1946.

Agriculture's Future

Farm prices are expected to remain at least at their present levels in the immediate future, and for at least the next twelve months they are expected to yield a net farm income double the 1935-'39 average and higher than in any year prior to 1943.

We can look to the future of agriculture with greater confidence than in many a year in the past. Agriculture itself is moving confidently ahead, planning another year of big production, taking definite and positive steps to lead the way toward an economy of abundance.

Agricultural production goals for 1946 call for somewhat greater acreage than actually was planted in 1945. Agriculture is prepared to demonstrate that it can make a peace-time contribution as great as its contribution toward the winning of the war.

In spite of supplying our forces and our allies during the war with a fifth to a fourth of our total food output, farmers were still able to provide our civilians with 8 per cent more food per capita than the average for the five years preceding the war. Since the surrender of Japan, civilian food consumption has risen still further. By the end of 1945 the amount of the increase in food consumption was estimated to be as high as 15 per cent over the pre-war average. The record shows that the people of this country want and need more food and that they will buy more food if only they have the jobs and the purchasing power. The first essential, therefore, in providing fully for the welfare of agriculture is to maintain full employment and a high level of purchasing power throughout the nation.

Aid to War-Stricken

For the period immediately ahead we shall still have the problem of supplying enough food. If we are to do our part in aiding the war-stricken and starving countries some of the food desires of our own people will not be completely satisfied, at least until these nations have had an opportunity to harvest another crop. During the next few months the need for food in the world will be more serious than at any time during the war. And, despite the large shipments we have already made, and despite what we shall send, there remain great needs abroad.

Beyond the relief feeding period, there will still be substantial foreign outlets for our farm commodities. The chief dependence of the farmer, however, as always, must be upon the buying power of our own people.

The first obligation of the government to agriculture for the reconversion period is to make good on its price-support commitments. This we intend to do, with realistic consideration for the sound patterns of production that will contribute most to the long-time welfare of agriculture and the whole nation. The period during which prices are supported will provide an opportunity for farmers individually to strengthen their position in changing over from a war-time to a peace-time basis of production. It wil provide an opportunity for the Congress to review the needs of agriculture and make changes in national legislation where experience has shown changes to be needed. In this connection, the Congress will wish to consider legislation to take the place of the 1937 sugar act which expires at the end of this year. During this period we must do a thorough job of basic planning to the end that agriculture shall be able to contribute its full share toward a healthy national economy.

Long-Range Policies

Our long-range agricultural policies should have two main objectives: First, to assure the people on the farms a fair share of the national income; and, second, to encourage an agricultural production pattern that is best fitted to the nation's needs. To accomplish this second objective we shall have to take into consideration changes that have taken place and will continue to take place in the production of farm commodities—changes that affect costs and efficiency and volume.

What we seek ultimately is a high level of food production and consumption that will provide good nutrition for everyone. This cannot be accomplished by agriculture alone. We can be certain of our capacity to produce food, but we have often failed to distribute it as well as we should and to see that our people can afford to buy it. The way to get good nutrition for the whole nation is to provide employment opportunities and purchasing power for all groups that will enable them to buy full diets at market prices.

Wherever purchasing power fails to reach this level we should see that they have some means of getting adequate food at prices in line with their ability to buy. Therefore, we should have available supplementary programs that will enable all our people to have enough of the right kind of food.

School-Lunch Plan

For example, one of the best possible contributions toward building a stronger, healthier nation would be a permanent school-lunch program on a scale adequate to assure every school child a good lunch at noon. The Congress, of course, has recognized this need for a continuing school-lunch program and legislation to that effect has been introduced and hearings held. The plan contemplates the attainment of this objective with a minimum of Federal expenditures. I hope that the legislation will be enacted in time for a permanent program to start with the beginning of the school year next fall.

We have the technical knowledge and the productive capacity to provide plenty of good food for every man, woman and child in the United States. It is time we made that possibility a reality.

(g) Resource Development

The strength of our nation and the welfare of the people rest upon the natural resources of the country. We have learned that proper conservation of our lands, including our forests and minerals, and wise management of our waters will add immensely to our national wealth.

The first step in the government's conservation program must be to find out just what are our basic resources and how they should be used. We need to take, as soon as possible, an inventory of the lands, the minerals and the forests of the nation.

During the war it was necessary to curtail some of our long-range plans for development of our natural resources, and to emphasize programs vital to the prosecution of the war. Work was suspended on a number of flood control and reclamation projects and on the development of our national forests and parks. This work must now be resumed, and new projects must be undertaken to provide essential services and to assist in the process of economic development.

The rivers of America offer a great opportunity to our generation in the management of the national wealth. By a wise use of Federal funds, most of which will be repaid into the Treasury, the scourge of floods and drought can be curbed, water can be brought to arid lands, navigation can be extended, and cheap power can be brought alike to the farms and to the industries of our land.

Through the use of the waters of the Columbia River, for example, we are creating a rich agricultural area as large as the state of Delaware. At the same time we are producing power at Grand Coulee and at Bonneville which played a mighty part in winning the war and which will found a great peace-time industry in the Northwest. The Tennessee Valley Authority will resume its peace-time program of promoting full use of the resources of the valley. We shall continue our plans for the development of the Missouri Valley, the Arkansas Valley and the Central Valley of California.

The Congress has shown itself alive to the practical requirements for a beneficial use of our water resources by providing that preference in the sale of power be given to farmers' co-operatives and public agencies. The public power program thus authorized must continue to be made effective by building the necessary generating and transmission facilities to furnish the maximum of firm power needed at the wholesale markets, which are often distant from the dam sites.

These great developmental projects will open the frontiers of agriculture, industry and commerce. The employment opportunities thus offered will also go far to ease the transition from war to peace.

(h) Public Works

During the war even urgently needed Federal, state and local construction projects were deferred in order to release resources for war production. In resuming public works construction, it is desirable to proceed only at a moderate rate, since demand for private construction will be abnormally high for some time. Our public works program should be timed to reach its peak after demand for private construction has begun to taper off. Meanwhile, however, plans should be prepared if we are to act promptly when the present extraordinary private demand begins to run out.

The Congress made money available to Federal agencies for their public works planning in the fiscal year 1946. I strongly recommend that this policy be continued and extended in the fiscal year 1947.

State and local governments also have an essential role to play in a national public works program. In my message of September 6, 1945, I recommended that the Congress vote such grants to state and local governments as will insure that each level of government makes its proper contribution to a balanced public construction program. Specifically, the Federal government should aid state and local governments in planning their own public works programs, in undertaking projects related to Federal programs of regional development, and in constructing such public works as are necessary to carry out the various policies of the Federal government.

Early in 1945 the Congress made available advances to state and local governments for planning public works projects, and recently made additional provision to continue these advances through the fiscal year 1946. I believe that further appropriations will be needed for the same purpose for the fiscal year 1947.

U. S. Highway Fund

The Congress has already made provision for highway programs. It is now considering legislation which would expand Federal grants and loans in several other fields, including construction of airports, hospital and health centers, housing, water pollution control facilities and educational plant facilities. I hope that early action will be taken to authorize these Federal programs.

With respect to public works of strictly local importance, state and local governments should proceed without Federal assistance except in planning. This rule should be subject to review when and if the prospect of highly adverse general economic developments warrants it.

All loans and grants for public works should be planned and administered in such a way that they are brought into accord with the other elements of the Federal program.

Our long-run objective is to achieve a program of direct Federal and Federally assisted public works which is planned in advance and synchronized with business conditions. In this way it can make it greatest contribution to general economic stability.

(i) National Housing Program

Last September I stated in my message to the Congress that housing was high on the list of matters calling for decisive action.

Since then the housing shortage in countless communities, affecting millions of families, has magnified this call to action.

Today we face both an immediate emergency and a major post-war problem.

Since V-J Day the war-time housing shortage has been growing steadily worse and pressure on real estate values has increased. Returning veterans often cannot find a satisfactory place for their families to live, and many who buy have to pay exorbitant prices. Rapid demobilization inevitably means further overcrowding.

A realistic and practical attack on the emergency will require aggressive action by local governments, with Federal aid, to exploit all opportunities and to give the veterans as far as possible first chance at vacancies. It will require continuation of rent control in shortage areas as well as legislation to permit control of sales prices. It will require maximum conversion of temporary war units for veterans' housing and their transportation to communities with the most pressing needs; the Congress has already appropriated funds for this purpose.

The inflation in the price of housing is growing daily.

As a result of the housing shortage, it is inevitable that the present dangers of inflation in home values will continue unless the Congress takes action in the immediate future.

Legislation is now pending in the Congress which would provide for ceiling prices for old and new houses. The authority to fix such ceilings is essential. With such authority, our veterans and other prospective home owners would be protected against a skyrocketing of home prices. The country would be protected from the extension of the present inflation in home values which, if allowed to continue, will threaten not only the stabilization program but our opportunities for attaining a sustained high level of home construction.

Production Is Answer

Such measures are necessary stopgaps—but only stopgaps. This emergency action, taken alone, is good—but not enough. The housing shortage did not start with the war or with demobilization; it began years before that and has steadily accumulated. The speed with which the Congress establishes the foundation for a permanent, long-range housing program will determine how effectively we grasp the immense opportunity to achieve our goal of decent housing and to make housing a major instrument of continuing prosperity and full employment in the years ahead. It will determine whether we move forward to a stable and healthy housing enterprise and toward providing a decent home for every American family.

Production is the only fully effective answer. To get the wheels turning, I have appointed an emergency housing expediter. I have approved establishment of priorities designed to assure an ample share of scarce materials to builders of houses for which veterans will have preference. Additional price and wage adjustments will be made where necessary, and other steps will be taken to stimulate greater production of bottleneck items. I recommend consideration of every sound method for expansion in facilities for insurance of privately financed housing by the Federal Housing Administration and resumption of previously authorized low-rent public housing projects suspended during the war.

In order to meet as many demands of the emergency situation as possible, a program of emergency measures is now being formulated for action. These will include steps in addition to those already taken. As quickly as this program can be formulated, announcement will be made.

Last September I also outlined to the Congress the basic principles for the kind of decisive permanent legislation necessary for a long-range housing program.

These principles place paramount the fact that housing construction and financing for the overwhelming majority of our citizens should be done by private enterprise. They contemplate also that we afford governmental encouragement to privately financed house construction for families of moderate income, through extension of the successful system of insurance of housing investments, that research be undertaken to develop better and cheaper methods of building homes; that communities be assisted in appraising their housing needs; that we commence a program of Federal aid, with fair local participation, to stimulate and promote the rebuilding and redevelopment of slums and blighted areas—with maximum use of private capital. It is equally essential that we use public funds to assist families of low income who could not otherwise enjoy adequate housing, and that we quicken our rate of progress in rural housing.

Stimulus to Building

Legislation now under consideration by the Congress provides for a comprehensive attack jointly by private enterprise, state and local authorities and the Federal government. This legislation would make permanent the National Housing Agency and give it authority and funds for much needed technical and economic research. It would provide additional stimulus for privately financed housing construction. This stimulus consists of establishing a new system of yield insurance to encourage large-scale investment in rental housing and broadening the insuring powers of the Federal Housing Administration and the lending powers of the Federal savings and loan associations.

Where private industry cannot build, the government must step in to do the job. The bill would encourage expansion in housing available for the lowest income groups by continuing to provide direct subsidies for low-rent housing and rural housing. It would facilitate land assembly for urban development by loans and contributions to local public agencies where the localities do their share.

Prompt enactment of permanent housing legislation along these lines will not interfere with the emergency action already under way. On the contrary, it would lift us out of a potentially perpetual state of housing emergency. It would offer the best hope and prospect to millions of veterans and other American families that the American system can offer more to them than temporary makeshifts.

I have said before that the people of the United States can be the best housed people in the world. I repeat that assertion, and I welcome the co-operation of the Congress in achieving that goal.

(j) Social Security and Health

Our Social Security System has just celebrated its tenth anniversary. During the last decade this prgoram has supported the welfare and morale of a large part of our people by removing some of the hazards and hardships of the aged, the unemployed, and widows and dependent children.

But, looking back over ten years' experience ahead to the future, we cannot fail to see defects and serious inadequacies in our system as it now exists. Benefits are in many cases inadequate; a great many persons are excluded from coverage; and provision has not been made for social insurance to cover the cost of medical care and the earnings lost by the sick and the disabled.

In the field of old-age security there seems to be no adequate reason for excluding such groups as the self-employed, agricultural and domestic workers, and employees of non-profit organizations. Since many of these groups earn wages too low to permit significant savings for old age, they are in special need of the assured income that can be provided by old-age insurance.

We must take urgent measures for the readjustment period ahead. The Congress for some time has been considering legislation designed to supplement at Federal expense, during the immediate reconversion period, compensation payments to the unemployed. Again I urge the Congress to enact legislation liberalizing unemployment compensation benefits and extending the coverage. Providing for the sustained consumption by the unemployed persons and their families is more than a welfare policy; it is sound economic policy. A sustained high level of consumer purchases is a basic ingredient of a prosperous economy.

During the war nearly 5,000,000 men were rejected for military service because of physical or mental defects which in many cases might have been prevented or corrected. This is shocking evidence that large sections of the population are at substandard levels of health. The need for a program that will give every one opportunity for medical care is obvious. Nor can there be any serious doubt of the government's responsibility for helping in this human and social problem.

The comprehensive health program which I recommended on Nov. 19, 1945, will require substantial additions to the social security system and, in conjunction with other changes that need to be made will require further consideration of the financial basis for social security. The system of prepaid medical care which I have recommended is expected eventually to require amounts equivalent to 4 percent of earnings up to $3,600 a year, which is about the average of present expenditures by individuals for medical care. The pooling of medical costs, under a plan which permits each individual to make a free choice of doctor and hospital, would assure that individuals receive adequate treatment and hospitalization when they are faced with emergencies for which they cannot budget individually. In addition, I recommended insurance benefits to replace part of the earnings lost through temporary sickness and permanent disability.

Even without these proposed major additions, it would now be time to undertake a thorough reconsideration of our social security laws. The structure should be expanded and liberalized. Provisions should be made for extending coverage to veterans for the period of their service in the armed forces. In the financial provisions we must reconcile the actuarial needs of social security, including health insurance, with the requirements of a revenue system that is designed to promote a high level of consumption and full employment.

(k) Education

Although the major responsibility for financing education rests with the states, some assistance has long been given by the Federal government. Further assistance is desirable and essential. There are many areas and some whole states where good schools cannot be provided without imposing an undue local tax burden on the citizens. It is essential to provide adequate elementary and secondary schools everywhere, and additional educational opportunities for large numbers of people beyond the secondary level. Accordingly, I repeat the proposal of last year's budget message that the Federal government provide financial aid to assist the states in assuring more nearly equal opportunities for a good education. The proposed Federal grants for current educational expenditures should be made for the purpose of improving the educational system where improvement is most needed. They should not be used to replace existing non-Federal expenditures, or even to restore merely the situation which existed before the war.

In the future we expect incomes considerably higher than before the war. Higher incomes should make it possible for state and local governments and for individuals to support higher and more nearly adequate expenditures for education. But inequality among the states will still remain and Federal help will still be needed.

As a part of our total public works program consideration should be given to the need for providing adequate buildings for schools and other educational institutions. In view of current arrears in the construction of educational facilities, I believe that legislation to authorize grants for educational facilities, to be matched by similar expenditures by state and local authorities, should receive the favorable consideration of the Congress.

The Federal government has not sought, and will not seek, to dominate education in the states. It should continue its historic role of leadership and advice and, for the purpose of equalizing educational opportunity, it should extend further financial support to the cause of education in areas where this is desirable.

(l) Federal Government Personnel

The rapid reconversion of the Federal government from war to peace is reflected in the demobilization of its civilian personnel. The number of these employees in continental United States has been reduced by more than 500,000 from the total of approximately 2,900,000 employed in the final months of the war. I expect that by next June we shall have made a further reduction of equal magnitude and that there will be continuing reductions during the next fiscal year. Of the special war-time agencies now remaining, only a few are expected to continue actively into the next fiscal year.

At the same time that we have curtailed the number of employees, we have shortened the work-week by one-sixth or more throughout the government and have restored holidays. The process of readjustment has been complicated and costs have been increased by a heavy turnover in the remaining personnel—particularly by the loss of some of our best administrators. Thousands of war veterans have been reinstated or newly employed in the civil service. Many civilians have been transferred from war agencies to their former peacetime agencies. Recruitment standards, which had to be relaxed during the war, are now being tightened.

The elimination last autumn of overtime work for nearly all Federal employees meant a sharp cut in their incomes. For salaried workers, the blow was softened but by no means offset by the increased rates of pay which had become effective July 1. Further adjustments to compensate for increased living costs are required. Moreover, we have long needed a general upward revision of Federal government salary scales at all levels in all branches—legislative, judicial, and executive. Too many in government have had to sacrifice too much in economic advantage to serve the nation.

Adequate salaries will result in economies and improved efficiency in the conduct of government business—gains that will far outweigh the immediate costs. I hope the Congress will expedite action on salary legislation for all Federal employees in all branches of the government. The only exception I would make is in the case of workers whose pay rates are established by wage boards; a blanket adjustment would destroy the system by which their wages are kept alined with prevailing rates in particular localities. The wage boards should be sensitive now, as they were during the war, to changes in local prevailing wage rates and should make adjustments accordingly.

I hope also that the Congress may see fit to enact legislation for the adequate protection of the health and safety of Federal employees, for their coverage under a system of unemployment compensation, and for the return at government expense to their homes after separation from war-time service.

(m) Territories, Insular Possessions, and the District of Columbia

The major governments of the world face few problems as important and as perplexing as those relating to dependent peoples. This government is committed to the democratic principle that it is for the dependent peoples themselves to decide what their status shall be. To this end I asked the Congress last October to provide a means by which the people of Puerto Rico might choose their form of government and ultimate status with respect to the United States. I urge, too, that the Congress promptly accede to the wishes of the people of Hawaii that the territory be admitted to statehood in our Union, and that similar action be taken with respect to Alaska as soon as it is certain that this is the desire of the people of that great territory. The people of the Virgin Islands should be given an increasing measure of self-government.

We have already determined that the Philippine Islands are to be independent on July 4, 1946. The ravages of war and enemy occupation, however, have placed a heavy responsibility upon the United States. I urge that the Congress complete, as promptly and as generously as may be possible, legislation which will aid economic rehabilitation for the Philippines. This will be not only a just acknowledgement of the loyalty of the people of the Philippines but it will help to avoid the economic chaos which otherwise will be their heritage from our common war. Perhaps no event in the long centuries of colonialism gives more hope for the pattern of the future than the independence of the Philippines.

The District of Columbia, because of its special relation to the Federal government, has been treated since 1800 as a dependent area. We should move toward a greater measure of local self-government consistent with the constitutional status of the District. We should take adequate steps to assure that citizens of the United States are not denied their franchise merely because they reside at the nation's capital.

III. The Budget for the Federal Program

For the Fiscal Year 1947

Summary of the Budget

For the first time since the fiscal year 1930 the budget for the next fiscal year will require no increase in the national debt.

Expenditures of all kinds, authorized and recommended, in the next year are estimated at just above 35.8 billion dollars. Net receipts are estimated at 31.5 billion dollars. The estimated difference of 4.3 billion dollars will be met by a reduction in the very substantial balance which the next fiscal year.

A large part of the activities outside defense and war liquidation, aftermath of war, and international finance, classified as "other activities" in a following table, is still due to repercussions of the war. These "other activities" include more than 2 billion dollars for aids to agriculture and net outlays for the Commodity Credit Corporation—almost double the expenditures for the same purposes in pre-war years. This increase is due mainly to expenditures for purposes of price stabilization and price support resulting from the war food production program. Other increases in this category are due to the fact that certain war-time agencies now in the process of liquidation are included in this group of activities. If all expenditures for those activities which are directly or indirectly related to the war are excluded, the residual expenditures are below those for corresponding activities in pre-war years. In making this comparison account should be taken of the fact that, while pre-war expenditures were affected by direct relief and work relief for the unemployed, the post-war budgets are affected by the considerable increase in pay rates and other increases in costs and prices.

Estimates Budget

To elaborate, the budget, as I have remarked above, reflects on both sides of the ledger the government's program as recommended by the Executive. It includes estimates not only of expenditures and receipts for which legislative authority already exists, but also of expenditures and receipts for which authorization is recommended.

The budget total for the next fiscal year, the year that ends on June 30, 1947, is estimated at just above 35.8 billion dollars—about a third of the budgets for global war, although nearly four times the pre-war budgets. This estimate is based on the assumption that a rapid liquidation of the war program will be associated with rapid reconversion and expansion of peacetime production. The total includes net outlays of government corporations.

The estimated expenditures in the next and current fiscal year compare as follows with those of a year of global war and a pre-war year:

Fiscal year:	Total budget expenditures (in millions)
1947	$35,860
1946	67,229

Although allowances for occupation, demobilization and defense are drastically reduced in the fiscal year 1947, they will still amount to 42 per cent of the total budget. The so-called "aftermath of war" expenditures account for a further 30 per cent of the total. The total of all other programs, which was drastically cut during the war, is increasing again as liquidation of the war program proceeds and renewed emphasis is placed on the peace-time objectives of the government.

On the other side of the ledger, net receipts are estimated at 31.5 billion dollars. This estimate assumes that all existing taxes will continue all through the fiscal year 1947. Included are the extraordinary receipts from the disposal of surplus property.

As a result, estimated expenditures will exceed estimated receipts by 4.3 billion dollars. This amount can be provided by a reduction in the cash balance in the Treasury. Thus, after a long period of increasing public debt resulting from depression budgets and war budgets, it is anticipated that no increase in the Federal debt will be required next year.

FEDERAL BUDGET EXPENDITURES AND BUDGET RECEIPTS

Including net outlays of Government corporations and credit agencies (based on existing and proposed legislation (In millions)

Expenditures:	Fiscal year 1946	Fiscal year 1947
Defense, war and war liquidation	$45,000	$15,000
Aftermath of war: Veterans, interest, refunds	10,813	10,793
International finance (including proposed legislation)	2,614	2,754
Other activities	4,552	5,813
Activities based on proposed legislation (excluding international finance	250	1,500
Total expenditures	$57,229	$35,860
Receipts (net)	38,609	31,513
Excess of expenditures	$28,620	$4,347

The current fiscal year, 1946, is a year of transition. When the year opened, in July, 1945, we were still fighting a major war, and Federal expenditures were running at an annual rate of about 100 billion dollars. By June, 1946, that rate will be more than cut in half. The budget total for the current year is now estimated at 67.2 billion dollars, of which more than two-thirds provides for war and war liquidation. Since net receipts are estimated at 38.6 billion dollars, there will be an excess of expenditures of 28.6 billion dollars for the current fiscal year.

Analyzes Figures

For all programs discussed in this message I estimate the total of budget appropriations and authorizations (including reappropriations and permanent appropriations) at 30,982 million dollars for the fiscal year 1947. Of this amount, present permanent appropriations are expected to provide 5,755 million dollars, principally for interest. This leaves 24,224 million dollars to be made available through new appropriations, exclusive of appropriations to liquidate contract authorizations; 900 million dollars in new contract authorizations, and 103 million dollars through the reappropriation of unliquidated balances of previous appropriations. The appropriations needed to liquidate contract authorizations are estimated at 1,113 million dollars.

In the budget for the year ahead only over-all estimates are included at this time for the major war agencies and for net outlays of government corporations. Detailed recommendations will be transmitted in the spring for the war agencies; and the business-type budgets of government corporations will likewise be transmitted in accordance with the recently adopted government corporation control act.

Similarly only over-all estimates are provided for new programs recommended in this message; detailed recommendations will be transmitted after authorizing legislation has been enacted. It should be recognized, that many of the estimates for new programs recommended in this message are initial year figures. These figures will be affected by the date the legislation is enacted and by the time needed for getting a program under way. New programs, such as that for a national research agency, will require larger amounts in later years. The estimates exclude major elements of the proposed national health program, since the greater part of these will be covered by expenditures from trust funds.

The budget total includes expenditures for capital outlay as well as for current operations. An estimated 1,740 million dollars will be expended in the fiscal year 1947 for direct Federal public works and for loans and grants for public works.

The Economic Impact of the Liquidation of the War Program

Government programs are of such importance in the development of production and employment opportunities — domestic and international—that it has become essential to formulate and consider the Federal budget in the light of the nation's budget as a whole. The relationship between the receipts, expenditures, and savings of consumers, business, and government is shown in the accompanying table.

Considering the whole nation, total expenditures must equal the total receipts because what any individual or group spends becomes receipts of other individuals or groups. Such equality can be achieved on either a high level of incomes or on a low or depression level of incomes.

Tremendous orders for munitions during the war shifted production and employment into high gear. Total goods produced and services rendered for private as well as for government purposes—the nation's budget—reached about 200 billion dollars in the calendar year 1944. Federal, state, and local government expenditures represented half of this total.

Corresponding estimates for the last three months depict the national economy in the process of demobilization and reconversion.

The wartime annual rate of Federal expenditures has been reduced by 32 billion dollars, while the nation's budget total has dropped only half as much. The drop in total value of production and services has been less drastic because increasing private activities have absorbed in large measure the man power and materials released from war production and war services.

The largest increase in private activities has occurred in business investments, which include residential and other construction, producers' durable equipment, accumulation of inventories, and net exports. Under conditions of global war, expenditures for private construction and equipment were held to a minimum and inventories were depleted. With the beginning of reconversion these developments have been reversed. Residential construction and outlays for plant and equipment are on the increase; inventories, too, are being replenished. International transactions (excluding lend-lease and international relief which are included under war expenditures) showed an import surplus under conditions of global war. In the last three months private exports have been slightly in excess of imports, for the first time since 1941.

Consumers' budgets show a significant change. On the income side, their total has declined but little because the reduction in "take-home" pay of war workers is, to a large extent, offset for the time being by the mustering-out payments received by war veterans and by unemployment compensation received by the unemployed. On the expenditure side, however, consumers' budgets, restricted during the war, have increased substantially as a result of the fact that scarce goods are beginning to appear on the market and wartime restraints are disappearing. Thus, consumers' current savings are declining substantially from the extraordinarily high wartime rate and some wartime savings are beginning to be used for long-delayed purchases.

Unemployment has increased less than was expected during this first period of demobilization and reconversion. It is true that six million men and women have been discharged from the armed forces since May, 1945 and more than five million have been laid off from war work. On the other hand, more than a million civilians have been enlisted in the armed forces, a considerable number of war veterans have not immediately sought jobs, and many war workers, especially women, have withdrawn from the labor force. In addition, many industries, and especially service trades which were undermanned during the war, are beginning now, for the first time in years, to recruit an adequate labor force. The reduced workweek has also contributed to the absorption of those released from war service and war work.

In general, the drastic cut in war programs has thrown the economy into lower gear; it has not thrown it out of gear. Our economic machine demonstrates remarkable resiliency, although there are many difficulties that must still be overcome. The rapid termination of war contracts, prompt clearance of unneeded government-owned equipment from private plants, and other reconversion policies have greatly speeded up the beginning of peacetime work in reconverted plants.

Although the first great shock of demobilization and war-work termination has thus been met better than many observers expected, specific industries and specific regions show much unevenness in the progress of reconversion.

The quarterly report of the Director of War Mobilization and Reconversion analyzes the difficulties in recruiting personnel and obtaining materials that hamper reconversion in certain industries and proposes policies to deal with these situations. The lack of adequate housing is one of the main factors checking the flow of workers into areas where job opportunities exist means of at prices i

Federal Revenue, Borrowing, and the Public Debt

1. Financial Requirements and Tax Policy

Recommendations for tax legislation should be considered not only in the light of the financial requirements of the ensuing year, but also in the light of future years' financial requirements and a full consideration of economic conditions.

Expenditures are estimated at nearly 36 billion dollars in the fiscal year 1947; they can hardly be expected to be reduced to less than 25 billion dollars in subsequent years. Net receipts in the fiscal year 1947 are estimated at 31.5 billion dollars.

Included in this estimate are 2 billion dollars of receipts from disposal and rental of surplus property and 190 million dollars of receipts from renegotiation of war-time contracts. These sources of receipts will disappear in future years. Tax collections for the fiscal year 1947 also will not yet fully reflect the reduction in corporate tax liabilities provided in the revenue act of 1945. If the extraordinary receipts from the disposal of surplus property and renegotiation of contracts be disregarded, and if the tax reductions adopted in the revenue act of 1945 were fully effective, present tax rates would yield about 27 billion dollars.

These estimates for the fiscal year 1947 are based on the assumption of generally favorable business conditions but not on an income reflecting full employment and the high productivity that we hope to achieve. In future years the present tax system, in conjunction with a full employment level of national income, could be expected to yield more than 30 billion dollars, which is substantially above the anticipated peace-time level of expenditures.

In view of the still extraordinarily large expenditures in the coming year and continuing inflationary pressures, I am making no recommendation for tax reduction at this time.

We have already had a substantial reduction in taxes from war-time peaks. The revenue act of 1945 was a major tax-reduction measure. It decreased the total tax load by more than one-sixth, an amount substantially in excess of the reductions proposed by the Secretary of the Treasury to Congressional tax committees in October, 1945. These proposed reductions were designed to encourage reconversion and peace-time business expansion.

The possibility of further tax reductions must depend on the budgetary situation and the economic situation. The level of anticipated expenditures for the fiscal year 1947 and the volume of outstanding public debt require the maintenance of large revenues. Moreover, inflationary pressures still appear dangerously powerful, and ill-advised tax reduction would operate to strengthen them still further.

My decision not to recommend additional tax reductions at this time is made in the light of existing economic conditions and prospects.

2. Borrowing and the Public Debt

The successful conclusion of the Victory loan marked the end of war borrowing and the beginning of the transition to post-war debt management.

Because of the success of the Victory loan, I am happy to report that the Treasury will not need to borrow any new money from the public during the remainder of the present fiscal year except through regular sales of savings bonds and savings notes. Furthermore a part of the large cash balance now in the Treasury will be used for debt redemption so that the public debt, which now amounts to about 278 billion dollars, will decrease by several billion dollars during the next eighteen months. The present statutory debt limit of 300 billion dollars will provide an ample margin for all the public-debt transactions through the fiscal year 1947. The net effect of the excess of expenditures and debt redemption on the Treasury cash balance, as compared with selected previous years, is shown in the following table:

EXCESS OF BUDGET EXPENDITURES, THE PUBLIC DEBT AND THE TREASURY CASH BALANCE, SELECTED YEARS

[In billions]

Fiscal year	Excess of Budget expenditures over receipts	Public debt at end of period	Cash balance at end of period
1940	$3.9	$43.0	$1.9
1946:

Jan.-June, '46	10.5	275.0	11.9
1947	4.3	271.0	3.2

Although the public debt is expected to decline, a substantial volume of refinancing will be required, because of the large volume of maturing obligations. Redemptions of savings bonds also have been running high in recent months and are expected to remain large for some time. The issuance of savings bonds will be continued. These bonds represent a convenient method of investments for small savers, and also an anti-inflationary method of refinancing. Government agencies and trust funds are erpected to buy about 2.5 billion dollars of government securities during the next six months, and 2.8 billion dollars more during the fiscal year 1947. Through these and other debt operations, the distribution of the Federal debt among the various types of public nad private owners will change, even though the total is expected to decline.

The interest policies followed in the refinancing operations will have a major impact not only on the provision for interest payments in future budgets, but also on the level of interest rates prevailing in private financing. The average rate of interest on the debt is now a little under 2 per cent. Low interest rates will be an important force in promoting the full production and full employment in the post-war period for which we are all striving. Close wartime co-operation between the Treasury Department and the Federal Reserve System has made it possible to finance the most expensive war in history at low and stable rates of interest. This co-operation will continue.

No less important than the level of interest rates paid on the debt is the distribution of its ownership. Of the total debt, more than half represents direct savings of individuals or investments of funds received from individual savings by life insurance companies, mutual savings banks, savings and loan associations, private or government trust funds and other agencies.

Most of the remaining debt—more than 100 billion dollars—is held by the commercial banks and the Federal Reserve banks. Heavy purchases by the banks were necessary to provide adequate funds to finance war expenditures. A considerable portion of these obligations are short-term in character and hence will require refinancing in the coming months and years. Since they have been purchased out of newly created bank funds, continuance of the present low rates of interest is entirely appropriate. To do otherwise would merely increase bank profits at the expense of the taxpayer.

The 275-billion-dollar debt poses a problem that requires careful consideration in the determination of financial and economic policies. We have learned that the problem, serious as it is, can be managed. Its management will require determined action to keep our Federal budget in order and to relate our fiscal policies to the requirements of an expanding economy. The more successful we are in achieving full production and full employment the easier it will be to manage the debt and pay for the debt service. Large though the debt is, it is within our economic capacity. The interest charges on it amount to but a small proportion of our national income. The government is determined, by a resolute policy of economic stabilization, to protect the interests of the millions of American citizens who have invested in its securities.

During the last six months the net revenue receipts of the Federal government have been about 20 billion dollars, almost as much as during the closing six months of 1944 when the country was still engaged in all-out warfare. The high level of these receipts reflects the smoothness of the reconversion and particularly the strength of consumer demand. But the receipts so far collected, it must be remembered, do not reflect any of the tax reductions made by the revenue act of 1945. These reductions will not have their full effect on the revenue collected until the fiscal year 1948.

It is good to move toward a balanced budget and a start on the retirement of the debt at a time when demand for goods is strong and the business outlook is good. These conditions prevail today. Business is good and there are still powerful forces working in the direction of inflation. This is not the time for tax reduction.

period we shall also lay the foundation for our peace-time system of national defense.

In the fiscal year that ended on June 30, 1945, almost wholly a period of global warfare, war expenditures amounted to 90.5 billion dollars. For the fiscal year 1946 war expenditures were originally estimated at 70 billion dollars. That estimate was made a year ago while we were still engaged in global warfare. After victory over Japan this estimate was revised to 50.5 billion dollars. Further cut-backs and accelerated demobilization have made possible an additional reduction in the rate of war spending. During the first six months 32.9 billion dollars were spent. It is now estimated that 16.1 billion dollars will be spent during the second six months, or a total of 49 billion dollars during the whole fiscal year.

For the fiscal year 1947 it is estimated, tentatively, that expenditures for war liquidation, for occupation, and for national defense will be reduced to 15 billion dollars. The War and Navy Departments are expected to spend 13 billion dollars; expenditures of other agencies, such as the United States Maritime Commission, the War Shipping Administration, and the Office of Price Administration, and payments to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration are estimated at 3 billion dollars. Allowing for estimated net receipts of 1 billion dollars arising from war activities of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the estimated total of war expenditures is 15 billion dollars. At this time only a tentative break-down of the total estimate for war and defense activities can be indicated.

War Liquidation

An expenditure of 15 billion dollars for war liquidation, occupation, and national defense is a large sum for a year which begins ten months after fighting has ended. It is ten times our expenditure for defense before the war; it amounts to about 10 per cent of our expected national income. This estimate reflects the immense job that is involved in winding up a global war effort and stresses the great responsibility that victory has placed upon this country. The large expenditures needed for our national defense emphasize the great scope for effective organization in furthering economy and efficiency. To this end I have recently recommended to the Congress adoption of legislation combining the War and Navy Departments into a single department of national defense.

A large part of these expenditures is still to be attributed to the costs of the war. Assuming, somewhat arbitrarily, that about one-half of the 15-billion-dollar outlay for the fiscal year 1947 is for war liquidation, aggregate expenditures by this government for the second world war are now estimated at 347 billion dollars through June 30, 1947. (See table A, part III, page 751.) Of this, about 9 billion dollars will have been recovered through renegotiation and sale of surplus property by June 30, 1947; this has been reflected in the estimates of receipts.

Demobilization and strength of armed forces.—Demobilization of our armed forces is proceeding rapidly. At the time of victory in Europe, about 12.3 million men and women were in the armed forces; 7.6 million were overseas. By the end of December, 1945, our armed forces had been reduced to below 7 million. By June 30, 1946, they will number about 2.9 million, of whom 1.8 million will be individuals enlisted and inducted after V-E Day. Mustering-out pay is a large item of our war liquidation expense; it will total 2.5 billion dollars in the fiscal year 1946, and about 500 million dollars in the fiscal year 1947.

In the fiscal year 1947 the strength of our armed forces will still be above the ultimate peace-time level. As I have said, War and Navy Department requirements indicate a strength of about 2 million in the armed forces a year from now. This is necessary to enable us to do our share in the occupation of enemy territories and in the preservation of peace in a troubled world. Expenditures for pay, subsistence, travel, and miscellaneous expenses of the armed forces, excluding mustering-out pay, are estimated at 5 billion dollars.

Contract settlement and surplus property disposal.—The winding up of war procurement is the second most important liquidation job. By the end of November a total of 301,000 prime contracts involving commitments of 64 billion dollars had been terminated. Of this total, 67,000 contracts with commitments of 35 billion dollars remained to be settled. Termination payments on these contracts are estimated at about 3.5 billion dollars. It is expected that more than half of these terminated contracts will be settled during the current fiscal year, leaving payments of about 1.5 billion dollars for the fiscal year 1947.

Another important aspect of war supply liquidation is the disposal of surplus property. Munitions, ships, plants, installations and supplies, originally costing 50 billion dollars or more, will ultimately be declared surplus. The sale value of this property will be far less than original cost and disposal expenses are estimated at 10 to 15 cents on each dollar realized. Disposal units within existing agencies have been organized to liquidate surplus property under the direction of the Surplus Property Administration. Overseas disposal activities have been centralized in the State Department to permit this program to be carried on in line with over-all foreign policy. Thus far only about 13 billion dollars of the ultimate surplus, including 5 billion dollars of unsalable aircraft, has been declared. Of this amount, 2.3 billion dollars have been disposed of, in sales yielding 600 million dollars. The tremendous job of handling surplus stocks will continue to affect Federal expenditures and receipts for several years. The speed and effectiveness of surplus disposal operations will be of great importance for the domestic economy as well as for foreign economic policies.

War supplies, maintenance and relief—Adequate provision for the national defense requires that we keep abreast of scientific and technical advances. The tentative estimates for the fiscal year 1947 make allowance for military research, limited procurement of weapons in the developmental state, and some regular procurement of munitions which were developed but not mass-produced when the war ended. Expenditures for procurement and construction will constitute one-third or less of total defense outlays, compared to a ratio of two-thirds during the war years.

The estimates also provide for the maintenance of our war-expanded naval and merchant fleets, military installations and stocks of military equipment and supplies. Our naval combatant fleet is three times its pre-Pearl Harbor tonnage. Our merchant marine is five times its pre-war size. The War Department has billions of dollars worth of equipment and supplies. Considerable maintenance and repair expense is necessary for the equipment which we desire to retain in active status or in war reserve. Expenses will be incurred for winnowing the stocks of surpluses, for preparing lay-up facilities for the reserve fleets, and for storage of reserve equipment and supplies.

Military expenditures in the current fiscal year include 650 million dollars for civilian supplies for the prevention of starvation and disease in occupied areas. Expenditures on this account will continue in the fiscal year 1947. The war expenditures also cover the expenses of civilian administration in occupied areas.

During the war 15 cents of each dollar of our war expenditures was for lend-lease aid. With lend-lease terminated, I expect the direct operations under this program to be substantially completed in the current fiscal year. The expenditures estimated for the fiscal year 1947 under this program are mainly interagency reimbursements for past transactions.

Relief and rehabilitation expenditures are increasing. It is imperative that we give all necessary aid within our means to the people who have borne the ravages of war. I estimate that in the fiscal year 1946 expenditures for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration will total 1.3 billion dollars and in the following year 1.2 billion dollars. In so far as possible, procurement for this purpose will be from war supplies.

(b) Authorizations for War and National Defense

During the war authorizations and appropriations had to be enacted well in advance of obligation and spending to afford ample time for planning of production by the procurement services and by industry. Thus our cumulative war program authorized in the period between July 1, 1940, and July 1, 1945, was $431,000,000,000, including net war commitments of government corporations. Expenditures against those authorizations totaled $290,000,000,000. This left $141,000,000,000 in unobligated authorizations and unliquidated obligations. (See Table A, Part III, Page 751.)

With the end of fighting, it became necessary to adjust war authorizations to the requirements of war liquidation and continuing national defense. Intensive review of the war authorizations by both the executive and the legislative branches has been continued since VJ-Day. As a result, the authorized war program is being brought more nearly into line with expenditures.

Recissions and Authorizations Through the Fiscal Year 1946

Readjusting the war program, as the Congress well knows, is not an easy task. Authorizations must not be too tight, lest we hamper necessary operations they must not be too ample, lest we lose control of spending. Last September I transmitted to the Congress recommendations on the basis of which the Congress voted H. R. 4407 to repeal 50.3 billion dollars of appropriations and authorizations. I found it necessary to veto this bill because it was used as a vehicle for legislation that would impair the re-employment program. However, in order to preserve the fine work of the Congress on the rescissions, I asked the Director of the Bureau of the

Recommendations for Specific Federal Activities

1. War Liquidation and National Defense

(a) War expenditures

The fiscal year 1947 will see a continuance of war liquidation and occupation. During this Budget to place the exact amounts indicated for repeal in a non-expendable reserve and to advise the departments and agencies accordingly. This has been done.

Navy Appropriations

In accord with Public Law 132 of the Seventy-ninth Congress, I have transmitted recommendations for additional recissions for the current fiscal year of appropriations amounting to 5.8 billon dollars and of contract authorizations totaling 420 million dollars. The net reduction in authority to obligate will be 5.0 billion dollars, because of the appropriations, 1.2 billion dollars will have to be restored in subsequent years to liquidate contract authorizations still on the books.

The appropriations recommended for repeal include 2,827 million dollars for the Navy Department, 1,421 million dollars for the War Department, 850 million dollars for lend-lease, 384 million dollars for the War Shipping Administration, and 260 million dollars for the United States Maritime Commission. The contract authorizations proposed for repeal are for the Maritime Commission.

In addition, there are unused tonnage authorizations for construction of naval vessels now valued at 5.4 billion dollars. In September, 1945, I suggested that this authority be reviewed by the appropriate committees of the Congress, and the Congress has moved to bar construction under these authorizations during the remainder of the fiscal year 1946. I propose to continue this prohibition in the Navy budget estimates for the fiscal year 1947 and now renew my recommendation that legislation be enacted at the earliest time to clear the statute books of these authorizations.

Funds for U. N. R. R. A.

The amounts indicated for repeal in H. R. 4407 and the further recissions which I have recommended, excluding duplications and deferred cash payments on existing authorizations, represent a cut in the authorized war program of 60.8 billion dollars. The war authorizations will also be reduced 3.7 billion dollars by carrying receipts of revolving accounts to surplus, by lapses, and by cancellation and repayment of commitments of the government war corporations.

On the other hand, supplemental appropriations of 600 million dollars will be required for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

In the net, it is estimated that the cumulative authorized war and national defense program will amount to 368 billion dollars on June 30, 1946. Expenditures of 49 billion dollars during the fiscal year 1946 will have pushed cumulative expenditures to 339 billion dollars. The unexpended balances will be down to 28 billion dollars on June 30, 1946.

New authorizations for national defense and war liquidation in the firscal year 1947—The expenditures of 15 billion dollars for national defense and war liquidation in the fiscal year 1947 will be partly for payment of contractual obligations incurred in the past, and partly for the payment of new obligations. The unexpended balances on June 30, 1946, will be scattered among hundreds of separate appropriations. Thus, while some appropriation accounts will have unusual balances, others will require additional appropriations.

Fresh Spending Ahead

It is estimated that authorizations to incur new obligations of 11,772 million dollars will be needed during the firscal year 1947, mainly for the War and Navy Departments. Of the required authorizations, 11,365 million dollars will be in new appropriations, 400 million dollars in new contract authority, and 7 million in reappropriations of unobligated balances. In addition, appropriations of 825 million dollars will be needed to liquidate obligations under existing contract authorizations.

Taking into account the tentative authorizations and expenditures estimated for the fiscal year 1947, and offsets of 3 billion dollars in war commitments of government corporations, the cumulative authorized war and national defense program on June 30, 1947, will be 376 billion dollars; total expenditures, 354 billion dollars; and unexpended balances, 22 billion dollars.

The 22 billion dollars of unexpended balances tentatively indicated as of June 30, 1947, comprise both unobligated authorizations and unliquidated obligations. Most of the unliquidated obligations result from transactions booked during the war years. A large part of the 22 billion dollars would never be spent even if not repealed, for the appropriations will lapse in due course. For example, several billion dollars of these unliquidated obligations represent unsettled inter- and intra-departmental agency accounts for war procurement. Legislation is being requested to facilitate the adjustment of some of these inter-agency accounts. Another 6 billion dollars is set aside for contract termination payments. If contract settlement costs continue in line with recent experience, it is likely that part of the 6 billion dollars will remain unspent.

On the other hand, some of the 22 billion dollars would be available for obligation and expenditure unless impounded. In certain appropriations, such as those for long-cycle procurement, considerable carry-over of unliquidated obligations into future years is to be expected and is necessary. However, substantial further rescissions can and should be made when the war liquidation program tapers off and budgetary requirements for national defense are clarified. As I have said, I shall continue to review the war authorizations and from time to time recommend excess balances for repeal.

As in recent years, detailed recommendations concerning most appropriations for the national-defense program are postponed until the spring. In connection with the war activities of the United States Maritime Commission and certain other agencies, however, I now make specific recommendations for the fiscal year 1947. No additional authorizations or appropriations will be necessary for the Maritime Commission since sufficient balances will be left after the above-mentioned rescissions to carry out the program now contemplated for the fiscal year 1947.

2. Aftermath of War

Nearly one-third—11 billion dollars—of estimated Federal expenditures in the fiscal year 1947 will be for purposes that are largely inherited from the war—payments to veterans, interest on the Federal debt and refunds of taxes.

(a) For Veterans

"Veterans' pensions and benefits" has become one of the largest single categories in the Federal budget. I am recommending for this purpose total appropriations of 4,787 million dollars for the fiscal year 1947. Expenditures in the fiscal year are estimated, under present legislation, at 4,208 million dollars. These expenditures will help our veterans through their readjustment period and provide lasting care for those who were disabled.

The Congress has provided unemployment allowances for veterans during their readjustment period. Expenditure of 850 million dollars for this purpose is anticipated for the fiscal year 1947. In addition, readjustment allowances for self-employed veterans are expected to cost 340 million dollars in the fiscal year 1947.

On May 28, 1945, in asking Congress to raise the ceiling on benefits for civilian unemployed to not less than 25 dollars a week during the immediate reconversion period, I suggested that the Congress also consider liberalizing veterans' allowances. Elsewhere in this message I reiterate my recommendation with respect to emergency unemployment compensation. I also recommend increasing veterans' unemployment allowances from 20 dollars to 25 dollars a week. This would involve additional expenditures estimated at approximately 220 million dollars for the fiscal year.

Included in the 1947 budget is an expenditure of 535 million dollars for veterans' education under provisions of the service men's readjustment act. This amount includes both tuition expenses and maintenance allowances. It is expected that half a million veterans will be enrolled in our schools and colleges during the year.

Veterans' Loans

The ultimate benefit which veterans receive from the loan guarantee provisions of the service men's readjustment act depends largely on the success of our stabilization program in restraining building costs and real estate values. Under the revised procedure contained in recent amendments, the administrative workload will be minimized by the almost complete transfer of authority for approving the guarantees to private lending agencies and private appraisers designated by the Veterans Administration. This authority carries with it the responsibility for restricting the guarantees to loans on reasonably valued properties. Costs of the program, other than for administration, are estimated at 21 million dollars in the fiscal year 1947.

Pensions for veterans will require expenditures estimated at 1,748 million dollars for the fiscal year 1947. Two-thirds of th amount will be received by veterans of the war which we have just won. This figure incluc 55 million dollars of increased pensions for student-veterans in our vocational rehabilitatior program. In addition, 170 million dollars will be expended in transfers to the National Service Life Insurance Fund from general and s ecial accounts.

Expenditures under the appropriation for salaries and expenses of the Veteran Administration are estimated at 528 million dollars in the fiscal year 1947. This includes 260 million dollars for medical care and the op.ration of some 103,000 hospital and domiciliary beds.

A separate appropriation for hospital and domiciliary facilities, additional to the total for veterans' pensions and benefits, covers construction that will provide some 13,000 hospital beds as part of the 500-million-dollar hospital construction program already authorized by the Congress. The estimated expenditures of 130 million dollars for this purpose are classified in the budget as part of the general public works program for the next fiscal year.

(b) For Interest

Interest payments on the public debt are estimated at 5 billion dollars in the fiscal year 1947, an increase of 250 million dollars from the revised estimate for the current fiscal year. This increase reflects chiefly payment of interest on additions to the debt this year. Assuming continuance of present interest rates, the government's interest bill is now reaching the probable post-war level.

(c) For Refunds

An estimated total of 1,585 million dollars of refunds will be paid to individuals and corporations during the fiscal year of 1947. Slightly over half of this amounted, or 800 million dollars, will be accessory to the simplified pay-as-you-go method of tax collection, and will be the result of overwithholding and over-declaration of expected income. Most of the remainder will arise from loss and excess-profits credit carry-backs, recomputed amortization on war plants, and special relief from the excess-profits tax.

This category of expenditures is thus losing gradually its "aftermath-of-war" character, and by the succeeding year will reflect almost entirely to normal operation of loss carry-backs and current tax collection.

3. Agricultural Programs

The agricultural programs contemplated for the fiscal year 1947 are those which are essential for the provision of an adequate supply of food and other agricultural commodities with a fair return to American farmers. To support these objectives, expenditure by the Department of Agricultural estimated at 784 million dollars from general and special accounts will be required in the fiscal year 1947. This compares with estimated expenditures of 676 million dollars in 1946. These figures exclude expenditures by the Department of Agriculture on account of lend-lease, the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, and other war expenditures. The expenditure for the fiscal year 1947 is composed of 553 million dollars for "aids to agriculture," 35 million dollars for general public works and 196 million dollars for other services of the Department.

Net outlays for the price stabilization, price support, and other programs of the Commodity Credit Corporation are expected to increase about 750 million dollars in the fiscal year 1946 to about 1,500 million dollars in 1947. Cash advances made on loans by the Farm Security Administration and the Rural Electrification Administration are expected to amount to 266 million dollars in the fiscal year 1946 and 351 million dollars in 1947; and after receipts from principal and interest are taken into account, net loan expenditures of these two agencies will amount to 120 and 209 million dollars in the two fiscal years.

To provide for the expenditures from general and special accounts, I recommend for the fiscal year 1947 appropriations of 721 million dollars (including the existing permanent appropriation of an amount equal to 30 per cent of estimated annual receipts) and a reappropriation of 88 million dollars of prior-year balances from customs receipts. In addition there is a recommended authorization of 367.5 million dollars for borrowing for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the loan programs of the Farm Security Administration and the Rural Electrification Administration. It is expected that the operations of the Commodity Credit Corporation will be financed during the coming year through the 500 million dollars of lend-lease funds which the Congress has earmarked for price support purposes, a supplemental appropriation to restore impaired capital of the corporation, and the borrowing authority of the Corporation.

Some detailed recommendations folow for major agricultural programs.

Conservation and use of land—I am recommending that 27 million dollars be appropriated for "conservation and use of agricultural land resources"—the so-called A. A. A. program—for the fiscal year 1947, compared with 356 million dollars in the current year. This reduction of 86 million dollars is in large part accounted for by elimination of the war-time flax production incentive project and other non-recurring items; the proposed reduction in normal activities is less than 33 million dollars.

For the last several years, this program has consisted largely of payments to farmers for application of fertilizer and other approved soil management practices. I am convinced that farmers generally are now fully alert to the benefits, both immediate and long-term, which they derive from the practices encouraged by this program. I believe, therefore, that this subsidization should continue to be reduced

Rural electrification—It is proposed that the loan authorization for the Rural Electrification Administration for the fiscal year 1947 be increased from 200 million dollars to 250 million dollars. During the war period, R. E. A. was limited by the scarcity of materials and man power. But that situation is rapidly changing, and the R. E. A. program, which was materially stepped up for the fiscal year 1946, can be increased still more. It is my belief that a feasible and practical rural electrification program should be carried forward as rapidly as possible. This will involve total loans of approximately 1,800 million dollars over the next ten years, much of which will be repaid during that period.

Other programs.—It is recommended that the continuing forest land-acquisition program be resumed at the rate of 3 million dollars annually, which is about the minimum rate at which this program can be economically carried on. The lands involved in this program can contribute fully to the national welfare only when brought into the national forest system for protection and development.

Such programs as those of the Farm Security Administration and the Farm Credit Administration are estimated to be continued during the fiscal year 1947 at about the same level as in the fiscal year 1946. Recent action by the Congress has permitted some expansion of the school-lunch program. I hope it will be continued and expanded. The budgets of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation and the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation will be transmitted in the spring under the terms of the government corporation control act.

4. Transportation

Transportation is one of the major fields for both public and private investment. Our facilities for transportation and communication must be constantly improved to serve better the convenience of the public and to facilitate the sound growth and development of the whole economy.

Federal capital outlays for transportation facilities are expected to approximate 519 million dollars in the fiscal year 1947. State and local governments may spend 400 million dollars. Private investment, over half of it by railways, may approach 1,150 million dollars.

The Congress has already taken steps for the resumption of work on improvement of rivers and harbors and on the construction of new Federal-aid highways. Much needed work on airports can begin when the Congress enacts legislation now in conference between the two houses.

The Fedcral expenditure estimates for the fiscal year 1947 include 53 million dollars for new construction in rivers, harbors and the Panama Canal and 291 million dollars for highways and grade-crossing elimination, assuming that the states expend some 275 million dollars on the Federal-aid system. Additional expenditures for highways totaling 36 million dollars are anticipated by the Forest Service. National Park Service and the Territory of Alaska. Civil airways and airports will involve expenditures of 35 million dollars under existing authority. Additional Federal expenditures exceeding 20 million dollars (to be matched by states and municipalities) may be made during the fiscal year 1947 under the airport legislation now in conference between the two houses of the Congress.

America's Place in Shipping

The United States now controls almost two-thirds of the world's merchant shipping, most of it government-owned, compared with little more than one-seventh of the world's tonnage in 1939. This places a heavy responsibility upon the nation to provide for speedy and efficient world commerce as a contribution to general economic recovery.

The estimates for the United States Maritime Commission and War Shipping Administration provide for the transition of shipping operation from a war to a peace basis; the sale, chartering, or lay-up of much of the war-built fleet; and for a program of ship construction of some 84 million dollars in the fiscal year 1947 to round out the merchant fleet for peace-time use.

Federal aids, subsidies, and regulatory controls for transportation should follow the general principle of benefiting the national economy as a whole. They should seek to improve the transportation system and increase its efficiency with resulting lower rates and superior service. Differential treatment which benefits one type of transportation to the detriment of another should be avoided save when it is demonstrated clearly to be in the public interest.

5. Resource Development

Total capital outlays for resource development are estimated at 653 million dollars in the fiscal year 1947 as compared with 452 million dollars in 1946. These include capital expenditures for resource development by other organizational units in the Department of Agriculture which are also mentioned above under "agricultural programs."

The reclamation and flood control projects which I am recommending for the fiscal year 1947 will involve capital outlays of approximately 319 million dollars as compared with 245 million dollars in the fiscal year 1946. These expenditures cover programs of the Corps of Engineers, the Bureau of Reclamation, the Bureau of Indian Affairs, the Department of Agriculture and the International Boundary and Water Commission, United States and Mexico. A number of these projects are multiple-purpose projects, providing not only for reclamation and irrigation of barren land and flood control, but also for the production of power needed for industrial development of the areas.

Expenditures for power transmission and distribution facilities by the Bonneville Power Administration are expected to increase from 12 million dollars in the fiscal year 1946 to 15 million dollars in the next fiscal year. In addition, the Southwestern Power Administration will undertake a new program involving expenditures of about 16 million dollars in the fiscal year 1947. The Rural Electrification Administration will require expenditures during the current fiscal year estimated at 156 million dollars; in the fiscal year 1947, at 241 million dollars.

The T. V. A. program includes completion of major multiple-purpose projects — navigation, flood control and power facilities —and additions to chemical plants and related facilities. Expenditures for these capital improvement programs are estimated at 30 million dollars in the fiscal year 1946 and 39 million dollars in the fiscal year 1947

Expenditures for construction of roads and other developmental works in the national forests, parks, and other public lands, and for capital outlays for fish and wildlife development will increase from below 9 million dollars in the fiscal year 1946 to 24 million dollars in the fiscal year 1947.

6. Social Security and Health

Benefit payments out of the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust und during 1947 are estimated at 407 million dollars, while withdrawals by the states from the Unemployment Trust Fund for compensation payments are expected to total 1 billion dollars. These disbursements are financed out of social security contributions.

The appropriations from general and special accounts for the social security program, which cover Federal administrative expenses and grants to states for assistance programs, are estimated at 593 million dollars for the fiscal year 1947, an increase of 57 million dollars over the current year. The increase anticipates greater administrative workload and higher grants to match increasing state payments. The social security program does not include all the Federal health services under existing legislation. For the other health services classified under general government and national defense, appropriations are estimated at 102 million dollars for the fiscal year 1947.

Some expansion in peace-time medical research and other programs of the Public Health Service is provided for in the appropriation estimates for these purposes totaling approximately 87 million dollars for the fiscal year 1947 which are submitted under provisions of existing law. Part of this will be provided through the social security appropriations, the remainder through other appropriations. About 28 million dollars is recommended for maternity care and health services for children under existing law, mainly under the emergency provision for the wives and infants of service men. While we should avoid duplication of maternity and child health service which will be provided through the proposed general system of prepaid medical care, legislation is needed to supplement such services. For medical education, I have recommended legislation authorizing grants-in-aid to public and non-profit institutions. The existing sources of support for medical schools require supplementation to sustain the expansion that is needed.

Hospitals, sanitation works, and additional facilities at medical schools will be required for an adequate national health program. Legislation is now pending in the Congress to authorize grants for the construction of hospitals and health centers and grants and loans for water-pollution control. I hope the Congress will act favorably on generous authorizing legislation.

7. Research and Education

The budget provides for continuation and desirable expansion of the research activities that are carried on throughout the Federal establishment and through previously authorized grants to the states. Additional appropriations will be required for the proposed central Federal research agency which I recommended last September 6. That agency will co-ordinate existing research activities and administer funds for new research activities wherever they are needed; it will not itself conduct research. The plan contemplates expenditures through the new research agency of approximately 40 million dollars for the first year.

These amounts are small in relation to the important contribution they can make to the national income, the welfare of our people, and the common defense. Expenditures must be limited for the time being by the capacity of research agencies to make wide use of funds. The maintenance of our position as a nation, however, will require more emphasis on research expenditures in the future than in the past.

Educational expenditures will require a significant share of the national income in the fiscal year 1947. State, local and private expenditures for the current support of elementary, secondary and higher education are expected to be substantially above 3 billion dollars in that year. These non-Federal expenditures will be supplemented by Federal expenditures estimated at 625 milion dollars in the present budget Of this amount, the estimate for veterans' education, as previously mentioned, is 535 million dollars. Other amounts include 21 milion dollars for the support of vocational education in public schools, 5 million dollars for the land-grant colleges, 50 million dollars for the present school-lunch and mil.. program, 1 million dollars for the Office of Education, and approximately 13 million dollars for various other items. In view of the major policy issues which are still under study by the Congress and the Administration, no specific amount has been determined for the Federal grants, previously recommended in this message, which would assist the states generally in assuring more nearly equal opportunities for a good education.

Notwithstanding the urgent need for additional school and college buildings, careful planning wil be required for the expenditures to be made under the proposed legislation to aid the states in providing educational facilities. A major share of the grants for the first year would be for surveys and plans.

8. International Financial Programs

I have already outlined the broad objectives of our foreign economic policy. In the present section I shall indicate the Federal outlays which the execution of these programs may require in the fiscal years 1946 and 1947.

(a) On the termination of lend-lease, the lend-lease countries were required to pay for goods in the lend-lease pipe line either in cash or by borrowing from the United States or by supplying goods and services to the United States. Credits for this purpose have already been extended to the Soviet Union, France, the Netherlands, and Belgium amounting to 675 million dollars. The settlement credit of 650 million dollars to the United Kingdom includes an amount preliminarily fixed at 118 million dollars which represents the excess of purchases by the United Kingdom from the pipe line over goods and services supplied by the United Kingdom to the United States since VJ-Day and the balance of various claims by one government against the other.

Credits are also being negotiated with lend-lease countries to finance the disposition of lend-lease inventories and installations and property declared to be surplus. For instance, 532 milion dollars of the settlement credit to the United Kingdom is for this purpose. These credits wil linvolve no new expenditures by this government, since they merely provide for deferred repayment by other governments for goods and services which have been financed from war appropriations.

Relief Expenditures

(b) Expenditures from the appropriations to United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, which were discussed under war expenditures above, are estimated to be 1.3 billion dollars in the fiscal year 1946 and 1.2 billion dollars in the fiscal year 1947.

(c) To assist other countries in the restoration of their economies the Export-Import Bank has already negotiated loans in the fiscal year 1946 amounting in total to about 1,010 million dollars and an additional 195 million dollars will probably be committed shortly. The bank is also granting loans to carry out its original purpose of directly expanding the foreign trade of the United States. In this connection the bank has established a fund of 100 million dollars to finance the export of cotton from the United States. The Export-Import Bank has thus loaned or committed approximately 1,300 million dollars during the current fiscal year and it is expected that demands on its resources will increase in the last six months of the fiscal year 1946. Requests for loans are constantly being received by the bank from countries desiring to secure goods and services in this country for the reconstruction or development of their economies. On July 31, 1945, the lending authority of the Export-Import Bank was increased to a total of 3,500 million dollars. I anticipate that during the period covered by this budget the bank will reach this limit. The bulk of the expenditures from the loans already granted will fall in the fiscal year 1946 while the bulk of the expenditures from loans yet to be negotiated will fall in the fiscal year 1947. In view of the urgent need for the bank's credit I may find it necessary to request a further increase in its lending authority at a later date.

Loan for England

(d) The proposed line of credit of 3,750 million dollars to the United Kingdom will be available up to the end of 1951 and will be used to assist the United Kingdom in financing the deficit in its balance of payments during the transition period. The rate at which the United Kingdom will draw on the credit will depend on the rapidity with which it can reconvert its economy and adapt its trade to the post-war world. The anticipated rate of expenditure is likely to be heaviest durthe next two years.

(e) Since the Bretton Woods Agreements have now been approved by the required number of countries, both the International Monetary Fund and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development will commence operations during 1946. The organization of these institutions will undoubtedly take some time, and it is unlikely that their operations will reach any appreciable scale before the beginning of the fiscal year 1947.

Of the 2,750 million dollars required for the fund, 1,800 million dollars will be provided in cash or notes from the exchange stabilization fund established under the gold reserve act of 1934. The remaining 950 million dollars will be paid initially in the form of non-interest-bearing notes issued by the Secretary of the Treasury. It is not anticipated that the fund will require in cash any of the 950 million dollars during the fiscal years 1946 and 1947. Consequently, no cash withdrawals from the Treasury will be required in connection with the fund in these years.

The subscription to the bank amounts to 3,175 million dollars. Of this total, 2 per cent must be paid immediately and the bank is required to call a further 8 per cent of the subscription during its first year of operations. The balance of the subscription is payable when required by the bank either for direct lending or to make good its guarantees. It is likely that the United States will be required to pay little if any more than the initial 10 per cent before the end of the fiscal year 1947.

9. General Government

The responsibilities of the government, in both domestic and international affairs, have increased greatly in the past decade. Consequently, the government is larger than it was before the war, and its general operating costs are higher. We cannot shrink the government to pre-war dimensions unless we slough off these new responsibilities—and we cannot do that without paying an excessive price in terms of our national welfare. We can, however, enhance its operating efficiency through improved organization. I expect to make such improvements under the authority of the reorganization act of 1945.

The appropriations which I am recommending for general government for the fiscal year 1947 are $1,604,000,000 under existing legislation. This is an increase of $458,000,000 over the total of enacted appropriations for the current fiscal year, but a substantial part of this increase is due to the fact that the appropriations for the fiscal year 1946 were made prior to the general increase of employees' salaries last July 1, for which allowance is made in the anticipated supplemental appropriations for 1946. The recommended total for 1947 for general government, like the estimates for national defense and other specific programs, does not allow for the further salary increases for government employees which, I hope, will be authorized by pending legislation, but the tentative lump-sum estimates under proposed legislation contemplate that such salary increases will be effective almost at once.

Rising Trend Noted

Expenditures for general government in the fiscal year 1947 are expected to continue the slowly rising trend which began in 1943. This category includes a great variety of items—not merely the overhead costs of the government. It includes all the expenditures of the Cabinet departments, other than for national defense, aids to agriculture, general public works, and the social security program. It includes also expenditures of the legislative branch, the Judiciary, and many of the independent agencies of the executive branch. Consequently, the estimated increase in 1947 in the total of general government expenditures reflects a variety of influences.

Now included in general government are certain activities formerly classified under national defense. Some of these, such as certain functions of the former Foreign Economic Administration and the War Manpower Commission, are still needed during the period of reconversion; others are in the process of liquidation. A few war-time activities, for example, the international information and foreign intelligence services and some of the wartime programs for controlling disease and crime, have become part of our regular government establishment. Expenditures for these former war-time functions explain about 40 per cent of the increase in expenditures for general government.

Other increases are for civil aeronautics promotion, the business and manufacturing censuses, and other expanded business services of the Department of Commerce which have been referred to above; the Forest and Soil Conservation Services and other activities of the Department of Agriculture; certain conservation activities of the Department of the Interior, and the collection of internal revenue in the Treasury Department.

The necessity for re-establishing postal services curtailed during the war and advances in the rates of pay for postal employees have increased substantially the estimated expenditures for postal service for both the current and the next fiscal year. It is not expected that this increase will cause expenditures to exceed postal revenues in either year, although an excess of expenditures may occur in the fiscal year 1947 if salaries are increased further.

Share in U. N. A. Budget

Expenditures for our share of the administrative budgets of the United Nations and other permanent international bodies will increase sharply in the fiscal year 1947, yet will remain a small part of our total budget. The budget for the United Nations has not yet been determined; an estimate for our contribution will be submitted later. Our contributions to the Food and Agriculture Organization, the International Labor Office, the Pan American Union and other similar international agencies will aggregate about $3,000,000 for the fiscal year 1947. The administrative expenses of the International Monetary Fund and the International Bank will be met from their general fuds.

We have won a great war—we, the nations of plain people who hate war. In the test of that war we found a strength of unity that brought us through—a strength that crushed the power of those who sought by force to deny our faith in the dignity of man.

During this trial the voices of disunity among us were silent or were subdued to an occasional whine that warned us that they were still among us. Those voices are beginning to cry aloud again. We must learn constantly to turn deaf ears to them. They are voices which foster fear and suspicion and intolerance and hate. They seek to destroy our harmony, our understanding of each other, our American tradition of "live and let live." They have become busy again, trying to set race against race, creed against creed, farmer against city dweller, worker against employer, people against their own government. They seek only to do us mischief. They must not prevail.

It should be impossible for any man to contemplate without a sense of personal humility the tremendous events of the twelve months since the last annual message, the great tasks that confront us, the new and huge problems of the coming months and years. Yet these very things justify the deepest confidence in the future of this nation of free men and women.

The plain people of this country found the courage and the strength, the self-discipline and the mutual respect to fight and to win, with the help of our allies, under God. I doubt if the tasks of the future are more difficult. But if they are, then I say that our strength and our knowledge and our understanding will be equal to those tasks.

Truman Message Lauded In London

London, Jan. 21 (AP)—British reaction tonight to President Truman's message to Congress was couched in terms of cautious approval.

Particularly well received, official sources said, were the passages urging Congress to approve the proposed loan to Britain, to keep the armed forces strong and to give the smaller nations a voice in writing peace treaties.

Government sources refrained, as usual, from commenting on parts of the speech that concerned domestic affairs.

Steel Union Plans For Finish Fight as 750,000 Men Strike

Text of Murray's Radio Address Defending Steel Strike

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 21 — (AP) Philip Murray, directing his CIO to a finish fight in the shut-down steel industry, tonight called the whole rash of post-war strikes an industry plot to break the unions.

Murray said the 750,000 CIO steelworkers, who walked out early today in more than 1,200 plants from coast to coast, will remain idle until the steel industry accepts the 18 1-2 cents-an-hour wage increase recommended by President Truman.

"The struggle is now one which runs far beyond the steelworkers and the steel corporations," Murray said in a radio talk. "It is of the utmost importance to every American that this fact be clearly understood.

Attacks Industry

"American industry, fattened with war profits, guaranteed a high level of profits through special tax rebates under laws written at their behest, have deliberately set out to destroy labor unions, to provoke strikes and economic chaos and mulct the American people through uncontrolled profits and inflation.

"They are determined to eliminate, if they possibly can, true collective bargaining between management and labor unions. They are hell-bent to place themselves above all laws and rules of equity and justice.

"It is their clear aim to exact unconditional surrender from the American people and the United States government."

As Murray spoke, the steel industry, by the estimate of the iron and steel institute, saw production dwindle to the lowest in more than 50 years. Pickets circled closed mills and ore plants in 29 states.

Report Picket Troubles

There were two reports of picket line troubles, both from Cincinnati. J. H. Pearson, division manager of the Williamson Heater company filed a police complaint against two steelworker pickets whom he accused of striking him as he tried to enter the plant. Another man was charged by police with brandishing a revolver at a picket at the Sawbrook Steel Casting Co. plant.

In Chicago, the Republic Steel Corporation issued a statement today saying:

"The strike is in flagrant violation of a contract entered into April 11, 1945, between the company and the C.I.O. union and which contained the stipulation there would be no strike or work stoppages during the life of the contract. This contract will not expire until Oct. 15, 1946.

"The strike is due to the attempt of the union to enforce their demands on Republic for a $2 a day increase in wages for an eight-hour day.

"Put on an annual basis this amounted to $30,000,000 in a normal year. Never in its history has Republic had earnings of $20,000,000 in a peacetime year, even before taxes."

The statement added that although steel prices were virtually unchanged from those in 1937, weekly earnings of steel workers were up 46 per cent in November, 1945, over January, 1941.

"Excluding all overtime and vacation allowances," Republic declared, "the straight time rate in January, 1941, was 82.9 cents an hour. In November, 1945, this has risen to $1,11 an hour, or an increase of 33 per cent.

Murray, president of both the Steel workers' union and its parent CIO organization, said wage increases generally are needed to combat rising living costs and make up for loss of overtime paid during the war. In Washington, President Truman had recommended higher wages and fewer working hours in his message to Congress during the day.

"There can be no question," Murray declared, "but that an evil conspiracy has been hatched among American big business. This conspiracy challenges our very basic democratic institutions."

Asserting General Motors "without any qualm" and the steel industry "with equal disdain" had rejected government compromise suggestions, Murray said the "electrical manufacturing industry with similar arrogance has rejected all attempts" by the CIO Electrical Workers union and the government to mediate that dispute. Approximately 200,000 are on strike in behalf of wage demands in each of the auto and electrical industries.

"We seek wage increases now to restore the pay cuts the workers have suffered since V-J day," Murray said. "This will mean more food, more clothing, better shelter, better medical service for the common people. This will mean a better and healthier America."

Murray had said at a news conference earlier in the day that the steel strike would continue "as long as it takes" to win wage demands.

In Washington there was talk of possible government seizure of the industry, but officials said if this is done it probably would not happen for several days. President Truman conferred with his steel fact-finding commission.

The strike got under way in full force a minute after midnight.

In Pennsylvania, the largest producing state, the strike was ushered in with a raging snowstorm. Pickets shivered in the wet and cold, huddling around improvised fires to keep warm.

In general, Pickets allowed maintenance men to cross their lines to tend idled equipment. There were some exceptions.

Maintenance Men Barred

J. L. Perry, president of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., U. S. Steel subsidiary, said in a statement that pickets had refused to admit "our regular maintenance employes irrespective of union affiliation or non-affiliation." He said it was necessary to use "management personnel exclusively" to look after company property.

Carnegie-Illinois' vast works at Gary, Ind., the midwest's "Pittsburgh" affected almost Gary's entire 110,000 population by its closing. That plant and Carnegie's South Chicago plant also shut down are the first and second largest basic steel producing plants in the world.

Pickets around the Jones & Laughlin steel plants at Pittsburgh also declined to let maintenance men through. Efforts to determine the numbers of workers who should be allowed to enter the plant property broke down several days ago. The company said maintenance was being accomplished by a few men who had remained inside the plants.

The strike closed the Taylor-Wharton Iron and Steel company's historic munitions plant at High Bridge, N. J., where cannon balls were made for George Washington's armies in the Revolutionary war. The company said it had been operating continuously since 1742.

By The Associated Press.

Following is the text of a radio address last night by Philip Murray, as recorded and transcribed by THE NEW YORK TIMES:

Our nation tonight faces a very serious crisis. Hundreds of thousands of American workers are idle in the steel, automobile, electrical manufacturing and meat packing industries.

The request of the workers involved in these disputes is for a wage increase. But the issue which has been drawn by the corporations is of much graver importance to the American people. The outcome of the present struggle will directly affect every American household.

That is my reason for bringing to you this evening a message from these workers and the members of their families who, aware of the stake involved, are prepared to endure all the hardships and the sacrifices that may be necessary in order that the common people shall enjoy their rightful heritage.

Since the early part of 1942, practically four years, there have been no general wage increases in the large basic mass production industries of our country. But, as you well know, the cost of living since that time has steadily and sharply risen higher and higher.

In part, the rise in the cost of living during the war was met by larger earnings due to increased weekly work time. This, of course, did not mean any increase in their standard of living but simply that they earned more money by working longer and harder and, thereby, increased war production.

Even before V-E Day the CIO endeavored through the medium of the War Labor Board to obtain a general wage increase. We did so because we knew that immediately following V-E and V-J Day there would be a sharp drop in weekly earnings. War plants returning to civilian production and with a looser labor market would eliminate all overtime working hours and accomplish widespread downgrading.

We knew that when this occurred—in the face of the continuous rise in the cost of living—the slash in weekly earnings would bring terrifying and disastrous hardships to the workers.

Says Fears Were Confirmed

Government officials, in their public statements, have repeatedly confirmed these fears. It became a national slogan that such a loss in purchasing power would be a direct threat to the nation—that any such development would make impossible an expanding peacetime economy or full production and full employment.

Let me give you one example which of course can be duplicated for countless thousands of plants in all American industry.

In April of 1945, the last full month preceding V-E Day, the average weekly earnings for steel workers was $56.32. The Bureau of Labor Statistics, a Government agency, within the past few days reported that the straight-time average hourly earnings for steel workers in October, 1945, was a little more than $1.08 cents. It is undisputed that the steel industry was operating before the strike, on a forty-hour week without overtime.

This means that at present the weekly earnings of steel workers is $43.48. There has, therefore, been a slash in the weekly earnings of the steel workers since April, 1945, of $12.84. This means that $50 a month has been taken from the steel worker's pay envelope.

Each of you must know what it means to the steel worker—his wife—his children to suffer this kind of a wage cut—$50 less a month. It means—less food—less clothing—perhaps a hesitancy to call the doctor even though with grave risks.

This bitter experience of steel workers has been the pattern for most wage earners.

Could it be expected that we could have any lasting prosperity in this country in the face of such severe loss in earnings and purchasing power on the part of millions and millions of workers?

The United Steel Workers of America, in September of last year, requested a wage increase of $2 a day, from the steel industry.

This wage increase would have restored, restored only in part mind you, the wage loss already incurred.

The union sought unsuccessfully for a period of four months to engage in collective bargaining.

The steel corporations gave a very sharp and quick answer—no.

Twice the United States Government through Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach requested the United States Steel Corporation to meet with the union in collective bargaining.

On both occasions, the corporation did not even deign to meet with the Secretary of Labor. It refused to join in any conference with him or to meet the union in collective bargaining.

The problem was then submitted to the workers. The United States Government conducted a vote to see if the men wanted to strike. Five out of every six workingmen said—strike. And over a half million workingmen voted.

But we did not strike. Instead the union's national wage policy committee was convened. It voted to set a strike date more than thirty days thereafter namely, Jan. 14.

During these thirty days the steel corporations made no effort to engage in any collective bargaining with the union. The companies were concentrating on another problem.

They were not content with the two billion dollars of profits which they exacted as their price during the war. Their appetite was not satisfied with the special kickbacks guaranteed under tax laws enacted on their behalf. They wanted further price relief, increasing their exorbitant profits and high-jacking the American people.

Eighty-two hours before the strike deadline, the United States Steel Corporation for the first time agreed that negotiations be resumed with the union.

And for the first time in three months the corporation made an offer, inadequate and wholly unresponsive to the bitter squeeze upon the steel workers of shrinking wages and rising prices.

To show our desire to avoid a strike, the union offered to compromise below the figure to which our members are clearly entitled. The United States Steel Corporation continued to give its tiresome reply—No, no, no.

When negotiations broke off just forty-eight hours before the strike deadline, the President of the United States requested both parties to meet at the White House. At this conference on Jan. 12, on behalf of the union, I submitted a compromise offer. Mr. Fairless, representing the United States Steel Corporation, admitted to its fairness.

He requested a week during which time he proposed to persuade the officals of his own corporation and the representatives of the steel industry to accept it. At the President's urgent request that Mr. Fairless be afforded this opportunity, the strike was postponed for one week.

On Wednesday, Jan. 16, Mr. Fairless and I resumed our negotiations in the White House. The steel industry had sent Mr. Fairless back with a single answer—No.

On Thursday, Jan. 17, the President of the United States submitted to both Mr. Fairless and myself his decision for settlement of the dispute.

His decision was that there be a general wage increase of 18½ cents per hour.

The President of the United States asked that both parties give him their respective replies by noon on Friday, Jan. 18. At the appointed time, the United Steelworkers submitted its reply. We accepted the President's decision.

Truman's Decision Accepted

The wage increase determined by the President would only in part restore the wage cut suffered by the steel workers, but we accepted the President's decision in recognition of the national interest to achieve a peaceful settlement of our dispute.

The steel industry, however, with unmatched boldness rejected the determination of the President of the United States.

The President appealed to the steel industry to reconsider their action. The steel magnates did not even condescend to reply to the President of the United States.

Therefore, at 12:01 this morning the steelworkers of the nation had no choice but to strike.

The struggle is now one which runs far beyond the steelworkers and the steel corporations. It is of the utmost importance to every American that this fact be clearly understood.

American industry fattened with war profits, guaranteed a high level of profits through special tax rebates under laws written at their behest, have deliberately set out to destroy labor unions, to provoke strikes and economic chaos and mulct the American people through uncontrolled profits and inflation.

They are determined to eliminate, if they possibly can, true collective bargaining between management and labor unions. They are bent to place themselves above all laws and rules of equity and justice.

It is their clear aim to exact unconditional surrender from the American people and the United States Government.

There can be no question but that an evil conspiracy has been hatched among American big business. This conspiracy challenges our very basic democratic institutions.

The General Motors Corporation has, without any qualm, rejected the recommendation of the President's fact-finding panel for settlement of the current wage dispute between that corporation and the United Auto Workers-CIO. The union accepted the compromise proposal.

The steel industry has with equal disdain rejected the decision of the President of the United States for a compromise settlement. The union accepted.

The electrical manufacturing industry similarly has rejected all attempts by the UE-CIO and representatives of the Government to compose their current wage disputes through collective bargaining and mediation.

These industrial magnates do not choose to permit the people to impose any restraint upon their greed. They prefer a status wherein millions of unemployed would be available at ever-decreasing wage levels to be exploited for the benefit of these large corporate enterprises.

Labor unions, as organizations of free Americans who desire to improve their standard of living in the interest of the entire nation, represent a threat to this dream of conquest.

We seek wage increases now to partially restore the pay cuts the workers have suffered since V-J Day. This will mean more food, more clothing, better shelter and better medical service for the common people. This will mean a better and healthier America.

We are confident that in this struggle, so sharply defined by the steel industry through its challenge to the President of the United States, the people in all walks of life, will give their complete and unified support.

NATION'S STEEL MILLS CLOSE AS 750,000 STRIKE

Biggest Walkout in U. S. History Hits 1300 Plants in Thirty States.

PICKETING IS PEACEFUL

Murray Says Men Will Stay Out Until Industry Approves Rise Proposed by Truman.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—The vast steel industry—backbone of the nation's economy with approximately 750,000 workers—was virtually shut down today by a strike of C. I. O. United Steel Workers demanding a pay raise.

Only a few scattered steel plants across the nation remained operating. These generally were plants which had contracts with other unions or which had granted wage increases of some 18½ or 20 cents an hour to the C. I. O. union.

At the union's headquarters here, Philip Murray, president declared the strike would continue until the industry accepts President Truman's recommendation of a 18½ cents a hour pay hike.

At Washington, the President continued settlement efforts by coferring with his steel fact-finders, but no immediate action was indicated there.

As the flare of the steel furnaces died out in the skies over Pennsylvania, the leading steel State with 300,000 workers, struck plants were picketed by strikers carrying such signs as:

"We want a fair deal, not a Fairless deal."

"We'll picket until we win it."

Executives of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, United States Steel Corporation's biggest steelmaking subsidiary, had to walk up to their offices in the firm's building at Pittsburgh. Elevator and building services were stopped by steelworker pickets.

Warming their hands around salamander stoves, other pickets shivering in a three-inch snowfall stood guard at mill gates in Pittsburgh and Johnstown, Pa.

No Strikebreakers Appear.

But so far, at least on the first day of the crippling strike, presence of the pickets was not needed. Members of the C. I. O. steelworkers backed the walkout with unanimity and there were no reports of non-union workers trying to crash the lines.

Some 92,000 steelworkers were idle in the big Illinois and Indiana steel centers. United States Steel was the producer hardest hit in the Chicago-Gary district, with twelve plants more than 45,000 idle. The Carnegie-Illinois Gary works with 15,000 employees and its South works in South Chicago, with 10,000, rate first and second among the world's basic steel-producing plants. Their combined annual capacity is 10,225,000 tons.

Plants in allied industries, principally aluminum and iron ore, were also closed.

Greatest in U. S. History.

The greatest strike in United States history blanketed the nation. About 1,300 plants, ranging from the mills which make the steel to the shops which turn it into useful things like railroad rails or can-openers, shut down in thirty States.

In Pennsylvania, which produces one-third of the nation's steel, the strikers in snowy darkness and freezing cold set in motion around the shutdown plants the long, slow march of their picket lines. Picket lines were set up elsewhere across the country.

No one here would guess how many days, or weeks, or months that march of the pickets—to keep out of the plants any one who might seek to take their jobs—would continue.

It was a showdown fight between the steelworkers and the steelmakers. This country hopes for a prosperous reconversion were involved critically because so much of American manufacturing uses steel and steel supplies are very small. A long-drawn-out strike could break the back of reconversion.

The steel industry—according to a steel industry authority who should know—will lose through the strike about $10,000,000 a day in gross revenue it would have received on its steel sales if there had been no strike.

The industry's average wage has been computed at $8.69. At that rate, 750,000 workers will lose $6,517,500 each day they remain idle.

Picketing Starts Quietly.

The picketing started quietly. The strikers have had plenty of time to get ready for this day. Their wage negotiations with the steel industry had gone on for months and finally broke down on Friday, despite the intercession of President Truman, who suggested a compromise. The union accepted Mr. Truman's proposal for a wage increase of 18½ cents an hour. The United States Steel Corporation, the giant which is the guiding star for most of the industry, rejected this figure and said it could not grant an increase of more than 15 cents an hour. The union, which at Mr. Truman's request, had postponed its scheduled walkout for one week from January 14, then said the strike must begin.

It officially went into effect at 12:01 today in each locality. Actually, the strike started in some plants last Friday after a call for action by Murray. So did picketing. The vast majority of the workers finished their jobs Friday and Saturday. The industry began cooling off its furnaces then.

So by midnight Sunday most of the plants—United States Steel, for instance—were shut down, or ready to shut down.

The union has been arranging with various companies to let maintenance crews pass through the picket lines so the plants will not suffer damage by their inactivity.

As the 12:01 deadline crept nearer through Sunday the inevitability of the strike—as if a great machine had been set in motion and nothing could stop it—became apparent. The headquarters of the union and United States Steel here were silent.

Questions in both places brought practically the same answer: "Nothing to report. We're just sitting around, waiting for the strike to get under way."

Murray to Speak on Radio.

Murray came here from Washington Sunday and went to his home. But he will make a nation-wide radio address at 10:30 P. M. today.

There was no indication that B. F. Fairless, president of United States Steel, would say anything or that the Government would step in in some way to stop the strike.

All but a handful of plants were affected by the strike. The steel mill of Henry J. Kaiser at Fontana, Cal., was expected to continue operations. Kaiser signed an agreement on Saturday in Washington with Murray, granting the C. I. O.'s 18½ cents an hour wage demand.

The Weirton Steel Company, with 10,000 workers in its plants at Weirton, W. Va., and Steubenville, Ohio, was not struck. Those workers have an independent union not connected with the C. I. O.

At Harrisburg, Pa., a C. I. O. district official, George Medrick, said that five Pennsylvania fabricating plants had signed at 18½ cents "or better." They were the Columbian Cutlery Company, the Reading Hardware Corporation, the Beryllium Corporation of Pennsylvania and Dick Brothers, Inc., all of Reading, Pa., and the Alloy-Rods Company, York, Pa.

The danger of a long-drawn out steel strike to that part of American manufacturing which needs steel—probably 40 to 50 per cent does—was indicated in Washington by John D. Small, civilian production administrator.

He predicted a big share of the nation's factories would have to shut down or curtail production if the strike lasts two weeks. The reason: Small supply of steel on hand at many companies.

A plan for voluntary rationing of steel held by warehouses and jobbers went into effect today to conserve the available supply for emergency and public utility use.

Planes Land at Plant.

The most unusual event yesterday happened at Lackawanna, N. Y., where three airplanes made a total of five trips over C. I. O. picket lines around a strike-bound Bethlehem Steel Company plant. The planes landed on company property and, a company spokesman said, brought in some personal items, such as cigarettes and fresh milk and various small maintenance items for the plant.

Union officials talked of asking a Government investigation. The company denied that the planes had been used to carry strike-breakers into the plant.

The plant has been closed and picketed since January 11, when the union struck following a strike-maintenance dispute with the company.

This is the biggest steel strike—or any kind of strike—the country has seen.

In 1919 the steel workers struck, perhaps 300,000 of them, when they were poorly organized. That strike was broken.

State-By-State View Of The Steel Strike

Pittsburgh, Jan. 21 (AP)—A state-by-state picture of the nation-wide steel strike:

MARYLAND—Baltimore, like many another city, found its largest industry shut down as the few men then at work left Bethlehem's Sparrows Point plant at midnight when picket lines formed. The city has 20,000 steelworkers.

PENNSYLVANIA—About 300,000 believed in orderly walkouts at great producing centers of Pittsburgh, Johnstown and Bethlehem; pickets tramp cheerfully through snowstorm as last shifts leave mills, some men joining lines, others heading homeward; five plants in Harrisburg area remain in operation after management agrees with union on new wage scale providing 18½-cent "or better" hourly wage increase; United States Steel reports all gates of its twenty Pittsburgh area plants picketed, supervisory and maintenance forces permitted to enter mills.

Chicago-Gary Area

ILLINOIS-INDIANA — District 31 union spokesman says "all are out" in sprawling Chicago-Gary steel area, covering 75,000 workers at 77 plants; picketing to be light, union spokesman says, "unless the companies attempt to get back into production"; pickets were mobilized at United States steel plants before midnight dead line; 8,000 on strike in Illinois area and adjoining St. Louis, and 10,0000 more out at eight Indianapolis plants.

OHIO—Most plants empty of employés at deadline for strike due to effect 200,000; orderly pickets march before plants in Canton, Youngstown, Warren, Massillon, Niles and Cleveland; snow falling in northern areas; Timken Roller Bearing Company plants at Canton, where wage negotiations ended in disagreement January 12, picketed and closed; maintenance men entering Republic Steel Company plants on passes as scheduled except at Warren, where union says company did not issue passes and only supervisors are being admitted.

Alabama And New York

ALABAMA—All mills shut down, 21,200 workers idle. Additional 5,000 iron-ore miners, members of CIO-International Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, struck before steel deadline, had been seeking new wage contract.

NEW YORK—More than 54,250 workers made idle by midnight walkouts; union protests airplane delivery of supplies for stay-ins at Bethlehem Steel Company's Lackawanna plant, strikebound since January 12; company denies strike-breakers were transported in planes which brought to plant "personal items such as cigarettes and milk."

NEW JERSEY—"Token" picket lines established at 24 Aluminum Company of America plants; walkout begun at Edgewater plant, employing 2,400, with estimated 10,500 to be idle today in state.

Scattered Michigan Strikes

MICHIGAN—Scattered walkouts, some picketing, at midnight in Detroit area where few plants operate on Sunday; none expected to open today, with about 20,000 idle at 70 plants.

MASSACHUSETTS—United States Steel spokesman says picketing began at 10 P.M. at American Steel and Wire Company; inside guards forced out under protest.

MISSOURI—400 workers walked out of Sheffield Steel Corporation plant at Kansas City to join twenty pickets. Plant employs about 2,500; did not attempt production yesterday.

Tennessee-Colorado

TENNNESSEE—Some 750 joined strike as midnight deadline passed at six Chattanooga plants; two other plants in the city, with AFL contracts, remain in operation.

COLORADO—Picket lines formed outside Pueblo steel mills but watchmen said most of Sunday night shift had entered before line was formed. Five thousand steel workers in State affected by walkout order.

CALIFORNIA—A complete walkout at the midnight deadline closed 40 northern California plants employing 10,000; picketing began at the South San Francisco and Los Angeles plants of Bethlehem Steel and the Pittsburgh plant of Columbia Steel.

Seattle Situation

WASHINGTON—Although 750 employes at Seattle's only two steel mills do not work Sunday, a few pickets appeared at midnight; union announced that one plant entrance is being left free of pickets so that moulders and foundry workers not affected by the strike order may go to work.

Steel Lack Seen Tying Up Users In Few Weeks

Washington, Jan. 21 (AP)—Steel starvation will be "closing one factory after another" within two or three weeks, the Civilian Production Administration forecast today as the CIO United Steelworkers walkout took hold.

Production Administrator John D. Small predicted that a sizable portion of the industry would be shut down or curtailing operations in a fortnight. He prepared to issue orders for an immediate suspension of all civilian and military priorities for steel.

Simultaneously, a voluntary rationing plan for sales by steel warehouses will go into effect, reserving supplies for emergency and public utility uses only.

The Supplies On Hand

Factories are permitted to hold 60 days' supply of most steel products but only 45 days' supply of sheet steel, which is the major material going into automobile bodies, refrigerators and most other important durable goods.

"I suspect that many have only fifteen days' supply," the production director said. He said many users of sheet steel had been "clamoring" for sufficient shipments to build up their stocks to the legal limit.

Shutdowns may be hastened in some cases by the decision of manufacturers to close down at once instead of using up present stocks. This would save the supplies for a quick start at the end of the strike when there will inevitably be delays in deliveries.

Customary Supplies

Factories making washing machines, refrigerators, vacuum cleaners and similar products normally carry only 30 to 40 days' supply, even though the legal inventory is larger. The automobile industry works on a seven or ten day schedule. However, some plants have been attempting to build up their reserves in anticipation of the strike.

The steel warehouses normally serve small users and carry only the lighter items in stock. Small said their supplies might last for months, however, if the voluntary rationing is strictly carried out.

Warehouse operators have pledged support to a CPA policy that they sell only to meet their customers' immediate needs until half of their stock is exhausted. Then they will furnish steel only for emergency repairs and maintenance in the interest of public health and safety.

Privileged Buyers

Railroads, hospitals, police and fire organizations, public utilities and food processing plants will be among the privileged purchasers.

The announced plan to wipe out priority ratings will suspend the "MM" ratings on military orders, the "CC" ratings for reconverting civilian plants and the "AAA" emergency rating designed to break production bottlenecks.

New "AAA" ratings will be issued where necessary, or special CPA directives will be served on the warehouses to command urgently needed supplies.

Fact-Finders Called In

Washington, Jan. 21 (AP)—President Truman called in administration fact-finders for a consultation today as the strike closed down virtually the entire steel industry.

The President arranged a White House conference with three men recently appointed to seek a solution to differences between the steel managements and the CIO United Steelworkers.

Nathan Feinsinger, James M. Douglas and Roger I. McDonough comprise the board. There was no immediate comment from the White House as to the extent or scope of the conference.

MEAT PRICE BOOST MAY HALT SEIZURE OF PACKING FIRMS

WASHINGTON, JAN.21-(AP)-Seizure orders by which the government could take over the strike bound meat packing industry were reported in preparation tonight.

However, sources close to the meat industry said they believed the take over was not imminent, and possibly may have been averted by a last minute change in the government's meat price increase proposal.

The details of the late change were not available officially, but it was reported the government now is considering an increase of 25 cents a hundredweight in meat prices to wholesalers and an increase of 35 cents a hundredweight on government purchases.

Previously the government had proposed an increase of about 12 1/2 cents a hundredweight -- compared with 25 cents in the reported modification -- on civilian purchases.

Further, these reports said, the government would contract to purchase upwards of 3 billion pounds at the 35-cent figure. About one half of this would cover purchases for foreign governments, the other half purchases by the army.

It was understood that a final decision on the seizure-versus- price increase argument would be made tomorrow morning. If the price increase is decided upon, it was reported, it would be over the protest of OPA Administrator Chester Bowles.

Word that seizure orders by which the government could take over the strike bound industry came from official but anonymous sources who noted that such orders customarily were prepared in advance of the decision to use them, and in some cases had been discarded after they were written.

The mere machinery of clearing and approving a seizure notice probably would prevent its use before Wednesday, these sources said, and there was no indication what agency might be designated to operate the plants.

The office of War Mobilization and Reconversion, Bureau of the Budget, Labor Department, and agencies directly concerned with the industry would be involved.

Both the Agriculture and War Departments have been suggested as possible agencies to conduct the seizure and operation if it should be carried out.

...mendation on seizure, Anderson replied: "To have an answer." But he did not divulge what the answer would be.

Anderson then headed for the Office of Reconversion Director John W. Snyder for a conference where it seemed likely the question would be asked.

ARMY DIET OVERSEAS HIT BY MEAT STRIKE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21 (AP)—The meat strike is beginning to be noticed in the Army's chow.

War Department officials said today that in Europe, the Pacific and at posts in the United States, mess sergeants had started serving corned beef and other such products from cans to make fresh meat supplies stretch farther.

In the United States the Army has an estimated one week's supply of fresh meat on hand, in accordance with normal practice. Including shipments en route, troops in Europe have about one month's supply. The Pacific has enough for fifteen or twenty days, it was estimated by the subsistence division of the Army's quartermaster general.

The Army's shortage, it was noted, promises to last longer than the strike itself, because of the time necessary for deliveries.

FRANKFORT, Germany, Jan. 21 (AP)—The strike of United States packing house workers will result in American forces in Europe eating canned meat instead of fresh cuts in two meals each week during February and March, Theatre Service Forces Headquarters said today.

"This rationing measure is considered desirable as a result of the strike," the announcement said. "Fresh meat reserves available to the Army are insufficient to continue shipment which could provide meat in the same quantity available to European theatre troops in the past. If the strike continues, rationing for more than two meals per week will be necessary."

HARVESTER PARLEY TO BE RESUMED

CHICAGO, Jan. 21—(AP) The International Harvester Co. and the C.I.O. United Farm Equipment and Metal Workers Union both expressed willingness tonight to resume negotiations which had failed to stop a 10-plant walkout of 30,000 International employes today.

A company spokesman said negotiations were broken off last night "by the union on the issue of compulsory membership." The company will not accept any provision which gives employes "no opportunity to withdraw from the union if they so desire," a statement said.

Grant W. Oakes, international president of the union, said the strike will continue until the company signs an agreement acceptable to membership and "that is the sole method of ending the strike."

Neither statement referred to the 30 per cent wage increase demand, to which the company has counter-offered 10 per cent. The union said average pay in the struck plants is $1.14 an hour.

Meanwhile, no further action by a government fact finding panel, headed by Philip G. Marshall, Milwaukee, former Chicago Regional War Labor Board vice chairman, was expected until Friday. Marshall requested both sides to prepare briefs on the wage demand and other issues when he recessed a meeting of the panel last week and suggested direct negotiations in the interim.

General Motors Ignores C. I. O. Pay Ultimatum

U. A. W. Reverting to Original 30%-Rise Demand

DETROIT, Jan. 21 (AP).—General Motors Corporation indicated today that it would ignore the United Auto Workers' ultimatum that it settle the two-month-old strike for a government-proposed 19½-cent hourly wage increase.

Company officials said they do not anticipate any comment before midnight when the deadline set by the U. A. W. expires. At that time, the union has said its wage demands will revert from a 17½ to 30 per cent increase.

Meanwhile, the Chrysler Corporation announced today that 3,600 more employees are being laid off at two local plants "because of the glass shortage created before the glass strike was settled."

The company said this brings to 7,000 the number of Chrysler employees idle as a result of the glass strike, settlement of which was announced Saturday. "It is impossible yet to determine when there will be relief from this situation," a Chrysler statement read.

The U. A. W. has scheduled a Wednesday meeting with Chrysler, the first since negotiations were recessed before Christmas.

The union met today with the third member of the automobile industry's Big Three, the Ford Motor Company, to try to resolve a two-cent hourly difference in their wage proposals. Ford has offered 17½ cents, the union is demanding 19½ cents.

"We talked wages. We have no other comment to make," the parties said in a joint statement after a three-hour session this afternoon.

Ford And Union To Meet Again

Detroit, Jan. 21 (AP)—The CIO United Auto Workers' Union were set to meet today with the Ford Motor Company, believed to be nearing a wage agreement with the union, scheduled negotiations with Chrysler, and reiterated its intention of reverting to a 30 per cent increase demand from General Motors at midnight.

Ford and union negotiators were to resume talks today, with only a 2-cent gap to close between the 17½-cent hourly raise the company has offered and the 19½ cents the union asks. The latter figure was recommended by President Truman's fact-finding board as a settlement for the two-month General Motors strike.

30 P.C. Demand Coming Back

Meanwhile, the midnight deadline drew near when the union planned to abandon its agreement to the board's compromise figure and reinstate its original 30 per cent increase demand on the General Motors Corporation.

The company turned down that plan and union acceptance shortly afterward was qualified by a statement from Vice President Walter Reuther that it would be withdrawn at midright tonight if G.M. did not comply.

The steel strike dimmed hopes of both management and union for long-continued production at Ford and Chrysler, where wage negotiations are scheduled for 2 P.M. Wednesday.

Ford is reported to manufacture about fifteen per cent of its own steel.

NEW YORK TRANSIT STRIKE AVERTED

Mayor Meets Union Demand for Power Plant Sale Referendum.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—(AP) A threatened tie-up of the city's transit system—which would have left millions of New Yorkers without transportation to and from work—was averted late today when Mayor William O'Dwyer met the demand of the head of the C.I.O. Transport Workers Union for a referendum on the proposed sale of the city owned power plants.

Michael J. Quill, C.I.O.-T.W.U. head and city councilman, had set 7 p. m. (EST) for the city to meet his demand for a referendum on the sale of the three plants to the Consolidated Edison company.

Leaders Confer

The announcements by Quill and O'Dwyer came after the two had their first meeting since the transport workers leader threatened late last week to call the walkout of 32,000 employes.

Quill maintained it would cost the city $5,000,000 a year more to buy the power than to generate it.

Approximately 3,500,000 workers ride the city-owned subway, surface car and bus systems daily.

Quill's announcement that he would recommend to the union executive board that no strike action be taken came after the mayor told reporters the plants would not be sold until the proposal was submitted to referendum.

Earlier, Maj. Gen. Charles P. Gross, chairman of the Board of Transportation, said a referendum on the proposed sale was not necessary, and Quill had said the strike could be averted only if Gross "changed his mind."

LABOR BILL SPEED URGED BY G.O.P.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21—(AP) Republican members of the House Labor committee decided at a conference late today to vote as a bloc tomorrow to send President Truman's fact-finding labor bill, with amendments, to the House floor for action.

Rep. Landis (R-Ind.), acting as spokesman for the Republican group, said that before the committee sends the measure to the House floor his party members will seek to strike out:

1. All provisions for a 30-day cooling-off period while fact-finders are at work.

2. A provision that would give the fact-finders subpoena power for examination of books and records of the parties involved in a labor dispute.

Landis said he expected all eight of the committee Republicans and three Democrats to support the amended measure, and believed it would be approved by a 11 to 7 vote.

"What we want to do is to get a bill to the House floor," he said. "Then the House can work its will by writing the kind of bill it wants."

Meanwhile, Rep. Hook (D-Mich.) served notice he would offer a motion that the committee continue its public hearings on labor legislation.

TRUMAN GETTING WRONG ADVICE, AFL HEAD SAYS

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 21—(AP) President Truman is "sincere" but is getting the wrong kind of advice, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, asserted today as the A.F.L. executive council trained its guns on the administration-sponsored fact-finding labor bill.

"Mr. Truman is sincere in what he is trying to do," said Mr. Green, in a general discussion of labor legislation, "but like many sincere men he gets wrong information and advice."

Labor Bill Discussed

The council devoted an unusual, all-day session to consideration of the Norton-Ellender Bill providing for establishment of fact-finding boards to settle labor disputes. Its members also scanned approximately 160 other proposed acts to settle the strike wave sweeping the nation.

Green, stating that the Norton-Ellender Act was at the top of the list of proposed laws opposed by the A.F.L. declared he saw no reason for any legislation whatever of the type he termed anti-labor.

"Genuine collective bargaining and arbitration is the better solution," he stated. "This is voluntary. No legislation is needed."

Green reported that he had written to each Congressman and Senator and that A.F.L. field workers were inviting other letters to legislators in opposition to the fact-finding bill.

Protest Wired

The council telegraphed a protest to Senate and House committees opposing the measure on grounds that it would (1): warm up strike sentiment during so-called cooling off periods; (2): revive court injunctions against labor; (3): subject workers and unions to the doctrine of conspiracy and (4): impose on the government the duty of wage fixing which is "inimical to a free economy."

A statement asserted that "Congress needs a cooling off period right now much more urgently than labor."

"The great danger is that Congress, in an attempt to mitigate temporary labor-management disputes, may impose permanent government controls which would stifle freedom of enterprise for labor and for management for all time," the statement added.

Green declined to discuss the C.I.O. strike situation, but did say that only a fraction of one per cent of A.F.L. members were on strike—less than 70,000 persons—compared with some 1,500,000 C.I.O. workers now out.

Truman Denies Pessimism on Labor Disputes

Nation's Progress Won't Be Blocked, He Says; Gives Draft Officials Medals

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21 (AP).—Asserting he "is not a pessimist," President Truman declared today that labor disputes will not be allowed to block the nation's march toward prosperity.

The President told fifty-three local Selective Service officials, brought here to be honored for their war-time work, that they would be needed in the future for his proposed post-war universal training program.

In a lighter vein, the President, after bestowing medals on each of the men, who were picked to represent every state and territory, told them he was honoring them for a "thankless job."

"One gentleman who came up here (to receive a medal) wanted to know from me if this medal would help him get by St. Peter as he had been told so often to go to the other place," Mr. Truman said. "He thought he ought to have some means of getting into heaven.

"I am very sure that this will help him get to heaven, and I advised him very strenuously under no circumstances to go to the other place, because in all probability those same people who told him to go there might be there to meet him."

Served Five Years or More

Draft board members here for the ceremony included Robert M. Colt, of Gloversville, N. Y., and F. E. Johnson, of the Bronx, New York City.

The men honored in the twenty-five-minute ceremony in the East Room of the White House all have served five years or more without compensation on local draft boards. Only one of the fifty-four invited failed to arrive on time. Charles H. Brous, of Fresno, Calif., was grounded in Chicago while flying here.

Major General Lewis B. Hershey director of the Selective Service system, who was awarded the distinguished service medal a few minutes later, pulled a surprise on the Chief Executive by presenting him with a Selective Service medal. It was awarded, General Hershey told the crowd, for the President's service to Selective Service as Senator, Vice-President and President in assuring its being kept in democratic traditions.

General Hershey was honored for his part in mobilizing the nations' man power for war.

President's Speech

The complete text of Mr. Truman's remarks:

"It is a very great pleasure and privilege to me today to be able to help honor you gentlemen for a thankless job well done. One gentleman who came up here wanted to know from me whether this medal would help him get by St. Peter as he had been told so often to go to the other place. He thought he ought to have some means of getting into heaven. I am very sure that this will help him get to heaven and I advised him very strenuously under no circumstances to go to the other place, because in all probability those same people who told him to go there might be there to meet him."

(Voice: "Mr. President, don't send him to Minnesota, send him to Nebraska, that's where we need him.") (Much laughter.)

The President: "All right. Another one of these able gentlemen told me that he thought I would have plenty of experience in the pin-up business. I thought I was rather too old for that, I told him, but if some of these younger men wanted some experience, this would be a good place to get it.

"You have done a job that was not a happy one, but which was absolutely essential for the winning of the war. You still have a job to do in assisting these veterans when they return from war to peace. And after that job is done, and completed, you will have in all probability a chance to help implement a military training program which has been recommended to the Congress by the President. That also will be a job which I hope will contribute to the peace of the world and to the stability of the United States government."

We are having many troubles now, as you know, as a result of turmoil and dissatisfaction with wages and hours and conditions of work. But I am not a pessimist. I think that this country is too great to allow personal disturbances and interior turmoil to prevent us from enjoying what I consider to be the greatest age in the history of the world.

"I am not alarmed at the necessity for assuming the responsibility to see that atomic energy is used for peace instead of for war. I am not alarmed at any condition with which this great government of ours is faced.

Any nation which could organize for war, as this peace-loving nation did organize for war, and make the immense contribution which we made to that great undertaking, is not going to fail in the contribution that it has to make for the peace.

"I want to thank you gentlemen, in the name of the government of the United States, for the contribution you have made toward the winning of this great war."

Kimmel Ends Testimony; Cheered by Spectators

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21 (AP)—Admiral Husband E. Kimmel concluded his testimony to a Senate-House investigating committee today to the applause of spectators after repeating his view that responsibility for the Pearl Harbor disaster lay in Washington.

"I think if I had known all that was known in Washington, I would have anticipated such an attack," he said.

In his sixth day as a witness, Kimmel also testified:

1. He held no "ill will" against the late President Roosevelt for removing him as Pacific Fleet commander after Japan's attack.

2. In the summer of 1941—months before the war—American warships escorted a Dutch vessel from Pearl Harbor to New Guinea. As he recalled, Kimmel said, it carried American fliers bound for China.

Knox Said Message Sent

3. The late Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, making a personal inquiry at Pearl Harbor within a week after the attack, had insisted that a message was sent to Kimmel and Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander of the Asiatic Fleet, the night before the Sunday morning raid.

Applause came from the spectators when Rep. Keefe (R-Wis), a committee member, praised Kimmel's conduct as a witness and told the admiral:

"So far as I am concerned, you have acquitted yourself magnificently."

The testimony that Knox believed a message was sent from the Navy department to fleet commanders on Dec. 6 stirred sharp cross currents in the committee.

As Senator Ferguson (R-Mich) pressed questions about it, Rep. Murphy (D-Pa) repeatedly interrupted with citations from past investigations.

Short Quoted

Murphy said Knox' report quoted Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short, army commander, as saying the warning message "sent from the War department Saturday night at midnight before the attack never reached him until after the attack." Short is to testify tomorrow.

Murphy asserted there apparently was a misunderstanding that a message sent by the War department about noon on Dec. 7 was sent the previous midnight and "there never was any lost message."

"Was he (Knox) talking about a War department message or a navy message?" Ferguson asked after Murphy advanced this suggestion.

"He was talking about a message he originally thought was sent to me and to Admiral Hart," Kimmel responded.

"Then it was a navy message?"

"I presume so."

Kimmel testified that Capt. Frank Beatty, an aide to Knox, was present when the secretary talked to him about it. Asked if he had discussed it with Beatty, now a rear admiral, Kimmel said he had "some months ago in New York."

Kimmel said Beatty was "vague about what the warning was" and did not know where Knox got the idea.

Calling of Hart Urged

Ferguson asked that Beatty be called as a witness. Murphy promptly requested that Hart, now Republican senator from Connecticut, also be called.

Ferguson brought out what he said was a memorandum prepared in 1941 by Max H. Hamilton, a State department adviser on Far Eastern affairs, suggesting a clash in the Pacific might be averted by arranging for Japan to purchase part or all of New Guinea.

As outlined, this idea called for the United States to supply Japan with the money for the purchase and receive in return Japanese merchant vessels and perhaps warships.

Australia and the Netherlands possess part of New Guinea and the remainder is under Australian mandate.

"Nobody ever took it seriously, did they?" Murphy inquired with reference to the memorandum.

SAYS NAVY GAVE ARMED ESCORT TO DUTCH SHIP

JA 22 [illegible]

Kimmel Testifies It Was in the Summer of 1941 on Pacific Voyage.

NAMES JAPS' WORST ERROR

Asserts They Should Have Put Pearl Harbor Base Out of Commission.

Washington, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel testified today that it was his recollection that he furnished an armed escort in the summer of 1941 for a Dutch ship in the Pacific. The former Pacific Fleet commander told the Congressional Pearl Harbor investigating committee that as he recalled it, the ship was en route from Pearl Harbor to New Guinea.

Kimmel previously had testified that the Japanese made their "greatest mistake" by attacking the American fleet at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, and failing to put the base itself out of commission.

In his sixth day before a Senate-House inquiry committee, the former commander of the Pacific fleet said that it was probable that no attack would have been attempted if the American ships had been sent back to the West Coast.

Representative Gearhart (R.-Cal.), noted that Kimmel's predecessor, Admiral J. O. Richardson, had sought unsuccessfully to take his ships back to the West Coast to prepare them for war but was told by officials in Washington that the fleet was to be kept in Hawaii as a deterrent to Japanese aggressive moves.

Gearhart said that there had been "a studied effort—almost a frantic effort on the part of some committee members to develop the idea that the presence of the fleet in Hawaii was in some way a deterrent to Japan."

Was it a deterrent on December 7, 1941, he asked.

"They made an attack, sir," Kimmel replied.

Not on the West Coast.

Gearhart expressed belief that the youngest ensign in the Japanese Navy would not have been so foolish as to counsel an attack on the fleet if it had been on the West Coast.

"The Japanese did a lot of foolish things in the war," the witness said. "Their greatest mistake was the attack on Pearl Harbor."

He added that the Japanese might have caused more effective damage if they had destroyed the Pearl Harbor base. He said that damage was negligible to permanent installations, used to repair damaged ships and keep other units operating.

He said that the slow battleships hit at Pearl Harbor were not of much use early in the campaign because they couldn't accompany the fast-striking forces of carriers, cruisers and destroyers, and that the most useful units escaped damage.

Gearhart, by questioning, brought out Kimmel's opinion that it would have been much easier to defend the fleet on the West Coast. The witness said that aerial patrols would have been halved there, that ships could have been spread in three ports. There was only one port in Hawaii and all of the ships eventually had to go there, he said.

Gearhart said he thought that instead of being a deterrent to the Japanese, the American fleet based at Pearl Harbor offered an invitation to attack.

"I'm afraid you are indulging in a little hindsight there," Kimmel replied, "but I admit what you say is borne out by the events."

Kimmel agreed with Gearhart that the German-Japanese-Italian agreement of September, 1940, was "clearly aimed at the United States."

This three-Power pact pledged each signer to declare war against the attackers of each other. Gearhart noted that "shooting orders" were decreed for the United States Navy in the Atlantic against German vessels.

Japanese Self-interest.

Kimmel said that the pact was "an element in the evidence" of approaching war, but he added: "I felt that Japan would be governed in her actions by her own best interests and would have violated that agreement if it was to her advantage."

Gearhart discussed exchanges of notes between the United States and Japanese governments in November, 1941. He also read an intercepted Japanese message in which Tokyo told Berlin on November 30 that the United States had decided to regard Japan as an enemy.

Kimmel agreed that this message, not sent to him by Washington, was an important item of evidence as to Japan's warlike intentions.

Gearhart offered a lengthy statement that there had been "an abundance of evidence for several years that nobody in Washington was surprised by the attack." He mentioned testimony testimony that President Roosevelt had predicted late in November, 1941, that the Japanese would strike somewhere soon.

Quotes Mrs. Roosevelt.

"Mrs. Roosevelt said that at the White House they were not bit surprised as they listened to the radio reports, as they had long been expecting something like this," Gearhart continued.

But, he said, evidence in the current inquiry indicated that everybody had been surprised. He said that Admiral Harold R. Stark, then Chief of Naval Operations, said he was surprised, and that Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, the President and others were surprised.

Kimmel Laments Dropped 'Padding'

Washington, Jan. 21 (A.P.)—The war-warning message the Navy Department sent to Pearl Harbor on November 27, 1941, contained "padding."

This is a device by which words are added at the beginning and end of a coded dispatch to confuse anybody trying to decipher it. The padding was added by someone in the navy communications center and eliminated by decoders at Hawaii before delivery of the message to Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, Pacific Fleet commander.

Kimmel told the congressional investigating committee today he wished in this case the padding had been left in. It was:

"Hell's loose."

Pearl Harbor.

Production for civilian use already is at an annual rate $20,000,000,000 greater than four months ago, Snyder said in a year-end report to the President and Congress, but the time cannot be foretold when industry will come abreast of the soaring public demand for goods, he added.

Price Control Extension.

Snyder urged strongly that the price control act be extended beyond its scheduled midyear expiration date, saying:

"It would be foolhardy not to recognize that the excess of demand over supply throughout the economic system may continue far beyond June 30."

Unemployment and inflationary pressure may hit their peak simultaneously early this spring, Snyder said. However, joblessness will be below former estimates. It is approximately 3,000,000, compared with the

"The basic need at this particular time to meet both situations is more production," the reconversion director declared. "We must race to expand our output.

Jobs—Business cannot expand quickly enough to absorb in the near future the 4,500,000 veterans to be freed in the next half year, along with newly discharged governmental and war plant workers.

Coal—"Supply prospects are fair."

Clothing—Shortages will persist. Demand for cotton goods will top supply by 20 to 50 per cent.

Trade—May double the 1939 total of $40,000,000,000 in sales and thus far exceed the 1945 record.

Similar resilience was shown in employment:

Spending and Prices Up.

Reconversion Chief Asserts Inflation Peril Must Be Met by Legislation.

Rising Production Also Needed to Put U. S. Economy on Sounder Base.

Forecast For 1946.

Labor strife delayed the start of some important production lines, he said, but the high output of cars, refrigerators, washing machines and other durable goods "could not have been achieved by this time, in any case." In seventy-three pages the report forecast what 1946 would bring in these vital fields:

Food—Americans may eat more than in the record year 1944, when consumption was 11 per cent above the pre-war average.

U. S. Economy Is Tested.

Reconversion has given a new test and proof of the toughness of the American economy, Snyder said, observing: "The nation which our enemies called a soft and decadent democracy has proved itself young and vigorous, not only in battle, but also in the strains and shocks of economic readjustment. On V-J Day goods and services were being produced at an annual rate of $200,000,000,000, nearly half of it for war.

More food will be available this year than last, but shortages will since V-J day, even though the income of the American people after taxes has dropped at the rate of $7,000,000,000 a year. "People are beginning to spend a portion of their war savings," said the report, and instead of saving $3 out of every $10 earned, are putting away only $2.

Wholesale prices have been creeping upward more rapidly than in any similar period since 1943, Snyder noted. Liquid assets in the hands of individuals and business total $220,000,000,000, which, if improperly handled, can "become a charge of dynamite exploding under our price structure."

Inflationary Psychology.

The Reconversion Director also saw inflation psychology in the "growing business expectation that effective price control will end and prices will rise." He added: "Such an atmosphere is contagious. The expectation of inflation immediately becomes one of its direct contributing causes.

"The belief that prices will rise gives business men a powerful incentive to buy, hoard inventories, and refuse to sell; it gives consumers a similar incentive to buy more than their current needs. With the volume of liquid savings what it is, a disastrous boom could occur if an inflationary buying rush were to start.

"Price controls remain our only bulwark until production can increase sufficiently to balance demand. If people thought that price control would end at June 30, compliance and enforcement would deteriorate some time before that date."

ANDERSON WARNS ON BLACK MARKETS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21—(AP) Secretary of Agriculture Anderson warned today that continuation of the meat strike may revive black markets in poultry, fish and eggs and curtailment of food exports.

In oral statments to newsmen, he deplored the closing of major packing plants as he prepared to discuss the situation with the stabilization advisory board in the office of Judge John C. Collet, stabilization administrator.

The secretary refused to review issues involved in the strike or to say whether he favored government operation of the strike-bound plants pending settlement of the wage controversy.

"What would be your recommendation should President Truman ask your opinion on government seizure and operation of the plants?" he was asked.

"I'd have an answer," he replied but would not discuss the matter further.

Anderson said the shutdown in meat slaughter was causing a "terrible waste" of livestock feeds which are short.

Because the strike is forcing many farmers to hold livestock on farms beyond marketing condition and to use extra grain, Anderson disclosed that the government will cut whiskey-makers use of grains 25 per cent in February from January levels. Distillers will be given sufficient grain to operate on a seven and one-half days basis instead of the present 10 a month.

TRUMAN SELECTS NAVAL AIDE FOR BANK GOVERNOR

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21—(AP) President Truman today picked Commodore James K (Jake) Vardaman, his naval aide and a figure in the White House inter circle, for a 14-year term on the Federal Reserve Board of Governors.

The chief executive sent the nomination to the Senate along with that of Vice Admiral Alan G. Kirk to be ambassador to Belgium and minister to Luxembourg.

Vardaman was named to succeed John McKee, who sought retirement to private life after 15 years in the public service. Kirk, upon confirmation, would succeed Charles Sawyer, who quit recently to return to private law practice at Cincinnati.

Close Friendship

The gray-haired, 51-year-old Vardaman has been a close personal friend of the President since the early '20's when they attended annual encampments at Fort Riley, Kansas, as reserve officers in the artillery in which both served during the First World War.

His nomination, which official sources said was recommended by Federal Reserve Board Chairman Marriner Eccles, followed by a few days that of George E. Allen, president intimate and daily White House conference, to the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Allen, a Washington insurance man, is expected to become chairman of the RFC board.

A close associate said the late President Roosevelt offered a Federal Reserve post to Vardaman in 1937 but that he declined it because of his presidency at the time of the Tower Grove Bank and Trust Company of St. Louis.

He has been in the banking business nearly a quarter of a century, including four years as regional director of the RFC St. Louis office and 13 years as president and vice-president of Missouri banks. He is the son of the late James Kimble Vardaman, former governor and United States Senator from Mississippi.

Wounded in Sicily

Although he had a long background in Army artillery—he served with the 335th in France in the First World War—Vardaman came a lieutenant commander the naval reserve in 1939.

During a varied service with Navy in the Second World W was injured by an enemy sh plosion in Sicily, in July, 1943; and was returned to the U. S. for hospitalization.

Admiral Kirk was born in Philadelphia, October 30, 1888. He is now a legal resident of Connecticut, and a member of the Navy General board. He was commander of a U. S. naval task force at the time of the invasion of Normandy in 1944.

FEPC PROPONENTS FAIL IN THRUST AT FILIBUSTER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21—(AP) Proponents of the Fair Employment Practices Commission tried to make it tougher on filibusterers today by keeping the Senate in session overtime but failed.

A move by Senator Ball (R-Minn.) to instruct the sergeant at arms to round up absentees after the usual 5 o'clock quitting time was beaten, 35 for and 22 against. A two-thirds vote was needed for such action.

The total vote of 57 indicated the presence of a quorum—49 Senators required to conduct business. But when Ball's motion failed, Senator Russell (D-Ga.) moved that the Senate quit for the day and this was carried on a voice vote.

Russell contended that proponents of FEPC were a "bit unfair" by "shouting filibuster."

"There have been many extreme and conflicting statements about a filibuster here that has not even started," he told the Senate. "It has filled the newspapers and been on the airways from Left-Wing radio commentators."

Senate Delay Cited

But Senators White (R-Me.) and Ball said there could be no question about a filibuster. They noted that since last Thursday the Senate had done nothing except read the journal of that day and hear speeches on a motion to correct it by adding the chaplain's prayer.

More than three hours today was required for reading President Truman's message. Quorum calls and a speech by Senator Bailey (D-N. C.) then required until about 5 o'clock.

Bailey said the FEPC measure would extend Federal power into the realm of state rights and individual relations.

"We've nationalized labor, agriculture and industry," he said. "We are in a period of hopeless chaos."

Bilbo All Primed For Filibuster

Washington, Jan. 21 (AP)—The Southern filibuster against the Fair Employment Practice Commission bill became official today—Senator Bilbo (D., Miss.) was detected clearing his throat.

Winding a muffler carefully round his fabulous sound-box, Bilbo said in an interview:

"Why, yes," "it so happens that I do intend to speak, 30 days or so.

25 Primed To Talk

"But I am only one of many. We have about 25 Senators on our varsity team, all of them primed to talk.

"If the opposition wants to run 24 hours a day, we are abso-100 per cent-lutely ready.

"We have enough speakers so we can operate in shifts."

His reference was to a plan proposed by Senators Chavez (D., N.M.) and Morse (R., Ore.), who favor the anti-discrimination bill. They want to hold the Senate in continuous session in the hope of forcing a vote.

Position Of Chavez

Senator Chavez, whose motion called the FEPC bill up for Senate debate, expressed willingness to have the measure put aside for "any important legislation."

"If any Senate commitee reports any important legislation for action I am willing to put aside the FEPC bill," Chavez said. "By important legislation, I mean any labor legislation or bills dealing with demobilization or other matters.

"We ought to vote FEPC up or down (pass or defeat the legislation) now. There are sufficient votes in the Senate to pass it. It is the only legislation requested by the President which is ready for action. But I am not one to delay or interfere with any important legislation."

Bilbo first said several days ago that he planned to speak twice against the FEPC proposal, 30 days or so each time.

Topic Of Beginning

Rifling through a sheaf of reference notes, Pearl River county's free-style talking champ disclosed that he has finished the blueprints for his opening remarks.

"The first part of my speech," Bilbo said, "will be devoted exclusively to the virtues and accomplishments of filibustering from 1789 to the present time."

Bilbo added that because he has so many other subjects to discuss, it is hardly likely he will get around to reading passages from his new book, to be published in March. A treatise on race relations, it is entitled "Take Your Choice—Separation or Mongrelization."

Assured Some Rest

Prospects were that the Southerners could relax an hour or so today and let the reading clerk do their work. It is the clerk's task to drone out the 25,000 words of the President's combined message on the state of the Union and the condition of the budget.

When that is over, however, opponents of the FEPC bill plan to get back to their work. That work, begun Friday, is discussion of improvements and corrections in Thursday's official Journal.

Georgia Measure Hits FEPC Bill

Atlanta, Jan. 21 (AP)—The Georgia House unanimously adopted a resolution today saying "God help the Democratic party and the nation" if the Fair Employment Practice Commission bill was "the only thing that the President of the United States has to offer the nation in a time of strife and turmoil."

The measure said the bill was "inspired by the traditional haters of the South and is intended to arouse racial hatred and prejudice and create discord and disunity in the nation."

PROFITS-TAX REBATES AIRED

Repeal Of Carryback Provision Proposed In House

Washington, Jan. 21 (AP)—The growing industrial strife may produce a new struggle in Congress over excess-profits tax rebates.

Representative Bailey (D., W.Va.) offered a bill in the House today calling for repeal of the excess-profits tax carryback provision, effective December 31, 1945.

Just how much backing that measure or other moves in the same direction might get was not immediately apparent.

A number of lawmakers were talking about revision of the corporation tax credit system under which, labor spokesmen contend, business can obtain tax refunds to compensate for profits lost while plants are closed by strikes, but there was no dearth of opposition.

Morse Gives Stand

Senator Morse (R., Ore.) said the Government "must proceed to determine to what extent tax savings are being used to carry on an anti-labor drive by big business."

Senator Kilgore (D., W.Va.) issued a statement in which he said Congress should repeal at once "the tax rebate provisions which permit United States Steel and General Motors to draw upon the Treasury of the United States to finance their attacks upon American workers."

Representative Eberharter (D., Pa.), a member of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, said Congress and the Administration "should reconsider excess-profit tax refunds as they relate to the strike situation."

However, Chairman George (D., Ga.) of the Senate Finance Committee said "there is no reason in the world to change the tax laws because of the strikes."

"Legitimate Losses"

The statutes were drawn, he said, to provide refunds of excess-profits taxes "on the legitimate losses of business" during reconversion. George added that he considers losses due to strikes "legitimate losses."

Representative Knutson, of Minnesota, senior Republican on the Ways and Means Committee, said that "if the Administration recommends a revision of the business tax credit at this time it will be solely for the purpose of clubbing industry into line."

The wartime 85.5 per cent excess-profits tax was imposed upon as much of a corporation's taxable income as was in excess either of a reasonable return on invested capital or the corporation's average normal income of the prewar base period.

Although this war tax was repealed January 1, 1946, Congress continued a "carryback" excess-profits credit into 1946, meaning that if a business in the reconversion year falls below the "reasonable" or "average" profit determined for excess-profits taxation purposes, then that business can obtain refund of certain amounts previously paid or owed to the Government in excess-profits taxes.

When Congress extended the excess-profits carryback to 1946, the move was pressed as a means of bolstering businesses which suffered substantial losses in switching back from war to peacetime production.

How the some system might operate in the case of a corporation closed by a strike did not enter the debate.

Morse said the law "permits a corporation to make a profit while it is shut down," and added: "If these corporations were told they would get no tax refund while they were closed up because of strikes then you would see some of them more anxious to come to terms."

Funds-Control Proposal May Speed GI Release

Washington, Jan. 21 (AP)—A proposal that Congress use its money-granting power to speed army demobilization was made on Capitol Hill today.

It came from Representative Dirksen (R., Ill.), who said that if the Army did not have enough money to feed and house troops, it would have no alternative but to bring them home and discharge them.

According to Dirksen wants to dole out army funds between now and June 30 on a month-by-month quota basis pegged on the number of men scheduled to be released each month.

Would Cancel Previous Grants

He added that he will offer his plan as an amendment to a bill now before the House Appropriations Committee, of which he is a member, to cancel some $6,500,000,000 in previous grants, mostly to the Army and Navy. Heretofore, both services have received their troop subsistence funds on a full-year basis.

Dirksen's quota system would be patterned after the discharge program outlined by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower at an informal meeting of Congress last week.

"It might go even further than that," Dirksen said, and other committee members commented privately that they believe it should.

Rate Of Return

Eisenhower told Congress that about 3,000,000 men would be returned to civilian life between January 1 and June 30 of this year, with 800,000 leaving in January, 500,000 each in February and March, and 400,000 each in April, May and June.

Congress frequently has used its appropriation power to enforce its will on Federal agencies. It has blocked many projected programs and curtailed others by refusing to vote money for them.

Dirksen outlined his plan as the House Military Committee prepared to question Eisenhower tomorrow on demobilization details preliminary to tackling legislation blueprinting the size of the peacetime army.

House Committee Backs Delay in U.S.E.S. Switch

Would Postpone It to '47; Truman Wins Round in Veto Fight

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21 (AP).—President Truman won a round today in his first veto skirmish with Congress. By a 13-to-3 vote the House Labor Committee approved a bill embracing the President's proposal that transfer of the United States Employment Service from Federal to state control be held up until July 1, 1947.

Mr. Truman in late December vetoed a bill cutting back appropriations and spending authorizations by more than $50,000,000,000 because Congress tacked on a clause calling for transfer of the employment service to state jurisdiction within 100 days.

The President argued that Federal control of the service is essential while workers are shifting from war to peace production. The Federal government took over the service as a war-preparation measure.

The bill approved by the Labor Committee now goes to the House floor, where members expect a hot battle on a proposal by Representative Everett M. Dirksen, Republican, of Illinois, that control be given back to the states in thirty days.

SEEK TESTIMONY OF EX-COMMUNIST

Washington, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—The House Committee on Un-American Activities desided today to question Prof. Louis Budenz of Notre Dame University, on communist methods in strikes and labor controversies. Representatives Karl Mundt (R.-S. D.) said that Budenz, former communist editor who became a Roman Catholic last year, has been invited to testify on January 30.

"I want to learn from Prof. Budenz all he can tell us about the methods employed by American communists to agitate strikes, stir up labor disorders, and demoralize and disorganize industry, generally," Mundt said.

"I believe this reformed and conscience-stricken former Communist can render our country a great public service at this critical juncture by aiding our committee to detect and curb the disruptive devices utilized by Communists to retard reconversion, discredit Government, castigate capitalism, and hobble the progress of our private enterprise system."

Representative Wood (D.-Ga.), chairman of the committee, told reporters after a closed session that the committee is not making an investigation of G. I. demonstrations against demobilization policies and does not intend to do so.

"It is a matter for the military committee and they have been investigating for some time," Wood added.

Cool Toward Inquiry

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21 (AP).—Senate and House Military Committee chairmen showed little enthusiasm today for a requested investigation into the bloody Rapido River engagement in Italy.

The demand came from members of the 36th Division Association, meeting in Brownwood, Tex., Saturday on the eve of the second anniversary of their costly crossing of the heavily defended stream.

Representative Andrew J. May, Democrat, of Kentucky, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, told a reporter today he could not see what good could be accomplished by an investigation now. He said: "It wouldn't bring back the lives of any of the men who were lost there."

Senator Elbert D. Thomas, Democrat, of Utah, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, said in an interview, there is no precedent for a Congressional investigation of a strictly military activity "unless Pearl Harbor so qualifies." Senator Thomas added of the two-month-old inquiry into the Pacific naval disaster: "I think it is futile. I haven't learned a single thing from it."

Both Senator Thomas and Representative May, however, emphasized that if they received the 36th Division Association resolution, they will refer it to the full membership of their respective committees for a decision.

Navy Discloses Powerful New Torpedo Plane

Special Brakes of Mauler Can Check Its 500M.P.H. Top Dive Speed to 350

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21 (AP). — The Navy disclosed tonight a new and more powerful combination dive and torpedo bomber to go with the super-carriers of the Midway class.

With a maximum range of more than 1,700 miles, the announcement said, the plane can dive vertically more than 500 miles an hour and plaster its target with 4,000 pounds of bombs or rockets, or a torpedo and nearly 2,000 pounds of bombs or rockets.

Designated the BTM-Mauler, the new carft was designed and built by the Glenn L. Martin Company, of Baltimore, especially for the big new carriers.

In level flight, the Navy said, the Mauler has a speed of more than 350 miles an hour. Unloaded it has a gross weight of 17,50 pounds, approximately 1,00 pounds more than that of simil aircraft now in use.

Special brakes enable slowin the 500-mile-an-hour top speed i a vertical dive to less than 35 miles an hour, making possible lower altitude pullout and conse quently greater bombing accu the Navy said. The wing-mounted dive brakes open in less than five seconds at extremely high speeds.

The Mauler is powered by what the Navy called the world's largest aircraft engine, a Pratt & Whitney Wasp Major with a military rating of 3,000 horsepower. Its four-bladed Curtiss electric propeller is 14 feet 8 inches in diameter.

Wing span of the Mauler is 50 feet and length 41 feet 8 inches. The wings are of box-type construction, with outer wing panels folding vertically for carrier accommodation.

The plane mounts four 20-millimeter cannons. It has no internal bomb-bay, but carries its bombs, rockets and torpedo suspended externally in shackles.

Atom-Test Plans Due In 2 Weeks

San Francisco, Jan. 21 (AP)—Rear Admiral Russell Berkey, head of the Navy's civil liaison section, said today that detailed plans for atomic-bomb tests on ships at sea would be announced from Washington in two weeks.

Admiral Berkey did not comment on when or where the tests would be made or what ships would be used.

He said he talked by telephone with naval headquarters today and was told the announcement would be made about February 4.

Planning Task Huge

Admiral Berkey said planning for the atomic tests was a task equal to the planning for the assault and occupation of Iwo Jima.

The effect of the atomic explosion on marine life was an important part of the operation, Admiral Berkey said.

He added that the Department of Commerce was particularly interested in whether the after-effects of the explosion would be carried by currents to other areas of the sea.

Admiral Berkey said the Navy was anxious that the public be told as much as possible about the atomic tests.

McMahon Calls For Atom Policy

Washington, Jan. 21 (AP)—Chairman McMahon (D., Conn.) of the Senate Committee on Atomic Energy said today world developments made it increasingly urgent that we form a domestic policy on the new-found power.

Specifically, he cited to a news conference the appointment of an atomic-energy commission by the United Nations Organization.

He expressed the hope that his committee would have a decision after three more weeks of hearings, beginning tomorrow.

TWO NAVY HEROES TO BE HONORED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21—(AP) President Truman will present Congressional Medals of Honor Wednesday to two naval officers for heroism with the Aircraft Carrier Franklin, struck and nearly sunk by Japanese bombs last March 19.

Receiving the awards at a White House ceremony will be Commander Joseph T. O'Callahan, 40, Catholic chaplain, of Cambridge, Mass., and Holy Cross University, and Lt. Donald Arthur Gary of Oakland, Calif., a regular navy man who rose from the ranks to become engineering officer on the Franklin.

Father O'Callahan, first Jesuit priest to enlist in the naval service, risked his life repeatedly to administer last rites to the dying, man a fire hose, organize fire fighting and rescue parties, and wet down burning ammunition magazines and prevent additional explosion.

Lt. Gary groped his way through suffocating smoke and flames to a mess hall where several hundred men, trapped by smoke, flame and smashed bulkheads, were suffering from lack of oxygen. Gary made trip after trip to lead survivors safety. All but one of the trapped men were saved.

SENATOR TAFT REPEATS BRICKER ENDORSEMENT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21 — (AP) Senator Taft (R.-Ohio) reiterated today his endorsement of former Gov. John Bricker of Ohio for Senator and disputed tha the and Bricker had an agreement on the 1948 presidential race.

"John W. Bricker," Taft told a reporter, "is the strongest and best candidate the Republicans could nominate for the Senate this year."

Common Pleas Judge Walter B. Wanamaker of Akron asked Taft in an open letter last week if the Senator's endorsement of Bricker was "any part of a deal with respect to who is stepping aside for whom" two years from now in the Republican presidential campaign.

"There is no deal for '48," Taft said. "That is a long way off. John Bricker is my friend and I am delighted to support him for the Senate."

CURLEY TO FILE RETRIAL MOTION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21—(AP) Counsel for Rep. Curley (D-Mass.), mayor o. Boston, convicted last week of using the mails to defraud, said tonight a motion for a new trial will be filed tomorrow.

William E. Leahy, Curley's attorney, said the motion will assert that the verdict was against the weight of the evidence" and that certain testimony was permitted which should have been prohibited.

Curley, Donald Wakefield Smith of Pittsburgh and Washington, a former member of the National Labor Relations board, and James M. Fuller, who is serving a five-year term at the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta for sending fraudulent securities through the mails, were convicted by a district court jury last Friday night. They were officials of Engineers Group, Inc., a firm the government said fleeced clients by misrepresenting its ability to obtain government contracts.

Copper and brass scrap will be shipped to the United States from all overseas commands except France, Belgium, England and the Netherlands. It will be disposed of locally in those countries to assist in civilian rehabilitation.

U. S.-Argentine Situation Called Peril to Americas

Dr. Turbay of Columbia Urges Action at Rio de Janeiro

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21 (AP).—Dr. Gabriel Turbay, former Foreign Minister of Colombia, today urged the American republics to make a concerted effort to solve the Argentine problem or run the risk of jeopardizing the integrity of the inter-American system.

Dr. Turbay sounded this warning at a press conference in the Colombian Embassy as he prepared to leave the United States tonight by plane. He plans to stay a few days at Caracas ocnferring with members of the Venezuelan revolutionary Junta and arrive in Bogota on Saturday.

Expressing his "deep preoccupation" over the danger the Argentine problem persents to the forthcoming conference at Rio de Janeiro, Dr. Turbay declared:

Scrap, an eighth of an inch or greater in thickness will be brought back from Germany, where adequate manpower is available, the War Department said, adding that the situation in Japan is still under study.

Metal scrap ranges from shattered equipment on battlefields to worn or obsolete weapons, aircraft, vehicles and equipment.

Mexican General Sees Better U.S. Friendship

New Orleans, Jan. 21 (AP)—An attache of the Mexican Army's general staff—General of Brigade (Major General) Juan Barragan Rodriguez, predicted last night that "the time will come when Mexico and the United States will be bound together by friendly ties as close as those that exist between Canada and the United States."

Canada, said General Rodriguez, "has the head start on Mexico because of racial kinship. But there is no reason why intelligence and mutual good will cannot bridge mere differences of race. Fate made us neighbors; common sense should make us friends, if not brothers."

The General is en route home with his wife and two children after a vacation in the United States.

UNO Unit Inspects Sites From A Blimp

Boston, Jan. 21 (AP)—After inspecting several areas from a navy blimp, a United Nations site-finding committee turned today to proposed locations north of Boston, for the world peace agency's headquarters.

Their schedule called for inspection by automobile of a six-mile-square area in the Middlesex Fells, a park reservation on the suburban edge of Boston, and afterward a swing through Beverly Farms, Wenham and Westwood.

The Fells region's chances of selection were dimmed yesterday when the committee chairman discovered during the flight that it is "hemmed in by a number of cities."

May Be Other Advantages

"That is not very good," he said, though he added that there might be other advantages.

The air tour, in temperatures ranging down to two-below-zero aloft, was made in a navy blimp sent from Lakehurst, N.J., to a temporary base at South Weymouth, Mass., for the committee's use. It cruised over the Blue Hills state reservation south of Boston, Sudbury, Concord, Bedford and Middlesex Fells.

Wandering Veterans Finally Are Able To Land In U.S.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 21 (AP)—Twenty-four home-hungry veterans of the war in Europe were "rescued" from a wandering ship and landed at Miami today after the dispatched an urgent message to Coast Guard headquarters here.

Out of Barry, Wales, about the freighter Thomas J. Jarvis, the men thought they were en route to New York. At sea their ship was diverted to New Orleans, and yesterday, off Florida, new orders came sending the ship to Galveston.

The veterans, including three captains, held an impromptu military council aboard ship and, analyzing their orders which directed them to proceed to "a port of debarkation," decided that they would be within their orders if they called upon the Coast Guard for help.

Request Unanswered

A previous request, radioed to the War Department asking that the ship be permitted to touch some port long enough for them to land, had gone unanswered.

The skipper of the Thomas J. Jarvis had their message sent to Coast Guard headquarters here, and an 83-foot cutter met the ship off the sea buoy. The men were transferred and landed in Miami.

So happy were they to reach United States soil that two newspaper men who met them were hugged—but not kissed.

Capt. R. G. Williams, of the Plaza Hotel, St. Petersburg, Fla., a fighter pilot with the 8th Air Force who had been a prisoner of war for fourteen months, said:

"We're not blaming the Army. We're not angry with anybody. It was just that we didn't want to cross the Gulf of Mexico after we'd already crossed the Atlantic, and getting off at Miami was within the scope of our orders."

Captain Williams and the other two officers, Capt. R. W. Brumwell of Whitefish, Mont., and Capt. N. W. Hornstein, a medical officer, of New York city, are married to English girls, as are five of the men.

Soldiers aboard the ship included: Mast. Sergt. C. P. Bettini, San Rafael, Cal.; Corporal S. Baniak, Gary, Ind.; T/5 W. W. Pennypacker, Norwood, Pa.; Sergt. John J. Kujawa, Lemont, Ill.; Staff Sergeant Everett A. Hunter, Longview, Texas; William Thayer, Steele, Mo.; Charles Smith, R. D. No. 1, Verfango coun , Pa.; Sid H. Gibbons, Columbus, Ohio; John A. Kenner, Youngwood, Pa.; George W. Christmas, Allentown, Pa.; Sergt. Clarence O. Gelleberg, Duluth, Minn.; Pfc. Dennis Schiclott, Newark, N.J., Robert Brenneka, Harvard, Ill.; Cecil Valentine, Attica, Ohio; T/5 Leo J. Curran, Wakefield, Mass., and First Sergeant Dwight Aschenbrenner, Laurens, Iowa.

ARGENTIA, NEWFOUNDLAND, JAN. 21-(AP)-THE AMERICAN TROOPSHIP HENRY BALDWIN, DANGEROUSLY DAMAGED IN A NORTH ATLANTIC STO LAST WEEK, SAILED FOR NEW YORK TODAY WITH 585 HOMEWARD-BOUND TROOPS FROM EUROPE.

PATCHED UP TEMPORARILY AT THE U.S.NAVAL BASE HERE THE VESSEL IS DUE IN NEW YORK FRIDAY EVENING. FROM NEW YORK THE TROOPS WILL BE DISPERSED TO ALL PARTS OF THE UNITED STATES FOR DISCHARGE.

THE 7,000-TON LIBERTY SHIP HAD A CLOSE CALL AFTER SPLITTING ITS SEAMS JAN. 15 WHILE 100 MILES OFF CAPE RACE, NEWFOUNDLAND, IN AN 80-MILE-AN-HOUR GALE BLOWING UP MOUNTAINOUS SEAS. THE SHIPS CRACKED THREE-QUARTERS OF THE WAY BACK, ACROSS THE MAIN DECK AND DOWN THE SIDE TO ABOUT SIX FEET ABOVE THE WATER LINE.

THE MASTER, N. L. FENDIG OF BROOKLYN, N.Y., SENT OUT THREE EMERGENCY MESSAGES AS A PRECAUTIONARY MEASURE. THE SPLIT OCCURRED IN THE MORNING, BUT ARMY TROOPS WERE UNAWARE THAT ANYTHING WAS AMISS UNTIL THEIR COMMANDING OFFICER, MAJ. HAROLD GOLDMAN OF BUFFALO, N.Y., INFORMED THEM OVER THE LOUDSPEAKER SYSTEM THAT EVENING.

GOLDMAN SAID TODAY "THE SPIRIT OF THE TROOPS WAS ADMIRABLE. THERE WAS AN ABSOLUTE LACK OF PANIC AND THEY GAVE PERFECT COOPERATION."

THE TROOPS VOLUNTEERED FOR EMERGENCY DUTY AND MOVED PART OF THE 200 TONS OF SAND BALLAST FORWARD FROM AFT OF THE SPLIT. THEY WERE FORBIDDEN TO GO AFT OF THE SPLIT WHERE GUARDS WERE STATIONED.

ON JAN. 16 THE U.S. COAST GUARD CUTTER MODOC, UNDER THE COMMAND OF LT.COMDR. ARTHUR MINOR OF MALDEN, MASS., A VETERAN OF 18 YEARS IN THE NORTH ATLANTIC, DREW ALONGSIDE THE BALDWIN AND ESCORTED THE STRICKEN VESSEL TO ARGENTIA.

MINOR SAID "SHE SURE WAS WORKING", REFERRING TO THE OPENING AND SHUTTING OF THE SPLIT PLATES.

"IT WAS COLD, 18 ABOVE, AND THE WATER WAS DOWN TO 34 DEGREES WHERE A MAN COULD LIVE ONLY THREE MINUTES," HE ADDED. "SOMETIMES WE HAD TO USE SOUND GEAR TO KEEP TRACK OF THE BALDWIN AS WE TRAILED HER INTO PORT, BECAUSE THE STORM WAS SO HEAVY. THE STORMS IN THE NORTH ATLANTIC THIS WINTER HAVE BEEN THE WORST I HAVE EVER SEEN."

AS THE MODOC HOVE INTO SIGHT, THE CREW AND TROOPS ABOARD THE BALDWIN CHEERED.

"I WAS SURE GLAD TO SEE THAT MODOC," CHIEF ENGINEER J.A. METSKER OF MERRICK, N.Y., SAID.

MOST OF THE TROOPS WERE UNAWARE OF THE FULL DANGER UNTIL THEY GOT ASHORE AT ARGENTIA, WHERE THEY WERE GIVEN THE FULL RECREATIONAL FACILITIES OF THE ARGENTIA NAVAL BASE AND THE ADJACENT ARMY BASE AT FORT MCANDREW. THEY WERE THEN MORE INTENT ON ENJOYING THEMSELVES THAN REFLECTING OVER THE PAST DANGER.

"IT WAS BETTER THAN A THREE DAY PASS," SAID LT. D.C. DEEDS, OF TERRE HAUTE, INDIANA. "THEY TREATED US FINE HERE. WE HAD MOVIES AN BOWLING BUT THE TROOPS WENT MOST OF ALL FOR THE ICE CREAM, MALTED MILK AND AMERICAN BEER. THEY PRACTICALLY BOUGHT OUT THE POST EXCHANGE.

PFC NEIL GILLETTE OF FREDERICKTOWN, MO., SAID "IT WAS A NICE STOPOVER. NAW. I WASN'T SCARED--AT LEAST NOT UNTIL AFTERWARDS. WE DIDN'T REALIZE THE DANGER AT THE TIME."

PFC STEWART WIGGENTON OF EAST ST.LOUIS, ILL., ADDED THAT "WE WERE MOVE ANNOYED THAN ANYTHING ELSE BECAUSE OF THE DELAY IN GETTING HOME."

PFC ARTHUR BAUMAN OF NEWARK, N.J., AGREED TO THAT VIEW, SAYING "IT WAS A SWELL STOP-OVER, ANYWAY. AT THE TIME WE DIDN'T REALLY THINK MUCH ABOUT IT."

UNO LEADERS SEE PROTEST SETTLED (PARIS)

U.S. Viewed As 'Middle-Man' In Russian-British Issue

London, Jan. 22 (AP)—United Nations leaders declared optimistically tonight that the newly born peace agency could settle amicably the Russian protest against British policy in Greece and Java.

They discounted talk that the surprise move by Soviet Russia and the Ukraine might create a crisis at the very outset of the United Nations Organization.

The first major test of UNO ability to smooth international friction brought the comment from the UNO president, Paul-Henri Spaak, of Belgium, that there were "no grounds for pessimism" and a warning from him against falling into "the error of the League of Nations" by putting off major problems.

U.S. Seen As Middle Man

American officials soft-pedaled talk of a crisis and said they were not alarmed. They saw the United States moving into a middle-man, pacifier role between the Soviet Union and the United Kingdom.

A qualified British source said his Government felt it had "nothing to fear or be ashamed of, and certainly nothing to conceal" and that it would not oppose UNO intervention.

British Prime Minister Attlee told commons that the British aspired only to "an amicable settlement" between the Dutch and the Nationalists in Java. He did not touch on the Greek question.

Britain's attitude further was understood to be that if the Russians have suspicions, "then this is a first-rate opportunity to air them and clear Britain's name."

Would Tackle Problems

A top-ranking Security Council member, who asked anonymity, admitted that the council was moving into an uncharted field, but said it was better to tackle big problems at the outset rather than "let them ferment."

A South American delegate said privately that it was "ridiculous to say we should wait for UNO to wear its long pants before putting it to a real test."

The Russians themselves had nothing to add beyond the letters which Andrei Gromyko, Soviet delegate, and Dmitri Manuilsky, delegate of the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, filed last night with the United Nations secretariat.

Meanwhile, the Soviet delegation was reinforced by the belated arrival of the Vice Commissar for Foreign Affairs, Andrei Vishinsky.

Council May Meet Tomorrow

Some officials said the Security Council might meet Thursday to decide how to tackle the case and also to consider Iran's charges that Russia was interfering in her internal affairs.

Some members of the council predicted that commissions probably would be appointed to carry out "on-the-spot" investigations in Iran, Greece and Indonesia if no means of immediate friendly settlement appeared.

The eleven-nation body scheduled an informal, secret session for tomorrow to nominate a secretary general.

Lester Pearson, Canadian Ambassador to the United States, appeared favored, although Trygve Lie, Norwegian Foreign Minister, was understood to be gaining support.

Session Moved Up

The General Assembly also arranged a full meeting tomorrow on the problem of creating a commission to control atomic eenrgy.

The session was moved up a day to speed action on the four-power control plan. American delegation sources said Secretary Byrnes would not speak and was expected to return to Washington after the commission is created. He will leave the delegation in the hands of Edward R. Stettinius, Jr.

Atomic Control Plan Discussed

Some disagreement over the atomic control plan appeared in the General Assembly's political and security committee when Australia's chief delegate, N. J. O. Makin, chairman of the Security Council, said he objected to an atomic commission "not freely chosen from among members of the United Nations."

As the plan is drawn at present, membership on the commission would be limited to the Security Council plus Canada.

Greek And Java Problems Seen As UNO Test (HIGHTOWER)

London, Jan. 22 (AP)—The explosive problems of Greece and Java were tossed into the lap of the United Nations Organization today by Soviet delegates, providing a full-scale test of the ability of the great powers to co-operate within the UNO.

Referring to the Soviet action, British Prime Minister Attlee in answer to questions in Congress said today that the British aimed only at "an amicable settlement" between the Dutch Government and Indonesian Nationalists in Java. He made no mention of Greece, which also has a British occupation force.

Soviet delegates earlier had asked the Security Council to investigate and take measures against the maintenance of British troops in Greece and Java.

Situation Better, Attlee Says

Declaring the Java situation appeared improved, Attlee expressed the hope that conversation between Dr. H. J. Van Mook, acting governor general of the Netherlands East Indies, and Indonesian Nationalists would be resumed shortly. He said if a "fuller statement" were required it would have to come from Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin.

The Prime Minister spoke in answer to questions from Laborite Tom Driberg and Conservative Capt. L. D. Gammans.

UNO officials privately agreed that the charges against Britain made by delegates representing the Soviet Union and the Ukraine, coupled with earlier charges made by Iran against Russia, had ended the honeymoon period of the UNO.

U.S. In Center

American delegates were playing down talk of a crisis in the world peace agency, but it was apparent the organization was confronted with some of the toughest problems it could be asked to meet. Some Americans said privately that the United States apparently was moving into a middleman position between Russia and Britain.

Both the Iranian appeal against Russia and the Soviet appeal against Britain were based on Article 35 of the United Nations Charter and both called for action by the eleven-member Security Council. The Russian-British case, however, is the first involving two of the Security Council's five permanent members.

The Russian complaints, filed with the Security Council last night, accused Britain of endangering world peace and interfering with the internal affairs of Greece and Java.

Neither the British nor the American delegates had any forewarning of the Russian action. Some British authorities suggested that the Russians acted in order to build up a counter-fire against the Iranian charges on the theory that Britain was backing Iran. Some American experts said they saw a possibility that Russia suspects the UNO of taking a basically anti-Russian line and is moving to head showdown.

JAN 23 1946

The British Cabinet met to discuss the Russian protests, but a British spokesman said it was not likely that the case would be discussed in Parliament—beyond Attlee's assertions—until Bevin has presented the British position before the Security Council. The spokesman added, however, that the British Government "is quite unlikely to impede or retard any matter brought before one of the organs of the UNO so long as it is brought up in accordance with the principles and rules of the organization."

The informant added that the British Government felt it had "nothing to fear or be ashamed of, and certainly nothing to conceal" concerning its actions and policies in Greece and Indonesia.

He pointed out that the British Government already had said it wanted to withdraw its forces from Greece and Indonesia "when the job is done and it is sure democratic principles are flourishing."

Andrei J. Vishinsky, Soviet Vice Commissar of Foreign Affairs and chief Russian delegate to the UNO, arrived in London by air today from Berlin. This was his first appearance here since the UNO General Assembly convened January 10.

The Russians themselves said nothing beyond the letters which Soviet delegate Andrei Gromyko and Ukrainian delegate Demitri Manuilsky filed with the United Nations secretariat.

The Iranians, in their protest filed Saturday against the Soviet Union, contended there was "Soviet interference with the internal affairs of Iran."

The Security Council, which held its only meeting Thursday, probably will be summoned into session by Thursday or Friday to decide how to tackle the pending issues.

May Send Investigators

Council leaders, conceding they were moving into an uncharted field with no clear rules yet established, speculated that the council ultimately would name commissions to make on-the-spot investigations in Iran, Greece and Indonesia and report back.

JAN 23 1946

Some disagreement with the six-power plan for controlled atomic energy, initiated yesterday by the General Assembly's political and Security Committee, developed at another session of the committee today.

It was expressed by Australia's chief delegate, Norman Makin, chairman of the Security Council, who said he objected to an atomic commission "not freely chosen from among the members of the United Nations."

He asserted the commission, proposed by the United States, Britain, Russia, Canada, France and China, "could scarcely be said to be responsible to the General Assembly because it would be the Security Council which would decide what reports would be transmitted to the General Assembly."

Makin proposed that all information within the limits of security should be made available by the commission to the public.

Observers said the complaints filed by the Soviet Union and Soviet Ukraine undoubtedly posed the greatest test yet faced by the United Nations Organization.

Although some United States sources said they were not alarmed by the developments, officials had hoped to avoid major issues while the UNO remained in its formative stage.

"After all," one American official said, "this is the kind of thing the council was created to cope with."

Britain Has eYts

The Council, which eventually will control tthe world police force, could make recommendations to the British or offer conciliatory suggestions. Britain, however, as a permanent member of the Council, could veto any proposed action against her.

The Soviet Union's letter to the UNO, addressed to Gladwyn Jebb, executive secretary of the Assembly, said that the "maintenance of British troops in Greece becomes a means of pressure on the internal situation in the country, which is not seldom used by reactionary elements against the democratic forces of a country."

"This situation," the letter continued, "which means internal interference in the affairs of Greece, with the aid of armed forces of a foreign power, has created great tension, which is fraught with great consequences for the Greek people as well as for the maintenance of peace and security."

Troops Sent During War

British troops were sent into Greece last year on the grounds that occupation of the country was necessary to the war effort.

"The maintenance of British troops in Greece after the war," the Russian letter said, "cannot now be explained by the necessity for protecting communications of British troops in defeated countries."

The Ukrainian letter, dealing with the Indonesian problem, said that "in that country (Indonesia) several months of military actions directed against the local population have been waged, in which British forces as well as Japanese enemy armed forces are taking part."

Athens, Jan. 22 (AP)—Greek Premier Themistokles Sophoulis tonight described Russia's demand for a UNO inquiry into British military operations in Greece as a "counterpoise to the Persian question."

Stating that the Greek Government had, he said, received no official information of Russian demands, Sophoulis added that "we are well aware of Soviet views."

Greek Premier Backs British

Athens, Jan. 22 (AP)—Premier Themistokles Sophoulis said today that "British military forces are in Greece with the full consent of the Greek Government and in earnest collaboration with it in maintaining order."

This assertion by the head of the Government was the first official Greek reaction to Russia's request to the United Nations Organization to give early consideration to the situation in Greece.

The Russians maintained that the presence of British troops in Greece represented interference in Greece's internal affairs.

Sophoulis spoke in reply to an Associated Press request for a statement outlining his position in that matter.

Premier Sutan Sjahrir of the unrecognized Indonesian Republic and an official of the Netherlands East Indies government both said today that they opposed the withdrawal of British forces from Indonesia at this time.

The Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic yesterday asked the Security Council of the United Nations Organization to "put an end to the present situation" in Indonesia, and asserted that British troops as well as Japanese armed forces were taking part in military actions against the local popuulation in Indonesia.

Withdrawal O. posed

Sjahrir said that if the Russians did not mind, the Indonesians would prefer that the British remain in the islands until the Japanese had been disarmed and removed.

Peter Kierstens, education director of the Netherlands East Indies government and former minister of economics, said "it would be irresponsible if the British withdrew utterly, and disastrous for the Indonesians x x x for the British to withdraw would mean sacrificing the Indonesians to Soviet propaganda."

Sjahrir expressed Indonesian appreciation of the world interest in Java and said:

"If the British withdrew now, the Japanese might refuse to lay down their arms and might resist."

Sjahrir said that when the T. K. R. (Indonesian Peace Preservation Corps) removes Dutch internees from Inland Java, as it proposes to do, and then removes the Japanese, the "British should be sufficiently convinced of the Indonesian administrative ability to enable them to quit Java promptly after the allied powers' assignment is completed."

The British were assigned by the Allied command to rescue internees and prisoners of war held by the Japanese, and to disarm the Japanese. The Indonesian Nationalists are demanding complete independence from the Dutch.

UNO Appeal Deferred

The premier said his government had not appealed to the UNO, and preferred to withhold such action until other attempts to reach a settlement have failed.

He added, however, that if it became necessary to submit the matter to the UNO, it was most appropriate for Russia to take action. He said Russia is a major power with the least direct interest in Indonesia and thus better able to present the case as a moral issue.

Kierstens said the Ukrainian request "shows how dangerous it is when a power has Russia's glamor and authority but no responsible knowledge of real conditions."

"It would be irresponsible if the British withdrew utterly and disastrous for the Indonesians," he continued. "If Russia could read the heart of Sjahrir and other Indonesians she would see exactly the same reaction. They are longing to return to the old Dutch-Indonesian friendships under changed conditions with better chances for the Indonesians."

Earlier today the first group of Dutch citizens interned by the Japanese and then held by the Indonesians in East Java since October, reached Batavia after a train ride of nearly 600 miles through Nationalist-controlled interior Java.

The 156 Dutch men, women and children in the group were escorted by members of the T.K.R. They came from the camp at Malang, about 50 miles southwest of Soerabaja, formerly a Japanese concentration camp.

The T.K.R. has proposed to bring 15,000 Dutch from the interior when the British are ready to receive them.

U. S. Stresses Air Role For UNO 'Police Force'

LONDON, Jan. 22.—(AP) The United States favors heavy emphasis on air power in the proposed United Nations "police force," judging by the appointment of top air-minded generals and admirals as U. S. advisors to the UNO Security Council.

Short, sandy-haired Gen. George C. Kenney, General MacArthur's former air chief and head of the Pacific Air Command, is senior officer on the battle-experienced U.S. military delegation, which soon will open discussions with military leaders of Britain, Russia, France and China on the size and use of the armed forces which each nation will assign to the peace preservation force.

The role of air power in the international "police force" was expected to be the chief point of discussion at the forthcoming meeting of the Big Five military leaders, with aviation advocates favoring a fast, hard-hitting air force capable of swift and drastic action against any nation designated by the UNO Security Council as an aggressor.

Two other air-minded officers represent the U. S. Navy and Army ground forces—a naval aviator, Admiral Richmond Kelly Turner, boss of the Pacific Fleet Amphibious Forces; and a former paratrooper, Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, who retired as deputy supreme commander of the Mediterranean area to join the UNO committee.

Military leaders of the Big Five will be summoned formally to meet after the UNO Security Council has been organized. At present only the U. S. and British military leaders are in London.

Initial conferences, it was indicated, will deal with the size and type of military forces each nation will contribute. Final organization of the peace preservation force was not expected to be completed before summer.

One of the problems which was expected to be deferred was selection of a commander for the international "police force."

Because joint operations involving so many different nationalities are unprecedented in military history, the U. S. has placed its top military internationalists on the delegation, including Maj. Gen. John Russell Deane, who commanded the U. S. military mission to Russia from 1943 to 1945.

Secretary of the delegation is Navy Captain Denys W. Knoll, who served with the mission to Russia after escaping from Corregidor by submarine 48 hours before the surrender to the Japanese.

Another adviser is Brig. Gen. Charles P. Cabell, former chief of the Army Air Forces Strategy Division, who attended the Yalta and Potsdam Conferences.

British representatives on the military staff council are Lt. Gen. Sir Edwin L. Morris, former chief of staff in India; Admiral Sir Henry Moore, former commander of the British Home Fleet; and Air Chief Marshal Sir Guy Garrod, former chief of the RAF in the Mediterranean and Middle East.

German Navy Divided Equally By The Big 3

100 Surrendered U-Boats Scuttled By British Fleet In North Atlantic, London Reveals

JAN 46

London, Jan. 22 (AP)—The United States, Russia and Britain announced tonight that the German Navy had been divided among them.

A tri-power communique said "operable surface units" of the German Fleet, together with 30 submarines, had been split up on an equal basis.

At the same time, the Brititsh Admiralty disclosed officially that 100 surrendered U-boats had been scuttled in the North Atlantic by the Royal Navy last November.

A total of 1,789 ships is involved—2 cruisers, 30 destroyers and torpedo boats, 30 submarines, 48 depot ships and 1,679 "other units," including mine sweepers, harbor patrol craft and similar ships.

U.S. Gets Cruiser Eugen

Besides the ten U-boats apiece, each nation gets:

United States—The 10,000-ton cruiser Prinz Eugen, 7 destroyers and torpedo boats, 12 depot ships and 560 other units.

Russia—The 6,000-ton cruiser Nuernberg, 10 destroyers and torpedo boats, 15 depot ships and 507 other units.

Britain — Thirteen destroyers and torpedo boats, 21 depot ships and 612 other units.

All of Germany's battleships were sunk during the war. The splitup leaves Germany with no combat navy. Her merchant fleet, a British source said, will be divided later, although the Germans will be allowed to retain fishing vessels with which to help feed their population.

Some of the allocated vessels already have sailed to ports of their new owners, while the others wait to be picked up in German ports.

[State Department officials said they had no idea when the identity of the ships allocated to each nation might be announced. The Navy Department already has disclosed that the cruiser Prinz Eugen is being brought here for experimentation.]

The British Government, it was disclosed, has offered to transfer a number of warships allotted to the United Kingdom to the French Government, and negotiations now are under way.

The communiqué said the decision on the breakup of the German navy was made at the Potsdam conference.

Commission Reports

"A tripartite naval commission accordingly was appointed to make recommendations to implement this decision," the communiqué said, "and it recently has reported to the governments of the three powers.

"Its report is now under consideration by these governments; but its recommendations on the allocation of the main units has been accepted and their division among the three powers is now being made.

"Surplus U-boats in United Kingdom ports have been sunk in accordance with this agreement."

German ships which cannot be made operable "within a specified time" will be destroyed.

GI BRIDES, CHILDREN READY TO SAIL FOR U.S.

TIDEWORTH, England, Jan. 22—(AP) More than 600 GI brides and their American children took temporary possession tonight of historic Perham Down barracks, while waiting to sail Saturday for the United States on the S.S. Argentina. They will go abroad Friday.

"Processing" the brides will start tomorrow morning. They will fill out immigration forms, separate their luggage, convert the eight English pounds they are permitted to take out of the country into dollars, be searched for ammunition and guns, and go through a physical examination. The foreign office has waived all British passport requirements.

This afternoon, mothers were busy at the old Boer War barracks, bedding down their babies in foot locker cribs and wrapping them in GI blankets. Babies "didies" were scattered where once veterans rested their packs and rifles, and milk bottles were ranged along window sills. A sign announced "Boiling water for bottles ready—free service."

The big adventure of moving States over the route traced began today for 200 British Packed aboard a crowded train in Waterloo Station, they started the first part of the long journey. Sixty of the wives had children with them. There was a cloud of waving handkerchiefs as the train pulled out of the gloomy station into London's fog, en route to an Army processing station at Tidworth, near Southampton.

The first 200 will be followed this afternoon by 400 more wives. All will sail on the liner Argentina Saturday, for a crossing which will require nearly a week.

Relatives crowded the station. There were parting tears, but more smiles. Gifts changed hands in hurried goodbyes.

Milk for the Babies.

Members of the London Women's Volunteer Service served hot tea to the tensely happy wives and passed toys and warm milk to the babies. The wives—weary of too few clothes, too little warmth and a too monotonous diet featuring brussel sprouts and potatoes—found a spokesman in Mrs. Peggy Stewart. Her husband, a steelworker in Toledo, Ohio, is former Cpl. Raymond Stewart of the Air Forces.

"I certainly don't want to spend the rest of my life in this country," she said. "My husband has told me a lot about America and I'm sure I'll like it there."

With her were her son, 15-month-old James, and a daughter by a previous marriage, Mamie Songhurst.

TELLS OF BEATING G. I. MALEFACTORS

London, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—A defendant in the Lichfield court-martial testified today that guards at the United States Army Detention Camp were instructed to "beat hell" out of repeaters—prisoners who had been sent there previously.

Corporal Ellis D. Adcock of Hot Springs, Ark., one of the nine enlisted men and two officers charged with cruelty to American soldier prisoners at the camp, told the court that the repeaters were "beaten from five to fifteen or twenty minutes," but he added: "We were told to 'beat hell out of them,' and that meant to beat them until could not get up from the floor, even though they were helped up."

Adcock's testimony was given in the case of Sgt. Judson H. Smith of Cumberland, Ky.

Adcock testified that the instructions that repeaters were to be beaten to the floor came from Lieut. Leonard W. Ennis of Peekskill, N. Y., another defendant. Describing other disciplinary measures at the camp, Adcock said he made one prisoner stand with his toes and nose to a wall from 9 A. M. until 6:30 P. M., "on instructions from Lieut. Ennes."

ATTLEE WARNS BRITISH ON RELAXING CONTROLS

LONDON, Jan. 22. — (AP) Prime Minister Attlee warned tonight against excessive relaxation of British farm and industrial controls.

Speaking at a dinner of the National Farmers' Union, the prime minister asserted that some controls were "irksome, but under present conditions they are necessary."

"The higher standards of life which we wish for can only come by increasing productivity both in industry and agriculture and by avoiding waste," Attlee said.

"No doubt some of them (controls) may be relaxed as world conditions improve," he added, "but beware of yielding to a clamor for relaxation of controls which may, if carried to excess, defeat the object which you have in view."

PARLIAMENT REOPENS

London, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Parliament will reassemble today after a Christmas recess for a session which is expected to produce the first major clash over the labor government's nationalization program.

A fight is predicted over a bill placing coal mines under government control. The bill will be brought up for a second reading probably early in February.

The text of the bill was published just before Parliament recessed and it has been attacked by Conservatives, who claim it does nothing to improve the industry and leaves consumers and taxpayers without protection from a State monopoly.

British Communists Renew Plea

London, Jan. 22 (AP)—The Communist party of Great Britain applied again today for affiliation with the Labor party, which now controls the Government. A similar request by the Communists was rejected by the Labor party last year.

GOUIN PROPOSED TO HEAD FRANCE

PARIS, Jan. 22—(AP) Socialist Felix Gouin, 60-year-old lawyer, emerged today as Gen. Charles de Gaulle's probable successor as interim president of France at the head of a Communist-Socialist-Popular Republican movement (M. R. P.) Coalition government.

His election by the Constituent Assembly tomorrow was regarded as almost certain. He had the support of the Communists, who proposed him as a candidate and of his own party.

The M.R.P. late tonight accepted the general terms of the coalition.

Solution of the government crisis came after the Communists withdrew their candidate, Maurice Thorez, and proposed Gouin as an individual who had been supported unanimously by all parties when put at the head of the assembly.

Gouin first had refused to be a candidate. The Socialists then proposed their minister of state, Vincent Auriol.

When the Communists turned thumbs down on Auriol and the Socialist Leader Leon Blum said ill health forced him to refuse to be a candidate, Gouin made his decision to accept.

Assembly circles foresaw Gouin's election and formation of the new Cabinet—with few changes—by nightfall.

Opposition to the present draft of the proposed new constitution for France, which calls for an all-powerful unicameral legislative system, and a figurehead French president, was one of the causes of deGaulle's resignation.

for a proposed Communist-led government.

Long Debate

The Socialists' choice came after a long party debate on whether to back Auriol or Felix Gouin, Socialist President of the Constituent Assembly, whom the Communists proposed today for the presidency after withdrawing their own candidate, Maurice Thorez.

Popular Republican circles indicated Auriol would be acceptable to them as a candidate, and it was then up to the Communists to accept or reject Auriol.

Radical-Socialist View

The Radical-Socialist parliamentary group said it would not support Auriol, declaring in favor of Gouin.

The Constituent Assembly, meeting briefly, voted to go into session tomorrow to elect a successor to de Gaulle.

The Communists decision to drop Thorez, secretary-general of the French Communist party for fifteen years, and back Gouin was announced in a communiqué.

Tripartite Government

The communiqué said the Socialists had clung to their demand for a tripartite government, and thus had turned down a Communist proposal to join in a Communist-led two-party government. The Popular Republican party (MRP) refused to join any government headed by a Communist, the communiqué added.

The Communists described Gouin as "above parties," pointing out that he had been elected head of the Assembly unanimously.

The Constituent Assembly was scheduled to meet late today to set a date for the election of de Gaulle's successor.

2 Socialists Supported For French Presidency

Paris, Jan. 22 (AP)—The Socialist party voted unanimously today to propose General de Gaulle's former Minister of State, Socialist Vincent Auriol, as new President of the French Provisional Government.

The vote by the Socialist parliamentary group came after the Communists had failed to win support either from the conservative Popular Republicans or the Socialists ist circles indicated that Gouin, a lawyer who defended former Premier Leon Blum at the Riom trials and who organized the Consultative Assembly at Algiers, did not want to accept the presidency.

The Communists, in advancing the candidacy of Gouin, said their party was "anxious to create the conditions for a rapid termination of the crisis" and had "proposed to the Socialist party the appointment to the presidency of the Government of a figure who appears above parties."

NAZIS STRIPPED FRANCE OF FOOD, ARMY COURT TOLD

NUERNBERG, Jan. 22 — (AP) Nazi plunder directly and indirectly caused the deaths of hundreds of thousands of French people and seriously damaged the health of the nation for generations to come, the French war crimes prosecution told the International Military Tribunal today.

Prosecutor Charles Gerthoffer, glaring at the Nazi defendants, charged that starvation diet and privations during the occupation were the immediate causes of 150,000 French deaths, and contributed to the deaths of countless thousands of others.

Maladies Strike

"Incurable maladies such as tuberculosis developed and will continue to expand their ravages for a long time to come," Gerthoffer said. "The growth of infants and adolescents is seriously compromised; the future of the race gives rise to great concern."

The Nazis rigged Franco-German "trade" as a one-way street to drain millions of francs worth of goods and services into the Reich, the prosecutor said. They seized 80 per cent of the nation's livestock feed, 60 per cent of its eggs, 56 per cent of its champagne, and left France on a slow-starvation diet, Gerthoffer charged.

He said the nation was drained to an incredible extent of clothing, industrial products, textiles, trucks and manufactured goods under a pretext of exchanging the goods for raw materials, but that in fact German raw materials were processed into articles shipped back into the Reich.

"If other German crimes such as deportations, murders, assassinations and massacres make one shake with horror, the crime which consists of knowingly starving entire populations is not less odious," Gerthoffer said.

He quoted reports showing that the daily ration of food in France fell as low as 850 calories daily, at a time when millions of tons of foodstuffs were being shipped into Germany. He said the Germans themselves had reported after World War I that a diet as low as 1,700 calories was "slow starvation leading to death."

Germans Well Fed

By contrast, he said, "for four years the German was not cold. He was not undernourished, but on the contrary he was well fed, warmly clothed and well shod with products stolen in occupied countries."

Belgium likewise was plundered, the French prosecutor said. In that nation the Nazis seized the bulk of the huge textile output and then purchased the machinery cheaply at forced sales, when factories ran out of raw materials, he said.

The French prosecution's presentation will be interrupted tomorrow to permit United States prosecutors to offer their individual case against Deputy Propaganda Minister Hans Fritzsche, and the British their evidence against former Foreign Minister Constantin von Neurath, Diplomat Franz von Papen and former Deputy Fuehrer Rudolf Hess.

600,000 DEATHS LAID TO 30 NAZIS

JAN 23 1946

Doctors Accused of Murder of Unproductive Workers.

Nuernberg, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Thirty Nazi doctors are being sought by the Allied authorities to answer charges that in five years, from 1940 to 1945, they slaughtered 600,000 "unproductive people" and "useless eaters" for the sake of the German war effort.

The authorities, acting on information contained in confiscated papers in the hands of the American prosecutors at the war crimes trials, said they were seeking the identification and apprehension of the medical men who covered up scientific murder operations under the guise of asylum care. The papers show that insane persons were the first to die when the program got under way in 1940, but that later the only requirement for death was inability to work. The former Attorney-General of Dresden, not identified by name, charged as early as 1940 that the victims included many who were "only a little crippled."

Assistant Prosecutor Robert M. Kempner of Lansdowne, Pa., in charge of prosecuting Wilhelm Frick, former Minister of the Interior and controller of the infamous "welfare" institutions, said that the papers showed that the first such slaughterhouse was opened in Berlin in 1939. It was staffed by physicians and nurses recruited by a clique of five doctors, the documents said, who imposed an oath of silence which promised "sights and experiences you have never had before."

Tell of Industrial Looting.

About 15 per cent of those slain in the institutions, manned by twenty-five other doctors and scattered throughout Germany in old castles, were cripples and about 10 per cent were insane, while the remainder were regarded as unproductive and therefore better off dead, the papers said. Cremation ovens and gas chambers later used in death camps in other parts of Europe were said to have been perfected by these doctors.

Earlier, the prosecution presented a report showing that the Germans seized the bulk of Belgium's huge textile output after the occupation and then purchased the machinery at forced sales and bargain rates.

To justify their control of Belgian industry, the Nazi military administration introduced a new interpretation of the Hague Convention, to the effect that modern war is total and not local and that, therefore, requisitions made under the authority of the convention could not be confined to local areas, prosecutors said.

To aid their economic pillage of Belgian industry, Prosecutor Henri Delpech asserted, the Nazis closed plants "useless for the objectives of war."

Iron Works Closed

From January to March of 1943, he said, 400 of 2,000 iron works were thus closed and their machinery was eventually sent to Germany. In the textile industry, 360 of 2,164 plants were thus closed in that period, Delpech added.

The German report on operations in Belgium showed that in five months ending in April, 1943, the Nazis took away 18,865 units of work clothing, 8,350 brassieres, 1,743,000 pieces of elastic ribbon and 369,032 pairs of women's hose.

French Say Nazis Ignored Pact

Nuernberg, Jan. 22 (AP)—The French-German armistice of 1940 was just another "scrap of paper" to the Nazis when their occupying forces set out to control France's wealth and economic resources, the French prosecution charged today before the International Military Tribunal.

Prosecutor Henri Gerthoffer told the tribunal that the Germans deliberately distored the terms of the armistice to gain control of French industry and put the nation's production at the disposal of the Nazi war machine.

"Simultaneously, by ruse and by violence they attempted to cloak their criminal actions behind a mask of legality," he said. "To do this they flagrantly abused the armistice conventions."

HITLER IS FATHER, NAZI GIRL CLAIMS

HERFORD, Germany, Jan. 22—(AP) An attractive 18-year-old girl who insists she is the daughter of Adolf Hitler is being held by British military government authorities.

A British army psychiatrist who questioned her said her general intelligence appears to be about average, but that he believed her claim to be Hitler's daughter may be a "hysferical phenomenon with little or no truth or reality in it."

The girl, who gave her name as Gotelind Tortensen, said her mother, now dead, was a Swedish actress and was Hitler's mistress in the late twenties.

Described as a violent Nazi who hates British and Americans, the girl is being held in an internment camp near Paderborn as a security suspect and also for thorough interrogation regarding her story of her relationship to Hitler. She was picked up in the Magdeburg area for boasting openly that she had shot an American officer for trying to seduce her.

The girl told interrogators she was educated at the Adolf Hitler school in the Tempelhof area of Berlin. When she was 14, she said, Hitler told her in the presence of Hermann Goering and Heinrich Himmler that she was Hitler's daughter, "conceived by ordinary means." She said she was employed in the Reichs-Chancellery as a secretary.

Hitler was wounded in 1916 in the First World War, and intelligence officers say they have found evidence that due to an operation in 1929 for this wound Hitler lost his procreative powers.

Says She's Hitler's Daughter

18-year-old Girl, Held by British, Claims Her Mother Was Fuehrer's Mistress in '20s.

Herford, Germany, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—British authorities are holding an attractive 18-year-old girl, Gotelind Tortensen, who asserts that Hitler was her father.

During numerous interrogations since her arrest in the Magdeburg area, she has insisted that her mother was a Swedish actress, who was Hitler's mistress in the late 1920's. She said her mother and Hitler met frequently in Vienna and that the mother now is dead.

The girl is an ardent Nazi with a violent hatred for Americans and British. She is being held in an internment camp near Paderborn as a security suspect. She asserts that she was employed in the Reich Chancellery as a secretary, that Hitler saw her every day and treated her affectionately as his daughter.

Says Hitler Told Her.

She was educated, she said, in the Adolf Hitler School in the Templehof section of Berlin. She asserted that when she was 14 years old, she was told by Hitler in the presence of Hermann Goering and Heinrich Himmler, since a suicide, that Hitler was her father and she was "conceived by ordinary means."

Hitler was wounded in 1915. British intelligence found evidence that following an operation for the wound in 1929, the German leader lost his procreative powers.

The Tortensen girl said the association between Hitler and her mother was well known to high-ranking Germans.

The girl said that shortly before Berlin fell, she was sent to Magdeburg with dispatches for a Werewolf formation in that city. She was in uniform and carried a pistol. The girl first was arrested for boasting openly that she had shot an American officer who had tried to seduce her. The case never was proved.

She has been held because of her violent Nazi sympathies and also for thorough investigation of her story that she is Hitler's daughter. A British Army psychiatrist said her general intelligence appeared to be about average but that in his opinion, her claim of being Hitler's daughter may be a "hysterical phenomenon with little or no truth or reality in it."

Russ Papers Play Down Reich Vote

Berlin, Jan. 22 (AP)—Das Volk, Berlin organ of the Social Democratic party which won Sunday's local elections in Greater Hesse, had not appeared at noon today, hours after its scheduled time, and inquirers were told "it has not yet been passed by Russian censors."

Because Berlin newspapers do not publish on Monday, accounts of the first elections in the American occupation zone were delayed until today. American, British and French papers blazoned the Social Democratic victory and the Communists' poor showing. Russian-controlled papers carried but brief accounts of the results.

The voting for councils was only in towns of less than population.

PATTERSON IS BERLIN

Berlin, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Secretary of War Patterson expressed sympathy today with the wishes of soldiers to go home, but said he believes there is a growing consciousness among Americans of their obligations in preserving the peace.

Patterson, here for one day on a world tour, said the War Department hopes the army of occupation will eventually be composed of volunteers. Adding that there is a very urgent need for fixing Germany's western boundaries and creating a central administration for the Reich, he indicated that concessions may be made to break the impasse with France.

Patterson Reaches Berlin

Berlin, Jan. 22 (AP)—Secretary of War Patterson arrived in Berlin today on his world tour. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, commander of United States forces in Europe, and Lieut. Gen. Lucius Clay, deputy military governor, met him at the Tempelhof airdrome.

KILLS SOVIET OFFICER

Vienna, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Sgt Shirley B. Dickson of Toledo Ohio, a railway guard on a special train between Salzburg and Vienna, shot and killed a Russian captain and wounded a Russian lieutenant on the night of January 14 when the two boarded the American train without authorization, United States Army headquarters said today.

The incident is under investigation. A court martial is expected within a week to bring out details.

The two Russians first boarded the train with a number of Russian enlisted men, headquarters said. They left when told the train was for American troops only, but the officers returned. Witnesses said Dickson shot in the belief that one of the Russians was drawing a gun.

HOSTAGES FREED BY GREEK REBELS

ATHENS, Jan. 22.—(AP) Martial law in the mountainous Kalamata region of Greece, invoked when a band of Right Wing insurgents held nearly 100 hostages for two days, will remain in effect for several weeks, an army official announced tonight.

The hostages were released today after British Col. Max Noble negotiated with insurgent leaders in a mountain village to which the right-wingers, identified as members of a group of Monarchists known as "Xitos," had fled. Six hostages were killed while trying to escape the insurgents, released hostages reported.

Release of the hostages was announced in time for government commanders to countermand an order to storm the rebel bastion.

Col. Noble said no concessions were made to effect the release of the prisoners and that those who took part in the uprising would be sought.

The ministry of public order said fragmentary reports early in the day indicated that only about 500 of the original rebel force of some 3,000 armed men, most of them uniformed, remained in the mountain positions near Kalamai, and that the others had dispersed.

A deadline set in a surrender ultimatum to the holdouts passed at 4 p. m. today (9 a. m., E.S.T.), with no indications that they were about to give up.

The outbreak, which the Government said had approached a state of anarchy in the area, was attributed to reprisals by members of the X organization, a royalist group, for the reported slaying by Communists last week of four royalists. Government reinforcements, rushed to the area yesterday, restored order in Kalamata.

Greek Rebels Free 46 Hostages

Government Reports Only 500 of Original 3000 Are Holding Out in Village.

Athens, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Insurgent Monarchists barricaded in a village near Kalamai (Kalamata) in the south of Greece, released forty-six hostages today and Government troops countermanded an order to storm the stronghold. The rebels were previously reported to have killed eight of 150 hostages they seized on Sunday.

The Ministry of Public Order said only about 500 of the original force of 3,000 remained in the barricades of a village ten miles from the Peloponnesus seaport of Kalamai (Kalamata).

The revolt broke Sunday when the Royalists freed thirty-two suspects from the Kalamai jail where they were being held after the slaying of four supporters of the Left Wing EAM (National Liberation Front).

Stamatis Merkouris, Minister of Public Order, said attempts to persuade the rebels to free their hostages had failed. All the captives belong to the laboring or little bourgeois classes and are from a refugee settlement near Kalamai, the Minister said.

The rebels were given an ultimatum by Government military forces to "surrender or face attack" by late afternoon, but those remaining appeared to have rejected the order.

order.

[The Moscow radio broadcast a Tass report asserting that Kalamai was "virtually in the hands" of the monarchists and that "monarchist gangs from the neighboring country are streaming toward Kalamai, where some detachments of national guards are resisting the rebels."

Reports On Sparta

[The Russian report said: "Shooting also is going on in Sparta, where the monarchists seized part of the town." The Greek Government denied there were any disorders in Sparta and said complete calm existed there.

[The Russian report also said that "slanderous rumors, spread lately by the monarchist press, to the effect that Communists were preparing a rebellion and intensification of terror throughout the country, prove that events in the Peloponnesus are part of a plan prepared by monarchist-Fascist organizations."]

General Strike Urged

The political situation was complicated by an announcement by the KKE, political bureau of the Left Wing party, urging the people to proclaim a general strike and take up arms. The statement also accused the British of arming Right Wing elements and thus causing "monarcho-Fascist terrorism in Greece."

Order was finally restored in Kalamai after the port had been placed under martial law and the Greek destroyer Crete had opened fire on the Monarchists. Merkouris rushed a battalion of motorized troops and 200 additional police to the city.

After withdrawing to the mountain village, ten miles northwest of Kalamai, the Monarchists turned down pleas by the bishop and mayor of the port for release of the hostages.

Government estimates originally placed the number of hostages seized at 200, and said that eight had been executed.

Pope Has U.S. Man Study Yugoslavia

Vatican City, Jan. 22 (AP)—Pope Pius XII has delegated to an American prelate the task of studying the situation of the Catholic Church in Yugoslavia, where the Vatican Information Service has repeatedly charged persecution of the clergy.

The prelate is Msgr. Joseph Patrick Hurley, of St. Augustine, Fla., who flew to Belgrade yesterday to take over his duties as regent apostolic nuncio.

A Vatican source said Msgr. Hurley would examine the situation in Yugoslavia and the Balkans generally, the "region which is under Soviet domination."

"Not Hampered By Fear"

Msgr. Hurley departed two days after the Pope issued an encyclical charging there was no religious freedom in Ruthenia, which is now under the Soviet Government.

The Vatican source said the choice of an American was dictated by the fact that "an American prelate is not hampered by fear of repercussions to his country if he takes a strong stand in the face of Soviet-directed civil authorities."

"An American is also likely to be more objective in his considerations since he has no direct interest outside the welfare of Catholicism," the source said.

He described the Catholic situation in Yugoslavia as "not very clear at present."

Recently, Msgr. Enrico Pucci's Vatican service asserted that 615 priests had been slain in Yugoslavia

Italy-U. S. Air Mail Suspends

ROME, Jan. 22 (AP)—American Army postal authorities said today that air mail service between Italy and the United States has been suspended. It was understood the action was taken because of a backlog of passengers and air mail at Casablanca. Rome to Paris flights were not affected, and Army authorities sought permission to send outgoing air mail via that route.

Pope Receives Eichelberger

ROME, Jan. 22 (AP)—Pope Pius XII gave a private audience today to Lieut. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, commander of the United States ground forces in Japan, and Maj. Gen. S. J. Chamberlain, who also has been stationed in Japan. Both were on their way back to Japan from the United States.

TASS UPBRAIDS U. S. ON KOREAN EVENTS

Says Toleration of Protests on Trusteeship Is Not Friendly to Soviet

MOSCOW, Jan. 22 (AP)—A dispatch of the Soviet news agency Tass published here today accused the United States military command in southern Korea of permitting anti-Soviet propaganda and inspiring protests against the decisions of the Moscow conference of Foreign Ministers.

The dispatch, dated Jan. 19 from Heijo, Korea [chief city of the northern, or Soviet zone] said the "reactionary press" in southern Korea was carrying on similar attacks "completely unpunished," and added:

"Here the behavior of the American command in southern Korea astonishes one. It has assumed a position of inspiring reactionary demonstrations against the decisions of the Moscow conference of Foreign Ministers, in which, as is known, the Government of the United States participated."

A five-year trusteeship for Korea under the United States, Russia, China and Britain, looking toward ultimate independence, was among the decisions reached at the Moscow conference. The decision touched off widespread agitation in Korea against trusteeship.

Tass said "many reports come in from southern Korea about the provocative activity of the counterfeit government of Kim Koo and Syngman Rhee." It charged these activities were directed against the Moscow conference and were aimed at starting civil war inside the country and at inflaming hostility toward the Soviet Union."

Dr. Kim Koo and Dr. Syngman Rhee set up a provisional government in exile while the Japanese occupied their country. Although both have returned to Korea, their government is not recognized. The Moscow decisions called for establishment of a provisional Korean democratic government to develop industry, transport, agriculture and national culture, with the cooperation of the two-power commission.

Leftist groups in Korea have accused the Kim Koo group of misleading the people by inspiring demonstrations against the trusteeship decision.

The Tass dispatch said it was known that on Jan. 7 at Seoul representatives of the Communist, People's National and Democrat parties held an extraordinary conference to evolve a joint statement on the Moscow decisions affecting Korea, and that this meeting censured acts of terrorism as weapon of political struggle.

Tass said that although representatives of the Korean Democratic party signed the three-party statement at Seoul, "the reactionary leadership" of the party later stated its representatives had no authority to sign and sought to make it appear that the Democratic party did not agree with the Moscow decisions.

Anti-Red Propaganda Campaign Laid To Yanks In Korea

Moscow, Jan. 22 (AP)—The official Soviet news agency Tass today accused the United States military command in southern Korea of inspiring "reactionary" protests against the Moscow Conference of Foreign Ministers.

In a dispatch from Heijo, Korea, Tass assailed the "reactionary press" of southern Korea for allegedly carrying on an anti-Soviet propaganda campaign and for attacking decision of the United States, Russia and Great Britain to set up a five-year trusteeship in Korea.

"Astonished At U.S. Behavior"

The dispatch then said:

"Here the behavior of the American Command in southern Korea astonishes one. It has assumed a position of inspiring reactionary demonstrations against the decisions of the Moscow Conference of Foreign Ministers in which, as is known, the Government of the United States participated."

The dispatch also attacked what it called "the counterfeit government of Kim Koo and Dr. Syngman Rhee," leaders of the unrecognized provisional government set up in exile, declaring that their activity is "directed against hampering the decisions of the Moscow Conference of Foreign Ministers on Korea, on starting a civil war inside the country, and on inflaming hostility toward the Soviet Union."

[Kim Koo is president of the Korean Provisional Government.]

Refers To Seoul Conference

Tass said that on January 7 in the city of Seoul representatives of the Communist, Peoples' National and Democratic parties met to work out a joint statement on the Moscow decision, but that the "reactionary leadership" of the Democratic party later repudiated the statement.

These leaders, the dispatch said, declared that the representatives who signed the statement had not been authorized by the Democratic party to do so and sought to make it appear that the Democratic party did not agree with the Moscow agreement.

"Not content with this," Tass continued, "Korean eactionaries on January 12 organized a protest demonstration. At the demonstration they defamed all honest Korean patriots.

"Called For Murder"

"They outspokenly called for the murder of the secretary of the Communist party, Pak Hen Men, and the leader of the Peoples' party, Yuo Uk Hiong, and pictured the Soviet Union as a foe of the Korean people, seeking with their slander to stimulate hostility toward the Soviet Union.

"All the reactionary press of southern Korea is carrying on similar propaganda from day to day completely unpunished."

The dispatch concluded by making its reference to the "behavior" of the United States Military Command.

24,000 Reds View Body of Lenin

Moscow, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Twenty-four thousand persons viewed the embalmed body of Nikolai Lenin, founder of the Soviet State, in Red Square yesterday on the twenty-second anniversary of his death, an official statement said today.

Troops on the Move In Palestine

Jerusalem, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—A Reuters dispatch from Haifa reported military operations involving several thousand troops today over thirty-five miles of Palestine's main coastal road area between Haifa and Jaffa. There was no official explanation.

Authorities and troops continued investigation of Saturday night incidents in which an army officer and a police official were killed. Several hundred persons were detained for questioning.

POPULATION OF SOVIET REPORTED 193 MILLION

MOSCOW, Jan. 22 — (AP) G. F. Alexandrov, chief of the propaganda section of the Communist Party's Central committee, said in a speech today that the Soviet Union's population now totals 193,000,000. Of this number, he added, 100,000,000 were born after the October revolution in 1917.

(The census of Jan. 17, 1939, gave the population of the then 11 Soviet republics as 170,465,572. Since then Russia has absorbed parts of prewar Poland and Bessarabia, and created five new republics — the Karelo-Finnish Soviet Socialist republic, the Moldavian republic, and the Soviet Republics of Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania.)

NEW FIGHT ERUPTS IN NORTH IRAN

Rebels Said To Have Slain Fifty In Attack On Loyal Tribesmen

Tehran, Iran, Jan. 22 (AP)—News dispatches today said 50 persons were killed and 100 wounded in a conflict between "revolutionaries" and Zulfaghari tribesmen near Yangikand, in Khamsi province of Russian-occupied northern Iran.

The newspaper Ettelaat said the "revolutionaries first suffered heavy casualties but after receiving reinforcements, including armored cars and machine guns, they drove the Zulfagharis into their villages which they sacked."

Tribesmen Called Loyal

The tribesmen were said by the newspaper to be loyal to the Tehran Government. The newspaper described the "revolutionaries" as insurgent partisans.

The dispatches said the Zulfagharis barricaded themselves in the village of Yangikand and sent for reinforcements from Hamadan, about 100 miles southeast of Tehran.

"Landowners and tribal chiefs there have sworn on the Koran that they would fight to the last for Iran," the newspaper declared.

Parliament Postponed

Meanwhile, a secret session of the Iranian Parliament, called for today to elect a new premier, was postponed because of a lack of a quorum. Some deputies said a successor to Ibrahim Hakimi, who resigned Sunday, would not be elected before Saturday or Sunday.

Parliamentary supporters of Qavam es Altaneh, large landowner and thrice Premier of Iran, predicted his election to head the Government, asserting "he is the only man who can negotiate with Russia."

Assured Of Hearing

In an interview, Altaneh declared he had been "assured that Moscow will hear my presentation of the Persian problem."

"But," he added, "I have no assurance as to Soviet reception of my proposals."

Altaneh said that, if he is named Premier, he would seek direct negotiations with both Russia and the insurgent Azerbaijanian government but would "recognize fully and give continued support to Iran's representatives now before the United Nations Organization's Security Council in London."

Denies Envoy Took Pay

London, Jan. 22 (AP)—An Iranian Embassy spokesman said today there was "no foundation" to charges which the Soviet news agency Tass said had been published by a Tehran newspaper that Seyed Hassan Taqizadeh, Iranian Ambassador to London, accepted money to prolong British oil concessions in Iran.

Tass quoted the newspaper Shakhbaz as saying Taqizadeh had received a salary for assisting the British and questioning whether "receiving a salary from an oil company could be called service in the interests of Iran." The paper, Tass said, was commenting on a speech in the Iranian Parliament which praised Taqizadeh.

CHINESE AGREE ON NEW REGIME ALONG U.S. LINES

CHUNGKING, Jan. 22 — (AP) Conferees fashioning blueprints for a peace-time China agreed today on plans to nationalize the army and remodel the government somewhat along lines of the American system.

A spokesman for the national military council said, meanwhile, that all fighting had ceased in strategic Jehol Province and had been fairly well localized elsewhere.

Some of the persistent clashes, he added, were in progress "practically within earshot" of executive headquarters at Peiping, where a bi-partisan commission is sending out truce teams to sore spots.

Marshall Meets Chiang

Gen. George C. Marshall, special presidential envoy, conferred during the day with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, reportedly on methods of squelching the last embers of civil strife.

With most of its work unfinished, the Political Consultation (Unity) Conference voted to prolong its sessions, originally scheduled to end tomorrow, by five or six days.

The subcommittee assigned to draft a new constitution agreed to enlarge the present One-Party (Kiomintang or National) Legislative Yuan (Council) and make it similar to the U. S. House of Representatives.

The existing control Yuan would became a sort of Senate—but without legislative power—and the judicial Yuan would become a Supreme Court.

Final revision of the constitution would be checked to a committee of 35 members representing all factions, which would have to finish its work within two months.

The draft then would be laid before the National Assembly, scheduled to meet May 5, which would have only the power to adopt it. Thereafter, the assembly would be abolished and the Yuans set up under the constitution would take over.

Sop to Reds

(This apparently would erase Communist objections to the May 5 assembly, called to consider a new constitution. The Communists hold that the assembly would be packed with Kuomintang delegates.)

Another subcommittee at work on immediate plans for nationalizing the army agreed to replace the National Military Council, now composed entirely of Kuomintang members, with a ministry of defense in which all parties would participate. This was a government authority of Chiang, who is council chairman.

The subcommittee also agreed that all ranks in the armed forces should give up any party connections and that party indoctrination should be eliminated from military education.

GEN. MARSHALL VISITS CHIANG

Truce Violations Believed Subject of Meeting.

Chungking, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Gen. George C. Marshall conferred with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek today for an hour. Although there was no immediate announcement, it was believed they discussed means of ending violations of the truce in China's civil strife. Meanwhile, the armistice commission at Peiping directed opposing troops to withdraw promptly at least twenty miles from points of combat.

Meanwhile a member of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist party, in custody four years, was released today—the first such action under Chiang's pledge of January 10 to free political prisoners. Liao Shen-chi, the party's representative in Hongkong prior to the Pearl Harbor attack, was arrested attempting to return to Communist-controlled territory. The party has long and insistently demanded his release.

Executive headquarters of the new armistic commission at Peiping has ordered both Communist and Government forces in zones of conflict to withdraw at least twenty miles, or one full day's march. As soon as the forces break off fighting and are separated, the new directive specifies, they are to retire to positions they held on the night of January 13—the time the truce originally was designed to become effective.

U. S. Planes Aid Truce.

Stories of truce violations—confirmed and unconfirmed—continued to deluge headquarters, it was reported, and American Army and Marine planes were busy scattering cease-fire leaflets throughout five provinces of north and central China. They have showered some 215,000 on thirty-one towns and were scheduled to distribute many more thousands today.

Armistice commission headquarters reported dispatch of a mobile field team from Shanghai to Canton—the first truce team to be assigned south of the Yangtze River. It was the eighth team to visit the field.

There were growing indications, meanwhile, that Marshall might be called in as arbiter of Government reorganization issues now being debated by subcommittees of the Political Consultative Conference in Chungking.

IDLE IN SHANGHAI BEAT U. S. SAILORS

Shanghai, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Several American sailors were beaten up by unemployed Chinese today during a demonstration in protest against the Municipal Government.

The sailors, in a Navy truck loaded with supplies, were trying to get into a side street from the Bund. Between 10,000 and 20,000 Chinese were marching five abreast with banners accusing the Shanghai authorities of failure to solve the unemployment problem and witnesses said that the Chinese swarmed over the truck, beating several sailors and hurling pieces of broken bottles at others. They rejoined the parade, however, when Navy Shore Patrolmen drew pistols.

No sailor was injured seriously.

The demonstrators' banners urged the Municipal Government to re-open war-closed factories and permit "freedom" in the organization of labor unions.

2 Die In Yenan Of Meningitis

Yenan, China, Jan. 22 (AP)—An epidemic of cerebral spinal meningitis has claimed two lives in this Chinese Communist citadel, public health officials reported today.

Eighteen patients have been admitted to Bethune Peace Hospital here. Special precautions have been taken in the compound of the group of American observers, since discovery of one case among villagers who live in a series of caves only a few yards away.

Health authorities have sent an emergency call to Chungking for penicillin and vaccines. Current infections have occurred mostly in children, among families with low standards of hygiene.

Border region authorities described the situation as "grave" and ordered all public meetings suspended for ten days.

The Communist 8th Route Army sent its surgeon general to the American observers' quarters to supervise precautionary measures—which included issuance of protective nose and mouth masks and sulfa drugs.

The American group includes two officers and ten men but no doctors.

Japanese in Annam Ranks Slain

SAIGON, French Indo-China, Jan. 22 (AP)—Headquarters of Maj. Gen. Jacques P. Leclerc, French commander in Indo-China, said today that seventeen Japanese, including one officer, were killed fighting in Annamese ranks when the French drove rapidly south fro mthe captured port of Hatien, on the Gulf of Siam, and occupied Baclieu and Longmy.

JAPS PLAN BLOW AT BLACK MARKET

To Block Supplies Of Farmers Sabotaging Rice Program

Tokyo, Jan. 22 (AP)—The Japanese Government got ready today to crack down on the black market in rice—basic food crop of this nation—by withholding fertilizers and farm machinery from farmers sabotaging the legal food marketing program.

Farmers currently sell rice to government purchasing agents on a voluntary basis, for resale to the public in rationed quantities at fixed prices. But only 32 per cent of the crop has been reaching the consumer in this way. The rest is sold on the black market at prices many times the official rate.

To Combat Serious Crisis

Wataru Narahashi, chief secretary of the cabinet, said the government was forced to take strong action to prevent a "serious crisis" in food, and to make possible the importation of supplemental foodstuffs from abroad.

The ministries of finance and commerce meanwhile collaborated on a plan to force wealthy Japanese to sel lhoarded stocks of goods accumulated in an effort to evade taxation.

Orders Zaibatsu Data

General MacArthur ordered the Government to provide detailed information concerning fourteen Zaibatsu (family monopolies) and eighteen major holding companies, including the names of major officers and of peers holding more than one per cent of the stock.

The purge of ultranationalists from Japan's administrative machinery also continued as more than 20 prefectural governors and 33 top members of the Home Ministry resigned.

ALLIES DEMAND DETAILED DATA ON JAP FIRMS

New Order Is Aimed at 14 Monopolies and 18 Holding Companies.

53 WAR OFFICIALS HAVE QUIT

Purge Is Continuing—Civilians With Clear Records Will Be Named Governors.

Tokyo, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—The Japanese Government was ordered today to provide detailed information concerning fourteen Zaibatsu (family monopolies) and eighteen major holding companies. Allied headquarters submitted a series of questions, including one of how the Zaibatsu perpetuated their controls. The Government was ordered to produce a list of major officers of Zaibatsu companies holding positions January 1 and the holders of more than 1 per cent of stock in such companies.

Major S. W. Wheeler of Haworth, N. J., chief of the economic and scientific section and the anti-trust and cartels division of headquarters, said the order was intended to complete information on Japan's leading industrial families and the extent of inter-company relationships.

Zaibatsu families involved are Mitsui, Iwasaki (Mitsubishi interests), Sumitomo, Yasuda, Kawasaki, Asano, Nakajima (aircraft interests), Shibusawa, Furukawa, Okura, Nomura, Noguchi, Aikawa, (Manchurian interests,) and Okochi.

It was the largest list of Zaibatsu families thus far identified by headquarters. Heads of two of the families—Yoshisuke Aikawa and Chikuhei Nakajima—have been named as war criminal suspects.

Wheeler said information on the families will be available to the war crimes section, but that the order did not mean necessarily that there would be a new list of suspects because his department was not involved in war crimes prosecution.

Permits Inheritance.

Meanwhile, Headquarters slightly eased restrictions on transactions of foreign assets by authorizing the Government to permit the inheritance of property held abroad by persons in Japan.

Kyodo news ageny reported that the Cabinet had decided to grant Government officials, a special bonus of two and a half months' pay to meet rising living costs. Government employés will receive a bonus of three months' pay by the end of February.

A new Japanese constitution, vesting sovereignty in the State under the Emperor's supervision, was proposed by the so-called Liberal party. The party's proposal would free the throne "from all legal and political responsibilities."

The purge of Japanese Government's "old guard," ordered by Gen. MacArthur, continued this week as more than twenty prefectural governors and thirty-three top members of the Home Ministry resigned.

The Tokyo newspaper Asahi reported the resignations and said Chuzo Mitsuchi, new Home Minister, would replace the governors with civilians whose political records are untainted. All will be less than 60 years of age. Vacancies within the Home Ministry probably will be filled by young officials whom Mitsuchi says have been denied important posts in the past.

Meanwhile Wataru Narahashi, chief secretary of the Japanese Cabinet, said that a "serious crisis in Japan's food supply has forced inauguration of the compulsory rice purchase program, which has prompted protests from farmers. His statement was issued during today's regular Cabinet meeting. Narahashi said strong reaction against the program has postponed a tentative Government plan to go a step farther and place rice under a Government monopoly.

Asks Co-operation.

Allied Headquarters, said the secretary, has agreed "in principle" to importation of food from abroad, but "unless the Government and people do everything they can, assistance from foreign countries cannot be expected."

Adding to Japan's internal difficulties are disturbances caused by nationals from other countries awaiting repatriation to their homelands. At Nara Lieut.-Col. Ross A. St. Clair, senior Military Government officer, warned 14,000 Koreans, Formosans and Chinese they are bound by Japanese civil law. He cautioned forty-five delegates of the non-Japanese nationals after American troops were called out twice in two days to restore order. The incidents resulted in the arrest of thirty-five Formosans and nine Chinese, along with seventeen Japanese, and the confiscation of trucks containing foodstuffs and clothing the Army said was intended for black market sale.

Reported attempts by the Japanese press to evade censorship regulations brought the warning from Kyodo news agency that American censors "are wise" to such moves and "are very displeased."

Kyodo referred to recent stories in Japanese newspapers tending to imply that a number of recent crimes were committed by Allied personnel. Press censorship forbids publication of inaccurate or misleading items that might incite resentment against occupation troops.

Allied headquarters yesterday directed the Japanese Government to establish a customs office at Yokohama to administer controls over funds taken out of Japan by Allied and neutral nations. The order does not apply to Allied military or accredited personnel.

2 Movies A Week Slated For Hirohito

Tokyo, Jan. 22 (AP)—An American comedy entertained members of the imperial household today to inaugurate a new program of two movies a week for Emperor Hirohito and his family.

Seven princes and six princesses saw "Kiss and Tell," with Shirley Temple. That is, they saw it until something went wrong with the projector.

Hirohito did not attend the showing, which was in the nature of a test.

The imperial chamberlain's office said it was the first film showing since the surrender. American movies were shown to the imperial family before the war, and during it for as long as the stock of new pictures lasted.

The movie program was arranged at the request of imperial household officials. War films were ruled out.

Matsuoka Now in Jail; Awaits Crimes Hearing

By The Associated Press.

TOKYO, Wednesday, Jan. 23—Yosuke Matuoka, former Foreign Minister, credited with bringing Japan into the Axis' Tripartite Pact, has surrendered at Sugamo Prison to await a hearing on war crimes charges, Allied Headquarters reported today.

He has contended that the Tripartite Pact was an alliance for peace and not for war. The late Prince Fumimaro Konoye charged that Mr. Matsuoka "in a bad mood" blocked crucial prewar negotiations between Japan and the United States.

JAN 23 1946

Camp-Death Story Is Told

Yokohama, Jan. 22 (AP)—A Japanese physician, who kept slipping his feet in and out of his shoes, testified at a war-crime trial today that he signed three death certificates from the Muroran Prison Camp between November, 1943, and March, 1944, but saw only two of the bodies.

Dr. Koji Makae, defense witness in the trial of Kaichi Hirate, former commandant at Muroran, said one of the certificates was for Raymond C. Suttle, British soldier. Hirate is charged with responsibility for the death of Suttle and other Allied prisoners.

Accepts Responsibility

The physician testified that Hirate did not order him to sign any of the certificates, that he did so on "standing orders." He added that Suttle died of pneumonia, but that malnutrition also was included in the death record. Later he said he was not ordered to sign the certificates, but did so "on my own responsibility."

Lieut. Joe B. Humphreys, of Crockett, Texas, assistant prosecutor, asserted that that testimony "is different than you gave a little while ago."

"Why is it?" asked the physician, appearing mildly surprised. There was laughter in the courtroom.

Another Trial In Session

In the concurrent trial of Hiroji Honda, a civilian interpreter testified that prisoners at the Sendai camp were beaten and their treatment "was not very good." Honda was commander of the Sendai camp.

The witness, Yoshikaku Neuchi, questioned by Capt. Edward G. Howard, of Brookline, Mass., testified prisoners complained to him frequently about the hot and heavy work at the camp.

GIRL BAND IN AIR CRASH

All in Sharon Rogers' Party Are Picked Up Off Kyushu

YOKOHAMA, Japan, Jan. 22 (AP)—Sharon Rogers and her eleven-girl orchestra were rescued from the sea by Japanese fishermen today after a transport plane crashed off the southern tip of Kyushu Island while they were returning to Japan from Korea.

Everyone was saved, but an unnamed drummer suffered a fractured leg and the others were bruised. The plane struck the water about fifty feet from an ammunition barge and sank within twelve minutes.

"The coolness of the pilot saved us all from death," said Miss Rogers, whose dance band just concluded a three-month tour of Korea and Japan. It was returning to Yokohama to board a ship for the United States.

Miss Rogers and the eleven other girls in her orchestra are from Chicago, according to the office here of USO Camp Shows. The USO office added that others in the group were Miss Alice Strickland of Duluth, Ga., an acrobatic dancer, and John Burton and Miss Freda Kay, both of Los Angeles, a comedy dance team.

Jap Statue An Arsenal

Nara, Japan, Jan. 22 (AP)—Nara's great bronze statue of Buddha—largest in the world—is waiting to be "demilitarized."

American troops discovered the Japanese had stored 100 cases of military supplies near the 53½-foot idol, which attracted thousands of prewar tourists to this city, Japan's first capital.

In the past week Japanese police also have confiscated 57 pistols, 2,306 rifles, 96 machine guns, 52 mortars, 659 hand grenades and 7,200 Japanese swords.

Japs Give Up, Deny Knowing War Is Over

Honolulu, Jan. 22 (AP)—The Navy News has reported that five more Japanese who said they did not know the war was over came out of the jungles of Guam and surrendered.

More than five months after Japan's surrender, American military personnel on Guam still is being warned to stay out of the jungles, the paper said.

WAINWRIGHT LAYS BLAME TO HOMMA

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright holds Lieut.-Gen. Masaharo Homma "responsible" for the infamous Death March and other Japanese atrocities in the Philippines.

At his first news conference yesterday, after taking command of the Fourth Army at Fort Sam Houston here Saturday, the hero of Corregidor branded as a "lie" the statement of a Japanese lieutenant who said his prison camp was run so well that "I even received words of praise from Gen. Wainwright."

The Jap officer, Lieut. Kei Yuri, was speaking of the Omuta camp on Kyushu Island.

"I was never in the camp he mentions," Wainwright said.

Wainwright was a prisoner of the Japanese from May, 1942, to August, 1945. He said he was treated "very well" at one prison camp, but added that "at no place were we ever given good food."

DAMAGED VESSEL IS BRINGING G. I.'S

Argentia, N. F., Jan. 22 (A. P.)—With 585 happy homeward bound G. I.'s aboard, the troop ship Henry Baldwin, which narrowly escaped disaster in the stormy North Atlantic last week, headed for New York today, her damage temporarily patched.

The Liberty ship was 100 miles off Cape Race January 15 when she cracked across the main deck three-quarters of the way aft during an eighty-mile gale which tossed up mountainous seas.

The troops were unaware of their danger until some hours after the damage occurred, when their commanding officer, Major Harold Goldman of Buffalo, informed them. Even then the soldiers were more annoyed at the delay than frightened. All volunteered for emergency duty and moved ballast forward from aft of the crack. The United States Coast Guard cutter Modoc escorted the Baldwin to the port, where the damage was repaired. She is due in New York Friday evening.

Government Official Says

CIO HEADS REFUSE TO PLEDGE RETURN IF TRUMAN ACTS

Union Makes No Promise to Resume Working at Chicago.

JAN 23 1946

FACT-FINDING BEGINS

Companies Ask That Data Supplied by Them Be Held Confidential.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—(AP)—Assistant Secretary of Labor John W. Gibson said tonight the government would seize strike-bound meat packing plants and White House sources indicated the order would go out tomorrow.

This action to end an already widely-felt meat scarcity will be taken, Gibson said, despite lack of assurances that the C.I.O. meat packers will go to work for the government. A.F.L. meat workers have promised to do so.

C.I.O. Meets Labor Chiefs

Officials of the C.I.O. meat packers, headed by President Lewis Clark, spent the day in conference with Labor department officials. Tonight, Gibson told newsmen the union leaders had "made no commitments" when asked whether their members would go back to work if the government seized the meat plants.

Asked if this would delay the government's move, Gibson replied that it would not; the seizure would take place regardless. At one point he said it was his "understanding" the seizure would be carried out but in response to other question he made the flat statement.

Gibson added that Clark and

More than two-thirds of the strikers are C.I.O. members but an exact breakdown of how many are C.I.O. and how many A.F.L. was not immediately available.

Fact-Finding Panel Opens Hearings

CHICAGO, Jan. 22. — (AP) Fact-finding hearings in the nationwide meat packing industry strike opened here today, shortly before government sources in Washington announced that packing plants would associates were returning to Chicago tonight "for further conferences" with union advisors in an effort to end the week-long strike of 263,000 workers.

Edgar L. Warren, chief of the Federal Conciliation service, told reporters he had been assured by T. J. Lloyd, an official of the A.F.L. Meat Cutters and Butchers Union, that A.F.L. workers would return to work if the government took over.

Strike-Bound Meat Plants Will Be Taken Over Today, be seized by the government—probably tomorrow.

Assistant Secretary of Labor John W. Gibson announced the seizure and White House officials indicated that the order would be sent out tomorrow.

A C.I.O. district director declared, however, the strike strategy committee in his district was opposed to government seizure "unless there are sufficient guarantees the wage demands of the union will be put into effect by the government upon taking over."

C.I.O. Leader Opposed

Herbert March, director of District One, United Packinghouse Workers of America, (C.I.O.), asserted, "Seizure without putting wage increases into effect constitutes strike-breaking action, or, at best, compulsory arbitration."

He said the district comprised 25,000 members and all the Chicago locals of the union.

George A. Eastwood, president of Armour and Company, said he had not been officially informed of the seizure, but he could not "see how such action in itself can settle the wage demands which precipitated the strike."

"The issue," he said, "is not whether wages shall be raised but is really a matter of where money to meet the increased expense can be obtained. That issue is definitely up to the government because it controls our income through ceilings on meat and floors and ceilings on live stock. When the price relief question is satisfactorily decided the wage increase question can be decided at the same time."

After the fact-finding hearing opened and following a White House announcement the seizure had been under consideration, the union's top strategy committee declared any seizure of packing plants was "totally unjust."

A committee statement said any "seizure will actually be playing into the packers' hands."

Some 263,000 packinghouse workers are involved in the strike. The C.I.O. U.P.W. claims 193,000 strikers belong to its union, while 70,000 are members of the A.F.L. Amalgamated Association of Meat Cutters and Butcher Workers of America. The fact hearing opened with industry representatives avoiding the question of opening their books, to the board, but the packers did report on comparative earnings of workers in 1941 and 1945.

Companies Ask Data

Swift and Company said in a statement "we insist that requests for information be germane to the subject of wages."

"We welcome it (government fact finding) to establish such facts as are pertinent to the wage question," Swift said, "but on the other hand, we see no warrant for a fishing expedition."

All five companies represented at the hearings—Swift, Armour, Cudahy, Wilson and Morrell—asked that data supplied by them in the past to government agencies be held confidential. They were assured by Edwin E. Witte, chairman of the panel, that it would be so treated.

Armour and Morrell said they were participating in the hearings with "the intention of full cooperation," but stated they reserved the right to disagree with the findings.

The eight-day-old walkout involves 263,000 packinghouse workers. The fact-finding board is to report its findings to Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach by Feb. 16.

The C.I.O. union is demanding a 17 1-2 cent hourly increase, with an additional 7 1-2 cent hike to be negotiated later. The A.F.L. union asks a $36 weekly minimum and a 40-hour week, and a 20-cent hourly wage increase with all basic wage rates in excess of the minimum to be increased in proportion to the increase in the minimum, retroactive to Nov. 1, 1942.

MEAT PACKERS OPEN TO FACTS

But Swift Sees No Need for 'Fishing Expedition.'

Chicago, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—One big meat packing company said it sees no warrant for a fishing expedition and two other companies reserved the right to disagree with Government findings as fact finding hearings opened today in the nationwide meat strike.

Swift & Co. said in a statement it welcomed Government fact finding to establish such facts as are pertinent to the wage question, but added "on the other hand, we see no warrant for a fishing expedition and we insist that request for information be germane to the subject of wages."

"Techniques, methods and processes do not have any bearing on the sufficiency of wages and have no proper part in any effort to determine what is a fair and just wage," the statement said.

Armour & Co. and the Morrell Packing Company said they were entering the hearings with the intention of full co-operation, buet stated they reserved the right to disagree with the findings.

Would Keep Data Secret.

The five companies represented—Swift, Armour, Cudahy, Wilson and Morrell—requested through individual spokesmen that data supplied by them in the past to Government agencies be held confidential, and Edwin E. Witte, panel chairman, said such data would be so treated.

Witte stated the board did not have to limit itself to wage increases approvable under the cost of living formula, asserting it could recommend changes in the formula and in prices if they found them justified.

The unions—the C. I. O. United Packinghouse Workers of America and the A. F. of L. Amalgamated Association of Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of America—restated their demands. The C. I. O. union is asking a 17½-cent hourly increase, with an additional 7½-cent boost to be negotiated on later. The A. F. of L. union seeks a $36 weekly minimum, and a forty-hour week, with all other basic wage rates in excess of the minimum to be increased in proportion to the increase in the minimum, retroactive to November 1, 1942.

The Swift & Co. spokesman said that since Swift's 10-cent wage increase offer was not accepted by the union it had been withdrawn and no offer now was outstanding. Armour's said it had offered 7½ cents, with no reopening of the contract until its expiration, but since this offer was rejected it also had been withdrawn.

Cost-of-living Formula.

Wilson & Co. said its negotiations with the C. I. O. union always had been within the cost-of-living formula, but stated that during the negotiation period from January, 1941, to September, 1945, the union steadfastly refused to bargain within the formula's limits.

Cudahy said its 5-cent-an-hour increase offer had been rejected by the C. I. O. union and had been withdrawn. Morrell said that it had only met with C. I. O. representatives once and never with A. F. of L. representatives and that "until the Government clarifies the price policy" it could make no offer.

The fact-finding hearings opened as the possibility of government seizure loomed over the meat industry and as reports were circulated that the Government would propose a new price increase on meat sold to civilian wholesalers and to Government purchasers to help packers meet the strikers' wage demands.

Witte is regarded as the key man in any last-minute mediation of the six-day-old walkout involving 263,000 packinghouse workers. The panel must report to Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach by February 16. However, Witte has stated that if the fact finders see a possibility of agreement meanwhile they will attempt to obtain one.

STEEL INDUSTRY AIDED BY TAX LAW, MURRAY CHARGES

JAN 23 1946

Strike Bound Plants Can Remain Idle, Still Make Profit, He Says.

ASKS GOVERNMENT ACT

Wage Demands Would Place Industry 'in Jeopardy,' Fairless Declares.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 22—(AP)—Philip Murray called on the government tonight to remedy present tax laws under which the C.I.O. leader said the strike-bound steel industry could "loaf the rest of the year—remain absolutely idle" and still make $149,000,000 profit.

Murray handed newsmen at a press conference copies of a letter written to Secretary of the Treasury Vinson asking him "as guardian of the U. S. Treasury to take immediate steps to terminate this outrageous condition."

Strike Spreads

Before Murray spoke the impact of the great steel strike, going into its third day and involving 750,000 members of his C.I.O. Steel Workers Union in 29 states, had spread to allied fields.

And in New York Benjamin F. Fairless, president of U. S. Steel, reiterated his contention that Murray's steel wage demands would place the industry "in jeopardy."

Fairless blamed the union, Murray the industry, for the crippling strike.

Murray, saying he had received no word from Washington about any plans of Federal seizure of the idle steel mills, told reporters he wanted to reassure everyone the steel strike will continue until President Truman's proposed 18 1-2 cent an hour increase for steelworkers is granted.

The C.I.O. chief said he saw the present industry-labor situation as a fight to transfer control of the government from Washington to Wall street. That control, he added, had rested in Wall street prior to 1933.

The strike situation itself remained calm. Pickets continued their vigil at gates of some 1,300 steel, fabricating and aluminum plants and bauxite and iron ore mines over the nation. In some areas the pickets walked their posts in near-zero weather.

Murray Comments

Murray commented that he understood Fairless had contended the steel union's wage demands, if granted, would be inflationary. Laughing, Murray said he'd received a letter from Fairless last October saying no wage increase could be granted unless steel prices were increased $13 a ton. In this connection, Murray said he thought a $4 steel price hike would be "reasonable."

Copies of the letter to Vinson went to Majority Leaders Barkley (D.-Ky.) of the Senate and McCormack (D.-Mass.) of the House, as well as to other members of Congress, Murray said.

The letter said the 10 per cent excess taxes refund provision entitles the steel industry to $200,000,000 in rebates. It said "carry-back tax provisions secretly slipped through Congress" will give the industry $149,000,000 more if it fails to make any net profit in 1946.

"This represents guaranteed profits that are 29 per cent above the level of prewar earnings," Murray said concerning the carry-backs.

In addition, he said, $3,500,000,000 in claims have already been filed with the Treasury under another tax provision allowing corporations to change the base period on which their tax is computed. A fourth provision, he said, allows a speed-up in retiring the cost of wartime investment.

By combining these provisions, he said by way of illustration of what he said was a "most outrageous" case, Bethlehem Steel Corporation turned the $22,676,000 profit it made in the third quarter of 1945 into a tax-free profit of $57,656,000, including $34,980,000 from the U. S. Treasury.

Murray said this compared to a 1944 third quarter profit for Bethlehem of $6,622,000 and an average prewar annual profit of only $15,980,000.

The tax law clauses operate as "strike-breaking benefits x x x to high-jack the taxpayers of the United States," Murray declared. He said they affect all corporations, steel or otherwise.

He said he had protested them before the Senate Finance Committee in 1942 and that Chairman George (D-Ga) had agreed similar postwar loss - insurance benefits should be provided for individuals as well as business firms. Murray read to reporters an estimate in the magazine "Catholic Action" that a proportionate insurance proviso would entitle each individual citizen to $18,000 postwar payments. The magazine said that, instead, the average person came out of the war with $300 in savings.

Effects of the almost complete stoppage in steel and aluminum began to be felt in layoffs of railroad and river barge workmen and coal miners.

Fairless Blames Union

U. S. Steel corporation president Fairless said the steel industry had met the wage claims of the 750,000 CIO steelworkers "more than half way" and responsibility for their walkout "rests with the union."

"We did everything reasonably within our power to avert this disastrous steel strike," Fairless told reporters in New York. "Our offer of a wage increase of 15 cents an hour met 75 per cent of the union's proposal." He said the 15-cent increase would have cost the U. S. Steel $60,000,000 a year.

Murray had said in a broadcast here last night the strike was brought on by "an evil conspiracy among American big business" to destroy unions.

Murray contended the industry could afford to pay the 18 1-2 cent increase proposed by President Truman, a figure the union had accepted after first scaling down its original 25-cents per hour demand to 19 1-2 cents. Fairless rejected Mr. Truman's suggested compromise.

"This is not a fight in the selfish interest of the United States Steel corporation," Fairless said. "We feel strongly the responsibility of protecting the consumers — the thousands of fabricators and processors of steel whose very existence would be in jeopardy should we grant the union's demand for such a large and unwarranted wage increase."

Factories depending on steel prepared for eventual shutdowns. In Pittsburgh, members of the Tri-State Industrial Association, met to map plans in the face of fast-dwindling steel inventories, limited by the government to 60-day supply because of the strike.

Murray's Letter to Secretary Vinson

JAN 23 1946

By The Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 22—Following is the text of a letter sent by Philip Murray, CIO president, to Secretary Vinson asking revision of corporation tax provisions:

During the war period several extraordinary tax measures were enacted at the behest of large corporations. The provisions to which I make special reference were not, at the time of their enactment, discussed or analyzed either in committee reports or on the floor of Congress. Certainly the American people were not made aware of their full meaning.

The result under these laws is that the United States Treasury rebates any losses and guarantees a high level of profits through direct cash payments. It has been conservatively estimated by one United States Senator that the moneys to be drawn from the public purse to compensate American industry may run to 20 billions of dollars. This guarantee operates regardless of the reasons or causes for the loss which a business concern may incur.

A direct burden has thus been imposed upon every American taxpayer in order to create special and unjust privileges for the giant industrial corporations.

I shall give you but a few examples drawn from the steel industry as to how present tax laws operate.

Sets Rebate at $200 Millions

1. The Revenue Act of 1942 provides for a 10 per cent post-war refund of the excess tax liability of any one company since 1942. In spite of the tremendous financial resources exacted by the steel corporations as their price for war production, that industry under this law is entitled to a rebate from the United States Treasury of an amount in excess of 200 million dollars.

2. Under carry-back tax provisions secretly slipped through Congress, American industry is guaranteed that if any particular company either breaks even or loses money it will receive refunds that may result in larger net profits than the particular company averaged in the pre-war years.

Assuming that the steel companies in 1946 break even—that is, do not make any net profits—the United States Treasury will actually pay to the industry 149 million dollars. This represents guaranteed profits that are 29 per cent above the level of pre-war earnings.

Under this provision, the United States Steel Corporation will be repaid $67,340,000 though its average net profit after taxes for the pre-war era was $44,732,000.

Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation will be rebated $6,028,750 though its average net profit after taxes for the pre-war period was $2,375,000.

3. Under another tax provision, also slipped by without any publicity at all, industrial concerns may change their so-called base period upon which their taxes are computed by maintaining that the standard period of 1936 to 1939 does not represent a fair basis for the particular company or industry.

Representatives of the Bureau of Internal Revenue state that 3,500,000,000 dollars worth of claims for tax refunds have already been filed on the basis of this one provision, and expect claims in excess of $15,000,000,000 worth of tax rebates.

The United States Steel Corporation very piously maintains that it did not pay any excess profits taxes in 1944. This result was accomplished through the use of the provision that I have just described.

4—Under another tax provision, facilities constructed during the war could be amortized over a five-year period rather than the customary twenty years.

In addition, the tax adjustment act of 1945 authorized the President, following the termination of the war, to issue a proclamation following which companies could amortize whatever portion of the emergency facilities which had not as yet been amortized fully.

Reports Bethlehem "Benefits"

This special tax relief meant the following for the Bethlehem Steel Company:

The Bethlehem Steel Company reported that for the third quarter of 1945 its total income, before taxes, was $22,676,000. This meant that the company had $22,676,000 in profits subject to Federal income and excess profits taxes. But Bethlehem did not pay any taxes on this income.

Bethlehem took advantage of the provision to which I have referred to write off $49,894,000 for amortization of its wartime facilities. This procedure turned its actual profit of $22,676,000 into a paper "loss" before taxes of $27,218,000.

By using the carry back provision of the Wartime Revenue Act, the company obtained a cash refund of $34,980,000 from the Treasury.

This cash refund is of course tax free. Bethlehem paid no taxes on its net income of $22,676,000. Thus for the third quarter of 1945 the profits of Bethlehem were $57,656,000—on which the company paid absolutely no taxes.

This amount should be compared with the third quarter of 1944 when Bethlehem's profits after taxes were only $6,622,000, and for the pre-war era when Bethlehem averaged $15,980,000 a year in profits after taxes.

Under ordinary conditions, the facts which are now being disclosed would arouse the deepest wrath of the American people.

But in addition, the steel industry, as the spokesman for the corporate magnates, and drunk with the fantastic financial resources accumulated during the war, has actually thrown down the gauntlet to the President of the United States. The steel industry, boldly and arrogantly, has rejected a decision made by the President to settle the current wage dispute with the United Steel Workers of America. The issue is not the payment of an additional 3½ cents an hour.

Says Treasury Is Mulcted

The true design of the steel industry is to destroy labor unions and to remain unchallenged in its determined effort to obtain uncontrolled profits. It is being assisted in this attempt with public funds siphoned from the United States Treasury.

The United States Treasury is being mulcted for the benefit of a privileged few bent in sinister conspiracy to plunge the country into economic chaos. This intolerable situation, if the safety and future of our nation are to be protected, cannot continue.

On behalf of the millions of members of organized labor, and progressive Americans, I am calling upon you as the guardian of the United States Treasury to take immediate steps to terminate this outrageous condition permitted to develop during the war whilst the attention of the American people was fully concentrated upon the defeat of the nation's foreign foes.

STEEL PRICE RISE BY FEB. 1 HINTED

Washington, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Government officials said today that steel prices might be increased by February 1 even if there had been no settlement of the industry's strike by that time. These officials, who asked that their names not be used, said that there was no reason why any price rise should have to be deferred until the strike ended. The size of the increase has not been finally determined, it was stated.

The Government reportedly offered about $4 extra a ton during negotiations on the wage dispute. The OPA, on the other hand, has taken the position that $2.50 a ton is all that should be granted.

Reconversion Director Snyder told Congressmen today that the administration has "no thought" of raising the price of steel except within the framework of the stabilization program. The statement, on which he did not elaborate, was made at a House Banking Committee hearing in response to questioning by Representative Wolcott (R.-Mich).

Output Of Steel Only 4.9 P.C. Of Capacity

Pittsburgh, Jan. 22 (A.)—Paralysis gripped America's basic industry today as the CIO-United Steelworkers strike kept 750,000 idle for a second day.

The biggest walkout in United States history closed nearly 1,300 steel-making and fabricating plants, aluminum mills and iron ore mines in 29 states. Today its effect was spreading to construction, railroads and public utilities.

Production of steel, the bone and sinew of industry and reconversion, had dwindled to less than five per cent of capacity, a 53-year low. Two instances of violence occurred in Ohio but in the main the strike was orderly.

Murray Alleges Conspiracy

Philip Murray, CIO-USW president, said in a radio address that the strike for a wage increase was precipitated by "an evil conspiracy among American big business" which has "set out to destroy labor unions, to provoke strikes and economic chaos and mulct the American people through uncontrolled profits and inflation."

There was no immediate reply from management, but the United States Steel Corporation said it might issue a statement later today.

Murray's Schedule

Murray was conferring in closed session today with union members of the United States Steel negotiating committee. Tomorrow he is scheduled to meet with the union's executive board at 10 A.M. and with the 175-man wage policy committee in the afternoon.

Harold E. Stassen, former Governor of Minnesota and a Republican presidential possibility, asserted in a speech here that "the only prospect of an early settlement of the strike still rests with the President of the United States."

No Word Of Negotiations

There was no report of negotiations between the union and the major steel producers. A handful of smaller firms agreed to give the 18½-cent-an-hour raise suggested by President Truman and accepted by the union. These companies, including seven in Pennsylvania and a few others as far west as California, kept their plants in operation.

But the total output was very small. The American Iron and Steel Institute estimated production yesterday at 89,700 tons, 4.9 per cent of capacity and the lowest level since 1893, when the average weekly rate was 86,352 tons.

Across the nation pickets trudged before the struck mills. Snow and near-zero temperatures in some areas made picketing a chill job, but the marching men echoed Murray's words:

"We're prepared to go through with this thing no matter how long it takes."

Effects On Other Industries

First effects of the strike on industries not directly involved appeared in New York, Indiana and Pennsylvania. Charles H. Sells, New York Commissioner of Public Works, said the bulk of that State's postwar public works program would be deferred because of the steel walkout. Among projects he said would be delayed were $40,000,000 worth of institutional buildings, $125,000,000 worth of highways and $100,000,000 worth of low-rent housing.

In Pittsburgh 4,000 railroad workers and 400 river-barge employés were furloughed because of declining steel and coal shipments. Most large steel mills operate their own intraplant railroads, and, with the mills idle, they had little or no work to do.

A fuel-gas famine appeared averted at Gary, Ind., when the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation announced that it would utilize management personnel to continue manufacturing gas after the Independent Foremen's Association of America, acting at CIO request, notified members not to continue to operate the plant.

The only disturbances reported yesterday were at Cincinnati, where a man was charged with brandishing a revolver as he attempted to pass a picket line and a management official complained to police that two pickets struck him as he attempted to enter the Williamson Heater Company plant. The men were charged with assault and battery.

Steel Priorities Suspended

In Washington, the Civilian Production Administration late yesterday suspended all outstanding priorities for the purchase of steel and instructed warehouses to ration all deliveries so that no customer will receive more than is needed for immediate use.

President Truman discussed the steel strike with congressional leaders, then met with the steel fact-finding board. There was no announcement of a further presidential move to end the strike.

Murray, in his nationally broadcast talk last night, said: "We seek wage increases now to restore the pay cuts the workers have suffered since V-J day."

A Republic Steel Corporation statement charged that the strike is "in flagrant violation" of the union's contract and contended that weekly earnings of steelworkers in November, 1945, were 46 per cent higher than in January, 1941. Steel prices now are virtually unchanged from 1937, the firm said.

More Idle in Alabama

Alabama steel strikers and others made idle mounted to 30,700 today—4,500 coal miners, 21,200 steel employés, and 5,000 red ore miners.

The coal miners, all employés of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, were forced into idleness by the steel strike. T.I.C. said this had shut down its transportation department, and it had to close its coal mines because it could not move the coal to its unloading areas. Its mines have a combined output of 16,000 tons a day.

About 1,000 plants in the Philadelphia area may have to close down partly or completely by February 20 if the steel strike continues, a survey by the regional office of the United States Employment Service shows. Most of the manufacturers—of iron and steel products, transportation, electrical equipment, electrical machinery and automotive parts—reported they have only enough steel to last about 30 days.

UAW RESTORES FIRST DEMAND

Withdraws Offer To Accept Fact-Finding Board Figure

JAN 23 1946

Detroit, Jan. 22 (A.)—The CIO United Automobile Workers Union advised President Truman today it had withdrawn its acceptance of a compromise 17½-per cent wage increase in its dispute with General Motors Corporation and reinstated its original demand for a 30 per cent increase.

At the same time the union called on tool and die workers in the Detroit area to halt all work for General Motors next Monday.

The latter action was taken, a union spokesman said, because "we have waited in vain" for G.M. to join with us in acceptance of recommendations of the President's fact-finding board.

The union had set today as the deadline for General Motors to reconsider its rejection of the fact finders' recommendations. A company spokesman said it was standing on its last offer of approximately twelve per cent increase.

"Revolt Against Government"

"The General Motors Corporation," said the union in a letter to the President, "is in open revolt against the American Government and the people, and is in a conspiracy to destroy organized labor." It added:

"Forces allied with General Motors are ready and willing to bring about a total paralysis of American industry in order to resist equitable wage increases; to set us on the road to inflation through higher prices and to wipe off the statute books every piece of constructive social legislation enacted in the last fifteen years."

"The policies they advocate," the letter continued, "are directly contrary to the policies of the Government; they are contrary to the wishes of the overwhelming majority of the American people; they are an outright betrayal of the ideals and principles for which we fought a costly and bloody war."

No General Motors Comment

There was no immediate comment from General Motors.

Other developments in the battle between management and labor in the automobile industry today included:

A denial by the Ford Motor Company that it planned to offer the union an 18½-cent or 15.5 per cent increase. A statement to that effect was published today by the Detroit News. The Ford Company has offered an increase slightly more than 14.5 per cent, while the union has demanded 17.6 per cent. Ford and the union met for less than an hour, but made no announcement other than that wages were discussed.

Preparations for a reopening tomorrow of wage conferences between Chrysler Corporation and the UAW-CIO, suspended several weeks ago.

The halting of General Motors tool-and-die work in Detroit shops would not be a strike.

"Put Under The Bench"

It would mean that all G.M. work in the shops would be "put under the bench" until the strike was settled. Other work would proceed as usual.

Involved in the tool-and-die stoppage would be approximately 3,000 workers in the Detroit district. Additional thousands of such workers are employed outside Detroit.

Just what effect the stoppage would have on G.M. plants already closed for 63 days was not immediately explained by union spokesmen. One of them said:

"We have been reluctant to bring this weapon to bear on the corporation because we hoped a satisfactory settlement could be reached without tying up essential tool-and-die work needed for reconversion, but we have waited in vain for General Motors to join with us in acceptance of recommendations of the President's fact-finding board."

Tool Workers Weigh Strike

Coincident with these developments Matthew Hammond, president of Local 157, UAW-CIO Tool and Die Workers, disclosed that he had asked the union's international executive board for permission to file a 30-day strike notice against 165 tool-and-die shops.

Such a strike, growing out of a dispute over a 30-per-cent wage-rate demand, would involve approximately 10,000 skilled workers, Hammond said.

The General Motors strike to date has cost the 175,000 hourly rated workers involved $71,190,000, according to union calculations based on a 40-hour week, and $80,766,000 by management estimate based on a 45.6-hour week.

2 Electrical-Strike Mediators Chosen

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP)—Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach today appointed two Government mediators in the strike of 200,000 CIO electrical workers.

The two named are William H. Davis, former chairman of the War Labor Board, and Arthur S. Meyer, chairman of the New York State Mediation Board.

Sessions Opened

They went into session this morning with officials of the struck-bound Westinghouse and General Electric companies and the CIO United Electrical Workers.

Present at the meeting, called by Schwellenbach in an attempt to settle the week-old tieup in the electrical industry, were Charles E. Wilson, General Electric president; A. W. Robertson, Westinghouse board chairman; Albert J. Fitzgerald, union president, and James J. Matles, international representative of the union.

Although the meeting of the disputants had been previously announced, the appointment of Meyer and Davis came as a surprise. The announcement was not made until the two actually walked into Schwellenbach's office, where the parties were waiting.

G.M. Absent

No representative from General Motors Corporation's electrical division, which is also involved in the wage dispute, attended. The union has said that negotiations with G.M. were continuing.

The electrical workers' union originally demanded a wage increase of $2 a day, or 25 cents an hour. However, Fitzgerald has said that the strike would be canceled if G.E. and Westinghouse would offer 15-cent increases and if General Motors would pay the 19½ cents more hourly recommended by the automobile fact-finding board.

Thus far G.M. has offered 13½ cents, Westinghouse has proposed a 15-per-cent raise for a 10-per-cent increase in hours and G.E. has offered a 10-cent hourly boost on wages of less than $1 an hour and a 10-per-cent increase on wages exceeding $1.

15 PCT. BOOST URGED FOR SHIPBUILDERS

Increase for 650,000 Workers Recommended by U.S. Procurement Agencies.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 — (AP) Government procurement agencies today recommended a 15 per cent wage increase for approximately 650,000 shipyard workers throughout the nation.

The proposal was made to the working committee of the shipbuilding wage stabilization conference in an effort to break a deadlock in wage discussions which has tied up the conference since last Dec. 4.

Sponsoring the offer were the War and Navy departments, the Maritime commission and the Labor department.

Comdr. Hal Wright of the Navy department presented the 15 per cent offer, which would mean an increase of about 18 cents an hour for standard mechanics in shipyards who now receive $1.20.

J. R. Redstrom, press spokesman for the working committee, said details as to application of the 15 per cent raise in lower wage scale brackets had not been worked out.

After discussing the proposal, which Wright said the stabilization administrator's office "might approve," the working committee recessed until tomorrow without voting.

The C.I.O. union of marine and shipbuilding workers has demanded a wage increase of 36 cents an hour. The A.F.L. metal trades department has asked a wage boost of about 25.9 per cent in addition to the unions, and the government procurement agencies, shipbuilding management also is represented in the conference.

Industry Pledge Charged By DeLacy

JAN 23 1946

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP)—Representative DeLacy (D., Wash.) charged today that industrial leaders of the nation have agreed to put workers "in their places."

He said in a statement that this was done at a meeting in Atlantic City, N.J., a month ago, attended by executives of the automobile, steel, shipbuilding, meat-packing and other major industries.

"Simple Plan" Described

"The idea was simple," DeLacy continued. "Beat down wages and beat up prices. Cause widespread strikes. Flood the country with propaganda. Destroy the confidence of the people in Congress and force through repressive measures which will aid in destroying wage rates and lowering United States purchasing power.

"With the war over, with corporation reserves totaling nearly 50 billions—the biggest war chest in history and more than twice the amount available in prewar days—the meeting decided to put the workers in their place," DeLacy said.

Charges Democratic Coalition

DeLacy also said that "the old coalition of Southern Democrats and Northern Republicans" has begun a "chant for the scalps of the average American working man and woman."

He said the coalition opposed "decent social security in this nation; the right of the soldier fighting overseas to vote; equal rights in employment for Negro, Catholic, Jew, Italian-American and Scandinavian-American; bottled up legislation for unemployment benefits; destroyed congressional plans for full employment and production; insisted on a tax program that soaks small business and the average American and opposed every step toward social legislation for the benefit of the American people."

U. S. WARD SEIZURE SUIT IS DISMISSED

Chicago, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan dismissed today, on order of the United States Supreme Court, the celebrated suit of the United States versus Montgomery Ward & Co. which sought to determine the validity of Government seizure of Ward roperties in December, 1944.

Judge Sullivan originally held that the seizure under executive order of the late President Roosevelt was illegal. The Circuit Court of Appeals reversed him. The Supreme Court on November 5, 1945, refused to rule, stating that the question was "meet" because the properties had been returned to the company October 18.

Twice the Government seized Ward properties, in April and December, 1944, as a result of a labor dispute and Ward's refusal to abide by orders of the now defunct War Labor Board, contending that they were merely advisory and not legally binding. In the first seizure Sewell L. Avery, Ward's chaiqrman of the board, was carried bodily from his office by soldiers.

There was no final legal determination of validity of the seizure in either case and Judge Sullivan, in entering the dismissal order today, told Government and company attorneys: "Now you are back where you started from."

PAC Head Lauds President

New York, Jan. 22 (AP)—Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, sent President Truman a message last night congratulating him on his labor program and his efforts to avert the steel strike.

Hillman also assured the President of the PAC's "fullest support . . . of the firm stand you have taken in favor of wage increases to protect American workers against a drastic decline in living standards and to maintain the national purchasing power essential to a healthy economy."

The message also said the PAC was "particularly appreciative of your patient and constructive effort to effect a settlement" in the steel controversy.

"Eminently Fair Proposal"

"The refusal of the steel companies to accept your eminently fair and reasonable proposal," Hillman added, "fully demonstrates that they are placing their own selfish interests ahead of the national welfare."

Hillman's associates declined to say whether he had conferred with CIO President Philip Murray before sending the wire. Murray recently said the President was seeking to "weaken and ultimately destroy labor-union organization" through the establishment of fact-finding committees to assist in the settlement of industrial disputes.

WAY APPEARS OPEN FOR LEWIS UNION TO REJOIN A. F. L.

JAN 23 1946

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 22 — (AP) Barring a last-minute fight, the way appeared to be open today for the long-heralded return of John L. Lewis and his half-million United Mine Workers to the A.F.L.

The sole obstacle apparent was a "recent" recommendation by the influential A.F.L. Metal Trades Department that the next vacancy on the 15-man executive council go to Charles McGowan, head of the boilermakers.

Frey to Appear

John P. Frey, president of the metal trades group, will appear before the council here tomorrow.

Lewis has made a seat on the council for the mine workers a condition to bringing his union back to the federation, which they left in 1936, in the struggle over formation of the C.I.O. The miners bolted the C.I.O., too, in 1942.

The council's winter session—like most others in the past three years—has been engulfed in speculation over Lewis' return to the federation.

In the opinion of some labor officials, the mine leader's re-affiliation with the A.F.L. at this time would emphasize his recent bitterness toward the C.I.O. leadership now engaged in crucial wage struggles in steel, meat packing, autos, and electrical manufacturing.

The metal trades department may oppose Lewis' appointment to the council vacancy because it has lost its only direct representative with the departure of Harvey W. Brown, head of the machinists. The machinists left the federation in October, after a losing jurisdiction tiff with the carpenters. A.F.L. President William Green said the council had formally voted Brown's seat on the council vacant yesterday.

Two Members Absent

Two members who are absent from the Miami winter meeting of the council, Daniel J. Tobin of the teamsters and George Harrison of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, are expected before the weekend.

Tobin in the past has fought Lewis, but like Green, he appeared to be on friendly terms with the heavy-browed miners' boss at the November labor-management conference in Washington.

Green said the vacancy would be acted on before the council adjourns Jan. 30 or 31.

FACT-FINDING BILL OK'D MINUS TEETH

House Committee Cuts Out Two Features Recommended by Truman.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22. — (AP) The House Labor Committee pulled two teeth from the President's fact-finding bill today and shoved it to the floor for early consideration.

President Truman wanted action. But he also wanted the fact-finding boards empowered to examine company records and unions barred from striking during the process.

These two features were missing from the bill which the committee approved. Mr. Truman has said he thinks the measure will be useless without them.

There was general expectation among the Congressmen, however, that efforts would be made to restore them in the form of amendments when the House takes it up. Some of the committeemen, in fact, said they voted for the measure with this expectation in mind in order to get action.

The committee rejected the President's plan 13 to 5. It then approved 10 to 8, a version by Rep. Landis (R-Ind) which establishes fact-finding boards but denies them subpoena authority and provides no "cooling-off" periods.

Those who favor stricter strike legislation announced plans immediately to try and write stronger language into the bill when it reaches the floor, probably next week.

"The Landis version is just a title, plus a few kind words," Rep. Howard Smith (D-Va) told the House. "It is weak and meaningless."

The committee's action also was attacked by those who oppose passage of new labor legislation immediately. They expressed fear that Smith and others of his viewpoint would go too far.

Rep. Hook (D-Mich), a committee member, said several attempts were made in the committee to prevent sending any bill to the floor. One of his motions for a continued investigation failed only by a 9 to 9 tie vote.

Several members told newsmen they voted for the Landis version chiefly to send some type of legislation to the floor so the House could act as it chooses.

Speaking for these members, Acting Chairman Randolph (D-WVa) asserted:

"It is my position that I was in favor of reporting legislation with the principle of fact-finding to the floor, in order to meet the recommendations of the President, so the House might have the opportunity, through its individual membership, to approve or disapprove the request by the Chief Executive."

The Landis version provides that government agencies shall furnish the fact-finding boards any records or information desired. Randolph told newsmen this section is to assure the board of all facts in possession of the government.

Voting for the Landis version were the author and Reps. Randolph, Barden (D-NC), Morrison (D-La), Hartley (R-NJ), Hoffman (R-Mich), Baldwin (R-NY), McConnell (R-Pa), Adams (R-NH) and Buck (R-NY). Opposed were Reps. Welch (R-Calif), Hook (D-Mich), Lesinski (D-Mich), Kelley (D-Pa), Green (D-Pa), Patterson (D-Calif), Geelan (D-Conn), and Powell (D-NY).

Short Tells Probers He Was Made A 'Scapegoat'

JAN 23 1946

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short asserted today that the War Department had treated him unfairly and had attempted to make him the "scapegoat" of the Pearl Harbor disaster.

Attired in a blue civilian suit, the 65-year-old retired General appeared before a Senate-House Inquiry Committee to read a 13,000-word defense of his decisions and actions as the 1941 commander of army forces in Hawaii. It was his first public testimony since the Japanese struck the mid-Pacific base December 7, 1941.

Barkley, Hannegan Confer

Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan, Democratic national chairman, conferred briefly with Committee Chairman Barkley (D., Ky.) before Short began his testimony. Barkley said the conference had "nothing to do with this hearing."

In his prepared statement, Short contended that in four years of official silence his superior officers in Washington had "passed the buck" to him until the congressional inquiry "forced the revelation of facts."

Short asserted that the War Department had "four years to admit" it should have acted before December 7, 1941, on his November 27 report that he had alerted his troops only against sabotage. But the first such "admission of responsibility," he said, came from Gen. George C. Marshall, former chief of staff, and Lieut. Gen. L. T. Gerow, former war plans head, in the current hearings.

First Public Testimony

This was the first time the General has had an opportunity to testify in public. Records of his previous testimony before the Roberts Commission and army inquiry boards have already been released by the committee.

In a separate opening statement today, Short said he was "sure that I would have arrived at the conclusion that Hawaii would be attacked and would have gone on an all-out alert" if he had received all the information Washington had on the situation.

Short asserted he was not permitted to hear other witnesses nor to crossexamine them in the Roberts Commission investigation. He did not read the evidence taken by the commission until August, 1944, he said.

As To Army Board Inquiry

He added that after he appeared before the Army Pearl Harbor Board, where he did not hear or question other witnesses, he was allowed to read the "top-secret" part of its testimony only when the congressional committee began its hearing.

In his longer, main statement, Short followed closely the line he had taken previously in making these contentions:

1. He was not given the information from intercepted Japanese messages by which he said the War Department "knew definitely at 9 P.M. December 6 that the hour had struck and that war was at hand."

2. If General Marshall felt there were security reasons why he could not be given this information, he should have directed specifically an all-out alert as he did on a false alarm in 1940.

"Confirmed In Belief"

3. The action in dispatching unarmed bombers from the mainland to Hawaii on the night of December 6, 1941, "confirmed me in my belief that an air-raid was not probable."

4. The Navy did not ask for any army planes from November 27 to December 6 to aid in reconnaissance and "to me this meant that they had definite information of the locations of Japanese carriers."

5. Had he been given by telephone General Marshall's December 7 message which arrived too late, he would have had four hours to prepare for the attack.

6. The War Department had nine days after the November 27 warning message to change the anti-sabotage alert that he notified Washington he had put in effect, but did nothing.

"Decision Wrong"

7. He now realized that "my decision was wrong" to alert only against sabotage, but thinks his judgment at the time that sabotage was the greatest danger and "that air attack was not imminent," was the same as the general staff's.

"I do not feel that I have been treated fairly or with justice by the War Department," Short told the committee. "I was singled out as an example, as the scapegoat for the disaster. My relatively small part in the transaction was not explained to the American people until this joint congressional committee forced the revelation of the facts."

Secrecy Angle

Short said that while he appreciated the War Department's desire to preserve the secrecy of the source of information it got from breaking the Japanese code, "I am sure that could have been done without any attempt to deceive the public by a false pretense that my judgment had been the sole factor causing the failure of the Army to fulfill its mission of defending the Navy at Pearl Harbor."

"I am sure that an honest confession by the War Department general staff of their failure to anticipate the surprise raid would have been understood by the public, in the long run and even at the time. Instead, they 'passed the buck' to me and I have kept my silence until the opportunity of this public forum was presented to me."

Short said he was "more than astounded to learn of the complacency of the War Department general staff with realtion to so-called 'magic' (code breaking) intelligence." Marshall, Gerow and others previously testified that sending of the decoded texts of such messages to field commanders was halted for fear of leaks that might cause the Japanese to change their codes.

Possibility Of Courier

Short said that in his opinion the War Department could have paraphrased the information and sent it to him by courier without disclosing its source.

He said an intercepted message directing Japanese envoys in Washington to present their final diplomatic answer at 1 P.M. (Washington time), "pointed directly to an attack on Hawaii at dawn."

"Had this vital information been communicated to Hawaii by the fastest possible means," he said, "we would have had more than four hours to make preparations to meet the attack, which was more than enough for completing army preparations. The Navy might have had time to get all ships out of the harbor."

Short told the committee he was "obeying my instructions from Washington as I understood them" and was acting in accordance with what he said was the "little information" available to him which "did not give an accurate picture of the prospects of war."

"Definite Information"

"The War Department knew definitely by 9 P.M., December 6, that the hour had struck and that war was at hand," he declared. "By 9 A.M., December 7, the War Department knew the hour of the attack. None of this information was given to me."

A major portion of the final Japanese diplomatic reply was contained in a message decoded the night of December 6. The message setting the 1 P.M. delivery time was read the next morning and prompted Marshall to send a warning to Short, which went by commercial cable and did not reach the General's hands until after the attack.

"If this message had been sent by scrambler telephone," Short asserted, "there would have been time to warm up the planes and put them in the air, thus at least avoiding a large loss of planes in the initial attack at 8 A.M.

Delay In Message

"The fact that the War Department sent this message by radio in code instead of telephoning it in the clear and putting it through in the minimum amount of time indicates that the department, even as late as 6.48 A.M., December 7, Honolulu time, did not consider an attack on Honolulu as likely enough to warrant drastic action to prepare the islands for the sneak attack," he said.

Marshall had told the committee the reason he didn't telephone the message was that he felt the phone conversation might be intercepted. If that was true, Short said, then the War Department should have "issued the necessary alert orders which they would have known that I would have issued at once if I had had the information which they possessed."

Marshall's Plan

Short said that when he took command at Hawaii he learned from Lieut. Gen. Charles D. Herron, his predecessor, that General Marshall had "definitely indicated his intention to direct personally any genuine prewar alert."

He contended that Marshall had personally ordered and 'supervised" an all-out alert on June 17, 1940, adding:

"It was my expectation that if the chief of staff once again had information causing him to expect a 'trans-Pacific raid' against Oahu, he would follow the course he had set previously as an example."

The witness said he felt Marshall would read the message Short sent after the Hawaiian commander was advised November 27, 1941, that diplomatic negotiations with Japan appeared to be terminated and directing him to "undertake such reconnaissance and other measures as you deem necessary."

Message To Marshall

"I felt," Short said, "that a chief of staff who had personally supervised the long-continued 1940 alert would certainly have the time and interest not only to read and to understand my succinct report 'Reurad four seven two 27th report department alerted to prevent sabotage. Liaison with the Navy,' but to send further word in the event that he disagreed in any way with the measures I had taken in obedience to his November 27 directive."

Marshall previously testified that he was not certain he had seen Short's reply, but that if there was any responsibility for not having inquired further into the nature of the alert the responsibility was his.

Local Defense Plan

Short noted that the basic war plan, Rainbow Five, was supplemented by a local defense plan which called on the Navy to furnish distant reconnaissance. He said only the War Department could have ordered Rainbow Five into effect, as it could have ordered the local defense plan into operation.

While he told the committee that he and Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, then Pacific Fleet commander, could have put the local plan into action by agreement, he added:

"Due to my knowledge of the attitude of the War Department, I would never have ordered any part of the plan into effect without consulting it, as long as communications were open and time permitted. Under the circumstances preceding the attack, the War Department, with far more intimate knowledge of the nature of the Japanese situation, had not ordered M-day, had not put the Rainbow plan into effect, in whole or in part, and had expressed no dissatisfaction with my report of a sabotage alert.

"Possible Alarm"

"The only conclusion I could draw was that it did not want the war plans implemented because of the possible alarm to the public or the danger of provoking the Japanese. Their silence I took as concurrence with the degree of alert I had adopted."

Marshall and Gerow previously testified that it had never occurred to them that Short had not put into effect an all-out alert.

Short compared the "war-warning" message received by Kimmel on November 27 with what he noted the Army Pearl Harbor Inquiry Board had called the "do-or-don't" message sent to him by Marshall the same day.

The message to Short said that hostile Japanese action was "possible at any moment," adding that if hostilities could not be avoided the United States "desires that Japan commit the first overt act."

The message directed Short to undertake reconnaissance and other measures, but said they should be carried out "so as not, repeat not, to alarm civil population or disclose intent." Short was told to "report measures taken" and if hostilities broke out to put war plans into effect.

Short's Interpretation

"The impression conveyed to me by this message," Short said, "was that the avoidance of war was paramount and the greastest fear of the War Department was that some international incident might occur in Hawaii and be regarded by Japan as an overt act."

He said there had been no mention of a probable attack on Hawaii since the alert message of June, 1940, adding that the only information received from the War Department after the November 27 message was in three messages on sabotage and subversive measures.

Short said his decision to put into effect only the anti-sabotage alert, which envisioned no threat to Hawaii from without, was made on several considerations.

The Navy had told him, he said, that "Japanese naval vessels were supposed to be either in their home ports or proceeding south." He knew Japan couldn't attack with land-based bombers.

Navy Scouting Missions

He noted that the Navy was flying scouting missions from task forces at sea and from Midway, Wake, Palmyra and Johnston islands and had not asked him for any planes to supplement reconnaissance.

"I thus felt that air attack was highly improbable," Short asserted.

He said further that the War Department had not indicated in any way that training was to be halted and that troops were to go into a tactical status.

"If war were momentarily expected in the Hawaiian coastal frontier, these (training) considerations would give way," he said. "But every indication was that the War Department expected the war to break out, if at all, only in the Far Pacific and not at Hawaii.

Ferrying Unarmed Planes

This was borne out, he said, by the fact that as late as December 6, 1941, the War Department was ferrying unarmed planes from California to Hawaii. A dozen planes arrived during the first attack and four were shot down.

Summing up information he said the War Department had but did not furnish to him, Short asserted he did not know that "that United States Army officers at Singapore had made tentative military commitments, not approved by the President, that the United States would fight, along with the Netherlands and the British, to defend the Dutch East Indies and Singapore."

Neither did he know, as he said a message intercepted and translated by December 5 showed, that "the Japanese did realize that such joint military action would occur."

Did Not Know Deadline

Short noted that he was not told that the Japanese had set November 29 as a deadline on diplomatic negotiations. Nor, he said, did he know anything about the Japanese orders to their consuls to destroy their codes on December 3, or other important disclosures obtained from code-breaking.

Short's description of the attack itself disclosed that it was 55 minutes after the first bomb dropped before an American fighter plane got into the air. He said one Japanese plane was shot down with a rifle when the 24th Division was attacked at Schofield.

He added that the Navy might have been able to locate the Japanese carriers after the attack if the information which had been communicated to Lieut (now Lieut. Col) Kermit A. Tyler at the Radar Information Center had been given to higher officers. Kimmel has testified he did not get the radar information until two days later.

Lockard Warning

Short recounted how Private (now Lieut.) Joseph L. Lockard had reported from the Opana radar station to the center that a large number of planes were heading toward Oahu from the north. But Tyler, Short said, told Lockard that "it was not anything of importance."

"If Lieutenant Tyler had realized that the incoming flight was Japanese, there would have been time to disperse the planes but not to warm up the engines and get them into the air," Short added. "Lieutenant Tyler made no report of this matter to me and as far as I know did not report the incident to the control office, Major Tyndall, after the information center was manned about 8.30 A.M.

"This matter was not brought to my attention until the next day when it was too late to be of value. Had this incident been reported to the control officer at 8.30 A.M. on the seventh, he would have informed the Navy and it might have enabled them to locate the carriers."

FORMULA GIVEN FOR RETENTION OF BASES IN PACIFIC

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 — (AP) Acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson contended today that we could retain Pacific Island defense bases even in event of a veto on the United Nations Security Council.

In response to questions at his news conference, Acheson outlined this formula concerning the strategic spots won from the Japanese:

Should anyone of the other four big powers—Russia, Britain, China or France — use its special veto power on a request for individual trusteeship then this country could withdraw its application.

The base thus would revert to its status quo; in effect, under the sole trusteeship and control of the United States by virtue of conquest and occupation.

It would appear from this explanation that Russia perhaps could use the same strategy to retain permanent control of the Kurile Islands which were occupied by Soviet forces under an agreement which Acheson said was reached at the Yalta conference.

The Kuriles, stretching fanwise across the entrance of the Okhotsk Sea which wraps Eastern Russia, early in the war provided a springboard for the Japanese invasion of the Aleutians.

Discussion of the Pacific islands stemmed from a press conference a week ago when President Truman said this country would keep the bases it needs for defense but that it would seek UNO's approval for such individual trusteeship.

Here in diplomatic quarters, it appeared likely, however, that discussions would be initiated in advance for a possible clash of interest in the United Nations Security Council among the countries interested in the islands' future status.

Central Intelligence System Foundation Laid by Truman

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 — (AP) President Truman today laid the foundation for the nation's first peacetime central foreign intelligence system, which he believes will help in shaping future foreign policy.

He established three interdepartmental organizations to coordinate the government's activities in this field and kept a personal hand of control over the policy-making and operating groups.

Thus, he ended months of conferences with state, war and navy officials by deciding against any one of those departments having top charge of the program.

System Established

The President established:

1—A national intelligence authority composed of the secretaries of state, war and navy, and a personal representative still to be named by him. This quartet will formulate broad policies. It was directed to plan, develop and coordinate foreign intelligence activities bearing on national security.

2—A central intelligence group to be set up by the three departmental secretaries. This group will be the full-time, operating organization to recommend and carry out the intelligence authority's policies. It will have a director of central intelligence who will be named by the President and who will be responsible to and sit on the intelligence authority as a non-voting member.

Sources familiar with the setup told reporters the director of central intelligence, expected to be named soon, will be the "big shot" of the whole organization. They would not indicate whether he will be a military man or a civilian. His main duties will be to correlate and evaluate national security information and to distribute it within the government.

Board Set Up

3—An intelligence advisory board comprised of heads of the government's military and civilian intelligence agencies "having functions related to national security." This group, which may be composed of representatives of the FBI, and treasury, commerce, state, war and navy departments, will advise the director of central intelligence.

In abolishing the office of strategic services—wartime intelligence agency—last September, President Truman said its resources and skills would be preserved for peacetime purposes. At that time he spoke of the need of a foreign intelligence service "to aid in the development of our foreign policy."

The President's directive today emphasized that it did not authorize "police, law-enforcement or internal security functions" or investigations in the United States and its possessions "except as provided by law and Presidential directives."

NIA IS LATEST FEDERAL BODY

Truman Creates Agency on

JAN 23 1946

Foreign Intelligence.

Washington, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—President Truman today created a four-man board to develop and co-ordinate the nation's foreign intelligence activities to assure "the most effective accomplishment" relating to the national security.

The members of the board will be the Secretaries of State, War and Navy and a fourth person to be named by the President as his personal representative. The board will be known as the National Intelligence Authority.

The secretaries were directed to assign persons from their departments to form a central intelligence group which, under a director of central intelligence, to be designated by the President, will assist the intelligence authority. The director of central intelligence will be responsible to the authority and will sit as a non-voting member.

Four Instructions.

The director of central intelligence, subject to existing law and direction and control of the authority, was directed to:

1. Correlate and evaluate intelligence relating to the national security and disseminate within the Government the resulting strategic and national policy intelligence;

2. Plan for the co-ordination of intelligence work of the State, War and Navy departments and recommend to the NIA establishment of overall policies;

3. Perform for the intelligence agencies such services of common concern as the NIA determines can be more efficiently accomplished centrally;

4. Perform such other functions relating to intelligence as the President and the NIA may direct.

Nothing Within United States.

The President's directive said that under it no police, law enforcement or internal security functions shall be exercised.

The director of Central Intelligence will be advised by an Intelligence Advisory Board consisting of the heads of the principal military and civilian intelligence agencies dealing with national security.

"Nothing herein," said the directive to the three secretaries, "shall be construed to authorize the making of investigations inside the continental limits of the United States and its possessions, except as provided by law and presidential directives."

APPROVAL GIVEN AIR EQUIPMENT SALE TO SPAIN

JAN 23 1946

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 — (AP) The United States has approved the sale to Spain of eight C-47 transport planes and nearly $300,000 in airport equipment discarded by the Army, government officials disclosed today.

At the same time, it was learned that the State department has approved sale of five four-engined transport planes to a private aviation company in Argentina. Previously, the department permitted sale of eight Pratt and Whitney aircraft engines to the same Argentine firm for four Short-Sunderland flying boats purchased from Britain.

The planes and equipment for Spain were purchased from the State department's office of foreign liquidation in Paris by a commission representing the Franco government.

Conference Called

In response to a reporter's inquiry as to whether any surplus army planes had gone to Spain, the State department called a news conference.

A department spokesman told the conference that the sale of five twin-engined transports for the Spanish Iberian Airline had been approved. He said the airline is regarded as a government company, although its charter permits the sale of 25 per cent of its stock to private individuals.

He also disclosed approval of the sale of equipment which he said would be used to improve the Madrid airport. It includes bulldozers, scrapers, shovel units, dump trucks and a semi-trailer.

Other Planes Sold

Later a reporter learned from another government official that three additional transport planes had been sold previously to the Spanish airline. This official said more planes might be allocated to Spain in the near future.

The State department spokesman told his news conference that "no approval has been given for the sale of surplus military supplies" to the Franco government. He explained that the department did not classify the transport planes as "military supplies."

A reporter remarked that the C-47 transport, known in commercial aviation as the Douglas DC-3, had been used by the Army more than any other type of plane, in every theater of operations, and for such tasks as transporting airborne troops and towing gliders. The spokesman did not reply.

Government officials said the transfer of the planes is related to the civil aviation agreement which the U. S. signed with Spain Dec. 2, 1944. This gives American commercial airlines full rights to discharge and pick up passengers in Madrid.

ACHESON HITS DELAY ON LISPE OIL TALKS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP)—Acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson today expressed dissatisfaction at the pace of negotiations with Russian officials regarding operation of Hungarian oil fields owned by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

He told a news conference that American diplomatic representatives were now discussing with Soviet officials, who have seized the Lispe oil field, the question of how much production could be expected from the area.

Mr. Acheson said negotiations with the Russians were not going as fast as the United States would like.

Press reports from Budapest have said that the Russians were unwilling to let Standard Oil operate the Lispe fields because they believed the company's development technique was twenty-five years behind the times. The company has defended its projected operating program as efficient.

The Russians are paying for the oil after delivering it to Standard's refineries.

Mr. Acheson said the State Department was receiving reports on the situation from H. F. A. Schoenfeld, American diplomatic representative to Hungary, and was keeping in constant touch on the situation.

Mr. Acheson said the fields were taken over and operated by the Hungarian Government in 1941 after Hungary's declaration of war against the United States.

After the Allies went into Hungary, the United States took up from time to time with the Allied Control Council the question of readmitting Standard Oil officials to the property. Some of them were, Mr. Acheson said.

Etymological Mystery: Who Put O in U.N.O.?

No One Cares as Long as It Works, but Exact Term in Charter Is the 'U. N.'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP).—There's no such thing as a United Nations Organization.

Plain as anything, in the charter adopted at San Francisco are the words, "United Nations."

Who put the "O" in "U. N. O.?" The State Department doesn't know.

But the terms, "United Nations Organization" and its abbreviation "U. N. O." have become so commonly accepted that even President Truman, in his message to Congress yesterday, said: . . . "In full accord with the charter of the United Nations Organization." He capitalized the "U," "N" and "O."

The State Department, which specializes in having everything just so, also slips occasionally and allows "U. N. O." to creep into its telegrams and press releases.

A State Department man told a reporter today that this may explain how "U. N. O." was born:

The writing of the preamble to the charter came last. For a long time this new world group had no official name. So during this period the delegates, when referring to it in the charter, just called it the "organization."

"The charter is full of organizations," said the State Department man.

He added that it was along toward the end of the conference that it was decided to call it the United Nations, in tribute to the late President Roosevelt, who first used the words.

He said he guessed this sequence of events made it easy to wed "United Nations" and "Organization," even though nowhere in the charter do the three words appear together.

The State Department man added that he didn't know how many nations have fallen into the "U. N. O." habit, but he understands the British are trying to cut back to "U. N."

"But United Nations or United Nations Organization," he said with a shrug, "who cares, as long as it works."

Autopsy Shows Mussolini Had Unusual Health

Italian Doctors' Study Also Tells Story of Shots at Body After Execution

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP), — Post-mortem studies of the body of Benito Mussolini have disclosed that he was an "unusually healthy" man at the time of his execution, Army pathologists reported today.

The same studies also show that snipers took several pot-shots at the body of the former Italian dictator either before or after it was hung by the feet in a public place in Milan.

Scientists of the Army Institute of Pathology drew these conclusions after examining a formal report of an autopsy performed on the fallen dictator's body by Italian doctors.

The autopsy report was made by Professor Mario Cattabeni and Professor Enea Scolar, of the University of Catenia, and by Professor Emanuel d'Abundo, of the University of Milan.

Declaring that the autopsy report disclosed virtually no evidence of any organic impairment, Colonel James E. Ash, director of the Army Institute of Pathology, told a reporter: "It's a rare individual whose body, at autopsy, doesn't show more impairment than Mussolini had."

The only abnormal thing reported was the presence of a small adhesion linking part of the small intestine wth the neck of the gall bladder.

"This might possibly indicate gall-bladder trouble," said Colonel Ash, "but if such an ailment existed, it must have been slight."

Besides bullet wounds in the chest, the autopsy report also showed several bullet wounds in the head, including some that showed no evidence of hemorrhage.

"Absence of what we call a 'hemorrhagic halo' around those openings," said Colonel Ash, "shows that the wounds were inflicted after death."

Halifax Plans to Retire As Ambassador in Spring

Doesn't Know Who Successor Will Be, Kerr Mentioned

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP).—The Earl of Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, is planning to retire this spring, probably in May, it was learned today.

A source in a position to know but who requested that his identity be withheld, said, however, that Halifax knew no more about his successor "than wha' he reads in the newspapers." Reports from London have mentioned Sir Archibald John Kerr Clark Kerr, present British Ambassador to Moscow, as the labor government's choice to succeed Halifax.

The source here told a reporter that Halifax is planning to return to his ancestral home in Yorkshire, although he probably would keep his seat in the House of Lords and take an active part in matters involving foreign affairs.

Truman's Price, Tax Aims Least Criticized

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP)—Congress seemed inclined today to support some extension of price controls and to keep taxes at a high level. But the remainder of President Truman's domestic legislative program provoked as much criticism as praise.

Republicans sparked the criticism, with Senator Bridges (R., N.H.) observing that the President's recounting of Administration aims ought to be labelled "a message on the sorry state of the Union."

On the other hand, Senator Mead (D., N.Y.) commented that the President's economic proposals are "sound and necessary."

Price-Control Reaction

Not all comment, however, followed party lines.

Among 25 requests in his state-of-the-Union message yesterday, Mr. Truman asked for a full year's extension of price controls. The reaction was mixed on this score, but most legislators who were asked about it said they thought some curbs must be retained to prevent runaway inflation.

Senator Ball (R., Minn.) suggested that a "sane" program be adopted under which price increases of possibly five per cent would be allowed to make up for some of the wage raises that have been granted.

"We would better do that rather than sit on the lid so tight that we have a blowup," Ball asserted.

Tax-Cut Hope Wanes

Congressional fiscal experts appeared fairly well agreed that Mr. Truman's opposition would prevent any substantial tax cuts this year.

Chairman George (D., Ga.) of the Senate Finance Committee said he figures that even if reconversion and production go ahead without too much interruption from strikes, revenues still may fall $5,000,000,000 short of meeting a $35,000,000,000 outlay.

Mr. Truman put the deficit gap at $4,347,000,000 in his $35,860,000,000 budget, a figure that Senator LaFollette (Prog., Wis.) said he thought might be "pretty close to the mark."

"In view of the message," LaFollette said, "there does not seem much chance for a substantial reduction in corporation or individual income taxes."

Would Cut Legal Debt

Noting that Mr. Truman forecast a $7,000,000,000 drop in the national debt during the next eighteen months, Senator Byrd (D., Va.) announced plans to lower the legal debt ceiling from $300,000,000,000 to $275,000,000,000. The debt now stands at $278,000,000,000.

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) took issue with the President's debt reduction figures, terming them "misleading."

He said the budget lists only $1,000,000,000 for the Export-Import Bank, "which will need $2,800,000,000.

"It does not count the proposed British loan at all. It does not include the Bretton Woods payments which will amount to $2,750,000,000 in gold, cash and notes to the fund."

"Nearer 14 Billion"

For those reasons, Taft said, the deficit in his estimation would be nearer $14,000,000,000 than $4,000,000,000.

Another Illinois Republican however, Representative Dirksen termed the budget message "highly encouraging."

There were many lawmakers who thought Mr. Truman's recommendation for the establishment of fact-finding boards fall short of a solution for current labor disputes.

"Voluntary Settlements"

Senator Maybank (D., S.C.) said he believes the time has arrived for Congress to pass more drastic labor legislation.

Senator Morse (R., Ore.) generally indorsed the goals set forth by Mr. Truman, but he said "his fact-finding proposal will not solve labor disputes."

Morse proposed instead voluntary settlements, adding: "I think both industry and labor should practice their pratings about freedom of economic action by agreeing to settle all major disputes by voluntary arbitration."

To Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) the situation suggested that Congress get busy drafting an overall economic policy.

"Co-Ordinated Program"

"What we need," he said, "is a co-ordinated program to stimulate civilian production on a large scale. That means that the prime necessity is the adoption of a policy which will bring industrial peace and open to all producers, agricultural and industrial, the markets which are waiting to be tapped."

With this in mind, O'Mahoney said a planning subcommittee he heads will begin hearings about February 1 at which economists in and out of the Government will be invited to "recommend legislation that will re-establish a free econo-".

SWEDES HAIL TRUMAN

Stockholm, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—A Swedish Foreign Office spokesman said today that he felt the foreign policy section of President Truman's message was "very promising for those countries, particularly small nations, which can hardly have any security except in some stable organization such as the United Nations. The spokesman said the speech showed "determination to make something real out of the United Nations Organization."

Swedish newspapers featured Mr. Truman's message on front pages.

No Comment in Soviet Press

MOSCOW, Jan. 22 (AP).—The Soviet press devoted more than a column today to President Truman's message to Congress yesterday, but refrained from editorial comment.

Won't Rush Truman Army Plan

Congress Is Skeptical About His Plea for Extension of Draft

JAN 23 1946

Washington, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Congress showed little inclination today to speed action on President Truman's three-point military program. Members looked with particular skepticism at Mr. Truman's request in his State of the Union message for an extension of the draft act beyond its May 15 expiration date.

Aside from saying he has no plans for early consideration of the extension, Representative May (D.-Ky.), chairman of the House Military Committee, withheld comment on the President's plea, not only for the draft continuance, but for merger of the Army and the Navy and for universal military training.

But May's colleagues on the committee said privately they see little chance for action on the draft law before the end of March as requested by the President.

Across the capitol, a single member of the Senate Military Committee voiced approval of the draft extension request.

"I think that's sound," Senator Austin (Vt.), ranking Republican member, told a reporter. "We must keep our commitments now or our children's children will be in another and more terrible war."

Chairman Elbert D. Thomas (D.-Utah) said his Senate committee will examine all facts in the next sixty days.

May indicated that his committee will finish hearings on universal training next month.

Even the most vigorous supporters of universal training, however, don't expect the committee to follow the President's request for a year of continuous training. They are willing now to settle for a four-month program, supplemented by ROTC or National Guard service.

Hawaiian Measures Approved By House

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP)—The House today passed two bills confirming actions of the Hawaii territorial legislature.

One bill extends the time for issuance of territorial revenue bonds to June 30, 1947. The other permits the Hilo Electric Company to provide additional electric service under franchise in the districts of Kau and South Kohala on the island of Hawaii.

Both bills were introduced by Delegate Farrington (R., Hawaii). The Senate also must approve them.

WALLACE IN PLEA FOR 3 ASSISTANTS

Washington, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Secretary of Commerce Wallace told Senators today that he needed three more $10,000-a-year assistants to help business and industry get into full steam.

The former Vice-President appeared at a closed-door session of the Senate Commerce Committee in support of legislation authorizing appointment of the additional secretaries of commerce. At present the Commerce Department has an under-secretary and a single assistant of commerce for air. Wallace told Senators that one of the three proposed assistants would be assigned to international trade, a second to problems of domestic trade and the third to the job of helping small business.

He also backed a bill by Senator Fulbright (D.-Ark.) to establish an Office of Technical Services under the Commerce Department. The office would be headed by a $10,000-a-year director. The Fulbright measure seeks to "stimulate and encourage technological research and development activities and their application to business, industry and commerce."

FEPC BILL FIGHT RAGES IN SENATE

JAN 23 1946

Tydings, Continuing Senate Filibuster, Says G.O.P. Seeks Negro Vote.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—(AP) Senator Tydings (D-Md.) told the Senate late today that the bill for a permanent Fair Employment Practices commission was "simply political shenanigans" and most Republicans were supporting it "to get the Negro vote."

He spoke after supporters of the FEPC had defeated, on a 33 to 24 roll call vote, his move to adjourn at 5 p.m. They kept it in session until 6 p.m., making the filibusters who have been talking since Thursday work one hour overtime.

"Why, there are senators voting for this bill who would move out of a hotel if a colored man came in and sat down in the dining room," Tydings shouted.

Smith Protests

Senator Smith (R-N.J.), FEPC supporter, protested that Tydings was confusing equality for education and work with "social equality."

Senator Ball (R-Minn.), another supporter, declared that a man of dark skin from India could enter any Washington hotel but that there would be discrimination against a Negro citizen of this country.

Tydings challenged FEPC backers to support an amendment which would prevent discrimination against a worker "because of his membership in or lack of membership in a union."

Ball and Senator Gurney (R-S.D.) said they would support the proposal but Gurney stipulated that it be made separate legislation.

Senator Chavez (D-N.M.) suggested that if Tydings had so much "moral courage" he should vote for "cloture"—limitation of debate in order to get a vote. FEPC backers claim enough votes for passage if the Senate ever votes.

"No, I won't vote for cloture," Tydings stormed. "It was cloture that crucified Christ on the cross."

Senator Russell (D-Ga.), who spoke for most of the day, told the Senate that Adolf Hitler if alive could get an American paperhanger's job under the FEPC bill.

Russell delivered an extended personal analysis of the measure, and about the nicest thing he called it was "this monstrosity."

"If Adolf Hitler could come over here," he declared, "he could hail an employer up before this FEPC kangaroo court and get a job as a paper-hanger and keep some American soldier from getting the job."

Taking the floor immediately after a quorum was assembled at 12:15 p.m., Russell stretched still further the filibuster which other Southern Democrats began against the measure Friday.

A Democratic official with lengthy experience in the Senate declared no break is in sight this week. While the filibuster is on, the Senate can transact no other business.

Russell said it is a misnomer to call the measure "the Fair Employment Practice Bill," or, as it formally is labeled on the first page, "a bill to prohibit discrimination in employment because of race, creed, color, national origin, or ancestry."

New Caption Offered

Instead, the Georgian suggested this caption for the bill:

"A bill to regulate and control the tastes, customs, habits and manners of life of the American people; to establish an independent agency to dominate the executive branch of government and to influence all policies of the government, whether foreign or domestic; to invite alien immigrants and assure them of employment to the detriment of the right of native-born Americans to work; to nationalize all employment in industry, business, agriculture and commerce, and to promote a Communistic form of government for the United States."

The measure would set up a five-member commission to investigate and police business, labor unions and government against discriminatory practices. Its orders could be appealed only to United States Circuit Courts.

Russell contended the bill is designed to "protect the Communists and enable them to get government jobs." Senator Chavez (D-N.M.), one of the sponsors of the bill, protested that surely Russell did not believe that he (Chavez), a Catholic, was seeking to aid Communists.

Russell retorted that the bill in some form or another had been before Congress long before the New Mexico senator's name was put on it.

"Every Communist and every Socialist in the country is supporting this bill," Russell said.

COMMUNIST PLOT CLAIMED

JAN 23 1946

Representative Links Charge To Soldier Demonstrations

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP)—Representative Dondero (R., Mich.) told the House today "a shrewd and well-organized Communist conspiracy" was seeking to "disintegrate our armed forces, to paralyze our foreign policy and further the interests of Soviet aggression throughout the world."

His conviction, he said, was based on these "probable facts":

"1. The records show that the ringleaders of the GI demonstrations in Honolulu were, in numerous instances, men with Communist records.

Attacks On "Imperialism"

"2. The statements presented by alleged GI representatives were in some cases not bona fide GI grievance but attacks upon so-called American imperialism reminiscent of the period of the Stalin-Hitler pact and recent Communist demonstrations before the State Department.

"3. The five demands presented by a so-called 'GI committee of liberation' in Paris on January 13, 1946, calling for the abolition of officers' privileges in mess halls, clubs, recreation centers and living quarters and the reform of courts-martial boards, is fully in line with the program drawn up for Communists in all countries, by the Communist international of its sixth world congress, July-August, 1928.

Cites Union Activity

"4. Communist-dominated unions like the National Maritime Union which sounded the Communist keynote at every turn of the party line, announcing that 'the Yanks are not coming' during Stalin's partnership with Hitler, calling for the opening of a second front after Russia was attacked by Hitler, are now demanding that we 'bring the GI's home.' The union pulled a one-day strike in support of its demand.

"5. The labor canteen in Honolulu, which has been a hotbed of Communist propaganda among the soldiers stationed in the vicinity, is today the headquarters of the so-called 'Oahu service men's committee for speedier demobilization.' The head of this canteen is Ewart G. Guinier, a well-known New York Communist fired by the New York Civil Service Commission in June, 1942."

Angry War Mothers Ambush Eisenhower in Washington

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—(AP) Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower walked into a verbal ambush of irate war mothers today, heard at length their complaints about demobilization, and promised them his autograph.

From half a dozen cities the mothers, about twenty of them representing organizations devoted to obtaining the release of soldier-fathers, gathered in a hallway in the House office building. They had heard that the army chief of staff was due to explain demobilization to the House Military committee.

Unwarned and unguarded, Eisenhower walked toward the committee room. Before he could dig in, he was backed into a corner of the office of Chairman May (D-Ky.) and faced a withering barrage of questions. They all dealt with the theme: "When do we get our husbands back?"

When he could get an answer in edgewise, Eisenhower, obviously embarrassed but in charge of the situation, told the women:

About 700,000 fathers are still in uniform and by July 1 all but 200,000 of them should be home. To turn them all loose now would be impossible.

"There will be no army," if that happens, he added.

The general told the mothers he sympathized with them and wished he could get all fathers home immediately. He also sympathized, he added, with non-married overseas veterans who think they should be given a chance to come home, get married and start families.

When the mothers concluded the unscheduled meeting with a request for the five star general's autograph, Eisenhower told them to write him letters and promised to answer all of them personally, over his signature.

Nearly Five Billions for Veterans Provided In First House Money Bill of New Session

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP)—A bill carrying $4,931,142,415 for veterans reached the House floor today as the first appropriation measure of the new session. It would provide funds for the Veterans' Administration and other Government agencies for the fiscal year, starting July 1. Debate begins tomorrow.

The measure would appropriate a total of $5,594,146,286. The appropriations committee slashed funds for most agencies below what they received this year, but had to add more for the Veterans' Administration. When it got through, the bill totaled $1,329,380,306 more than the corresponding appropriation for the current fiscal year.

The committee said that expenses for veterans of the two World Wars, which it numbered at 20,000,000, would continue to mount "enormously."

For benefits under the GI Bill of Rights alone the measure would allot $2,148,387,000. This is based on an estimate of 1,136,977 veterans who would receive unemployment compensation, 628,000 education allowances and 500,000 guaranteed loans. The bill would provide $147,442,500 to continue work on a program calling for a peak of 250,000 to 300,000 hospital beds by 1970.

In addition, there is $553,805,915 for administrative and other costs in Veterans' Administration offices, ninety-seven hospitals now in operation and twenty-five more to be added by July 1, 1947.

Other Veterans' Administration provisions include $5,500,000 for printing and mailing, $1,905,000,000 for compensation and pensions, and $171,007,000 for life insurance payments.

Funds for a score of other agencies are provided. The Civil Service Commission would get $12,060,500; Federal Communications Commission, $5,585,000; Federal Power Commission, $3,116,000; Federal Trade Commission, $2,139,120; Public Buildings Administration, $53,065,285; Public Roads Administration, $267,838,792; General Accounting Office, $40,300,000; Interstate Commerce Commission, $.,046,000; National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, $29,630,000 and Securities and Exchange Commission, $4,836,700.

NAVY ANNOUNCES NEW POINT CUTS

Discharge Score to Be Reduced to 31 March 15, 30 April 2.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 — (AP) The Navy announced tonight further cuts in point scores for discharge.

Effective March 15 and again on April 2, the latest changes are expected to make an additicnal 14,700 officers and 176,400 enlisted personnel eligible for release.

By April 2, reported Vice Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, chief of naval personnel, the Navy's demobilization program will be two-thirds completed. It now is scheduled to pass the half-way mark of 1,500,000 discharges by Feb. 1.

The critical score for enlisted men, last set at 32 points for release after March 2, is reduced to 31 points effective March 15 and 30 points effective April 2, the Navy statement said.

For male commissioned and warrant officers, the March 2 score of 39 is dropped to 38 after March 15 and 37 after April 2.

For women officers, the March 2 requirement of 27 points will continue in effect until April 2, when it will drop to 26.

For enlisted women, the March 2 requirement of 21 points will continue in effect until April 2, when it will drop to 20.

For male doctors, the March 2 score of 49 is reduced to 48 after March 15 and 40 after April 2.

Reductions also were made in point requirements for varied classes of personnel "whose eligibility for demobilization" Admiral Denfeld said, "has demanded a slightly higher score because of their essential duties."

Further Cuts Seen

"In the case of enlisted personnel in these classifications," he continued, "it is anticipated that on or before June 2, 1946, we shall be able to effect further reduction which will bring their scores on a par with the general scores for all men and female enlisted personnel."

Meanwhile, the Navy announced it had granted 1,434,054 discharges from V-J day to the start of this week. Discharges last week totaled 74,543.

Points are accumulated in the Navy at the rate of a half point for each month on active duty and each year of age, and one-fourth point for each month of service outside the United States. In addition, 10 are allowed persons with one or more dependents.

Single Surplus Unit For Vets Is Wanted

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP)—The American Legion said today it has found "impossible obstacles" in the way of veterans seeking to buy surplus Government property.

Ralph H. Lavers, director of the Legion's employment division, said a crosscountry tour indicated to him that there "is a lack of organization in the disposal of surplus property" to veterans, for whom Congress provided purchasing priorities.

"Too many agencies continue to be involved, such as the RFC, the Smaller War Plants Corporation and the maritime and military establishments," Lavers reported in a statement.

"One agency should handle the business."

Gives Examples

Asserting that the Legion will seek legislation to eliminate some of the difficulties he said veterans are encountering, Lavers cited these examples:

In Idaho, a veteran drove 400 miles to Medford, Ore., to take possession of a truck for which he had a certificate of purchase. But he found that a private dealer had bought 31 trucks the day before and none was left.

In the Portland (Ore.) region veterans must go to Seattle, in Washington State, to receive certificates to pick up property located at Medford, Oregon, southeast of Portland.

Under present law veterans may purchase surplus property after Federal agencies and state and municipal governments have had their pick. A pending amendment would give veterans first choice after the Federal Government.

NAVY CRITICIZES SNYDER'S ORDER

Washington, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—A naval officer told Congress today that the Navy Department was "bludgeoned" into accepting an order by John W. Snyder, Director of Reconversion, to suspend construction of thirty-seven ships in various stages of construction.

The statement was made by Vice-Admiral Edward L. Cochrane, chief of the Navy's Bureau of Ships, in response to questioning by Representative Carl Vinson (D.-Ga.), chairman of the House Navy Committee. The committee is investigating what some of its members contend is excessive authority wielded by Snyder. The reconversion director in ordering the cutback in Navy construction, said the action was taken to conserve money and materials and clear shipyards for other work.

Cochrane told the group that the President, or any one designated by him, such as Snyder, could order a halt to expenditures, even if money has been provided by Congress.

Representative W. Sterling Cole (R.-N. Y.), asked if taking action contrary to the will of Congress isn't "a basis for impeachment."

CLARK NOMINATED AS MAJOR GENERAL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—(AP) Mark W. Clark, recently assailed by a veterans' group because of a costly battle in the Italian campaign, was nominated today for the permanent rank of major general by President Truman.

The names of ten other well known wartime leaders were sent to the Senate for promotion to the same permanent rank.

The nominees include six who were full generals under temporary wartime ranking: Courtney Hicks Hodges, Jacob Loucks Devers, George Churchill Kenney, Carl Spaatz, Thomas Troy Handy and Clark.

Four others were temporary lieutenant generals: Ira Clarence Eaker, Robert Lawrence Eichelberger, Walter Bedell Smith and Robert Charlwood Richardson Jr.

Maj. Gen. Thomas Bernard Larkin was nominated to that rank permanently and for appointment as quartermaster general. He would serve a four-year period succeeding Lt. Gen. Edmund B. Gregory.

Brig. Gen. Thomas Jefferson Davis was nominated for that rank permanently and as assistant to the quartermaster general for four years.

Mr. Truman promoted 23 temporary lieutenant generals and three major generals to the permanent rank of brigadier general.

Republican Named To Maritime Post

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP)—President Truman today nominated Richards Parkhurst, of Massachusetts, to be a member of the Maritime Commission.

Parkhurst, a Republican and a member of the Boston Port Authority, was named to succeed Vice Admiral Howard L. Vickery, resigned. He would serve for Vickery's six-year term which began April 16, 1942.

The President also sent to the Senate the nomination of Clarence M. Young, of California, to succeed Edward P. Warner on the Civil Aeronautics Board for the term expiring December 31, 1946.

Senator White (R., Maine), who called at the White House earlier in the day, told reporters on leaving that he hoped the President would name "a couple of Republicans" to fill existing vacancies on the Maritime Commission.

UNO INSPECTS SITES NEAR HUB

Prince's Mansion Is Among Estates Visited.

Boston, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—The United Nations Organization site selection committee today inspected a vast area of beautifully wooded terrain along the North Shore and for a considerable distance inland.

Included in the inspection tour was the grim stone mansion of Frederick H. Prince, containing forty rooms. Prince has offered the 1,000-acre estate to UNO gratis.

In a prominent position in the big tapestry-hung drawing room was a life-size portrait by Frank Benson of Lieut. Norman Prince, the owner's son, one of the founders of the Lafayette Escadrille, who lost his life in world war I.

Francois Briere, French member of the committee, asked a caretaker if he might see Lieut. Prince's room.

"His memory is very dear to us," Briere said.

The French representative also inspected a bullet-pierced cylinder head from the plane in which young Prince was killed.

The tour took the committee on through parts of Beverly, Essex and Ipswich. At Ipswich it inspected the ninety-room towering brick summer home of the late R. T. Crane, plumbing fixture manufacturer.

The committee was met at Beverly by Mayor Daniel E. McLean and other members of a Beverly-North Shore site committee. They guided the committee through the now unoccupied N. T. Metcalf estate on a promontory overlooking Beverly harbor.

On the trip to Essex from Manchester, the site committee glimpsed the wooded section known as the cathedral pines, and in Essex passed a shipyard where wooden fishing vessels of the Gloucester fleet are constructed. They saw two ships on the stocks undergoing finishing touches.

The committee was assured by the local party of fifty-four acres between the ocean and the Newburyport Turnpike, but if they wished to extend beyond the pike, there was 176 square miles in all available.

Mayor McLean added that if the area offered were accepted, only 2,000 persons now living there would be displaced.

Jesuit War Losses Set At $12,000,000

Chicago, Jan. 22 (AP)—The Rev. Bernard R. Hubbard, S.J., said today that more than $12,000,000 would be needed for relief and rehabilitation of Jesuit churches, colleges, schools and other institutions destroyed in Europe.

Father Hubbard, the "Glacier Priest" of Alaska and the University of Santa Clara, Cal., reported to a national conference of representatives of American Jesuit provinces on his survey in Germany, Austria, France, Italy and other war-torn countries in the interests of the Jesuit Order.

"THIS SITUATION, WHICH MEANS INTERNAL INTERFERENCE IN THE AFFAIRS OF FREECE, WITH THE AID OF ARMED FORCES OF A FOREIGN POWER, HAS CREATED A TENSION WHICH IS FRAUGHT WITH GREAT CONSEQUENCES FOR THE GREEK PEOPLE AS WELL AS FOR THE MAINTENANCE OF PEACE AND SECURITY."

"IN THE OPINION OF THE UKRAINIAN GOVERNMENT THIS SITUATION HAS CREATED A STATE OF THREAT TO THE MAINTENANCE OF INTERNATIONAL PEACE AND SECURITY X X X."

THE ALLIED COMMAND ORDERED BRITISH TROOPS INTO INDONESIA, AFTER THE JAPANESE SURRENDER, TO MOP UP ENEMY REMNANTS AND TO PROTECT RELEASED INTERNEES AND PRISONERS OF WAR.

BRITAIN'S EFFORTS TO QUELL THE INDONESIAN UPRISING THAT FOLLOWED THE END OF THE WAR RESULTED IN CHARGES ABROAD THAT SHE WAS ATTEMPTING TO PRESERVE DUTCH IMPERIALISM. THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT CONTENDED THAT IT WAS MERELY CARRYING OUT AN ALLIED ASSIGNMENT.

LONDON, WEDNESDAY, JAN. 23-(AP)-A NEWS COMMENTATOR ON THE MOSCOW RADIO SAID TODAY IN DISCUSSING THE LONDON UNITED NATIONS CONFERENCE THAT THE IRANIAN DELEGATION HAD MADE "FANTASTIC AND UNFOUNDED ACCUSATIONS" AGAINST THE SOVIET UNION TO THE SECURITY COUNCIL.

THAT WAS THE ONLY MENTION MADE BY THE COMMENTATOR OF A CHARGE PLACE BEFORE THE COUNCIL THAT RUSSIA WAS INTERFERING IN THE POLITICAL AFFAIRS OF IRAN.

THE COMMENTATOR REITERATED CLAIMS MADE SEVERAL TIMES PREVIOUSLY OVER THE MOSCOW RADIO THAT THERE ARE "INNUMERABLE VOICES TO BE HEARD IN THE FOREIGN PRESS WHO ARE TRYING TO BACK UP SMALL POWERS AGAINST THE GREAT POWERS AND TO SOW DISTRUST IN THE ROWS OF THE UNITED NATIONS."

LONDON, JAN. 22 -- (AP) -- THE ADMIRALTY TONIGHT ANNOUNCED OFFICIALLY THE DESTRUCTION OF MORE THAN 100 SURRENDERED GERMAN U-BOATS, FINALLY REVEALING THE POOREST KEPT "SECRET" OF THE WAR.

DURING THE LAST WEEK IN NOVEMBER, 1945, CORRESPONDENTS AND PHOTOGRAPHERS WERE PUT ABOARD WARSHIPS OF THE ROYAL NAVY TO WITNESS THE SUB-SCUTTLING IN THE NORTH ATLANTIC, WITH THE UNDERSTANDING THEIR STORIES WOULD BE HELD FOR OFFICIAL RELEASE.

ON NOV. 29, THE LONDON DAILY EXPRESS AND OTHER NEWSPAPERS OWNED BY LORD BEAVERBROOK CARRIED THE STORY WITHOUT PERMISSION.

30.24 — 495

ON DEC. 1, LONDON NEWSPAPERS PRINTED PICTURES OF THE OPERATION AND THE LONDON PHOTO AGENCIES RELEASED THEIR SHOTS OF THE ACTION.

A FEW WEEKS LATER NEWSREELS APPEARED SHOWING PLANES STRAFING AND BOMBING THE SUBMARINES.

STILL THE ADMIRALTY REFUSED TO LIFT THE EMBARGO.

"IT'S THE GOVERNMENT, OLD THING," SAID AN ADMIRALTY SPOKESMAN EXPLAINING AWAY THE PEACETIME CENSORSHIP.

ADMITTING "IT ALL IS PERFECTLY RIDICULOUS," HE SAID ON RELEASE OF THE STORY THE EMBARGO HAD NOT BEEN LIFTED BECAUSE "IT IS A POLITICAL MATTER BETWEEN BRITAIN, AMERICA AND THE RUSSIANS".

TONIGHT WORD FINALLY CAME:

"YOU CAN GO AHEAD WITH THE STORY."

ON JAN. 2, LORD BEAVERBROOK'S EVENING STANDARD PUBLISHED A PAGE-ONE STORY THAT FIVE OF THE TEN GERMAN SUBMARINES WHICH WERE GIVEN TO THE RUSSIANS FOR EXPERIMENTALY PURPOSES HAD BEEN DELIVERED BY BRITISH CREWS TO THE BALTIC PORT OF LIBAU, (ON THE WEST COAST OF LATVIA).

THE STORY SAID THE U-BOAT FLOTILLA WAS ESCORTED ON THE TEN-DAY VOYAGE FROM LONDONDERRY BY BRITISH DESTROYERS, AND QUOTED A BRITISH SAILOR AS SAYING THE SAILING HAD BEEN A "HUSH-HUSH" AFFAIR.

ASKED FOR CONFIRMATION, THE ADMIRALTY EXPRESSED REGRET AND A SPOKESMAN EXPLAINED THAT NO COMMENT COULD BE GIVEN BECAUSE IT WAS ALL PART OF THE STORY THAT WAS BEING WITHHELD.

BERLIN, JAN. 22-(AP)-THE ALLIED CONTROL COUNCIL WAS DIVIDED TODAY AS TO HOW MUCH STEEL GERMANY SHOULD BE ALLOWED TO PRODUCE IN THE FUTURE.

FOLLOWING A MEETING OF THE COUNCIL YESTERDAY, AN AMERICAN OFFICIAL SAID U.S., RUSSIAN AND FRENCH REPRESENTATIVES WISHED TO PEG GERMAN STEEL PRODUCTION AT 5,800,000 INGOT TONS A YEAR AS A BASIS FOR DETERMINING THE LEVEL OF THE INDUSTRY IN GERMANY'S PEACETIME ECONOMY, WHILE GREAT BRITAIN FAVORED A MEAN FIGURE OF 7,500,000 TONS.

THE BRITISH PLAN, THE AMERICAN SAID, WOULD MEAN A HIGHER LIVING STANDARD FOR GERMANY.

AT AN EARLIER MEETING OF THE COUNCIL, REPRESENTATIVES OF ALL FOUR POWERS AGREED GERMANY SHOULD BE ALLOWED STEEL PRODUCTION NOT EXCEEDING 5,800,000 INGOT TONS AND THAT EVERY YEAR THIS FIGURE WOULD BE SUBJECT TO REVIEW AND POSSIBLE CHANGE.

YESTERDAY, HOWEVER, THE BRITISH INSISTED THE 5,800,000 FIGURE WAS TOO LOW TO ASSURE GERMANY A DECENT STANDARD OF LIVING.

BATAVIA, JAVA, JAN. 22-(AP)-PREMIER SUTAN SJAHRIR OF THE UNRECOGNIZED INDONESIAN REPUBLIC SAID TODAY THE INDONESIANS WOULD PREFER FOR THE BRITISH TO REMAIN IN THE NETHERLANDS EAST INDIES UNTIL THE JAPANESE HAVE BEEN REMOVED.

EXPRESSING INDONESIAN APPRECIATION OF THE WORLD INTEREST IN JAVA, AS EVIDENCED BY SOVIET ACTION BEFORE THE UNITED NATIONS ORGANIZATION, SJAHRIR SAID:

"IF THE BRITISH WITHDREW NOW THE JAPANESE MIGHT REFUSE TO LAY DOWN ARMS AND MIGHT RESIST."

THE PREMIER SAID WHEN THE TKR (INDONESIAN PEACE PRESERVATION CORPS) REMOVES THE JAPANESE AND THE ORGANIZATION FOR THE REPATRIATION OF ALLIED PRISONERS OF WAR AND INTERNEES THE "BRITISH SHOULD BE SUFFICIENTLY CONVINCED OF INDONESIAN ADMINISTRATIVE ABILITY TO ENABLE THEM TO QUIT JAVA PROMPTLY AFTER THE ALLIED POWERS' ASSIGNMENT IS COMPLETED."

THE FIRST STEP IN REMOVING THE ALLIED ORGANIZATION FOR REPATRIATION OF ALLIED PRISONERS OF WAR ALREADY HAD BEEN TAKEN, HE SAID.

SJAHRIR SAID HIS GOVERNMENT HAD NOT APPEALED TO THE UNITED NATIONS, PREFERRING TO HOLD SUCH ACTION IN RESERVE IN CASE OTHER ATTEMPTS TO REACH A SETTLEMENT FAILED. INDONESIAN NATIONALISTS ARE OPPOSING THE CONTINUATION OF DUTCH RULE.

SJAHRIR SAID, HOWEVER, IF IT WAS NECESSARY TO SUBMIT THE MATTER TO THE UNITED NATIONS, IT WAS MOST APPROPRIATE FOR RUSSIA TO TAKE THE ACTION BECAUSE SHE WAS THE MAJOR POWER WITH THE LEAST DIRECT INTEREST IN INDONESIA AND THUS WAS BETTER ABLE TO PRESENT THE CASE AS A MORAL ISSUE.

PETER KIERSTENS, NETHERLANDS EAST INDIES EDUCATION DIRECTOR AND FORMER MINISTER OF ECONOMICS, PRESENTED THE DUTCH VIEWPOINT TO THE SOVIET PROPOSAL:

"THIS SHOWS HOW DANGEROUS IT IS WHEN A POWER HAS RUSSIA'S GLAMOR AND AUTHORITY BUT HAS NO RESPONSIBLE KNOWLEDGE OF REAL CONDITIONS. IT WOULD BE IRRESPONSIBLE IF THE BRITISH WITHDREW UTTERLY, AND DISASTROUS FOR THE INDONESIANS.

"IF RUSSIA COULD READ THE HEART OF SJAHRIR AND OTHER INDONESIANS, SHE WOULD SEE EXACTLY THE SAME REACTION. THEY ARE LONGING TO RETURN TO THE OLD DUTCH-INDONESIAN FRIENDSHIPS UNDER CHANGED CONDITIONS WITH BETTER CHANCES FOR THE INDONESIANS.

MANILA, TUESDAY, JAN 22-(AP)-COMMISSIONER PAUL V.MCNUTT, DESCRIBING THE PHILIPPINES' SITUATION AS CRITICAL," TODAY CABLED PRESIDENT TRUMAN URGING PASSAGE OF THE BELL REHABILITATION AND TRADE BILL TO PREVENT WHAT HE SAID WOULD BE SERIOUS CONSEQUENCES IN THE ISLAND

"IT DOES NOT AT THIS MOMENT SEEM HUMANLY POSSIBLE FOR THE FILIPINO PEOPLE--RAVAGED AND DEMORALIZED BY THE CRUELEST AND MOST DESTRUCTIVE OF WARS, POLITICALLY SPLIT BETWEEN LOYALISTS AND ENEMY COLLABORATORS, AND WITH SEVERAL SIZEABLE WELL-ARMED DISSIDENT GROUPS STILL AT LARGE--TO COPE WITH THE COINCIDENCE OF POLITICAL INDEPENDENCE AND THE TREMENDOUS ECONOMIC DEMANDS OF REHABILITATION," MCNUTT SAID IN HIS MESSAGE TO THE PRESIDENT. "THE SITUATION HERE IS CRITICAL."

THE COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE SAID MCNUTT CABLED TRUMAN IN RESPONSE TO "INFORMATION FROM WASHINGTON THAT SOME OPPOSITION OF AN UNDEFINED NATURE HAD DEVELOPED FROM UNEXPECTED SOURCES" TO THE BELL MEASURE, WHICH WOULD GUARANTEE PHILIPPINE-AMERICAN FREE TRADE FOR EIGHT YEARS AFTER 1946 AND IMPOSE A GRADUALLY RISING TARIFF SCALE THEREAFTER.

MCNUTT SAID THE BELL BILL IS "THE CENTRAL FEATURE IN THE REHABILITATION OF THE PHILIPPINES." HE TRACED THE DEVELOPMENT OF PHILIPPINE-AMERICAN TRADE RELATIONS AND DECLARED "IT SHOULD BE OBVIOUS THAT AFTER 30 YEARS OF FORCED DEVELOPMENT INTO ALMOST COMPLETE DEPENDENCE ON THE UNITED STATES MARKET A SUDDEN REVERSAL OF THAT ECONOMY IS IMPOSSIBLE WITHOUT COURTING DISASTER; THE MISTAKE WAS OURS AND WE HAVE AN OBLIGATION TO ADOPT REMEDIAL MEASURES.

"A BITTER FILIPINO REACTION AGAINST THE UNITED STATES" WILL DEVELOP IF WE FAIL IN REHABILITATION OF THEIR DESTROYED CITIES, INDUSTRIES, TRADE AND FINANCE," MCNUTT WARNED IN POINTING OUT THAT DAMAGE DONE IN THE PHILIPPINES OCCURRED WHEN THE PEOPLE BECAME INVOLVED IN WAR BECAUSE THEY WERE UNDER AMERICAN SOVEREIGNTY.

"A DISASTROUS END TO OUR EXPERIMENT HERE MEANS MORE THAN LOSS OF PRIDE ON OUR PART AND MISERY FOR THE FILIPINOS. IT WOULD MEAN DISILLUSION FOR ALL ASIA," THE COMMISSIONER CONCLUDED.

ANXIETY ALSO HAS BEEN EXPRESSED HERE BECAUSE CHAIRMAN BELL OF THE HOUSE INSULAR AFFAIRS COMMITTEE HAS ANNOUNCED THE TYDINGS WAR REPARATIONS MEASURE FOR THE PHILIPPINES NEED NOT BE CONSIDERED BY HIS COMMITTEE UNTIL HIS TARIFF BILL IS ACTED UPON BY THE WAYS AND MEANS GROUP.

AUTHORITATIVE SOURCES CLOSE TO THE PRESIDENTIAL PALACE HAVE REPORTED PRESIDENT OSMENA IS CONSIDERING A TRIP TO THE UNITED STATES TO PLEAD FOR SWIFT PASSAGE OF BOTH MEASURES, EVEN THOUGH HIS CAMPAIGN FOR RE-ELECTION APRIL 23 IS JUST STARTING.

"REP.DONDERO'S BLAST AGAINST ME AND THE HONOLULU LABOR CANTEEN IS IN REALITY DIRECTED AGAINST ALL G.I.'S. SERVICEMEN ALL OVER THE WORLD EXPRESSED THEIR DETERMINATION TO CONTINUE TO PERFORM NECESSARY OCCUPATION DUTIES IN GERMANY AND JAPAN, WHILE AT THE SAME TIME PROTESTING DELAYS IN DEMOBILIZATION ARISING OUT OF THE OCCUPATION OF FRIENDLY TERRITORIES SUCH AS CHINA AND THE PHILIPPINES.

"UNABLE TO ANSWER THESE PROTESTS, HEADLINE HUNTERS ARE RESORTING TO THE OLD TRICK OF APPLYING THE RED SMEAR. I AM NEITHER A COMMUNIST NOR HEAD OF THE HONOLULU LABOR CANTEEN. BUT RESPECT FOR FACTS NEVER HAS BEEN THE CONCERN OF RED BAITERS AND RACE BAITERS...

MOOKINI ASSERTED IN HIS STATEMENT THAT DONDERO'S ACCUSATION THE HONOLULU LABOR CANTEEN IS "A HOTBED OF COMMUNIST PROPAGANDA," AND HIS OTHER CHARGES ARE "BALD-FACED LIES."

THE STATEMENT ADDED: "IF THE REPRESENTATIVE'S STATEMENTS BEFORE THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES ARE AS ACCURATE AS HIS CHARGE THAT THE HEAD OF THIS CANTEEN IS EWART G.GUINIER, THEN I MUST SAY HE IS OF LITTLE VALUE TO OUR COUNTRY DURING THIS PERIOD OF INDUSTRIAL CRISIS.

(CX) AN ASSISTANT LABOR SECRETARY ANNOUNCED LAST (TUESDAY) NIGHT THAT ACTION IS PLANNED IN THE MEAT PACKING INDUSTRY'S STRIKE, DECLARING "THE GOVERNMENT IS GOING TO SEIZE--THAT'S MY UNDERSTANDING" BUT A WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMAN SAID NO SEIZURE PROPOSAL WAS BEING CONSIDERED YET FOR THE STRIKE OF 750,000 CIO STEEL WORKERS.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF LABOR JOHN W.GIBSON SAID HE UNDERSTOOD THE PACKING FIRMS WOULD BE SEIZED WITHOUT DELAY DESPITE FAILURE TO OBTAIN A PROMISE THAT 193,000 CIO MEAT WORKERS WOULD RETURN TO WORK FOR A FEDERAL BOSS. HE ADDED, HOWEVER, THAT THE 70,000 AFL STRIKERS INVOLVED HAD AGREED TO RETURN TO THEIR JOBS.

"THE CIO PEOPLE HAVE MADE NO COMMITMENTS," GIBSON TOLD REPORTERS AFTER A DAY LONG MEETING WITH UNION LEADERS IN THE MEAT DISPUTE. "THEY DID NOT SAY THEY WOULD REFUSE TO RETURN--THEY SIMPLY DID NOT SAY WHETHER THEY WOULD OR NOT."

GIBSON SAID THIS WOULD NOT DELAY THE SEIZURE ORDER, ADDING: "THE GOVERNMENT IS GOING TO SEIZE, THAT'S MY UNDERSTANDING."

IN THE STEEL DISPUTE, CIO PRESIDENT PHILIP MURRAY APPEALED TO SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY VINSON TO "TAKE IMMEDIATE STEPS TO TERMINATE" TAX REBATE PROVISIONS IN THE PRESENT REVENUE LAWS. MURRAY CONTENDED THESE WOULD ENABLE THE STEEL COMPANIES TO KEEP ALL PLANTS CLOSED IN 1946 AND STILL BENEFIT FINANCIALLY.

"ASSUMING THAT THE STEEL COMPANIES IN 1946 BREAK EVEN--THAT IS, DO NOT MAKE ANY NET PROFITS--THE UNITED STATES TREASURY WILL ACTUALLY PAY THE INDUSTRY $149,000,000," MURRAY SAID IN A LETTER. "THE U.S. TREASURY IS BEING MULCTED FOR THE BENEFIT OF A PRIVILEGED FEW BENT IN SINISTER CONSPIRACY TO PLUNGE THE COUNTRY INTO ECONOMIC CHAOS."

IN AN EFFORT TO BREAK A DEADLOCK IN WAGE DISCUSSIONS FOR THE NATION'S 650,000 SHIPYARD WORKERS, GOVERNMENT PROCUREMENT AGENCIES YESTERDAY RECOMMENDED A 15 PER CENT WAGE INCREASE. THIS WOULD AMOUNT TO ABOUT 18 CENTS AN HOUR FOR STANDARD MECHANICS IN SHIPYARDS WHO NOW RECEIVE $1.20. THE PROPOSAL WAS MADE TO THE WORKING COMMITTEE OF THE SHIPBUILDING WAGE STABILIZATION CONFERENCE IN WASHINGTON BY THE WAR AND NAVY DEPARTMENTS, THE MARITIME COMMISSION AND THE LABOR DEPARTMENT.

LITTLE ACTUAL PROGRESS WAS REPORTED, MEANWHILE, IN COMPOSING ISSUES IN ANY DISPUTES WHICH HAVE RUN THE NUMBER OF STRIKE-IDLE IN THE NATION TO A RECORD 27-YEAR AND POSSIBLY ALL TIME HIGH OF 1,622,000.

THE FORD MOTOR COMPANY DENIED A REPORT PUBLISHED IN THE DETROIT NEWS THAT FORD SOON WOULD OFFER THE CIO-UAW A NEW WAGE OFFER PROBABLY PARALLELING THE 18 1/2 CENTS BOOST PRESIDENT TRUMAN RECOMMENDED FOR THE STEEL INDUSTRY. FORD SAID IT CONSIDERED ITS LAST OFFER OF 17 1/2 CENTS "MOST SUBSTANTIAL."

SECRETARY OF LABOR SCHWELLENBACH APPOINTED TWO GOVERNMENT MEDIATORS IN THE STRIKE OF 200,000 CIO ELECTRICAL WORKERS. THE TWO WENT INTO SESSION WITH REPRESENTATIVES OF THE GENERAL ELECTRIC AND WESTINGHOUSE COMPANIES AND THE STRIKING CIO UNITED ELECTRICAL WORKERS.

THE BILL, WHICH WAS SENT TO THE FLOOR FOR EARLY CONSIDERATION, DENIES BOARDS AUTHORITY TO SUBPOENA RECORDS AND WITNESSES AND PROVIDES NO "COOLING OFF" PERIODS FOR LABOR.

THERE WAS GENERAL EXPECTATION AMONG CONGRESSMEN, HOWEVER, THAT EFFORTS TO RESTORE THE PROVISIONS THE PRESIDENT ADVOCATED WOULD BE MADE IN THE FORM OF AMENDMENTS.

MR.TRUMAN HAS SAID THE BOARDS WOULD BE HANDICAPPED WITHOUT ACCESS TO COMPANY RECORDS AND HE ALSO WANTED STRIKES PROHIBITED FOR 30 DAY "COOLING OFF" PERIODS TO GIVE FACT-FINDERS TIME TO AIR THE DISPUTES.

THE WORK PARALYSIS ENGENDERED BY THE GREAT STEEL STRIKE SPREAD TO RAILROAD AND RIVER BARGE WORKMEN AND COAL MINERS IN PENNSYLVANIA AS BENJAMIN F.FAIRLESS, PRESIDENT OF THE U.S. STEEL CORP., FOLLOWED LABOR'S LEAD IN DISOWNING RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE STEEL SHUTDOWN.

FAIRLESS SAID IN A STATEMENT THAT THE CORPORATION MET LABOR'S WAGE DEMANDS "MORE THAN HALF WAY" AND ADDED RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE STRIKE "RESTS WITH THE UNION."

IN WASHINGTON, THE GOVERNMENT MARKED TIME IN THE STEEL STRIKE BUT PRESIDENT TRUMAN ASKED HIS STEEL FACT-FINDING BOARD TO CONTINUE ITS STUDY OF PRICE AND COST DATA AND STAND BY FOR FURTHER CONSULTATION.

REDS BLOCK CHOICE OF UNO SECRETARY

PARIS

Security Council Unable to Agree on Appointment of Key Officer.

Secretary Deadlock Unbroken

London, Jan. 23 (AP)—Members of the United Nations Security Council met informally tonight but again failed to agree on a candidate for the key post of UNO secretary general.

The stumbling block was said to be Russian insistence that since the headquarters of the new peace organization are to be in the United States, the secretary should be from some nation in eastern Europe.

Informed quarters said no further discussions would take place for several days. There was speculation that Soviet representatives would ask for further instructions from Moscow. Tonight's meeting followed a fruitless session earlier in the day by American, British, Russian, French and Chinese representatives in attempts to agree upon a candidate.

Economic, Social Council Setup

But while this deadlock continued, the UNO speedily and unanimously set up its Economic and Social Council, potentially one of the most important organs of the new peace agency.

British officials, meanwhile, raised the question whether the Security Council should at this time investigate Soviet charges of British "interference" in Java. They indicated, however, that Britain would welcome an immediate inquiry into similar charges regarding British forces in Greece.

Indian Heads The Council

By acclamation, the eighteen members of the Economic and Social Council elected Sir Ramaswami Mudaliar, of India, as president, and then adopted procedures under which they can tackle the assigned task of raising world living standards and removing economic causes of war.

Ambassador John G. Winant, American representative on the council, declared that "seldom before in human history has an organization been created with greater opportunity to serve mankind than has been given the Economic and Social Council."

The biggest remaining organizational issue for the UNO is election of the secretary general. Under the rules of procedure, the United States, Britain, France, China and Russia must agree on a nominee.

Pearson Majority Reported

James F. Byrnes, American Secretary of State, met today with the British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin; Andrei Vishinsky, Soviet Vice Commissar of Foreign Affairs; Joseph Paul-Boncour, of France, and Ambassador Wellington Koo, of China, but they failed to reach an agreement immediately on a choice.

Lester Pearson, Canadian Ambassador to the United States, was reported reliably to have a majority within the eleven-member council, but was understood to lack the support of Russia, Poland, the Ukraine and France.

Other interest focused on whether the Security Council, expected to meet tomorrow or Friday, would act immediately on Soviet charges that Britain's policies in Greece and Indonesia were threatening world peace and security.

Official British quarters said investigation of British policy in Greece would make known the "true record" of her actions and allay Russian suspicions.

British Attitude On Indonesia

But as to the Indonesian situation, the official British attitude was that empire troops are in Java at the request of the Allied chiefs of staff. It also was suggested that Britain could not withdraw her forces while a state of war existed.

In Commons, meeting near UNO headquarters, Bevin answered "I certainly do," when asked if he believed putting Dutch troops in Java at this time "might precipitate disaster."

Meanwhile, a plenary session of UNO's General Assembly, scheduled for this afternoon, was postponed until 10.30 A.M. tomorrow, upsetting Byrnes's plans for the immediate creation of a commission to set up atomic energy controls.

Report Not Completed

The delay came because the political and security committee's report, including the atomic control plan, had not been completed.

France stated her intention today of placing under United Nations trusteeship the Togoland and Cameroon territories in Africa which have been under her mandate since the first World War.

Henri Ponsot, of the French delegation, was applauded by delegates to the trusteeship committee when he assured them France would respect the letter and spirit of the San Francisco Charter regarding mandated territories.

BIG 5 REPORTED DISAGREED ON UNO SECRETARY

Byrnes Understood to Have Backed Lester Pearson at Secret Caucus.

BEVIN AND VISHINSKY ATTEND

U. S. Delegates Deny Pressure to Delay Action on Iranian and Soviet Complaints.

(HIGHTOWER)

London, Jan. 23 (A. P.)—The top men of the five principal Powers met secretly for an hour and a half in the office of Secretary of State Byrnes today and were reported to have failed again to agree on a candidate for Secretary-General of the United Nations Organization, leading to express fear that the big five were drifting toward a deadlock on the question, made more acute by the charges brought by Iran against Russia and by Russia against the British in Greece and Indonesia.

American officials had hoped to make swift progress on the situation today, both at the five-Power meeting and a later informal session of representatives of all eleven members of the Security Council members, so that the UNO could begin building its permanent staff. All five Powers must agree for the full Council to nominate a man whom the General Assembly may then accept or reject.

United States Backing Pearson.

The United States is reported backing Lester Pearson, Canadian Ambassador to Washington, for the $20,000 a year post. Russia has been advocating the candidacy of Trygve Lie, Foreign Minister of Norway.

Those attending the meeting, in addition to Byrnes, were Andrei Vishinsky, Soviet Vice-Commissar for Foreign Affairs, who arrived here yesterday to head Russia's delegation; Foreign Secretary Bevin and Paul Boncour and Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, representing France and China respectively.

Shortly before this secret gathering of diplomats, British officials were authoritatively reported to have discussed with the French delegates an approach by the British Government to the Security Council's handling of the Russian complaints against British policy in Greece and Indonesia.

[In a broadcast from London today NBC declared that an official announcement issued by the American delegation denies emphatically that American pressure has been brought to bear to postpone Security Council action on the Russian or Persian complaints.]

Meanwhile today the UNO postponed until tomorrow its scheduled action to set up machinery to guard against an atomic war. American officials said the delay was a technical one.

There was no indication that the plan—sponsored by the United States, Great Britain, Soviet Russia and Canada—would meet any serious opposition. The proposal received its first test on Monday before the Assembly's Political and Security Committee, which approved it by a vote of 46 to 0. Its importance, however, was underscored by Byrnes's announcement that he would return to Washington immediately after the commission is created.

The office of Gladwyn Jebb, UNO executive secretary, said: "We moved up the meeting to today because Byrnes wanted to get back to America as soon as possible, but have had to cancel it for today because of getting the (Political and Security) Committee's report ready for the Assembly."

With Byrnes's return to America, Edward R. Stettinius Jr. will head the American delegation when the UNO begins consideration of the Iranian complaints against Russia and the Russian complaints against British policies in Greece and Indonesia.

Greeks Plan UNO Action.

Athens, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—Premier Themistokles Sophoulis announced that his Government would today cable instructions to Foreign Minister John Sophianopoulos in London in connection with the Russian demand that the UNO Security Council investigate the presence of British troops in Greece.

Sophianopoulos heads the Greek delegation to the UNO Assembly. The Premier said yesterday that British troops were in Greece with the full consent of his administration.

AFL Seeks Equal Rights In UNO

London, Jan. 20 (AP)—The American Federation of Labor has requested the same status in the United Nations Organization as may be granted to the World Federation of Trade Unions, with which the CIO is affiliated, the UNO secretariat said today.

The secretariat made public a telegram from Robert J. Watt, international representative of the AFL, describing the WFTU application for participation in the UNO with a vote on the economic and social council as representing "the hasty pressure of an untried organization to obtain a status on a level with sovereign nations." Watt arrived in London last week.

Request Withdrawn

The WFTU has now withdrawn its request for a vote on the economic and social council, but has maintained its application for a right to participate in UNO discussions.

The secretariat also announced that the International Democratic Federation of Women, organized in France and claiming to represent "81,000,000 women organized throughout the world," had asked to participate in the UNO with a right to vote on the economic and social council.

American members of the executive committee were listed as Mrs. Muriel Draper, a Dr. Weltfish and Mrs. Vivian C. Mason.

HALIFAX HAILS INQUIRY BY UNO

Invites Study of Greece, Indonesia and Iran.

Washington, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—The Earl of Halifax said today that Great Britain would be "entirely happy" to have the problems of Indonesia, Greece and Iran discussed with the United Nations Security Council.

The British Ambassador made this comment to reporters after a twenty-five-minute conference with Acting Secretary of State Acheson during which, Halifax said, they discussed "minor things which needed clearing up." Halifax, reported to be planning to retire next spring, also had an appointment with President Truman.

Asked his opinion of the Indonesian situation, Halifax called attention to newspaper reports which quoted the Indonesian Prime Minister as saying that it would be a great misfortune if British troops left there "before things are tidied up."

Then he added:

"We would be entirely happy to have all these matters discussed with the Security Council if they see fit—Indonesia, Greece and Iran. We should naturally give them all the help we could."

Silent on Resignation.

He declined to discuss the report that he will resign and return to England, beyond saying that it was "something bound to happen eventually."

At the White House, he told reporters that Winston Churchill, former British Prime Minister, may make a speech in New York, but that there was nothing definite about it yet. Churchill is now on vacation in Florida.

Halifax said he called on the President to discuss one or two routine matters about Churchill's scheduled address at Westminster College in Fulton, Mo., where he will be introduced by Mr. Truman.

Halifax said he talked with Churchill by telephone last night and found that he was "painting hard." The versatile ex-premier has been trying his hand at art during his vacation.

Halifax said he supposed that Churchill probably would spend a few days in Washington after his Missouri speech. At the present time, though, Churchill is "lost to the world," Halifax said

Lord Chatfield Says 'War Is Not Yet Banished From World'

JAN 24 1946

London, Jan. 23 (AP)—Lord Chatfield, defense co-ordination minister in Neville Chamberlain's war cabinet, today demanded in the House of Lords that Britain maintain a strong armed defense because "war is not yet banished from the world" and the United Natons "might not succeed."

"Having tied our foreign policy to the United Nations does not mean we can tie our strength to the UNO," he said.

The debate rose over a motion—later withdrawn—by Lord Perth, secretary general of the League of Nations for fourteen years, asking for a change in Britain's foreign policy to "take it out of the realm of party strife" and tie it more closely to economic and defense measures.

Calls Poland 'Police State'

In Commons, Ernest Bevin, Foreign Secretary, called Poland a "police state," but declined to answer a question whether he would "urge" that a general election should be held in Poland "before all the potential leaders of the opposition have been murdered."

Replying to questioning from Prof. D. L. Savory, member from Belfast, Bevin said he was "seriously concerned at the number of political murders that have been committed in Poland in recent weeks." He added that the killings "in many places appear to point to the complicity of the Polish security police."

He said he regarded it as "imperative that the Polish Provisional Government put an immediate stop to these crimes in order that free and unfettered elections might be held as soon as possible in accordance with the Crimea decisions."

Would End Strike Ban

Labor Government bills to repeal Britain's nineteen-year-old ban on general strikes by trade unions and to channel new capital investments into Government-approved businesses were introduced in Parliament.

Labor has resented the strike-ban law since its passage by a conservative majority in 1927 after the 1926 general strike. Repeal would open the way for resumption of the Labor party's previous levy of campaign funds from members of trade unions and also would allow Government employés' unions to affiliate with the Trade Union Congress.

The proposed investments legislation would enable the Treasury to utilize the country's economic resources "for purposes of industrial reconstruction and development."

British Labor Offers Bill To End General Strike Ban

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 23—a Labor Government bill to repeal Britain's nineteen-year-old ban on general strikes by trade unions was introduced in Parliament today.

The bill is expected to arouse strong Conservative opposition but is regarded as certain of passage by the big Labor majority.

Labor has resented the strike ban law ever since its passage by a Conservative majority in 1927 after the 1926 general strike. Repeal would open the way for resumption of the Labor party's previous levy of campaign funds from members of trade unions and also would allow Government employes' unions to affiliate with the Trades Union Congress. Postoffice engineering employes already have applied for membership in the congress on the strength of the proposed legislation.

British Radio Reception License Tax To Double

London, Jan. 23 (AP)—The British soon will have to pay double to listen to their radios.

An annual license tax helps support the Government-owned British Broadcasting Corporation, and this will be doubled from $2 to $4, E. J. Williams, Minister of Information, said.

He said also that a new license to cover both broadcasting and television reception would be issued at $8 a year when televised programs are renewed "in a few months."

Scotch to Remain Scarce For at Least One Year

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 23—Scotch whisky will remain scarce for at least another year.

Dr. Edith Summerskill, Parliamentary Secretary for the Ministry of Food, told the applauding House of Commons today that "food is more important than whisky" and so distilleries would get only 130,000 tons of grain this year, the same as in 1945.

She said that was enough to produce slightly more than 40 per cent of the pre-war volume of Scotch.

MORGAN IN LONDON

London, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Gen. Sir Frederick Morgan, UNRRA chief in Germany, who stirred severe criticism recently when he told a press conference that a secretly plotted exodus of Jews from Europe was under way, returned to London today.

Morgan, who declined to make any public statement, conferred with United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration officials. He is expected to leave soon for conferences with UNRRA Director Herbert Lehman in Washington. Brig.-Gen. W. A. M. Stawell now is acting UNRRA chief in Germany.

Felix Gouin, Socialist, Named French Leader

JAN 24 1946

Interim President Will Serve Till Constituent Assembly Finishes Its Work In May

(1070 ST)

Paris, Jan. 23 (AP)—Felix Gouin, 61, Socialist chief of the Constituent Assembly, tonight succeeded General de Gaulle as President of the Provincial Government of France.

The interim President will serve until the Constituent Assembly finishes its work in May.

The assembly's vote was 447 votes for Gouin. There were 55 votes cast for other candidates, with some absentions.

Michel Clemenceau, moderate deputy and son of the World War I Premier, received 35 votes and Jacques Bardoux, of the Peasant party, 17. Three other votes went to additional minor party candidates.

MRP Swings Into Line

Gouin's election was greeted with cheers from all sides except the section occupied by the Popular Republican Movement (MRP), one of France's three major parties.

The MRP at the last moment had requested an agreement that the Socialists and Communists join with the MRP in recognizing "the necessity of a tri-partite government."

The Communists bluntly repulsed MRP efforts to get a three-party harmony pledge on record before the voting.

The MRP retreated at the last and balloted unanimously for Gouin, who also received solid Communist and Socialist support.

Gouin became prominent by organizing the French Consultative Assembly at Algiers after the Allies landed in North Africa.

Gouin Arrested, Released

After the fall of France he presided at the last two secret caucuses of the Socialists, which decided to oppose voting plenary powers to the Vichy Government. As one of the 80 deputies who voted against Petain he was arrested and then released. He went into hiding before fleeing to Spain and eventually to Algiers.

He might not now head the French Government if he had not once written his name illegibly during a trip to England, and if his wife at another time hadn't pretended he was unfaithful.

The scribbled signature obtained for him a 1939 British ration card made out to a "Mr. Gouib." With the card as identification, he was able to pose as a Briton in a Spanish internment camp in 1943 after illegally crossing the French border.

Meanwhile, at his home in Istres, near Marseille, Madame Gouin was loudly and mournfully pretending that her husband had eloped with another woman.

Had the Spanish authorities known the truth, it is unlikely that "Mr. Gouib" would have been released from the camp at Miranda after four months, or that he would have reached Algiers in time to organize and head the French Consultative Assembly.

Gouin, 5 feet 5 inches tall, avoids continental flowery speech. His only comment to the Assembly Monday, after reading General de Gaulle's resignation as government head and his own reply acknowledging it, was the question: "When does the Assembly intend to elect a new president of the provisional government of the republic?"

GOUIN IS ELECTED FRENCH PRESIDENT

Paris, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—Felix Gouin, 61-year-old Socialist leader of the Constituent Assembly was elected interim President of France tonight to succeed Gen. De Gaulle. Gouin was originally proposed by the Communists as a Communist-Socialist candidate to solve the crisis brought on by the resignation of De Gaulle on Sunday.

He was elected by the Assembly after a last-minute request by the Popular Republican Movement (MRP), one of France's three major parties, for an agreement that all three parties recognize the necessity of a tri-partite government. However the MRP agreed to an immediate vote.

Gouin, a bespectacled lawyer, attained prominence by organizing the French Consultative Assembly at Algiers after the Allies landed in North Africa.

As the organizer, he occupies a unique position in French politics. He has been described by the Communists as "appearing above parties," although he has belonged to the Socialist party since 1904 and has been a Socialist deputy since 1924.

He is 61 and a native of Peynier, near Marseille. He was admitted to the bar in 1917. He was one of the lawyers for Leon Blum, former Premier and head of the Socialist party, in the Riom trial in 1942.

Presided At Caucuses

Gouin presided at the last two secret Socialist caucuses which decided to oppose voting plenary powers to the Vichy Government after the fall of France. He served as president of the Consultative Assembly from its formation until the elections last October, and was unanimously elected president of the present Constituent Assembly.

General de Gaulle has only the right to a retired colonel's pension unless the incoming government provides special compensation.

France has no law covering the case of a past president of the provisional Government. De Gaulle himself has the permanent rank of a colonel, having been appointed a temporary general on October 4, 1939, just fuor days too late to come under a decree giving permanent status to temporary ranks. As a colonel, de Gaulle reached the automatic army retirement age of 55 last November 22.

STREICHER TAKEN SUDDENLY ILL AT NUERNBERG TRIAL

(3 DYNAS)

NUERNBERG, Jan. 23.—(AP) Julius Streicher, sadistic, Jew-baiter who preached fanatical racial hatred and violence, collapsed from a heart attack today during the noon recess of the International Military Tribunal trying him and 21 other Nazis as war criminals.

Only 19 defendants of the 22 on trial were in the courtroom in the afternoon session at which the British pressed their case against Franz von Papen, Hitler's one-time top diplomat. Von Papen listened attentively as the prosecution charged him with subservience to Hitler's objectives and duplicity in assisting their attainment.

Confined to Bed

Streicher was confined to bed. Col. B. C. Andrus, the jail commandant, reported late in the afternoon that Streicher still was resting under effects of a sedative. Andrus said the prisoner probably would not be able to return to court before Friday.

The prosecutor ironically described Von Papen as a "man of culture and breeding who could pacify respectable elements who might have barred Hitler's path."

The British also opened their individual case against Baron Konstantin von Neurath, former Nazi foreign minister, presenting documents and quotations designed to show that the defendant participated in a deliberate conspiracy to break international treaties.

Von Neurath adeptly implemented Hitler's policies in violating the military clauses of the Versailles Treaty, torpedoing the disarmament conference, re-establishing compulsory military training, fortifying the Rhineland, and rearming German forces, the prosecution said.

Hess Case Postponed

Earlier today the case of Rudolf Hess was postponed because Hess' attorney had suffered a fractured ankle in a fall. Hess asked the court's permission to undertake his own defense. His request was taken under advisement.

The American prosecutors presented their individual case against Hans Fritzsche, head of the German press division of the Goebbels propaganda ministry. He was the last of the defendants against whom the Americans will present individual evidence.

In an affidavit presented by the Americans, Fritzsche admitted that Germany's claim that the Nazi attack on Russia was a "preventative war to defense of the Fatherland" was false.

He is one of 22 on trial for war crimes.

Last-Minute Switch

In spite of his early mistakes, the prosecution said, Papen became the able servant of Hitler, whom he had despised, as Germany's Ambassador to Turkey.

Papen's case was brought before the tribunal in a last-minute switch when presentation of evidence against Rudolf Hess was postponed because the attorney of the former No. 2 Deputy Führer was unable to attend today's session.

Early in the afternoon, Hess requested permission to undertake his own defense because his attorney had suffered a fractured ankle in a fall. From the beginning of the trial, Hess has shown scant interest in having an attorney represent him. He admitted to the court in December that he had faked amnesia at a time when his court-appointed counsel was offering a plea of amnesia in good faith.

Meanwhile, Hans Fritzsche, the Nazi radio propaganda boss, admitted that Germany's claim that the Nazi attack on Russia in 1941 was a "preventative war for defense of the Fatherland" was false.

Planned Months Before

In an affidavit presented by American prosecutors, Fritzsche said the false claim had been planned for many months and was printed by "newspapers which received their instructions from me."

From 1938 to 1942 Fritzsche was head of the Goebbels Propaganda Ministry, which Assistant Prosecutor Capt. D. A. Sprecher, of Independence, Wis., described as "the most fabulous lie factory of all time."

Fritzsche headed the radio division after 1942.

Convinced in 1942

Fritzsche, who broadcast weekly assailing Jews, the Soviet Union and "plutocrats" of the Western democracies, said a brief experience as a soldier on the Eastern front in 1942 convinced him of the complete falsehoods he had broadcast at the behest of Joachim von Ribbentrop, then Foreign Minister.

"I saw that extended preparations had been made for the occupation and administration of territories reaching as far as the Crimea," the affidavit said. "Based on my personal observations, I came to the conclusion that war against the Soviet Union was planned already a long time before its outbreak."

He said that falsehoods reported against Czechoslovakia in 1938 were so brazen that "there even came complaints from the Sudetenland itself that much of the news reported in the German press was untrustworthy."

Papen Called Opportunist, Sold Reich To Nazis, British Tell Court

Nuernberg, Jan. 23 (AP)—Julius Streicher, one of the defendants in the Nuernberg trials, suffered a heart attack during the noon recess today and was put to bed.

Nuernberg, Jan. 23 (AP)—The British prosecution told the international military tribunal today Franz von Papen sold Germany into the hands of the Nazis in a coldblooded effort to "further his own diplomatic career."

Outlining the story of the miscalculations of Papen, who blundered badly as head of the German spy and sabotage ring in the United States in World War I, the prosecution described the elderly diplomat as "not a typical Nazi, but an unscrupulous political opportunist."

NUREMBERG, Germany, Jan. 23 (AP)—Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson said today that the War Department's long-range figure for the size of the American occupation force in Germany "still is in the planning state," but that "it will be less than I had expected." The Secretary said the "only thing settled" was to have the Army strength of 300,000 here by July 1.

FRANKFORT ON THE MAIN, Germany, Jan. 23 (AP)—Secretary of War Patterson will place a wreath on the grave of Gen. George S. Patton Jr. in the cemetery at Hamm, Luxembourg, tomorrow morning. He will then leave for the United States by plane completing a round-the-world inspection of United States Army installations.

Tunnell (D.-Del.) and Knowland (R.-Cal.)—that 18,000 were in the disputed Venezia Giulia region at the top of the Adriatic.

The Senators and their staff went to the Vatican late today for an audience with Pope Pius XII.

GREEKS QUESTION REDS' UNO ACTION

ATHENS, Jan. 23—(AP) Ten Greek political parties, including the Republican formed Center and Rightist bloc, tonight questioned Russia's action in raising the matter of the British troops in Greece before the United Nations Security council.

Earlier, Premier Themistocles Sophoulis said the government would cable the Greek UNO delegation in London instructions in connections with Russia's demand that the Security council investigate the presence of British troops in Greece.

In a joint statement the 10 political parties expressed "surprise because the question of the withdrawal of British troops was raised without Greece's cognizance."

The statement declared that Britain's commitment of April, 1939, and subsequently renewed, to grant assistance to Greece until the country's rehabilitation was completed "cannot be considered as fulfilled before peace and security are definitely obtained."

"Greece's neighbors," the statement said, "openly declare their intentions to annex Greek territories and by all means to try to mutilate her. British troops are in Greece at her express request and their premature withdrawal would violate Allied obligations toward her."

Six of the hostages who had been held for two days, were reported killed while attempting to escape the insurgents, identified as members of a monarchist group known as Xitos.

Arab Raid on Iran Town Reported in Russian Press

Tass Says Foreign Weapons Are Being Distributed

MOSCOW, Jan. 23 (AP).—Tass dispatches from Tehran said today that 300 Arabs from Iraq had raided a town in southern Iran, and also reported that foreign weapons were being imported and sold to tribesmen in Iran.

Quoting Tehran newspapers and travelers from the south, one dispatch said an Arab band armed with rifles and machine guns recently crossed the River Shatt al Arab from Iraq and attacked Khorramshahr, a town about fifteen miles northwest of Abadan, Persian Gulf port. Leaders of the raid were said to have been two sons of the late Shiek Haizal, described as having headed a separatist rebellion in southern Iran.

Another dispatch quoted a Tehran newspaper as saying that "a well known foreign agent" had summoned southern tribesmen for a conference "concerning the distribution of weapons sent in from the center of the country."

Tehran newspapers, Tass continued, said rifles of foreign manufacture, mostly models with ten-bullet clips, continued to be smuggled into Persian Gulf ports and sold to tribesmen.

Die, 339 Hurt As Bose Backers Riot in Bombay

JAN 24 1946

Partisans of Leader Japan Sponsored Battle Police in All-Day Disorders

BOMBAY, Jan. 23 (AP).—Two persons were killed and more than 300 injured in all-day rioting here today, and sporadic disorders continued tonight.

The rioting began with a pitched battle between police and marching supporters of Subhas Chandra Bose, former leader of the Japanese-sponsored Indian National Army. Officials described the disorders as anti-British and anti-police.

Ignoring pleas of All-India Congress (Nationlist party) leaders for calmness, bands armed with bamboo staves roamed the streets, stoning taxicabs and causing property damage. A casualty list showed seventy-one persons wounded by gunfire and 268 by clubs and missiles. Police made eighteen arrests.

Police using guns and tear gas blocked the predominantly Hindu procession, marching in celebration of Bose's birthday anniversary, from the city's Moslem sections.

It was the second serious riot within two months involving the adherents of Bose, said by the Japanese to have been killed last Aug. 19 in an airplane accident. Thirty-seven persons, including one American soldier, were killed and scores injured last November in riots in Calcutta and Bombay protesting against the trial of members of Bose's National Army.

Today's gathering, whose leaders insisted Moslem leaders had agreed to a peaceful demonstration, was stopped near famous Round Temple, landmark of the dividing line between Moslem and Hindu areas.

Stopped by police sticks and tear gas, the crowd threw rocks and the police opened fire.

Two trucks, one with British Army markings, were set afire by demonstrators. Nearby, what appeared to be a trolley car was wrecked and in flames.

Indian Moslems Back Arabs

New Delhi, Jan. 23 (AP)—Mahomed Ali Jinnah, president of the all-India Moslem League, said today Moslems in India would support the Arab cause in the Middle East "in any way they can" if the British depart from the 1939 White Paper policy on Palestine.

He declined to say what measures, if any, were under consideration. A boycott, however, might be leveled against goods of Jewish origin.

CHINESE REDS ARE ACCUSED OF VIOLATING TRUCE

(Moose)

CHUNGKING, Thursday, Jan. 24 (AP) The National Military council today accused Chinese Communists of "continuing large-scale attacks" against government forces as late as yesterday, 10 days after the cease-firing deadline, in five provinces.

Listed were Shantung, Shansi, Kiangsu, Honan and Hopei provinces. The council said the Communists had launched "a new offensive" against the northern Honan town of Sinsiang, on the Peiping-Hankow railroad north of the Yellow river, and in Shansi were keeping up attacks against National garrisons along the Tatung-Puchow railroad.

In Kiangsu, large numbers of Communists were reported converging in three columns upon Lienyun (Haichow) on the Yellow Sea, eastern terminus of the Lunghai railroad. In Shantung, they reportedly were attacking Tsaochwang and Yenchow, and in Hopeh they allegedly were trying to seize the Yungnien highway center.

(Previously, reports from the armistice commission's executive headquarters had indicated that fighting was diminishing on most fronts.)

China's military committee was reported to have taken the first step today toward welding government and Communist forces into one National army shortly after it was announced that General Marshall had become the committee's advised.

A spokesman from the Democratic league said the committee reached an agreement whereby the Communists would cut their army to 20 divisions within three months, while the government would reduce its forces to 90 divisions within six months.

Other Issues Weighed

He emphasized, however, that the committee still was engaged in other issues revolving about this rocky problem. He did not say whether General Marshall, fresh from his success in arranging China's truce, attended.

Gen. Chou En-Lai, the Communist member of the committee, asserted earlier this week that the two government members—Gen. Chang Chun and Gen. Chang Chih-Chung—were insisting the Communists cut their representation in the new National army to nine divisions.

The only previous agreement on this question was reported yesterday by a subcommittee of the Political Consultation (Unity) conference considering the political aspects of nationalizing the army.

It agreed on plans to abolish the one-party National Military council in favor of a Ministry of Defense representing all factions and to divorce all members of the armed forces from politics.

The conference appointed a committee of 10, consisting of two members from each of the five political groups attending, to work on questions which the five subcommittees had been unable to solve.

Reorganizing Difficult

One of the hardest problems is the reorganization of the government. The Kuomintang (National) party was reported holding out for at least half the seats on the new and powerful state council, with the Communists wanting to limit them to one-third.

The Communists also were opposing a Kuomintang proposal that the republic's President (now Chiang Kai-Shek) could be overridden only by a two-thirds vote of the council. The Communists want a mere majority vote.

Chiang entertained conferenc delegates at a dinner tonight bu failed to deliver a prepared speech It was not known whether this wa due to lack of general agreement or whether Chiang decided to put it off until the conference closes Saturday.

While reports of truce-violating clashes ebbed, K. C. Wu, Minister of Information, declared the Communists had seized two Government-held cities one day after the January 13 cease-firing deadline. He identified them as Panshan and Yingkow, city and port, respectively, in southern Manchuria.

Communist quarters admitted their forces had seized three towns from national troops since the deadline but countered that all three had been taken by the Government itself after the time limit.

Marshall Takes (Croce) Advisory Post

Chungking, Jan. 23 (AP)—General Marshall, President Truman's special envoy, has accepted the post of adviser to the military committee of three handling reorganization of the Chinese Army, Minister of Information K. C. Wu announced today.

Wu also said the thought censorship in recovered areas would be lifted "very soon" and that Chinese administration has been established in the Manchurian towns of Changchun, Mukden, Harbin, Chinhsien and Szepingkai.

The Minister said, however, there still are no Government forces in either Dairen or Port Arthur.

Violations Alleged

He stated that Communists, in violation of the recent truce ending civil strife, had seized two Government-held towns, Yingkow and Panshan.

Government military forces now are stationed at Hulutao, Chinhsien, Nowpangtze and nine other Manchurian towns.

Observers said Marshall's services on the military committee likely would have the same good effect on that group as his presence did on the truce board, although they realized that reorganization of the Army was likely to present even more formidable and complex difficulties.

Other Members

The reorganization committee met once before Marshall accepted the advisership. Members are Gen. Chang Chun and Gen. Chang Chinchung, representing the Government, and Gen. Chou En-lai, Communist.

Discussing censorship, Wu said he still is awaiting requested information from Gen. Tu Yu-hing, commander of Government forces in Manchuria, on the reasons for the discriminatory ban against American correspondents entering Manchuria at any point until all Russian troops have been withdrawn.

Liu Chieh, vice minister of foreign affairs, said transportation difficulties might delay for a few days the Russian withdrawal from Manchuria and Jehol, now scheduled for completion by February 1. As a delay of only a few days is involved, there is no necessity for formal agreement on this score, he added.

4300 Saved From Blasted Ship

Rescue of Japs by U. S. Vessel in 25 Minutes May Have Set Speed Record.

(CUSHING)

Shanghai, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—The dramatic rescue of nearly 4,300 Japanese from their sinking repatriation ship Enoshima Maru was told today when the United States Navy cargo ship Brevard arrived jammed with 99½ per cent of the survivors. The ship sank rapidly after striking a mine sixty miles off the mouth of the Yangtze yesterday.

In only twenty-five minutes, all the Japanese except twenty or so killed in the explosion, or in subsequent mishaps, were transferred from the 6,000-ton vessel to the Brevard. It appeared likely that the rescue would set a record for speed in handling such a mass of people.

The Brevard's skipper, Lieut. John L. Elliott of San Diego, Cal., said the rescue was expected with hardly a hitch through the cooperation of the Japanese whom he described as frightened but orderly.

A sequel to the rescue was the birth of a Japanese girl aboard the Brevard as she headed for Shanghai.

Lieut.-Commander James A. Hennessy of Brookline, Mass., delivered the child with the help of Louis Zaborsky, p. m. 1/c, of Pocahontas, Va.

Hennessy, a homeward-bound passenger aboard the Brevard, also treated more than 100 Japanese for bruises.

The Enoshima Maru was carrying 4,296 Japanese men, women and children, and the 5,000-ton Brevard was trailing her by three and a half miles when the blast occurred. Even at that distance, the American ship trembled so violently "that I thought we were hit," said Elliott. "I ordered emergency speed ahead and saw her settling by the stern."

Two lines were thrown aboard and the Japanese began swarming over the sides as the two ships nestled together. Two or three persons dropped into the sea, including a woman who had just handed her baby to an American sailor. She drifted under the Brevard's propellors and was cut to pieces.

Elliott said the Japanese ship settled so quickly that he feared "she would take us with her or topple on us," so he cut loose. At that time about seventy-five people were left aboard, but they were brought ou to the Brevard in small boats under the direction of Lieut. (j.g.) J. L. Bradford of Lufkin, Tex.

"When we made contact, the Japanese cheered but stayed where they were until we gave orders," said Lieut. W. W. Race of Indiana, Pa. "They did everything we told them. It could have been an awful mess otherwise."

U. S. SPOKESMAN REBUKES TASS ON MACARTHUR SLUR

JAN 24 1946

TOKYO, Jan. 23—(AP) General MacArthur's headquarters spokesman rebuked the Russian Tass News Agency today for lending itself to what he termed "a definite program to discredit" the supreme commander and "force further changes in the present occupation policies and command."

Dispatch Hit

He referred specifically to a Tass dispatch from Heijo, Korea, which said:

"The behavior of the American command in Southern Korea astonishes one. It has assumed a position of inspiring reactionary demonstrations against the decisions of the Moscow conference of foreign ministers in which, as is known, the government of the United States participated."

Southern Korea is under the direct command of Lt. Gen. John R. Hodge, but is included in MacArthur's jurisdiction. The Russians control Korea north of the 38th Parallel.

"It is known," MacArthur's spokesman said, "that orders have gone out to all opposition forces, including the so-called Communist Party members in Japan, to do their utmost to discredit MacAr-

"It is a deplorable condition when some of the dissident press of the world continues to incite and foment international mistrust," whereas "now, more than ever, every effort should be more toward understanding and agreement."

He added:

"It can be expected that continuing critical attacks will flow from the Left-Wing press of the United States" as well as other countries, and that momentary setbacks in the campaign "will merely spur these elements to a more studied plan of attack."

He denounced particularly reports which "incite suspicion in international circles," and cited as an example a recent report that MacArthur had opposed the use of Russian troops in his command.

"This story," he said, "to those who knew the facts—and the Russian government knew them, too—could only show the extremes to which someone will go in manufacturing a story to discredit and create distrust and suspicion."

Hodge Makes Denial

In Seoul, General Hodge's comment on the Heijo dispatch was that "any accusation against this command is without basis of fact."

Hodge said he and his advisors had been constantly trying to impress Koreans with the value of the Moscow decision for a five-year Allied trusteeship of their country.

Meanwhile MacArthur went ahead with the task of rounding up Japanese war criminal suspects, ordering the arrest of another group of 48—including three lieutenant generals.

The generals ordered to report at Sugamo prison were Lt. Gen. Yuichiro Nagano, commander of the Osamu Army groups in Batavia in June and July, 1945; Lt. Gen. Fusataro Teshima, commander of the Second army, and Lt. Gen. Seiichi Yamada, commander of the Fifth division. The other suspects were officers of lower rank and civilians, including a number of prison camp guards.

Inspires 'Reaction' in Korea.

Tokyo, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—A spokesman at Gen. MacArthur's Headquarters said today that an assertion by Tass, official Soviet news agency, that the United States military command in southern Korea was inspiring "reactionary" protests against the Moscow conference, is part of "a definite program to discredit" Gen. MacArthur and force further changes in the present occupation policies and command."

While southern Korea is under direct command of Lieut.-Gen. John R. Hodge, it is included in MacArthur's command. The Russians control Korea north of the thirty-eighth parallel.

Tass assailed "the reactionary press" of southern Korea for allegedly carrying on an anti-Soviet propaganda campaign and for attacking the decision reached at Moscow by the United States, Britain and Russia to set up a five-year trusteeship for Korea.

Tells of Orders Issued.

"It is known that orders have gone out to all opposition forces, including the so-called Communist Party members in Japan to do their utmost to discredit MacArthur," his spokesman said. "It is a deplorable condition when some dissident press of the world continues to incite and foment international mistrust. . . . Now more than ever every effort should be bent toward understanding and agreement.

"It can be expected that continuing, critical attacks will flow from the left wing press of the United States as well as from others outside the United States. Failure to secure popular support in their program following their assault after the Moscow Conference will merely spur these elements to a more studied plan of attack.

"It can be expected that these attacks will be predicated on reports of premeditated failure of the Japanese to respond to command, or even that through intrigue or subversive measures the Japanese are not putting corrective measures into effect in the Government. It is known that some persons are around whose sole purpose is to gather up any kind of evidence on which to base a critical story. Some have shown that they do not need evidence—they manufacture it out of their imagination. . . .

"The worst possible type of material propagated is that which incites suspicion in international circles. A good example is the type of story which had Gen. MacArthur opposing the use of Russian forces in his command. This story—to those who knew the facts, and the Russian Government knew them—could only show the extremes to which some one will go to manufacturing a story to discredit and create distrust and suspicion."

Hodge Denies Charge.

Seoul, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Gen. John R. Hodge, the United States occupation commander in Korea, replying to criticism by the official Soviet news agency Tass, declared today that "any accusation against this command is without basis of fact."

Hodge pointed out that he and his advisers in Seoul from the State Department constantly have been trying to impress Koreans with the value of the Moscow decision for a five-year, Allied trusteeship of their country. Statements have been made repeatedly in person to leaders of various factions and numerous explanations have been broadcast to the people. At the same time, Hodge said there has been no attempt to hamper or stifle Koreans' freedom of speech, press or assembly.

He said he had no comment on the possible effect, if any, the Tass dispatch might have on functions of the joint Soviet-American commission now in session here to plan Korea's rehabilitation.

Left Wing Koreans staged a big mass meeting and parades today ostensibly "to welcome the joint commission." Indirectly, however, the demonstration was reported arranged as a show of strength in reply to anti-trusteeship demonstrations staged last week by Rightist elements and sponsored by the Kim Koo provisional government organization.

The individual target of condemnation in last week's demonstrations was the local communist party's general secretary, Pak Heung Young. Pak, who claims to have been misquoted, was excoriated for allegedly saying he favored a Soviet one-nation trusteeship and eventual incorporation of Korea into the Soviet Union.

Major-Gen. Archer L. Lerch, military governor, issued a statement against violence and declared:

"The disgraceful spectacle of two political parties fighting in the streets of the national capital is one that members of the Soviet-American conference cannot ignore. I appeal to the leaders of all parties to put a stop to such undignified and unstatesmanlike performances now."

MacArthur Aid Accuses Soviet Of Aim to Discredit General

Headquarters Spokesman Sees Definite Plan Back of Tass Assertion That U. S. Army

Yanks To Arrest 48 More Japs

Tokyo, Jan. 23 (AP)—General MacArthur today ordered the arrest of 48 more Japanese war criminal suspects and, in a renewed drive against the Nipponese military, included three lieutenant generals.

Ordered to report at Sugamo prison "at the earliest practicable date" were Lieut. Gen. Yuichiro Nagano, commander of the Osamu army groups in Batavia in June and July, 1945; Lieut. Gen. Fusataro Teshima, who commanded the 2d Army, and Lieut. Gen. Seichi Yamada, commander of the 5th Division.

Camp Guards Included

The remainder of the suspects were military of lesser rank and civilians, including a number of guards at prisoner-of-war camps.

Also named were a number of naval personnel who were stationed at Infanta, Luzon, including Capt. Takesu Furuse and two junior grade lieutenants.

Colonel Iwahashi Named

Others named were Col. Kazuo Iwahashi, chief of staff, third war shipping unit, Manila; Kichizo Ikushima, civilian employé in the foreign affairs bureau naval intelligence, Shanghai, and Lieut. Com. Hideo Taniura, commander of a minesweeper at Tsurishima.

There was no explanation for the inclusion of a number of naval personnel, most of them members of the Furuse unit stationed at Infanta.

Vice Ministers Resign

On the political front, Kyodo news agency said parliamentary vice ministers had resigned en bloc to clear the way for the forthcoming elections. The resignations were submitted today to Premier Kijuro Shidehara, who approved the action, but they will not be effective until after a Cabinet meeting Friday.

Cabinet sources indicated that proposed revision of Japan's constitution may become an election issue. They said Dr. Joji Matsumoto, chairman of the Cabinet committee on revision, is anxious publicly to announce a final draft of the plan before the campaign reaches a climax.

Tokyo yesterday experienced its first outbreak of unauthorized food seizures and a farmers' group warned that proposed compulsory sale of rice to the Government might precipitate "bloody clashes" between growers and police.

An official of the Home Ministry, which directs distribution of goods found by occupation forces and turned over to the Government, confirmed that food stores in a former arsenal had been seized by civilians and distributed among some 6,500 residents of two Tokyo wards.

There was no violence and the demonstration was orderly, but it was termed part of a growing movement for public control of necessities.

Seventy Farmers Issue Warning

Seventy representative Saitama prefecture farmers issued a warning of possible trouble over control of rice—the nation's basic food crop.

Kyodo said the farmer gathering about 60 miles north of Tokyo was Communist-sponsored. The group organized a council to campaign for control of foodstuffs by the public.

Sale of rice to the Government for rationed marketing to the public is on a voluntary basis, but consideration has been given to a plan to make it compulsory because of the critical food situation.

Government Plans Action

The Government, charging that 68 per cent of the rice crop is being channeled into the black market, has announced it will withhold fertilizers and farm machinery from farmers sabotaging the legal food-marketing program.

Allied headquarters reported the surrender of Yosuke Matsuoka, former Foreign Minister credited with responsibility for bringing Japan into the Axis lineup under the tripartite pact.

Matsuoka, who has been ill, was placed in Sugamo Prison to await trial on war-crimes charges.

Allied Group Heads for Japan

TOKYO, Jan. 23 (AP).—Chief American Prosecutor Joseph B. Keenan announced today that five British members of the Allied War Crimes Commission planned to leave San Francisco tomorrow for Japan. The delegation, headed by Arthur Strettel Comyns Carr, king's counsel since 1924, will help prosecute Japanese war-criminal suspects. The Britons arrived in New York Monday.

Keenan listed these other Allied representatives who will aid in the trials, but stressed that they did not include all the countries which will participate:

Canada: associate prosecutor—Brigadier Henry Gratton Nolan, vice-judge adjucata general at defense headquarters; judge — E. Stuart McDougall, of Quebec.

Australia: associate prosecutor—Mr. Justice Mansfield, judge of the Supreme Court of Queensland; judge—Sir William Webb, Chief Justice of Queensland.

New Zealand: associate prosecutor—R. Quilian, barrister of the New Zealand Supreme Court; judge—Mr. Justice Northcroft, of the New Zealand Supreme Court.

China: associate prosecutor—Hyang Che-chum, chief prosecutor of the Shanghai Court; judge—Mei Ju-ao, acting chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Legislative Yuan (Council).

JAP DOCTOR FACES ATROCITIES TRIAL

JAN 24 1946

Tokyo, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—Gen. MacArthur's headquarters announced today that it is preparing to try on war crimes charges a Japanese medical officer accused of contributing to the deaths of eight British prisoners of war and a non-commissioned officer accused of atrocities against thirty-five Americans.

The medical officer, Lieut. Shigeru Aona, is charged with permitting members of his medical staff at Hakodate main prison camp to commit cruel and brutal atrocities and that "he did himself unlawfully commit cruel and brutal atrocities" against British prisoners.

Kitaro (the Bull) Ishida is accused of immersing American prisoners in cold water, forcing them to stand wet and naked in winter winds, forcing water under pressure into their mouths and nostrils, striking and beating them with clubs, belts, fists and ropes, and holding one man's head under water until he lost consciousness.

Yokohama, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—A former Japanese prison camp commandant admitted at his war crimes trial today that he had punished forty-three Allied prisoners—eight more than prosecutors charged—but denied that he ever had knocked down a soldier.

The defendant, Kaichi Hirate, is accused of responsibility in the deaths of British Pvt. Raymond C. Suttle and at least three other Allied prisoners. The prosecution charged that Hirate had made prisoners stand at attention in near-freezing temperatures.

Tokyo Bathhouse Inflation

Tokyo, Jan. 23 (AP)—Inflation hit Tokyo's bathhouses today. The bathhouse union was granted permission to increase the rates from 20 to 50 sen (3 cents) for adults, and from 10 to 30 sen for children. And it costs from 5 to 10 yen (66 cents) to enter the baths.

Tenth Army Corps to Be Inactivated

TOKYO, Jan. 23 (AP).—The Tenth Army Corps in southern Honshu Island will be inactivated Jan. 31 and high point men sent home for discharge, it was announced today.

The corps participated in the Leyte campaign and its Third Battalion, 19th Infantry Division, captured Davao on Mindanao.

Jap Women's University Due

Tokyo, Jan. 23 (AP)—Kyodo news agency reported today that a woman's university will open in Nagoya in April with its language department featuring English. Agriculture and engineering departments are to be added.

Leyte Veterans To Start Home Soon

Tokyo, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—The Tenth Army Corps in southern Honshu Island will be inactivated January 31 and high-point men sent home for discharge, it was announced today. The corps participated in the Leyte campaign and its Third Battalion, Nineteenth Infantry Division, captured Davao on Mindanao.

Red Cross Units In Japan

Kyoto, Japan, Jan. 23 (AP)—The American Red Cross established more than 100 units in three months in southern Japan, D. Robert Ricciardi, of New York city, retiring director, reported today. Ricciardi is being succeeded by M. A. Nyquist of Greeley, Col., former supervisor of clubs and recreation in southern Japan.

GENERAL TOO LATE WITH PROMOTION

Nagoya, Japan, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—A clerk who went into headquarters to make a report told Brig.-Gen. Everett E. Brown, commander of the Twenty-fifth Division:

"Sir, one of the buttons of your field jacket is unbuttoned."

He saluted and left.

"I want that man promoted," said Brown.

But the General was a few hours too late. Pfc. James L. Bailey of West Newton, Mass., had been promoted the same day for all-around efficiency.

Baby Cheaper Than Chicken

Manila, Jan. 23 (AP)—In this city where an undernourished chicken brings at least 9 pesos ($4.50) in the black market, a kidnapped baby girl recently sold for 5 pesos.

Pacita Go, 10-month-old daughter of a well-to-do attorney of San Fernando, Pampanga, recently was stolen from her crib. Detectives found her in the shack of a Manila fruit peddler, Marcela Mercado y do Anoas.

The peddler told police she had bought the baby from a young woman for 5 pesos. The baby's clothing was worth more than that on the black market, police noted. Officers said the baby had received excellent care.

One-Armed Bandit Shot

Manila, Jan. 23 (AP)—Antonio San Juan, 38, one-armed bandit who confessed participating in the recent $215,000 daylight robbery of a Philippine bank messenger, was shot dead while riding a motor scooter in the crowded Paco market district today. The killer escaped.

San Juan was at liberty on bail when killed. He had pleaded guilty to charges of armed robbery. Police said his underworld boss evidently feared he would implicate others.

Col. Jeremiah P. Holland, provost marshal, could recall only one large cash robbery in the world—the Brooklyn Ice Company pay-roll robbery a decade ago.

GI DISCHARGES TO BE SPEEDED

Point Count Lowered For Mid-Pacific Soldiers

Honolulu, Jan. 23 (AP)—All army enlisted men in the mid-Pacific theater who would have 45 points or 30 months' service by April 30 will be on their way home by February 28, headquarters of Lieut. Gen. Ribert C. Richardson, Jr., announced today.

Men who would have 40 points or 24 months' service by June 30 will be eligible for release May 1. Seniority on both points and service will govern the order in which men are released.

Under the new directive men now become eligible for discharge who do not have two and a half years' service, but who would have accumulated this credit by April 30.

Authority for the stepped-up tempo of discharge, headquarters said, is contained in General Eisenhower's recent statement on eligibility of troops through June 30.

2½ Years By April 30

Under the directive, enlisted men who would have two and a half years' service, or 45 points, by April 30 are eligible for immediate call to mid-Pacific personnel centers. The Army expects that all men in this group will be en route home by February 28.

Enlisted men who would have 40 points, or two years' service, on June 30 are eligible for discharge May 1.

Male officers with 67 points, or 45 months' service, as of April 30 are eligible for immediate discharge, and must be in personnel centers by February 28. Exceptions are volunteers in the regular army and medical officers.

Male officers, except volunteers in the regular army and medical officers, who would have 65 points, or 42 months' service, by June 30 are made eligible for discharg May 1.

Rescinds Orders Holding Office

Richardson rescinded orde which previously permitted office to be held for 60 days by comman ing officers. The new directive pr vides they must move into p sonnel centers as soon as they become eligible.

Enlisted WACs with 24 months' service as of April 30 are eligible for discharge and must be moved into personnel centers by February 28.

A later announcement will cover the discharge of WAC officers and enlisted personnel after May 1.

The speed with which men will be called into personnel centers is expected to depend on availability of shipping. Col. William Saffarrans, of the Oahu army personnel center, said the center could handle 3,000 men a day or "as fast as we can obtain ships to take them out."

Flyers Forced Down At Sea Sing Carol

Honolulu, Jan. 23 (AP)—Force down in the Pacific south of Wak Island January 18, the officers an crew of a navy Catalina patro bomber kept up their spirits fo more than twelve hours by singing Christmas carols to the music of an accordion.

The rescued men, none injured, related their experience when they arrived at Pearl Harbor today aboard the escort carrier Shipley Bay, which picked them up.

Lieut. (jg) John Evans, Frankfort (Ky.) pilot, said the starboard engine failed because of a leak in a gasoline line.

"We jettisoned all cargo and personal belongings," he said. "We flew for about two hours on the port engine but began losing altitude, so I put her down."

The plane, en route to Wake from Majuro atoll, flashed an SOS which the Shipley Bay picked up.

CIO CHARGES CONSPIRACY

Union Urges Government to Operate Federally-Owned Steel Plants.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23. — (AP) Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the U. S. Steel Corp., tonight asked President Truman to call an all-management conference of experienced executives from strike-bound companies to consider "what kind of a wage increase the economy of this country can endure."

"These men could discuss frankly with the President, and give him the benefit of their advice on what kind of a wage increase the economy of this country can endure without incurring the danger of an inflationary spiral with a constant race between mounting wages and mounting prices," Fairless said.

He made the statement in an address prepared for delivery over the American Broadcasting Company network.

Possible Solution Seen

Fairless declared the meeting might open the way for a solution not only of the steel walkout, but "the other strikes that now plague the country."

"This is a national problem which should be solved, not on the basis of political considerations, but rather on the broad basis of what is in the best interests of the American people as a whole," he added.

Fairless said the current walkout was more than a strike by the C.I.O. United Steelworkers against the industry. He said "it is a strike by this powerful union against reconversion—against full production and employment—against the ability of the returning servicemen to go to work. It is a strike by the union against the thousands of businesses throughout the country, large and small, which use steel. It is a strike against the public."

He traced the progress of negotiations, from the original union demand for a $2 a day wage increase to the reduced request for 19 1-2 cents an hour; the company's hike from 12 1-2 cents to 15 cents, and President Truman's proposal of 18 1-2 cents an hour retroactive to Jan. 1, 1946.

Proposal Rejected

Fairless said he relayed the President's suggestion to U. S. Steel directors and that later he "informed the President that we were unable to accept his proposal."

"The United States Steel Corporation has done everything within its power to avert a steel strike," he said.

"Here are the reasons we reached our absolute limit with the offer to the union of a wage increase of 15 cents an hour," he said. "It would be the largest single wage increase in the history of U. S. Steel, or of the American steel industry. It met 60 per cent of the union's original demand, and met 75 per cent of its final demand.

"The wage increase of 15 cents an hour, which we offered, would increase the direct labor costs, exclusive of overtime and vacation pay, of the steel industry by approximately $135,000,000 a year.

"Considering the substantial character of our offer to the union, how ridiculous it is for the union, or anyone else, to charge that we are engaged in a conspiracy to destroy labor or this particular union. You don't destroy unions by offering them the highest wage increase in history."

Fairless said the controversy must be settled on a basis which "is in keeping with the facts and in keeping with the public interest," adding that U. S. Steel Corporation "cannot voluntarily be a party to an unsound and uneconomical program which may result in financial ruin for many small concerns, which are vital to the industrial future of our country."

Fairless Talk on the Steel Strike

Came as AP (12-T)

Following is the prepared text of the radio address by Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the United States Steel Corporation:

I know there are two important questions about the steel strike in the minds of many Americans tonight.

First—Why were we unable to accept President Truman's proposal that we go above our offer of a fifteen-cent-per-hour wage increase? Why couldn't steel go the extra 3½ cents which the President proposed? I shall try to deal with that as fully as possible in the next fifteen minutes.

Second is the major question. What is the solution to this grave controversy? Later in this talk I shall have a suggestion to offer which I hope may lead to a solution.

At the outset I want to emphasize that this strike was not called by United States Steel Corporation or by any other member of the steel industry. It is solely the strike of the United Steelworkers of America-CIO. It is a strike by that union against the whole steel industry.

It is much more than that—it is a strike by this powerful union against reconversion—against full production and employment—against the ability of the returning service man to go to work. It is a strike by the union against the thousands of businesses throughout the country, large and small, which use steel. It is a strike against the public.

Violation of Pledge

This strike was called by the union in direct violation of the no-strike provision contained in the labor contracts between the union and the various steel companies, which have expiration dates in the autumn. What value has collective bargaining and a written contract, if a labor union can treat the contract as a scrap of paper whenever it pleases?

The union cannot escape the responsibility for this calamitous shut-down of the country's most vital industry. The union has brought on this strike in an attempt to impose upon the steel industry an unreasonable wage increase. Mr. Murray well knew when he made his demand for $2 more a day that it could not possibly be granted.

United States Steel Corporation has done everything within its power to avert a steel strike. So you may know the truth, I should like to review briefly what has taken place.

In the first place, you will recall that early in the war steel prices were frozen by the Government at approximately prewar levels. Labor and other costs in the steel industry, however, have gone up most substantially since 1940. The result of mounting costs pressing against OPA ceiling prices was that most of our ordinary steel tonnage was being sold at a loss long before the union made its $2-a-day-wage demand. In order to eliminate these losses, as far back as two years ago, we asked for new and fair ceiling prices, as provided by law. In the face of such facts we were not able to offer a large wage increase.

Offers and Counter-Offers

Yet while these ceiling price applications were still pending—last October—the union made its demand for a $2 a day general wage increase. The union adopted a take-it or leave-it attitude. In Mr. Murray's own words, his demand was not subject to "dickering or compromise." After days of discussion, we gave the union the "yes" or "no" answer which it demanded, pointing out that no wage increase was possible until OPA granted the steel industry fair ceiling prices to which it was entitled.

In the weeks that followed I made many trips to Washington to discuss our wage and price situation fully and frankly with the Administration, including the OPA Price Administrator and other officials. I hoped to pave the way for the resumption of collective bargaining negotiations with the union. I hoped to avoid the steel strike threatened by the union.

Just two weeks ago yesterday a responsible officer of the Government telephoned to me. He stated he was authorized to ask me whether a $4 a ton increase in steel ceiling prices would enable my company to offer a wage increase. I told him that although $4 a ton would not balance our costs, in order to compose this controversy, we would be willing to talk things over with the union.

We promptly resumed collective bargaining negotiations with the union, meetings being held in New York with Mr. Murray, the President of the union on Jan. 10 and 11. Our first offer was for a wage increase of 12½ cents an hour, which met one-half of the union's original demand. Mr. Murray offered to reduce his demand from 25 cents to 20 cents an hour.

At the meeting on Jan. 11, we raised our offer to 15 cents an hour. This new offer was made after I was informed from Washington by a high Government official that the Government was willing to sanction some price increase over the promised $4 a ton, if the labor dispute could be settled.

On that same day the Fact-Finding Board in the General Motors case made its recommendation of a wage increase of 19½ cents an hour. Mr. Murray immediately adopted this identical figure of 19½ cents. He declared to us that he was seeking a pattern of wage increases not only for the steel industry, but for all industry. Thereafter, he remained adamant in his insistance upon 19½ cents, with the consequence that the negotiations broke down completely.

President Truman then summoned both parties to Washington and collective bargaining negotiations were continued at the White House on Jan. 12, 16 and 17. At the first of these meetings Mr. Murray, at the request of the President, postponed the scheduled date of the steel strike for one week—until Jan. 21. This postponement was for the purpose of giving me time to discuss with representatives of other steel companies whether there was any possibility of a settlement through an adjustment of alleged wage inequities, which had been suggested by Mr. Murray in New York on Friday evening. This was an industry matter, as it concerned a directive of the War Labor Board against all members of the steel industry. There proved to be no such basis for settlement.

These discussions in Washington failed. Mr. Murray refused to change his position that a nation-wide steel strike must take place, as scheduled.

Last Thursday afternoon, when a complete deadlock with the union had been reached, President Truman called Mr. Murray and me to his office and proposed a wage increase of 18½ cents an hour, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1946. I then told the President that his proposal would promptly be submitted to the directors of my company, and that I would give him their decision the next day.

This was done, and I informed the President that we were unable to accept his proposal.

Here are the reasons we reached our absolute limit with the offer to the union of a wage increase of 15 cents an hour. It would be the largest single wage increase in the history of United States Steel, or of the American steel industry. It met 60 per cent of the union's original demand, and met 75 per cent of its final demand.

Off-hand, a difference of a few cents an hour may seem small, but when applied to the hundreds of thousands of our employes and those of the rest of the steel industry, the wage increase involves additional labor costs running into millions of dollars. As an illustration, the wage increase of 15 cents an hour which we offered, would increase the direct labor costs, exclusive of overtime and vacation pay, of the steel industry by approximately $135,000,000 a year.

Considering the substantial character of our offer to the union, how ridiculous it is for the union, or anyone else, to charge that we are engaged in a conspiracy to destroy labor or this particular union. You don't destroy unions by offering them the highest wage increase in history.

Steel employes have received three wage increases since 1941. Straight-time pay without overtime averaged $1.16 an hour during the month of November, 1945. We are among the highest paid industries. Under our offer of a fifteen-cent-an-hour increase the average pay of steel workers for a week of forty straight-time hours would amount to $52.40. This would be increased by overtime, and overtime was substantial up to the time of the strike.

This wage controversy must be settled on a basis which is in keeping with the facts and in keeping with the public interest. United States Steel Corporation cannot voluntarily be a party to an unsound and uneconomical program which may result in financial ruin for many small concerns which are vital to the industrial future of our country. The union should accept our very fair and generous offer of a fifteen-cent-an-hour wage increase and call off at once a steel strike which may soon cripple all industry.

Strike Cost to Workers

I wonder whether steel workers have given any serious thought to what they are striking for. Do they realize that if they get all that Mr. Murray is holding out for they will receive about one dollar and a half more per week, including overtime, than under our present offer? For each week of work lost on strike the steel worker would have to work about nine months at the higher figure in order to come out even.

From the point of view of the average steel worker, is such a strike as the present one worthwhile? I doubt it. Under our proposal a good part of his wartime weekly pay will be preserved. On the basis of a forty-hour week, without overtime, the average weekly pay of a steel worker, with the 15-cent increase we offered, would be over $52, which is substantially more than ever was earned in peacetime.

Here is a proposal which I believe might open the way to a solution not only of the steel strike but the other strikes that now plague the country. It is that the President immediately call a conference in Washington of experienced executives from representative companies which are now directly involved in strikes. This should include representatives from steel and other industries. These men could discuss frankly with the President and give him the benefit of their advice on what kind of a wage increase the economy of this country can endure without incurring the danger of an inflationary spiral, with a constant race between mounting wages and mounting prices.

This is a national problem which should be solved, not on the basis of political considerations but rather on the broad basis of what is in the best interests of the American people as a whole.

Union Asks Truman For Further Action

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 23.—(AP) The striking C.I.O. Steelworkers asked President Truman today to take immediate action for government operation of $1,000,000,000 worth of federally-owned steel plants or turn them over to individuals such as" Henry J. Kaiser, the west coast steelmaker.

The union's 175-man wage policy committee, with members from 42 states, made the plea in a statement after a meeting here.

The committee also said the Justice department should investigate a "conspiracy" among representatives of the large corporations, meeting in New York during the first week of January to provide "wholesale cancellation of collective bargaining agreements as their first step to provoke strikes."

Truman Moves Asked

The committee called on President Truman to do three things, the first being:

"The American government owns over a billion dollars of the most modern steel plant facilities now under control of the very corporations which have flouted the President's (wage increase) decision. These facilities should either be made available for private operation by individuals such as Henry J. Kaiser who, in the interest of the nation, has accepted the President's wage decision for his steel employes, or should be operated by the government until the steel corporations accept the President's decision."

The second demand on the President was the Justice department investigation. The third was for revision of tax laws which the committee said afforded "industrial magnates protection at the expense of the American taxpayers while engaged in the very conspiracy to reap uncontrolled profits through destruction of labor unions."

The committee reaffirmed its acceptance of President Truman's proposed 18 1-2-cent wage increase for the steelworkers and said union members "will resume work at the plants of any company prepared to pay this wage increase."

Regarding taxes, Philip Murray, C.I.O. president, had written Secretary of the Treasury Vinson also asking for a revision. He had contended a rebate and other provisions would allow the steel companies to remain closed all during 1946 and still emerge with a $149,000,000 profit, or 30 per cent more than the pre-war annual yield.

STEEL STRIKE CLOSES MINES

52 Coal Pits and Three Railroads Are Affected.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—More than forty-five coal mines in West Virginia and Pennsylvania, the leading coal-producing States, closed down today as a result of the C. I. O.'s three-day-old general steel strike and other work stoppages.

The number of idle miners in these States and Alabama exceeded 14,000. Altogether, at least fifty-two mines were closed.

The pinch was felt the most in West Virginia, where some two score mines stopped operations. Among them was the Barrackville pit of the Bethlehem Steel Company. Employing 1,000 miners, it is the largest single producer in the State.

Railroad Cars Tied Up.

Officials of the Baltimore & Ohio, Western Maryland and Monongahela Railroads attributed the closings to a tie-up of railroad cars. Cars taking coal to steel and other strike-bound plants had not been returned, they said, but were standing fully loaded on the plants' sidetracks.

The Monongahela said that it had only a 70 per cent car supply today and probably would be down to 50 per cent by tomorrow.

In the southwestern Pennsylvania field, five captive mines closed. Three are owned by Republic Steel, one each by United States Steel and Crucible Steel.

The Solid Fuels Administration reported that the shutdowns were caused by lack of railroad cars in which to transport the coal and said it expected mine closings would be gradual.

A coal operators' spokesman said steel companies are generally selling their coal on the commercial market now, as there is no one to unload it at closed steel plants where normally the fuel is converted into coke for steel-making.

N.A.M. Disputes Murray Charge

New York, Jan. 23 (AP)—The National Association of Manufacturers today took issue with the claim of the CIO president, Philip Murray, that the United States Treasury "is being mulcted" for the benefit of industrial corporations under tax rebate-provisions in the revenue laws.

In Pittsburgh yesterday Murray made public the text of a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, Fred M. Vinson, in which Murray asked that the present tax laws be terminated because "the United States Treasury is being mulcted for the benefit of a privileged few in sinister conspiracy to plunge the country into economic chaos."

Murray also said the tax law would enable the strike-bound steel industry to "loaf the rest of the year" and still make $149,000,000 profit.

H. E. Humphreys, Jr., chairman of the N.A.M.'s taxation committee in a statement said Murray "has resorted to the use or unreal and hypothetical assumptions," and that tax refunds under the carry-back provisions of the tax law would amount to "little more than $1,000,000,000 for all industry."

AFL UNION ORDERS MEN BACK ON JOBS

CIO GROUP SILENT

Agricultural Department Will Take Over Control of Packing Industry.

ARRANGED FOR SEIZURE

JAN 24 1946

New Mexico Rancher Designated by Anderson to Operate Plants.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—(AP) The question of when the nation's dinner tables will get a normal supply of meat remained unanswered tonight despite President Truman's decision to seize strike-bound packing plants Saturday.

Hours after the White House announced the Agriculture department would become the country's boss butcher this week-end, the government lacked any pledge that 293,000 C.I.O. strikers would return to work.

However, the A.F.L. Meat Cutters and Butchers Union ordered its striking members, whom it said numbered 70,000, to go back on the job Saturday as "loyal Americans."

Earl Jamerson, president, and Patrick E. Gorman, secretary-treasurer of the A.F.L. union, said they had assurances "from sources we cannot reveal that the government will apply any wage increase recommended by the fact-finding board retroactively at least to the date of seizure."

C.I.O. Union Opposed

New York members of the C.I.O. union voted against returning to work until their wage demands were met or until ordered back by their national leaders. There was no commitment from the latter one union official who declined to be quoted by name said "present policy" dictated continuance of the walkout.

If the C.I.O. fails to join the A.F.L. in the back-to-work movement the question whether one union would cross the other's picket lines would apparently arise.

The White House announcement said:

"The government will seize the closed meat-packing plants on Saturday, Jan. 26. The necessary orders for the seizure are now being prepared by the Secretary of Labor.

"Seizure will be made by the Department of Agriculture with the aid of the War department if necessary.

"The plants will be operated by the Department of Agriculture."

Charles Ross, President Truman's press secretary, said no other details were immediately available.

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson tonight designated Gayle G. Armstrong, New Mexico rancher, as his agent to operate the strike-bound meat packing plants.

Armstrong, a close personal friend of Anderson, is assistant administrator of the department's production and marketing administration and vice president of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Anderson said he will send Armstrong to Chicago tomorrow to arrange for seizure and operation of the plants.

Offices Selected

Armstrong will establish offices in Mallers Building, where the Agriculture department has offices.

Anderson said the department ill operate the plants through the presidents or chairmen of the boards of the affected packing concerns.

He said the government will sell meat under existing price ceilings. He said he was in no position to say, however, what wage conditions would be offered the striking workers.

He said such conditions were expected to be made public by the White House tomorrow morning.

Robert Shields, department solicitor, will accompany Armstrong to advise him on legal aspects.

Armstrong said the government possibly would seize any plant not operating at full capacity as a result of a strike or partial strike.

After conferring with industry leaders at Chicago tomorrow, Armstrong will announce when plants are expected to be in a position to buy livestock for slaughter.

At the war department, it was understood the armys subsistence branch was prepared to help Armstrong if and when he should require it.

A former professor at the University of Kansas, he also served as agricultural attache at the American embassy in Berlin for four years and held the same post in London for another four year tour. He is a graduate of the University of Missouri.

Hearings to Continue

In Chicago, Edwin E. Witte, chairman of the government's meat fact finding board, announced that hearings of the panel which started yesterday would continue regardless of Saturday's seizure. Witte indicated the fact finders would continue until their investigations are completed and would present a report and wage recommendations to Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach.

Labor Department officials, working to complete the complicated seizure order, refused to disclose details as to its scope or the extent of the government's power to adjust wages while operating the industry.

"This policy has avoided violence between army personnel and strikers and has proved very successful in peacefully obtaining army supplies from strike-bound plants," the statement said.

"In the current meat-packing case, the unions have agreed to cooperate in the removal of all army meats from the strike-bound plants."

Eddy authorized a statement that it was "the policy of this headquarters to exercise all practicable precautions to avoid incidents which might in any way place the Army in a position of being partisan with respect to disputes arising between management and labor.

"The telegram constituted simply an acknowledgment that certain basic supply sources were strike-bound and that the instructions contained therein were reasonable assurance that local, unpleasant incidents would not arise as a result of this situation."

Smith told the House:

"I have never expected to live to see the day when the dictatorship of any labor union or other private organization over the Government of the United States would reach such a disgraceful stage.

"Are we to understand that the General must ask the permission of any striking labor union before he can obtain the necessary meat to feed our Army?" he asked. "That is certainly the plain implication of the order."

Demand For Congressional Probe

If the unions "have taken over the United States Army," he added, "it would appear that there is a division of command. Both AFL and CIO meat packers' unions are striking. Whose permission must the General obtain in order to feed his Army? Must he have the permission of General William Green, of the AFL, or General Philip Murray, of the CIO? Or must he have permission of both generals?"

And, he asked, what would happen if "General William Green graciously accords the soldiers permission to eat, but General Philip Murray refuses?"

Smith was joined in his demand for a congressional investigation by Representative Cox (D., Ga.), who declared:

"This thing makes the whole Army stink."

Telegram Was Sent Saturday

The telegram which precipitated the impending congressional inquiry was dispatched Saturday from the headquarters of the 3d Service Command here, it was revealed yesterday.

A public relations officer here pointed out "there have been no 'incidents' in the 3d Service Command." As had been explained in a War Department statement, he added, General Eddy's action was in strict accord with "long-standing policy."

Congress To Probe Gen. Eddy's Order To Army Truck Drivers

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—An immediate congressional inquiry was ordered today into a statement that army truck drivers in three Eastern states have been ordered not to cross meat-strike picket lines without union approval.

The statement was made in the House by Representative Howard Smith (D., Va.), who read a telegram from Maj. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, commanding general of the 3d Service Command, issuing the order.

The investigation was ordered by Chairman May (D., Ky.) of the House Military Committee, who said it would start Friday, perhaps with General Eddy as a witness.

"We are going to the bottom of this," May said, adding that committee investigators have been directed to obtain all pertinent data from the War Department.

Copy Of The Telegram

A copy of the telegram read by Smith was sent to him by General Eddy, the Virginian told the House, after he had heard that the order had been issued.

The telegram of January 19 was sent to all installation commanders under Eddy's command.

It read:

"Until further orders army trucks under your command will not be permitted to cross picket lines established by striking meat-packing unions without agreement with local labor representative concerned."

The 3d Service Command includes Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia.

Trainmen Threaten Strike Halting Nation's Railroads

Strike Ballots Being Printed and 215,000 May Quit Jobs Within 3½ Weeks—Pay Is Chief Issue—Engineers Join Move

JAN 24 1946

CLEVELAND, Jan. 23—(AP)—Threat of a strike, possibly within three and one-half weeks, which would paralyze the country's railroad transportation, was made today by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

A. L. Whitney, president of the brotherhood, said that strike ballots were being printed for a poll of the 215,000 members.

[In Chicago a threatened strike on two belt line railroads, which would have blocked shipments of livestock and freight at that vital East-West junction, was called off last night within hours of the deadline.]

The issue in the threat by the trainmen is the demand made in July by all five "operating" brotherhoods and the fifteen "non-operating" brotherhoods for wage increases averaging 25 per cent and changes in many working rules.

If no offer is received by the trainmen from the railroads within about three weeks, which he estimated as the time to complete the brotherhood balloting, Mr. Whitney declared, a strike could follow "within three days."

He stated that the strike ballots being printed were joint ballots for use by the trainmen and the members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and bore the name of Alvanley Johnston, grand chief engineer, as well as his.

The engineers will meet here Feb. 1 and authorization of a strike poll of the 78,000 members was a "distinct possibility," Mr. Johnston said.

Mr. Whitney asserted that "our people are becoming impatient over the railroad's delays" and it was possible some trainmen would walk off their jobs without a strike vote.

"They're threatening to do it all the time," he added.

"When the ballots are counted, they will be about 99 per cent in favor of a fair settlement—which means they will favor strike action if necessary. We don't want a strike, but it will take place if there is no definite settlement."

He added that in a strike the men would permit the continued operation "of troop trains, traffic involving returned soldiers, and hospital trains."

In Washington a spokesman for the brotherhoods told a reporter that once a strike date was set the National (railway) Mediation Board probably would recommend that the President appoint an emergency fact-finding board as prescribed under the Railway Labor Act.

Record of Fact Finding

Appointment of the fact-finding board does not automatically prohibit a strike, but mediation officials declared that no organization had as yet violated the voluntary "no strike" provision. Usually any threatened rail strike is held in abeyance while the fact-finding board is making its inquiry and preparing its report.

Three operating organizations—the firemen and enginemen, the conductors and the switchmen—and the fifteen representing clerks, shopmen, maintenance-of-way men and others, continued in Chicago today to negotiate with railroad representatives and a three-man panel of the National Mediation Board. The negotiations began Dec. 18.

Sources close to the negotiations said that the worker groups represented were about to accept, pending final details, a proposal for arbitration of the wage issue, leaving the rule changes in mediation.

Mr. Whitney's brotherhood represents brakemen, flagmen, dining car stewards, yard masters, yardmen, switch tenders and "about two-thirds" of the conductors.

TRUMAN HALTS CHICAGO RAIL SHUTTLE STRIKE

Creates Emergency Board, Freezing Status Quo for 60 Days.

2 LINK LINES ARE VITAL

Walkout, Set for Tonight, Would Have Stopped East-West Freight Shipments.

Washington, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—President Truman today took steps to halt a threatened strike on two Chicago railroads which would block livestock shipments to the Chicago stockyards. Acting under the railway mediation law, he created an emergency board to investigate a dispute between the Indiana Harbor Belt Railroad, the Chicago Junction Railroad and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

A walkout of the 1,500 trainmen on the two shuttle roads has been set for 11:30 P. M. Eastern standard time tonight. The union charges the roads with violating a union contract.

National Mediation Board officials said the parties would be notified of the President's action which, under the law, usually halts a strike automatically for sixty days pending the emergency board's report. These officials said nearly every road entering Chicago would be affected if the strike materialized. The board has thirty days in which to make its report. For thirty days thereafter no change, except by agreement, can be made by the roads or their employees in the conditions out of which the disputes arose.

Shuttle Lines Are Vital.

In Chicago, an executive of both roads said a walkout would disrupt through freight shipments between the East and West. The Indiana Harbor road connects with main line railroads entering Chicago. The Chicago Junction road serves the stockyards.

The brotherhood charged company violation of the union contract and failure to comply with directives of the National Railroad Adjustment Board regarding distribution of transfer service between seniority point terminals and restoration of train switching jobs to the trainmen.

GENERAL MOTORS, U. A. W. WAITING EACH OTHER OUT

DETROIT, Jan. 23.—(AP) Farther apart than ever in their wage dispute, General Motors Corp. and the C.I.O. Auto Workers Union apparently were waiting each other out today with neither side showing any disposition to seek another meeting of their contract negotiators.

The union, which previously had accepted the 17.5 per cent wage rate increase recommended by a presidential fact-finding commission, reverted to its original 30 per cent demand when GM rejected the commission proposal and announced it would go no higher than the 12 per cent it offered at the last meeting of the wage negotiators.

Ford, Chrysler Parleys

Meanwhile, conferences were resumed today between the union and representatives of the Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. There were persistent rumors that a compromise was imminent in the Ford dispute. The Ford company has offered a 17 1-2 cents an hour or 14.7 per cent increase and the union is demanding 19 1-2 cents or slightly more than 18 per cent.

The rumors were that an agreement would be reached on the basis of an 18 1-2 cents an hour or 15.5 per cent increase.

The Ford conferees adjourned after a two and a half hour session today and John S. Bugas, industrial relations director of the company, told newsmen, "we are still talking wages."

He said the discussions would be resumed Thursday. The union issued no immediate statement on the Ford situation.

Chrysler negotiations also were adjourned after a lengthy session, the union and company representatives setting Thursday for their next session.

Norman Matthews, Chrysler U.A.W. director, said, "we reviewed the whole picture and made some progress at today's meeting" but he did not amplify the remark.

Asked if the union had lowered its original 30 per cent wage increase demands on Chrysler, he declined comment.

Comments Refused

Company spokesmen also refused to discuss the results of the conference.

Original negotiations between Chrysler and the U.A.W.-C.I.O. began on the union's demand for a 30 per cent rise, and were broken off before the fact-finders announced their recommendation of a 17.5 per cent increase in the General Motors dispute.

Presumably the union planned to determine whether Chrysler would accept the fact-finders' formula of a 19 1-2 cents an hour increase. This would amount to 17.1 per cent among Chrysler workers.

At General Motors headquarters today it was said the corporation planned no response to the union's statement to President Truman yesterday, that the management was "in open revolt against the American government x x x and is in a conspiracy to destroy organized labor."

The statement was in a letter to the President in which the U.A.W.-C.I.O. notified him it had reinstated its original 30 per cent demand against General Motors.

'Sit-Down Strike,' Is Hillman's View

New York, Jan. 23 (AP)—Sidney Hillman, CIO political action chairman, left LaGuardia Field today for London with a parting comment that industry was "on a sit-down strike."

Hillman is a member of the executive commitee of the World Federation of Trade Unions, which will investigate industry and union conditions in the four occupation areas of Germany.

"In this strike of industry," he said, "the pattern is too general. It appears that steel is not acting on its own behalf only. There appears to be an understanding between steel and General Motors.

"There is the appearance that certain elements feel this is the time to fight labor," Hillman added. "The big companies feel the tax law assures them of a generous profit whether they work or not."

Industry, he said, is "on a sit-down strike and I hope those responsible for it will soon come to their senses and co-operate with the national Administration to speed up reconversion."

Hillman also said the PAC would mobilize in an effort to mold public opinion in support of the national Administration.

SHIPBUILDERS CUT WAGE RISE DEMAND

Washington, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—The C. I. O. today sharply reduced its wage demands on the shipbuilding industry and proposed an increase of 20 cents an hour for the nation's 650,000 shipbuilding workers.

Previously, the C. I. O. had asked 26 cents. Yesterday, Government procurement agencies proposed a flat 15 per cent raise in shipbuilding wages—which would add 18 cents to the standard mechanics wage rate of $1.20 per hour.

J. R. Redstrom, spokesman for the working committee of the Shipbuilding Wage Stabilization Conference, said that the committee would probably vote on both proposals later today.

Although no official announcement was made, it was understood the A. F. of L. Metal Trades Department would support the 20-cent demand of the C. I. O. Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers.

The A. F. of L. represents roughly 450,000 of the total union labor in the shipyards.

Shipbuilding management representatives on the working committee thus far have opposed a wage increase of any kind in the industry. Under the working committee rules, action on a wage proposal must be unanimous for adoption and a report to the full conference.

A.F.L. BID GIVEN LATIN AMERICANS

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 23 — (AP) The A.F.L. extended a hand today to Latin American labor groups which share the federation's "economic philosophy."

"What we are anxious to do is to establish a free trade union movement in the different countries of Latin America," A.F.L. President William Green told a news conference following a meeting of his policy-making executive council.

"We invite and hope to secure the cooperation of those who accept the economic philosophy of the A.F.L.," Green said. "In other words, we wish to have our labor movement divorced from the political movement, and to deal with problems as labor groups."

Green said he interpreted the rival organizational work of Vincente Lombardo Toledano, Mexican leader, "as a political movement rather than as a trade union movement."

Toledano, directing activities of the Latin American Confederation of Labor, had cooperated with the C.I.O. and Soviet groups in forming the New World Federation of Trade Unions, which the A.F.L. refuses to join.

The A.F.L. president took another crack at Communists in labor's ranks today by asserting that "one of the things we have been able to do" in the federation was to "draw the line" on Communists on the council.

SHORT SURPRISES PROBERS WITH NEW JAP ATTACK DATA

JAN 24 1946

General Produces Message to Show Chiefs Did Not Expect War.

ALERT NEVER GIVEN

Witness Defends Interceptor Command's Operations Before Jap Raid.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—(AP) Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short surprised the Pearl Harbor investigating committee today with documentary evidence that:

1. Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, 1941 assistant chief of staff for military intelligence, sent a message to Panama two days before Pearl Harbor indicating he did not believe a break with Japan was then imminent.

2. Maj. Gen. Hayes A. Kroner, chief of the intelligence branch under Miles, did not have access to decoded Japanese messages although he helped prepare estimates of probable military developments.

Kroner testified at a previous inquiry that from his point of view a Nov. 29, 1941, estimate made no mention of "Japan's capability against Pearl Harbor" because he and Col. Thomas J. Betts, who worked with him on it, had no information "which would lead us to believe that they were capable of or planned to do so." (Attack the Hawaiian base).

Messages Offered

Short, who was the Army commander in Hawaii at the time of the Dec. 7, 1941, raid, offered Miles' message and the Kroner testimony to support his contention that the War department fully realized his command was alerted only against sabotage and was satisfied with this.

Among the spectators packing the hearing room was Short's son, Maj. Walter D. Short, just returned from overseas.

The witness, although his voice was enfeebled by a recent attack of pneumonia, spoke up with vigor whenever there was a question as to his responsibility for being caught by surprise.

Repeatedly, he emphasized that Washington failed either to order an all-out alert itself or give him the information that would have impelled him to order one.

The Miles message which Short said was sent to Panama on Dec. 5 read:

"United States-Japanese relations strained. Will inform you if and when severance of diplomatic relations are imminent."

Its production came as an obvious surprise to the Senate-House investigating committee.

Senator Ferguson (R-Mich) said it showed the committee should get messages Washington officials sent to places other than Hawaii in the period shortly before the attack.

Senator Lucas (D-Ill) called it "one of the most important developments yet."

Ferguson said the committee should have had the message while Miles one of the earlier witnesses, was before the group.

In his testimony, Miles said an attack on Hawaii always had been considered a possibility and was not mentioned in the military estimates because it was "inherent in the situation."

It was in rebuttal to that statement that Short brought out the Kroner document. This was a partial transcript of testimony Kroner gave Sept. 13, 1944, at a secret investigation conducted by Col. Carter W. Clarke under orders from Secretary of War Stimson.

Kroner was chief of the intelligence branch in the War department from July, 1941, up to the time of the attack. During this period, he testified, there was never to his knowledge any prediction or forecast of a possible attack on Pearl Harbor.

Telling of preparation of the Nov. 29 estimate, Kroner said each geographic section in the intelligence branch made separate estimates and he and Colonel Betts put the estimates together.

"He and I discussed the lines of action and capabilities of all the warring powers and especially of each potential enemy to the U.S.A., and I took them to General Miles where they were finally altered to suit him or approved," he related.

"This particular estimate does not include in the lines of action open to Japan, an attack on Pearl Harbor, and I remember that so distinctly because when the word came through the radio on that fateful Sunday, December 7, that Japan had attacked Pearl Harbor I was sitting in my office in the munitions building reading from this paper the Japanese capabilities.

"Therefore from my point of view, I feel that Japan's potential capability against Pearl Harbor was left from this estimate because neither Colonel Betts nor I had any information which would lead us to believe that they were capable of or planned to do so."

SHORT SHIFTS FIRE TO ARMY INTELLIGENCE

Reveals Message to Show Miles on Dec. 5 Didn't Think Split Near.

INFORMATION SENT TO PANAMA

Hawaiian Commander Also Says Miles's Aid Lacked Japs' Intercepted Code.

Washington, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—Major-Gen. Walter C. Short today gave congressional investigators evidence which he said showed that two days before Pearl Harbor, Major-Gen. Sherman Miles, then chief of Army intelligence, did not believe an open split with Japan was near.

Short, Army commander at Pearl Harbor when the Japanese struck on December 7, 1941, read into the record of the Senate-House inquiry this message which he said Miles sent to Panama on December 5, 1941:

"United States-Japanese relations strained. Will inform you if and when severance of diplomatic relations are imminent."

The message caused a stir among members of the committee. Senator Lucas (D.-Ill.) told reporters he thought it was "one of the most important developments yet."

Wants Other Messages.

Senator Ferguson (R.-Mich.) said it was important in the inquiry to have messages Washington sent to other places than Hawaii. He said the message in question would have been most important in the cross-examination of Miles, who has been a witness.

Later, in an executive session the committee voted to try to shorten the hearing by dispensing with oral testimony by members of the staffs of Short and Rear Admiral E. Kimmel, the 1941 commander of the Pacific Fleet. Chairman Barkley (D., Ky.) said counsel for Short and Kimmel agreed there are some fifteen to twenty witnesses involved.

Short also handed another hitherto unrevealed document to the committee. It was an extract from testimony by Major-Gen. Hayes A. Kroner, 1941 chief of the intelligence branch under Miles, at a previous investigation of Pearl Harbor.

This showed that Kroner testified on September 13, 1944, that in preparing estimates of the world military situation, he did not have the benefit of intercepted Japanese messages.

He said an estimate which he and Col. Thomas J. Betts prepared on November 29, 1941, contained no mention of a possible attack on Pearl Harbor.

"From my point of view," Kroner added "I feel that Japan's potential capability against Pearl Harbor was left from this estimate because neither Col. Betts nor I had any information which would lead us to believe that they were capable of or planned to do so."

Arrived at Same Conclusion.

Short told the committee that he also lacked access to the secret messages and that Kroner and Betts, as did he, arrived at the conclusion there would be no air attack on Pearl Harbor. Kroner left out the possibility of an attack on Pearl Harbor, Short said, because he did not have the intercepted Japanese messages. It was not left out, Short said, "because as Gen. Miles said, it was 'too obvious.'"

Short declared that as Army commander at Pearl Harbor he expected Washington either to order an alert there late in 1941 "or give me sufficient information to order it."

This assertion was made after he was asked whether he had expected Gen. George C. Marshall to order the base on the alert.

Short recalled that in June, 1940, Marshall himself had issued such orders to the Hawaiian Command when the chief of staff feared an attack there.

Samuel H. Kaufman, a committee counsel, suggested that world developments had changed from 1940 to 1941, so that Marshall had to put "greater reliance on field commanders."

Short retorted that conditions "also required greater reliance on the performance of the duties of the general staff" in Washington.

War Probe Seeks Way To Limit Testimony

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—The Pearl Harbor Committee searched today for a way to limit the scope of its investigation after it hears the full testimony of Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short.

Chairman Barkley (D., Ky.) called a closed-door meeting of the group for this afternoon in an attempt to cut short a schedule of testimony that Counsel Seth Richardson repeatedly has told the committee will keep the hearings going several months.

Various methods of reaching this objective were discussed at a two-hour meeting yesterday from which reporters were excluded. But Barkley said no agreement was reached.

Won't Limit Short's Time

One Democratic committee member said it appears obvious to him that testimony cannot be completed by the February 15 deadline set by Congress.

There was general agreement among committee members, however, that there will be no attempt to limit the questioning of Short, who completed the reading of a lengthy statement yesterday. After three hours and fifteen minutes on the stand, Short, who has been ill in a hospital recently, was excused until today.

The former Hawaiian Army commander told the committee that the War Department let a little more than three hours elapse between its receipt of an intercepted Japanese message on December 7 before it dispatched to him a final warning that did not reach his hands until seven hours after the Japanese attack began.

Refers To Marshall Message

He referred to a message Gen. George C. Marshall, then army chief of staff, sent after it was learned that Tokyo had ordered its ambassadors in Washington to present their final diplomatic reply at 1 P.M., Washington time.

Short said that at 3.30 A.M., Honolulu time, the War Department had that information in its hands. But he contended that it was not until 6.48 A.M. that the message actually was dispatched by commercial cable when the Army's radio had difficulty in reaching Hawaii.

The witness said the first attack on Hickham Field came at 7.55 A.M. while the message was received in Honolulu before that time, evidence shows it was not delivered to the Army Signal Headquarters until after the attack.

Had he received the message by telephone, and not in code, Short said, he would have had time to disperse his planes and the Navy could have got some of its ships out of the harbor.

FOUR NOMINATED TO BRETTON POSTS

Vinson Named Governor Of Fund And Bank

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—President Truman today nominated four of the six men to represent the United States in carrying out the $17,900,000,000 United Nations monetary agreements signed at Bretton Woods, N.H., in July, 1944.

Fred M. Vinson, Secretary of the Treasury, as United States governor of both the $8,800,000,000 International Stabilization Fund and the $9,100,000,000 International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

William L. Clayton, of Texas, Assistant Secretary of State for economic affairs, as alternate governor of the fund and bank.

White Of Maryland

Harry D. White, of Maryland, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, as United States executive director of the fund.

Emilio G. Collado, of New York, finance deputy to Clayton in the State Department, as United States executive director of the bank.

The Vinson and Clayton appointments are for five years. They will retain their present posts.

White and Collado, who played major roles in the Bretton Woods conference, were appointed for two-year terms. They both said they were uncertain whether thy will have to give up their present jobs.

May Have To Resign

Other officials expressed the belief that White and Collado may have to resign their current jobs because the articles of agreement provide that executive directors shall function "in continuous session" at the principal office of the fund and bank. Headquarters of each will be in the United States, the principal subscriber to the bank ($3,175,000,000) and to the fund ($2,750,000,000).

Alternate executive directors for White and Collado remain to be selected.

Vinson and White said recently that the [illegible] organizations would not act [illegible] start operations until next summer.

Souers Is Named Director Of Foreign Intelligence Unit

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—President Truman today designated Sidney W. Souers, 53-year-old St. Louis insurance executive, as director of the nation's first central foreign intelligence system.

Souers, a rear admiral in the Naval Reserve and lately deputy chief of naval intelligence, will return to civilian status in his new post.

Setting in motion the system he established yesterday by executive order, the President also designated Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy to serve on a policy-making national intelligence authority.

Leahy will sit with the Secretaries of State, War and Navy in formulating broad policies for the development and co-ordination of foreign intelligence activities bearing on national security.

3-Department Agency

Souers will direct a full-time operating organization to recommend and carry out the intelligence authority's policies. The central intelligence group, which he heads, is to be set up by the three departmental secretaries.

Souers, who will be the key figure in the whole organization, has a long business background in the mid-West and South.

A Naval Reserve officer since 1929, he was senior intelligence officer in St. Louis from 1932 to 1940. Later he served, in 1940, as assistant district intelligence officer of the 9th Naval District, Great Lakes, Ill. He was transferred in February, 1942, to the 6th Naval District, Charleston, S.C. He became district intelligence officer of the 10th Naval District, San Juan, P.R., and intelligence officer of the Caribbean Sea frontier October 4, 1942.

Business Firm Executive

Subsequently he was assistant director of the office of naval intelligence here before his designation November 8, 1945, as deputy chief of naval intelligence.

In his business career he was an executive of various firms in New Orleans, Nashville and Kennett, Montana.

Souers told reporters the new central agency will co-ordinate intelligence reports of the Army, Navy and State departments and present them in "usable form" to the President and other top policy-makers of the Government.

Responsibility To Truman

Although the agency's staff will be furnished and paid by those three departments, Souers said it will be responsible only to the President.

Thus, he said, he will continue technically on duty status with the Navy and will be paid by it, but will be detached by the Navy for his new duties, will wear civilian clothes and will "serve the President as intelligence director and not as a representative of the Navy."

Souers said he did not know precisely the size of the staff he will assemble—although he remarked it would be "relatively small."

Army Intelligence Chief

Meanwhile, the Army announced tonight the appointment of Lieut. Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg to be chief of the army intelligence division.

He succeeds Maj. Gen. Clayton L. Bissell, whose new assignment has not yet been announced. The appointment is effective January 26.

Vandenberg, a native of Milwaukee, has been in charge of air-force training.

Anglo-U.S. Plan For Caribbean Drawn

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—The United States and Britain have announced a program for the economic development of their territories in the Caribbean area looking toward increased agricultural production and limited industrialization.

The plan, announced jointly in London and Washington, is based upon the recommendations of a conference held in Barbados in 1944. The announcement emphasized that "really substantial improvements" in the standards of living in the Caribbean can come "only gradually."

The plan calls for direct assistance from both countries through financial aids to agricultural and industrial production and transportation and indirectly through the expansion of appropriate Government services. A policy of encouraging diversification and expansion of selected types of industry was adopted within certain limitations. Support was given for migration of industry to the area when adapted to local labor and other conditions.

British Loan Called 'Gift We Can't Afford'

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—Representative Vursell (R., Ill.) opposes the $3,750,000,000 loan to England because "it would be a gift and we cannot afford it."

"It would be a gift," he told the House yesterday, "because if they could not afford to pay a $4,000,000,000 loan at the end of World War I they cannot pay this loan we are now contemplating.

"The loan offers no collateral and no exchange of goods such as tin and rubber and many other goods they could draw from the empire and lay down on our shores in at least part payment for the loan.

"If we bankrupt this nation financially it would be of the greatest detriment not only to our own people but to the future of the world. We cannot exert world strength and world leadership unless we remain strong at home."

NIGHT SESSIONS URGED TO SPEED CONGRESS WORK

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23. — (AP) Congress got a suggestion today that it hold some night sessions and allow them to be broadcast.

This was one of a number of proposals made by a subcommittee consisting of Senator LaFollette (Prog-Wis) and Rep. Monroney (D-Okla) to a Senate-House committee studying ways to modernize Congress and improve its efficiency.

Another was that three full days a week be devoted to committee sessions and three full days to chamber sessions. As it is now, committees usually meet in the mornings and the Senate and House convene at noon, generally five days a week.

Broadcasts Proposed

The night broadcasts and the full-day sessions were proposed as experiments.

The committee definitely urged, however, that congressmen be placed under the Federal pension system and given a $5,000 pay rise to $15,000 a year. It also proposed that each member be allowed an $8,000 a year assistant to handle non-legislative matters.

Extensive reforms were proposed in committee procedure. The study group recommended:

1. That the number of committees be reduced from 33 to 16 in the Senate and from 48 to 18 in the House.

30.2 F—517

2. That the House rules committee be required to clear all bills within 20 days. President Truman has accused this group of blocking some of his program.

3. That committee chairmen be required to bring to the floor all bills which their committees approve.

4. That every committee considering legislation be required to hold a public hearing on it at least once a month to keep it moving.

System Criticized

The report also criticized the system by which the House appropriations committee delegates to small subcommittees the detailed consideration of appropriations.

The study further recommended that the courts be given authority to settle claims against the government on which Congress now must act, and that all lobbying groups and their agents be required to register and submit quarterly reports of expenditures.

Senator LaFollette (Prog-Wis), chairman of the committee, said further meetings will be held before the report is completed.

Wallace Plans 'Gain Favor'

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—Henry A. Wallace, the man who almost became President, appears to be making friends and influencing people in his new job as the friend of business—both big and little.

For instance:

Harry S. Truman, who beat Wallace for the vice presidency and so entered the White House, has just asked Congress for greatly expanded funds for the Department of Commerce which Wallace now directs as Secretary.

Senator Bailey (D., N.C.), a leader among the so-called conservative Southern Democrats, is pushing several bills at Wallace's request to expand business services and aids of the Commerce Department.

"Putting Department Ahead"

"We like Mr. Wallace's plans fine," Bailey, chairman of the important Senate Commerce Committee, said today. "He is putting the Commerce Department aggressively ahead for both domestic and international trade of the United States."

Wallace spent several hours yesterday explaining his plans to a closed-door session of the Senate Commerce Committee.

"He plans a reorganization of the Commerce Department at the top," Bailey said "We all want to help him. We're going to help small business and at the same time help all business."

As Secretary of Agriculture, Wallace attracted wide attention in the early days of the New Deal with his farm-aid programs. For several months now he has been drawing up a program for expanded governmetal assistance to the nation's business men.

Change In Viewpoint

Some of the senators who before confirming Wallace to his second Cabinet post last year stripped away the broad loan authority held by former Secretary Jesse Jones now say privately they are favorably impressed by his new business-aid plans.

The commerce committee unanimously recommended that the Senate provide Wallace with three additional assistant secretaries to specialize on international commerce, domestic economy, and small business.

Bailey said the committee would also approve a bill by Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.) to set up a new "office of technical services" under Wallace. This would make research, technical advances, and patents available to all business—big, medium and small—on a share alike basis.

Schwellenbach And Stassen Hit At Filibuster

Both Uphold F. E. P. C. Bill, Deplore Senate Effort by Minority to Block It

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 (AP).—The Senate filibuster by Southern Democrats opposed to legislation for a fair employment practices commission was deplored tonight by Harold E. Stassen and Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach.

Mr. Stassen, former Minnesota Governor and Navy captain who has been mentioned as a possible Republican Presidential candidate in 1948, said it raises "an issue which should be decided by the people . . . in the elections that are before us."

Mr. Schwellenbach said the F. E. P. C. bill "is a test of our willingness to practice democracy as well as preach it."

Both spoke from prepared addresses at a dinner of the national council fora permanent fair employment practice commission.

Mr. Stassen declared the question "is not simply of the importance of legislation to safeguard the rights of minorities, but also of the importance of the establishment of a legislative procedure that will prevent minorities from wilfully blocking the decisions of the majority."

"Clearly the filibuster has a place in legislative procedure," he said. "It can well be used to insure an opportunity to the people of the country to thoroughly understand an issue before a decision. It can be used to give time for the marshalling of evidence, for the investigation of facts, and for sound democratic compromise. But it does not appear currently that it is being used for any of these purposes."

As the filibuster continued for the fifth day, Senator Burnet R. Maybank, Democrat, of South Carolina, warned the Senate that others would follow if the F. E. P. C. bill is enacted.

FILIBUSTERERS JES' AIN'T SPEAKIN'

Washington, Jan. 23 (A. P.—Those feudin' filibusterers from Mississippi — Theodor Gilmore Bilbo and James Oliver Eastland aren't getting any friendlier, even over the FEPC.

At odds over deeply rooted political differences despite their same party affiliation the two are not known to have exchanged so much as a cool good morning since Eastland first came to the Capitol in 1941 to join Bilbo on the Mississippi team.

A reporter, checking on whether a common dislike for the FEPC bill has established speaking terms between them, got these answers (separately):

Eastland: "Hell, no!"

Bilbo: "What's the name? Don't know 'im."

SENATORS URGE ARMY DISCHARGE

FATHERS BY JULY

Subcommittee Recommends Seven Other Steps to Speed Demobilization.

TRAINING CUT PROPOSED

JAN 24 1946

WACS Favored as Replacements for Separation Center Duties.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 — (AP)— A Senate Military Subcommittee recommended today that all fathers in the Army, except volunteers, be discharged by July 1 although General Dwight D. Eisenhower said it could not be done.

This was one of eight steps the sub-committee urged to speed demobilization. If the War department fails to take them, the group proposed that Congress should pass a law to compel their adoption.

The other seven:

1. Continue "the rate of demobilization of the past few months x x x until the approximately 2,000,000 surplus men now in the Army are discharged."

Shorter Training Urged

2. Shorten the training of new men. (The Army recently cut the training period from 17 to 13 weeks).

3. Give "prompt attention" to "special hardship cases."

4. Assign "all idle soldiers" to "essential tasks" or discharge them "at once."

5. Enlist WACs to replace soldiers on duty on separation centers.

6. Push "more effectively" the enlistment of Philippine scouts to replace GIs there.

7. Employ civilians here and abroad "insofar as possible" to replace soldiers "in the so-called army housekeeping jobs." This is the term usually given to kitchen police, latrine and similar details.

Eisenhower has said that 500,000 of the 700,000 fathers still in the Army will be discharged by July 1 in the normal operation of the demobilization plan. But he asserted that any blanket release for this class of soldier would cripple the Army seriously and prevent its accomplishing its tasks.

"The real answer to all the complaints about demobilization is a quick return to a volunteer army," said the report signed by Senators Johnson (D.-Colo.), chairman, Briggs (D.-Mo.) and Revercomb (R.-W. Va.).

The three were appointed by Chairman Elbert D. Thomas (D-Utah) of the military committee to investigate the entire demobilization program after GIs in a series of mass demonstrations protested an announced slowdown.

"Thousands of soldiers and the families and friends of soldiers who have seen long, hard, service abroad have wanted to testify," the report said. "Their telegrams, cablegrams, letters and telephone calls have been studied with great care, and we clearly understand their point of view. The subcommittee agrees with these soldiers that they have earned an early discharge and that it should be forthcoming without delay.

"Furthermore, we feel that it is inhuman and unnecessary to hold fathers in the armed forces against their will. Their commitments are at their own fireside."

Schedule Repeated

The Senators repeated the demobilization schedule outlined to members of Congress recently by Eisenhower. He promised that by April 30, all men with 45 points or 30 months service would be out of the army or homeward bound. By June 30, the general said, the same would be true for men with 40 points or 24 months service.

"It should be noted there are no strings attached to this Eisenhower commitment," the Senators declared, adding it was not dependent upon international commitments, Selective Service, or finding replacements.

Then the group declared that many recently drafted men had not been used abroad as replacements. They said 88,000 men were inducted in July but only 30,000 went overseas.

"Replacements for the men with combat service and with long foreign service have not been efficiently handled," the report said.

The War department was said to have full authority to get any manpower needed, either through drafting men between 18 and 45 years or "a very attractive volunteer bill."

The group noted what it called "very satisfactory progress" in recruiting 50,000 Philippine scouts authorized last October by Congress. It also observed that 200,000 soldiers are guarding, some $14,000,000,000 worth of surplus war property abroad, much of which "has little or no market value."

The group predicted that army volunteers between January and July of this year will total 600,000 or double war department estimates.

AGF Cutting Men

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—(AP) The Army ground forces announced today that 70 per cent of its remaining personnel in this country would be discharged before June 30.

A separation order issued by General Jacob L. Devers, AGF chief, will result in release of 115,000 men and officers, most of them during February, the Army announced. No overseas troops are involved.

Devers' order affects two Army groups in this country — enlisted men with 45 points and officers with 67 points as of last Sept. 2; enlisted men with 30 months service and officers with 45 months as of April 30, 1946. Devers ordered installations to begin discharging the first group, consisting of about 80,000 men, "at once" and the Army said this process is well under way. This group represented about 50 per cent of AGF personnel in this country at the close of 1945.

The second group is made up of GIs with 40 points and officers with 65, and enlisted men with two years service and officers with 42 months as of next June 30. About 35,000 are in this second group and most of these will be discharged during May, the Army said.

U.S. MAY ACT IN JOB PLEA

JAN 24 1946

Justice Department Seeks to Back Veteran.

Washington, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—The Department of Justice plans to intervene in the first case to reach the United States Appellate Courts which affects the rights of returned service men to be re-employed in their old jobs.

Announcing this today, the department said it is preparing an application to the Second Circuit Court of Appeals in New York city for permission to file a brief and to make oral argument in the case of Abraham Fishgold vs. Sullivan Drydock and Repair Corporation.

The brief would be filed in support of the selective service ruling that a veteran must be re-employed in his old job even if it means displacing a non-veteran of greater seniority.

If the court grants the application, Assistant Attorney-General John F. Sonnett will argue the case, the announcement said. Sonnett, a former service man, is head of the department's claims division, in which is located the veterans affairs section.

The announcement said that the Fishgold case is the first case to reach the United States Appellate courts and a decision in the case will, therefore, affect the rights of returned service men to be re-employed in their old jobs.

The brief was requested by Selective Service, the department said, "because of the importance of decision in the Fishgold case which will have weight in all re-employment cases concerning this seniority question in which the Attorney-General is at the present time serving as attorney for veterans."

Would Breach Contract.

The department gave this background on the case:

Fishgold, an ex-service man, asked to be re-employed in his old job by the Sullivan company. The company refused on the grounds that his old job was not available because a good many jobs similar to his had been abolished due to a decline of business. The company said non-veterans with greater seniority than Fishgold's were holding down all of these jobs.

The company maintained that its contract with a labor union would be breached in the event Fishgold were re-employed and a non-veteran of greater seniority laid off. After negotiations carried on through Selective Service failed, Fishgold hired private counsel and the case went to trial in the Federal court of New Jersey. Fishgold's private counsel filed his petition, the company filed an answer, the union intervened claiming its contract would be abridged should Fishgold be re-employed and the non-veteran union member laid off.

The court rendered judgment for Fishgold that he be reinstated for a year, even if it meant the lay-off of the non-veteran union member having greater seniority. The union appealed to the Second Circuit Court of Appeals.

Priest Among 4 Heroes Getting Top Awards

Washington, Jan. 28 (AP)—The 40-year-old navy chaplain who played a heroic role aboard the blazing aircraft carrier Franklin receives the nation's highest award for valor today from President Truman.

He is Commander Joseph T. O'Callahan, of Cambridge, Mass., and Holy Cross College, the first Jesuit priest to enlist in the naval service in this war.

Three others will also receive Congressional Medals of Honor at the White House ceremony. One will go to another officer of the Franklin for saving shipmates' lives, the others to soldiers for smashing the enemy.

Others Being Honored

The second navy man to be honored is Lieut. Donald Arthur Gary, of Oakland, Cal., 44-year-old engineering officer of the Franklin.

The soldiers, both from Georgia, are:

Sergt. John Randolph McKinney, of Sylvania, who killed 36 of 100 Japs charging McKinney and twelve fellow GI's on a Luzon field last May 11, and First Lieutenant Daniel W. Lee, of Alma, who single-handedly silenced two German mortar emplacements and forced an armored car to withdraw at Montreval, France, September 2, 1944.

Aboard Just 17 Days

Father O'Callahan, now assigned to the new aircraft carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt, had been aboard the U.S.S. Franklin just seventeen days when she was set ablaze and endangered by bomb hits within 50 miles of the Japanese coast last March 19.

Although wounded himself, he manned a fire hose, organized fire-fighting and rescue parties, wet down burning ammunition magazines to prevent additional explosions, carried wounded men topside on his shoulders, administered last rites to the dying, consoled the wounded and inspired the unwounded.

Gary is credited with rescuing possibly 800 men trapped below decks by smoke, flame and smashed bulkheads.

LAUDS NEGRO SOLDIERS

Washington, Jan. 23 (A. P.)—The names and performance of Negro soldiers in world war II "are everlastingly recorded among the living and the dead," Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D.-Cal.) declared in the House.

"It should never be forgotten," she said, "that Negro heroes in this war achieved their proud records under handicaps that did not have to be overcome by most of their white fellow citizens.

"Three-fourths of all Negroes in the armed forces came from areas where their people had been held down for generations, denied education, denied the use of tools any more complicated than a hoe, denied the right to participate in self-government, denied even the right to self respect," she asserted.

War Of 1812 Pension

JAN 24 194

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—It has been 130 years since the War of 1812 ended, but an Oregon woman is still drawing a pension for services rendered by a veteran of that war.

The Veterans Administration said today that Mrs. Esther Ann Hill Morgan, 88, is receiving a $20 pension each month. Mrs. Morgan is the daughter of John Hill, a private in the War of 1812.

Normally, a daughter is not entitled to a pension, but a special act of Congress, on February 17, 1927, provided for Mrs. Morgan.

Bad Fuse Held Enough To Begin Atom War

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—The nightmare of an atomic war of annihilation exploding accidentally from a defective bomb fuse or a maniac's thumb jabbing a fatal button was conjured up today by Maj. Gen. J. F. C. Fuller.

The British military analyst likened the atomic weapon to a Sword of Damocles suspended over the world's head.

The slender thread holding that sword might be cut "wilfully" in event of another war, he said, "but on account of the tension in which all nations will live, it is far more likely to be severed accidentally." Then he mentioned bad fuses on atomic rockets and maniacs who might gain access to control panels as instruments of such disaster.

Pictures War's Outbreak

Writing in the service magazine Army Ordnance, Fuller gave his conception of the outbreak of an atomic war:

"Instead of cities being walled in as in the Viking Age, we can picture whole countries girt about by radar sets, ceaselessly 'listening in' for the first note of the broadcast of annihilation.

"In the vicinity of these instruments will be hidden away two tactical organizations of atom-charged and propelled rockets—the one offensive and the other defensive. The first will be ranged on every great foreign city in the world, because before the war is launched (to declare it would be sheer madness), no single nation will know who among the rest is its true enemy.

Defense And Its Failure

"The second organization will be directed by the radar sets, and as soon as they signal a flight of offensive rockets speeding toward them, the defensive rockets will automatically be released by radar to speed into the heavens and explode in whatever cubic space in the stratosphere radar decides the enemy's offensive rockets will enter at a calculated time.

"Then miles above the surface of the earth, noiseless battles will be fought between blast and counterblast. Now and again an invader will get through, and up will go London, Paris or New York in a 40,000-foot-high mushroom of smoke and dust. And as nobody will know what is happening above or beyond or be certain who is fighting whom—let alone what for—the war will go on in a kind of bellicose perpetual motion until the last laboratory blows up."

Or—An Age Of Abundance

A possible age of abundance with economic causes of war eliminated by ample atomic-released energy, is a more hopeful alternative to an age of annihilation, Fuller declared.

In such an event, he said "it will become clearly apparent in a world governed by economic sanity that destruction is not a profitable aim in war."

"It will be seen that the less destructive are the means of waging war the more profitable will be the peace," Fuller predicted.

"Therefore, armies of the future will have to be so organized that they can rapidly occupy an enemy's country and not, as now, rapidly annihilate it. Because atomic energy will provide man with all but unlimited power of locomotion through the air, whether by jet-propelled aircraft or by rocket ship, it is more than probable that the fighting forces of the future will be designed around one or the other of these vessels."

Forrestal, Ickes Ask Cabinet Be Dealt in on Atom Control

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23. — (AP) The Secretaries of Navy and the Interior urged Senators today to deal the cabinet in on any commission set up to control atomic energy.

Testifying before the special Senate Atomic Energy Committee, both disapproved Chairman Brien McMahon's (D-Conn) proposal for an independent, full-time, five-member civilian board.

Secretary Ickes of the Interior recommended a single administrator, appointed by the President and responsible to a committee of cabinet officers. As second choice, he favored a nine-member board, "including five or six heads of departments and four or three independent members."

Secretary Forrestal of the navy came out for an eight-member commission headed by the vice-president of the United States and including as ex-officio members the Secretaries of State, War and Navy. The other four would be appointed by the President for six-year terms, subject to Senate confirmation.

Both Ickes and Forrestal recommended centralizing the commission's executive authority in an administrator. Such a provision is missing from the McMahon bill, although it appears in two other proposed control measures, introduced respectively by Senators Edwin C. Johnson (D-Colo) and Joseph H. Ball (R-Minn).

Forrestal predicted that outstanding scientists would decline to serve on the commission if their tenure of office could be terminated at the President's pleasure, as provided by McMahon. Ickes noted that the government had seen some vast technological changes in the past but had found it unnecessary to set up special departments of steam or electricity.

However, he did not deny the need for governmental controls over the production of fissionable materials and their use in industry.

"If the push of a button can destroy a city, no nation can afford to leave the button in private hands," he said.

NAVY SHIPS NAMED FOR A-BOMB TEST

4 Veteran Battleships To Be Used In Experiment

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—A House naval committeeman said tonight four veteran United States battleships were to be used for atom-bomb experiments.

He said they were the Arkansas, Nevada, New York and Pennsylvania. Other ships to be used in the test included the carrier Saratoga, he added.

Vice Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, deputy chief of naval operations for special weapons, is expected to be top commander in the experiments.

The carrier Enterprise will not be on the atom-bomb program, the congressman said. There had been speculation about it.

To "Vaporize" Ships, Says Paper

Chicago, Jan. 23 (AP)—The Chicago Sun said tonight a test of atomic bombs versus seapower will start May 1 in the Pacific and that it is "expected to vaporize or sink the strongest ships ever constructed by the United States, Japan or Germany."

The Sun, in a Washington dispatch, said the test calls for "an American naval mobilization nearly as great as that for the invasion of Okinawa in a deadly experiment" expected to destroy the strongest ships afloat.

Some details of the test will be disclosed tomorrow, the Sun said, by Vice Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, deputy chief of naval operations, in charge of special weapons.

Full details, the paper added, "will be kept secret for some time—especially since the outcome of the attack will determine in some respects the future of the capital ship as the backbone of the modern navy."

Jap, German Vessels Included

"It may be revealed, however, that the 'guinea pigs' in the experiment are to be vessels from the navies of the United States, Japan and Germany.

"Principal targets for the atomic bombs are to be:

"The German heavy cruiser Prinz Eugen, which was put out of commission but not sunk by the bombs dropped by Allied aviators. The Prinz Eugen arrived in Boston today with an American-German crew aboard.

"The principal surviving Japanese battleship, the Nagato, which was found in Tokyo Bay to be defenseless, but still intact despite the elevation of its guns and the fact that it was sitting close to the bottom.

Pearl Harbor Veterans

"The former flagship of the United States Pacific Fleet, the Pennsylvania, which was forced to go out of action for months as a result of the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, but which was repaired and came back to become one of the most active units of the fleet.

"The U.S.S. Nevada, also one of the battle wagons caught at Pearl Harbor, and which also returned to the fleet battle line to lob its shells into enemy concentrations."

Hellcats Buzz Masts

The six-and-one-half-year-old Prinz Eugen—described by Nazi gauleiter Arthur Seyss-Inquart at her Kiel launching as a "symbol of the Third Reich's strength—slid into her south Boston dock before a bristling array of United States naval power.

Eight Hellcats from near-by Squantum buzzed her masts repeatedly, and a lone Catalina bomber swung over again and again. As tugs eased her into the navy yard she passed close to the battleship New Mexico and to the carrier Randolph, dotted with Japanese flags. Near by were the battleship Washington and the heavy cruiser Alaska.

Her skipper, Captain A. H. Graubart, of Los Angeles, interned for five months in Germany when Pearl Harbor caught him in Berlin as an assistant naval attache, said that Captain Hans Jurgen Reinicke, the German crew's commandant and the cruiser's wartime skipper for two years, had been "very co-operative and very efficient."

The American crew consisted of eight officers and eighty-five enlisted men.

Captain Graubart's executive officer, Commander Richard D. Harwood, of Trenton, Tenn., said the German crewmen, who made port wearing their war-time brass-buttoned uniforms, except for deletion of the swastika, were "extremely military and co-operative in every way."

Germans Stand Watches

The Germans, all volunteers for the voyage, ran the ship and stood all watches, Commander Harwood said, "and our men were more or less supervisory." He added that a large percentage had served on the cruiser at least two years and all had served on her at some time since she was commissioned.

Captain Graubart, asked about the men's status, said the only parallel was the international minesweeping force where crews are called "detained enemy personnel."

They are not prisoners, he made clear, and the Navy has pledged to return them to Bremerhaven.

Prinz Eugen Reaches Boston; To Be Used in Atom-Bomb Test

JAN 24 194

BOSTON Jan. 23 (AP).—The 19,553-ton heavy cruiser Prinz Eugen, largest German man-of-war afloat, came into Boston as a United States prize today with the stars and stripes flying at her stern and an American skeleton crew supervising 574 German officers and men.

[Largest of the Nazi fleet units divided among the United States, Britain and Russia by a tripartite naval commission, she was brought here from Bremen for use in the forthcoming atom bombing tests, it was learned in Washington.]

30.24-519

Their families draw a major percentage of their pay.

Captain Graubart said the cruiser had "unusual damage control and fire control."

"There's more compartmentation; a lot of stuff is electrical, worked by buttons, and there's counter-flooding."

Sank Battleship Hood

The 42,100-ton British battleship Hood was sunk midway between Greenland and Iceland in 1941, not by the German pocket battleship Bismarck, as generally supposed, but by the Prinz Eugen, the Navy said upon the Eugen's arrival here.

"The Prinz Eugen placed a direct shot on the Hood, blowing up her magazines and thus sinking her in one of the major losses of the British sea forces," a history of the cruiser said.

Arrival of the Eugen also disclosed that the German naval high command to the end of the war never understood why the Bismarck, after the battle with the Hood May 24, 1941, swung south toward the coast of France and into the guns of the British fleet.

Three days later, unmaneuverable after a 1,750-mile running fight with three battleships, two carriers, five cruisers and seven destroyers—in which all got a shot at her—she was sunk by a torpedo from the British cruiser Dorsetshire.

NAVY WILL SCRAP U.S.S. WYOMING

Washington, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—The battleship Wyoming is to be scrapped.

The second oldest keel in the fleet, she didn't fire a shot against the enemy in world war II, but she did her share with 35,000 proxies. And there undoubtedly are many ships still afloat and men still alive because of the Wyoming's prosaic job—training anti-aircraft crews.

Announcement that the Wyoming will be scrapped and replaced as a gunnery training vessel by the battleship Mississippi was made by the Navy. The Mississippi, built in 1917, will be converted at the Norfolk Navy Yard at a cost of $4,000,000.

The 33-year-old Wyoming, commissioned on September 25, 1912, took part in world war I as a member of the British Grand Fleet in interment of the German fleet at Scapa Flow.

The London Naval Treaty of 1931 was her undoing as an active warrior; she was stripped of most of her armament.

During world war II she was outfitted with the latest type anti-aircraft equipment. Thirty-five thousand officers and men, who subsequently put their skill to use against attacking Japanese and German aircraft, trained aboard her.

If the Wyoming didn't get to fire on the enemy herself, she did set one record: She fired more anti-aircraft shells than any other vessel of the Navy.

GEN. ARNOLD TO RETIRE FEB. 15, IS REPORT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 — (AP) Gen. H. H. Arnold will retire as chief of the Army Air forces Feb. 15, a War department official predicted today.

The same official, who declined to be quoted by name, said Gen. Carl A. Spaatz would succeed the failing Arnold, who was forced by illness this week to cut short a South American tour.

Arnold's retirement has been expected for several months.

Spaatz commanded the North African Air forces and the U. S. Strategic Air forces in Europe under General Eisenhower, chief of staff, who will recommend Arnold's successor. After the German surrender Spaatz took command of the 20th (Superfortress) Air force in the Pacific.

There is only one other A.A.F. full general, George C. Kenney, commander of the Far Eastern Air forces.

Clark Nomination Delay Advocated

Luling, Texas, Jan. 23 (AP)—Col. H. Miller Ainsworth, president of the 36th Division Association, said today he felt Congress should defer action on President Truman's nomination of Gen. Mark W. Clark to be a permanent major general.

"In view of the resolution adopted by the 36th Division Association and concurred in by the Texas Senate, I think that Congress rightfully should defer action at the moment until all the facts in the case are known," he said in a statement.

The 36th Division has urged a congressional investigation of Clark's ordering the costly attack of American troops on German forces on the Rapido River in Italy, January 21, 1944.

4620 Nazis Reach Camp for Shipment

Camp Shanks, N. Y., Jan. 23 (A. P.).—A record number of German prisoners of war—4,620—was received today at this Army installation for shipment to their homeland. Previous largest day's arrival was 2,000 prisoners, two days ago. More than 100,000 German prisoners homeward bound are expected to pass through the camp this month, the Army said.

25,000 Vets Returning

(By the Associated Press)

Ten transports are scheduled to arrive at two East Coast ports today with more than 11,000 service personnel, and 21 vessels at five West Coast ports with 13,000.

One vessel with 1,077 is expected at New Orleans. Ships and units arriving:

labor member ian dribble asked bevin if he thought landing of more netherlands forces on the troubled island might precipitate disaster, and the foreign secretary replied, "i certainly do."

british policy in java, where british troops have been assigned by the allies to the task of rounding up japanese and liberating prisoners of war and internees, is under fire in the united nations organization. the ukranian soviet republic has lodged with a complaint that troops of british troops on the island endangered peace.

BY BARBARA WACE

PERHAM DOWN BRIDE CAMP, TIDWORTH, ENGLAND, JAN. 23 - (AP) - GI BRIDES "SWEATING IT OUT" HERE WHILE AWAITING TRANSPORTATION TO THE UNITED STATES HAVE LEARNED A LOT IN TWO DAYS OF ARMY LIFE, INCLUDING HOW TO GRIPE A BIT, LIKE THEIR HUSBANDS.

WHILE AMERICA-BOUND WIVES WITHOUT CHILDREN SPENT THE EVENING AT THE MOVIES SEEING GLAMOR GIRLS AND NIGHT CLUBS, MOTHERS WERE SEGREGATED WITH THEIR CHILDREN IN TWO SEPARATE BARRACKS WITH AT LEAST ONE BABY APIECE, SEVERAL FAMILIES TO A ROOM AND NO CHILDLESS BRIDES TO HELP.

JAN 24 1946

"I THINK THE ARMY'S WONDERFUL TO COPE WITH BABIES AT ALL," SAID DOREEN MCMINN, WIFE OF PFC WILLIAM MCMINN OF (920 FEDERAL STREET) LYNCHBURG, VA., AS SHE HELD HER SON DAVID WITH ONE HAND AND TRIED TO ROCK ANOTHER BABY.

THE OTHER WAS SCREAMING SEVEN-MONTHS-OLD JANET MCCALL, WHOSE FATHER, CPL. MARCUS MCCALL IS AT PITTS, GA., AND WHOSE MOTHER SEEMED EQUALLY FAR AWAY WASHING DIAPERS IN ONE OF THE TWO CROWDED BATHROOMS AT THE FAR END OF THE BARRACKS.

AMONG THE GRIPES, SOME OF WHICH ALREADY HAVE BEEN RECTIFIED, CONCERNED THE LACK OF ANY ROOM BESIDES BEDROOMS WHERE TODDLERS COULD PLAY WITHOUT WAKING UP SLEEPING INFANTS.

"THE THING IS, THESE BABIES ARE THE PRODUCT OF A WAR," SAID BETTY NEWTON, WIFE OF STAFF SGT. ALBERT NEWTON OF (2913 NINTH STREET) MERIDIEN, MISS., WHOSE BABY WAS NAMED FOR AMERICAN RED CROSS WORKER VIRGINIA STANLEY OF WASHINGTON, D.C. "THEY ARE SOMETIMES A LITTLE NERVOUS. MY VIRGINIA WON'T SLEEP WITH THE LIGHT ON, BUT I CAN'T EXPECT THREE OTHERS TO HAVE IT DARK ALL AFTERNOON."

30.24-523

LATER VIRGINIA ATE COOKED CEREAL, CHOCOLATE PUDDING, PUREED FRUIT AND VEGETABLES IN A BEDLAM CREATED BY THE MEALTIME, WITH MOTHERS OF TWO-YEAR-OLDS COMPLAINING THE FOOD WAS NOT SOLID ENOUGH FOR THEIR CHILDREN.

JAN 24 1946

MRS. CONNOLLY, WIFE OF SGT FRANCIS CONNOLLY OF (342 MASSACHUSETTS AVENUE) ARLINGTON, MASS., HAD ONE SUGGESTION: "I WISH THE RED CROSS GIRLS WOULD HELP US MORE WITH THE BABIES AND NOT SO MUCH AT THE CLUB."

BUT MANY THINGS ARE BEING IRONED OUT BESIDES DIAPERS. FOR ONE THING, 100 DESPERATELY-NEEDED THUNDERMUGS ARRIVED. GI HELMETS HAD PROVED AN UNWELCOME SUBSTITUTE.

IN MRS. NEWTON'S ROOM A LONG CLOTHESLINE WAS PUT UP BY GERMAN PRISONERS TO HANG INFANTS' WASHABLES. "I THINK THE COLONEL IS ORDERING SOME TISSUE WHICH CAN BE THROWN AWAY," MRS. NEWTON SAID. "I SUGGESTED IT TO HIM. I THINK WE 600 BRIDES ARE DOING SOME GOOD AS GUINEA PIGS. IT'S FINE FOR US, BUT IT SHOULD BE PERFECT FOR BRIDES WHO GO OVER LATER."

PERHAM DOWN BRIDE CAMP, TIDWORTH, ENGLAND, JAN 23-(AP)-AMERICAN SOLDIERS BOUNCED BABIES ON THEIR KNEES TO KEEP THEM HAPPY TODAY WHILE 625 U.S.-BOUND BRIDES SPED THROUGH ARMY REDTAPE PREPARATORY TO SAILING ON THE LINER ARGENTINA SATURDAY TO JOIN THEIR HUSBANDS.

BRIDES WITHOUT BABIES WENT SWIFTLY THROUGH THE EMIGRATION AND CUSTOMS INSPECTIONS AND MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS IN A CONVERTED MOVIE THEATER.

THOSE WITH YOUNGSTERS HAD OTHER COMPLICATIONS. A SLIGHT DELAY DEVELOPED IN THE MIXING OF FEEDING FORMULAS UNTIL GI'S ROUNDED UP A KETTLE BIG ENOUGH TO HOLD 52 CANS OF EVAPORATED MILK, 52 QUARTS OF WATER AND 120 OUNCES OF SUGAR, THE DAILY MILK SUPPLY PROVIDED AT RED CROSS HEADQUARTERS.

COL.THOMAS A.HOUSTON, A WEST POINTER FROM CROCKETT, TEX., WAS THE MAN WITH THE MOST WORRIES. HOUSTON IS THE INGENIOUS SOLDIER WHO ORIGINATED THE "HOUSTON FOOTLOCKER CRIB," BY CONVERTING HALF-SIZE SOLDIERS TRUNKS INTO BABY BEDS.

BUT HE FOUND THAT ARMY SUPPLIES--NOT EVEN HELMETS--COULD BRIDGE THE GAP FOR MOTHERS WHO FORGOT TO BRING "POTTIES" ALONG FOR SOME OF THE YOUNGSTERS.

IRENE PERRY WAS WORRIED, TOO, FEARING IN THE CONFUSION SHE WOULD LOSE THE PIPE SHE BOUGHT AS A GIFT FOR HER HUSBAND, GILMER PERRY, JR., U.S.N. OF (1521 NORTH MYERS ST.) BURBANK, CALIF.

IN A HUGE WAREHOUSE GERMAN PRISONERS SWEATED OVER PILES OF TRUNKS AND BIG BRITISH BABY BUGGIES AND TRUNDLED THE BAGGAGE OFF FOR STOWAGE IN THE ARGENTINA'S HOLD.

BLOND MARGARET GERDUS, EN ROUTE TO JOIN DONALD E.GERDUS, U.S.N.R., OF (7 SEYMOUR ST.) BINGHAMTON, N.Y., HOPES TO TEACH WHEN SHE REACHES THE UNITED STATES. SHE EXPLAINED SHE HAD BEEN TEACHING KINDERGARTEN FOR CHILDREN EVACUATED FROM ENGLAND'S BIG CITIES DURING THE WAR.

A FORMER WAAF, MARJORIE GUIDRY, WIFE OF FORMER PFC. HARRY P. GUIDRY, (815 AVENUE B) CROWLEY, LA., LECTURED SOME OF THE GIRLS WHO BECAME IMPATIENT.

"YOU CAN'T TEACHHME ANYTHING ABOUT ARMY LIFE," SHE SAID. "I'M USED TO WAITING AND FILLING OUT FORMS AND SLEEPING 20 IN A ROOM AFTER FOUR YEARS IN THE WAAF. THIS SEEMS TO BE GOING PRETTY FAST."

HANOI, JAN 23-(AP)-SCATTERED AMID THE MOUNTAINS OF TONKIN PROVINCE IN FRENCH INDOCHINA ARE CLUES WHICH MAY EVENTUALLY DISCLOSE THE FATE OF SOME OF THE 300 UNITED STATES AIRMEN WHO DISAPPEARED ON COMBAT MISSIONS IN THIS REMOTE CORNER OF THE WORLD.

OFFICIALLY THESE MEN ARE LISTED AS MISSING IN ACTION, BUT THE UNITED STATES ARMY HAS SENT A SPECIALLY TRAINED TEAM HERE IN AN EFFORT TO UNCOVER THE FACTS SO THAT FAMILIES WHO STILL HOPE AGAINST HOPE CAN FINALLY LEARN WHAT HAPPENED TO MISSING SONS AND HUSBANDS.

RECORDED ON FILE CARDS ARE SCANT SCRAPS OF INFORMATION THE ARMY POSSESSES ON EACH FLIER. THE JOB OF THE SEARCH TEAM, COMMANDED BY CAPT.JOHN FARRIS, 1306 JACKSON ST., LA GRANDE, OREGON, IS TO FILL IN THE BLANKS. SOMETIMES THIS IS DONE BY TRIPS INTO THE WILDERNESS WHERE A PLANE IS KNOWN TO HAVE GONE DOWN.

THE INVESTIGATORS TRAVEL ARMED TO THE TEETH, FOR IT IS DANGEROUS TO VENTURE OUTSIDE THE CITY IN THIS STORMY REGION WHERE ARMED SOLDIERS OF THE REVOLUTIONARY ANNAMITE REPUBLIC OF VIETNAM, LARGE NUMBERS OF JAPANESE PRISONERS AND THOUSANDS OF DISARMED FRENCH GO THEIR VARIOUS WAYS UNDER THE WATCHFUL EYES OF THE CHINESE OCCUPATION ARMIES.

EVEN IN HANOI THE LONELY GROUP OF UNITED STATES SOLDIERS MUST CARRY GUNS AND BE PROTECTED BY CHINESE SENTRIES, FOR THE CITY IS A TINDER BOX OF CONFLICTING AMBITIONS. THIRTY-FIVE FRENCHMEN HAVE BEEN AUSASSINATED IN THE STREETS SINCE AUGUST.

CAPT.FARRIS SAYS THE ANNAMITES, FRENCH AND CHINESE ARE EQUALLY HELPFUL TO HIS MEN IN RUNNING DOWN CLUES. THE MAIN STUMBLING BLOCK IS THE JAPANESE, WHO FURNIUH INFORMATION GRUDGINGLY.

ONE EXCELLENT SOURCE OF INFORMATION IS THE LONE AMERICAN WHO REMAINED IN TONKIN THROUGHOUT THE WAR--FATHER IRENEE MARQUIS, OF VAN BUREN, MAINE, A MEMBER OF THE REDEMPTIONIST FATHERS MISSION.

WHILE OTHER GI'S ARE LOOKING FORWARD TO A SPEEDY RETURN HOME, THIS ISOLATED DETACHMENT EXPECTS TO BE HERE AT LEAST SIX MORE MONTHS. ALSO IN THE DETACHMENT ARE LT.HORTON C.HILL, MARLBOROUGH ST., DETROIT, AND S/SGT EDMUND M.OHLOW, 3340 MONSARRAT AVE., HONOLULU.

FIRST LEAD CLASH

BY G.MILTON KELLY

BOMBAY, JAN 23-(AP)-AT LEAST ONE PERSON WAS KILLED AND 53 WOUNDED BY POLICE GUNFIRE IN A BATTLE TODAY BETWEEN POLICE AND FOLLOWERS OF SUBHAS CHANDRA BOSE WHO WERE MARCHING IN CELEBRATION OF THE BIRTHDAY OF THE FORMER LEADER OF THE INDIAN NATIONAL PARTY.

ABOUT 170 OTHERS WERE TREATED AT HOSPITALS FOR WOUNDS INFLICTED BY LATHIS, THE LONG STICKS USED BY INDIAN POLICE, AND BY STONES, BRICKS AND BOTTLES THROWN BY THE DEMONSTRATORS.

VOLLEY AFTER VOLLEY OF TEAR GAS WAS FIRED BY POLICE. TWO TRUCKS AND A TROLLEY CAR WERE SET AFIRE BY THE DEMONSTRATORS.

THE CLASH OCCURRED AT ROUND TEMPLE, LANDMARK DIVIDING MOSLEM AND HINDU AREAS, WHEN POLICE SOUGHT TO DISSUADE THE MARCHERS, MOSTLY HINDUS, FROM ENTERING THE MOSLEM ZONE.

THE DEMONSTRATORS INSISTED THEY HAD REACHED AN AGREEMENT WITH MOSLEM CHIEFTAINS FOR A PEACEFUL PARADE. POLICE HELD THE MARCHERS OFF FOR A TIME WITH LATHI CHARGES, THEN USED TEAR GAS. BYSTANDERS JOINED IN, STONES BEGAN FLYING AND THE POLICE RETALIATED WITH GUNFIRE.

BOSE WAS REPORTED BY JAPAN TO HAVE DIED DURING THE WAR. #

SHANGHAI, JAN.23-(AP)-CHINA PLANS TO ACQUIRE JAPAN'S FORMER WORLD TEXTILE MARKETS, A BUSINESS ESTIMATED AS HIGH AS $300,000,000 ANNUALLY, PREMIER T.V.SOONG TOLD A PRESS CONFERENCE TODAY.

HE SAID THE NEW GOVERNMENT-SPONSORED TEXTILE DEVELOPMENT COMPANY HAD THE FULL SUPPORT OF SHIPPING AND BANKING INTERESTS IN A BROAD PROGRAM WHICH, WITHIN A SHORT TIME, SHOULD CORNER ONE OF JAPAN'S LARGEST EXPORT FIELDS.

THE DEVELOPMENT COMPANY, ITS EXISTENCE LIMITED TO THREE YEARS, WAS ESTABLISHED TO ORGANIZE SILK AND COTTON PRODUCTION FOR VAST EXPORT EXPANSION. CHINA IS TAKING OVER JAPANESE COTTON MILLS, A MOVE WHICH SOONG SAID WILL DOUBLE THE NATION'S PRODUCTION.

THE PREMIER SAID CHINA PLANS EVENTUALLY TO PRODUCE HER OWN SPINNING AND WEAVING MACHINERY.

SOONG REPORTED THAT CHINA, BECAUSE OF SEVERE AGRICULTURAL LOSSES, IS DEMANDING 5,000,000 MULBERRY TREES FROM JAPAN AS THE FIRST STEP IN REVIVAL OF THE IMPORTANT SILK INDUSTRY. HE SAID THE JAPANESE DESTROYED TREES IN AN ATTEMPT TO ERASE CHINA'S SILK PRODUCTION.

A SPOKESMAN AT ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN TOKYO ASSERTED TODAY THERE EXISTED "A DEFINITE PROGRAM TO DISCREDIT GENERAL MACARTHUR AND FORCE FURTHER CHANGES IN THE PRESENT OCCUPATION POLICIES AND COMMAND."

HE WAS COMMENTING ON A CHARGE BY THE RUSSIAN TASS NEWS AGENCY THAT THE U.S. OCCUPATION COMMAND IN SOUTHERN KOREA WAS INSPIRING "REACTIONARY" PROTESTS AGAINST THE MOSCOW CONFERENCE DECISION FOR AN ALLIED TRUSTEESHIP FOR THAT ASIATIC NATION.

"IT IS KNOWN," THE SPOKESMAN ADDED, "THAT ORDERS HAVE GONE OUT TO ALL OPPOSITION FORCES, INCLUDING THE SO-CALLED COMMUNIST PARTY MEMBERS IN JAPAN, TO DO THEIR UTMOST TO DISCREDIT MACARTHUR."

IN SEOUL, LT.GEN.JOHN R.HODGE, U.S.OCCUPATION COMMANDER IN KOREA, SAID "ANY ACCUSATION AGAINST THIS COMMAND IS WITHOUT BASIS IN FACT." SOUTHERN KOREA IS INCLUDED IN MACARTHUR'S COMMAND, THE RUSSIANS OCCUPYING THE AREA NORTH OF THE 38TH PARALLEL. HODGE SAID HE HAD BEEN TRYING CONSTANTLY TO IMPRESS KOREANS WITH THE ADVANTAGES OF A TRUSTEESHIP.

LONDON, ONT., JAN.23-(AP)-ENGLAND IS GOING TO GET LITTLE OR NO PORK FROM POLAND AND THE BALTIC COUNTRIES IN POSTWAR YEARS BECAUSE OF RUSSIAN INFLUENCE AND CANADA'S HOG RAISERS SHOULD SHARE THE BRITIUH BACON MARKET WITH DENMARK, SPOKESMEN FOR THE CANADIAN MEAT BOARD SAID TUESDAY.

L. W. PEARSALL, SECRETARY-MANAGER OF THE BOARD WHICH MARSHALLED 3,135 MILLION POUNDS OF CANADIAN BACON FOR BRITAIN DURING THE SIX WAR YEARS, ASSURED CANADIAN FARMERS THEY WOULD NOT BE CROWDED OUT OF THE BRITISH MARKET NOW BY THE DANES.

"THE UNITED KINGDOM NEEDS ALL THE BACON IT CAN GET FROM DENMARK OR ANY OTHER PLACE FOR THE NEXT TWO YEARS," HE TOLD THE DOMINION CONVENTION OF THE CANADIAN FEDERATION OF AGRICULTURE, ADDING, "RATIONING PROBABLY WILL EXTEND INTO 1948."

PEARSALL SAID IT PROBABLY WOULD BE TWO OR THREE YEARS BEFORE DENMARK REGAINED ITS PREWAR EXPORT FIGURE OF 400 MILLION POUNDS OF BACON ANNUALLY TO THE UNITED KINGDOM. THIS WAS DUE, HE SAID, TO THE SHORTAGE OF FEED AND THE FACT THAT HUNGERING HUMAN POPULATIONS WOULD GET FIRST PRIORITY.

BEFORE THE WAR, BRITAIN IMPORTED 800 MILLION POUNDS OF BACON A YEAR--HALF FROM DENMARK, 20 MILLION POUNDS FROM CANADA AND THE REST FROM POLAND, BALTIC COUNTRIES, HOLLAND, IRELAND AND SWEDEN.

"IT IS CLEAR THAT UNDER SOVIET INFLUENCE, POLAND AND THE BALTIC COUNTRIES ARE NOT LIKELY TO RESUME SHIPMENTS TO ENGLAND," PEARSALL SAID, ADDING, AND PROBABLY 350 MILLION POUNDS OF EXPORT WILL BE OPEN TO CANADIANS."

JAN 24 1946

THE MEAT EXPERT TOLD FARMERS, HOWEVER, THAT THEY MUST DETERMINE TO PRODUCE BACON FOR EXPORT IN UNIFORM VOLUME AND NOT USE THE MOTHER COUNTRY AS A DUMPING GROUND FOR SURPLUSES. CANADA MUST ALSO IMPROVE PROCESSING FACILITIES, HE SAID.

PEARSALL SAID THE QUALITY OF CANADIAN BACON SOLD IN BRITAIN NOW IS AFFECTED BY STORAGE WHICH THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT SAID WAS NECESSARY UNTIL INLAND TRANSPORT IMPROVES.

FOR A POSTWAR CATTLE MARKET, PEARSALL TOLD THE CANADIANS THEY MUST LOOK TO THE UNITED STATES.

"WHEN THE CANADIAN GOVERNMENT DISCONTINUED EXPORTS TO THE UNITED STATES IN 1943 AND DIRECTED THEM TO THE UNITED KINGDOM, CANADIAN CATTLEMEN ACCEPTED IT AS A WARTIME NECESSITY---WITH THE RESERVATION THAT THE FUTURE OF THE UNITED STATES MARKET SHOULD NOT BE JEOPARDIZED;" HE SAID.

"OUR CONTRACT WITH THE UNITED KINGDOM RUNS THROUGH 1946. NO ONE ENVISIONS ANY FUTURE IN THE BRITISH MARKET AND NOTHING HAPPENED TO DATE TO JEOPARDIZE OUR MARKET IN THE UNITED STATES," HE ADDED.

WITH ALL THE BACON PURCHASED FROM CANADIAN FARMERS FOR BRITISH EXPORT WAS OF THE HIGHEST GRADE---ONLY NUMBER ONE AND TWO--FORTY-TWO PER CENT OF THE MEAT BOARD'U BEEF PURCHAUES WERE OF THE LOWEST QUALITY--CANNERU AND CUTTERS ON DOWN, PEARSALL CONCLUDED.

DR.DUNNING, DIRECTOR OF THE COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY DIVISION OF WAR RESEARCH, SPOKE AT THE WINTER CONVENTION OF THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS AT THE ENGINEERING SOCIETIES BUILDING HERE.

IN DISCUSSING THE COSTS OF PRODUCING ATOMIC ENERGY, HE SAID THAT "REDUCTION IN THE COST OF PRODUCING ATOMIC FUELS MAY COME BY BURNING U-235 IN A LOW-LEVEL CHAIN REACTION TO TRANSFORM U-238, A FORM OF UNRANIUM MORE THAN 100 TIMES MORE PLENTIFUL, INTO ANOTHER ATOMIC FUEL-PLUTONIUM.

"THIS TECHNIQUE AND OTHERS DEVELOPED BY ATOMIC RESEARCH HAVE ALREADY MADE THE EXTENSIVE PLANTS AT OAK RIDGE TECHNICALLY OBSOLETE," DR. DUNNING SAID.

DR.DUNNING SAID THAT ATOMIC POWER COULD COMPETE COMMERCIALLY TODAY WITH PREMIUM FUELS, SUCH AS AVIATION GASOLINE, IF CERTAIN ENGINEERING PROBLEMS COULD BE SOLVED.

HE DECLARED THAT NEW METALS CAPABLE OF WITHSTANDING THE INTENSE HEAT GENERATED BY ATOMIC ENERGY WOULD HELP TOWARD SOLUTION OF THIS PROBLEM, BUT EXPLAINED THAT ONLY VERY LARGE POWER PLANTS SUCH AS THOSE ON BATTLESHIPS COULD USE ATOMIC ENERGY EFFECTIVELY.

SECOND NIGHT LEAD UNDATED STRIKES
BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
(CX) A CONFERENCE OF EXECUTIVES OF STRIKE-BOUND COMPANIES WITH PRESIDENT TRUMAN WAS PROPOSED LAST (WEDNESDAY) NIGHT BY BENJAMIN F.FAIRLESS AS THE STEEL AND GENERAL MOTORS STRIKES REMAINED IN A DEADLOCK AND THE WHITE HOUSE MADE PLANS TO SEIZE THE NATION'S MEAT PACKING PLANTS SATURDAY.
THE PRESIDENT OF U.S. STEEL CORPORATION CALLED UPON THE PRESIDENT TO CALL THE ALL-MANAGEMENT CONFERENCE OF EXPERIENCED EXECUTIVES TO GET THEIR ADVICE "ON WHAT KIND OF A WAGE INCREASE THE ECONOMY OF THIS COUNTRY CAN ENDURE WITHOUT INCURRING THE DANGER OF AN INFLATIONARY SPIRAL."
FAIRLESS, IN A PREPARED SPEECH FOR BROADCAST OVER ABC, DECLARED THE STRIKE PROBLEM SHOULD BE SOLVED "NOT ON THE BASIS OF POLITICAL CONSIDERATIONS" BUT "IN THE BEST INTERESTS OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE AS A WHOLE."

HE ASSERTED SUCH A NATIONAL CONFERENCE MIGHT PAVE THE WAY FOR SETTLEMENT OF THE STEEL WALKOUT AND "OTHER STRIKES THAT NOW PLAGUE THE COUNTRY."
ANOTHER PROPOSAL REGARDING THE STEEL STRIKE CAME FROM THE CIO STEELWORKERS' 175-MAN WAGE POLICY COMMITTEE, IN A STATEMENT ALSO ADDRESSED TO THE PRESIDENT.
THE COMMITTEE DECLARED THAT THE BILLION DOLLARS WORTH OF GOVERNMENT-OWNED STEEL PLANT FACILITIES SHOULD BE MADE AVAILABLE FOR PRIVATE OPERATIONS "BY INDIVIDUALS SUCH AS HENRY J.KAISER" OR SHOULD BE OPERATED BY THE GOVERNMENT.
THE COMMITTEE ASSERTED THAT KAISER, THE WEST COAST STEELMAKER, WHO HAS ACCEPTED THE PRESIDENT'S 18 1/2 CENT WAGE INCREASE RECOMMENDATION, OR THE GOVERNMENT SHOULD CONTINUE OPERATING THESE FEDERALLY-OWNED STEEL PLANTS "UNTIL THE STEEL CORPORATIONS ACCEPT THE PRESIDENT'S DECISION."
ALSO ADDED TO THE COUNTRY'S LABOR STRIFE YESTERDAY WAS THREAT OF A NATIONWIDE RAILROAD TIEUP, POSSIBLY WITHIN FOUR WEEKS.
THE BROTHERHOOD OF RAILROAD TRAINMEN ANNOUNCED PREPARATIONS FOR A COUNTRYWIDE STRIKE VOTE OF ITS 215,000 MEMBERS AND THE BROTHERHOOD OF LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEERS, WITH 78,000, INDICATED IT MIGHT FOLLOW SUIT.
THE FORMAL ORDER FOR TAKING OVER AND OPERATING THE MEAT PACKING INDUSTRY WAS ISSUED YESTERDAY, THE WHITE HOUSE USING ITS SEIZURE POWERS FOR THE FIRST TIME IN THE CURRENT WAVE OF NATIONWIDE STRIKES FOLLOWING V-J DAY.

GOVERNMENT SEIZURE WAS ORDERED IN THE MEAT STRIKE WITHOUT ASSURANCES THAT 193,000 STRIKING CIO MEAT WORKERS WOULD AGREE TO WORK FOR A FEDERAL BOSS.
HOWEVER, OFFICIALS OF THE 70,000 STRIKING AFL MEAT WORKERS AS "LOYAL AMERICANS" ORDERED THEIR MEN TO RETURN TO WORK SATURDAY. OFFICERS OF THE 193,000 STRIKING CIO MEAT WORKERS DECLINED COMMENT, BUT IN NEW YORK MEMBERS OF THE CIO MEAT UNION VOTED TO REMAIN OFF THE JOB UNLESS ORD ERED TO RETURN BY THEIR NATIONAL COMMITTEE.
A RETURN TO NORMAL CONDITIONS WITHIN FIVE DAYS, IN THE EVENT THE CIO STRIKERS ALSO RETURN, WAS PREDICTED BY SOME MEAT PACKERS IN CHICAGO.
WHITE HOUSE PRESS SECRETARY CHARLES G.ROSS ANNOUNCED THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE WOULD SEIZE AND OPERATE THE STRIKE-BOUND MEAT PACKING PLANTS SATURDAY "WITH THE AID OF THE WAR DEPARTMENT, IF NECESSARY."

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE ANDERSON ANNOUNCED LAST (WEDNESDAY) NIGHT THAT GAYLE G.ARMSTRONG, NEW MEXICO RANCHER, WOULD OPERATE THE STRIKE-BOUND PACKING PLANTS. ARMSTRONG, ASSISTANT ADMINISTRATOR OF THE DEPARTMENT'S PRODUCTION AND MARKETING ADMINISTRATION AND VICE PRESIDENT OF THE COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION, WILL HAVE HEADQUARTERS IN CHICAGO.
ANDERSON SAID THE DEPARTMENT WILL OPERATE THE PLANTS THROUGH PRESIDENTS OR CHAIRMEN OF THE BOARDS OF THE AFFECTED PACKING PLANTS.
THE SEIZURE WILL NOT AFFECT MEAT FACT FINDING BOARD HEARINGS IN CHICAGO.

ONE THREATENED RAILROAD STRIKE WAS AVERTED LAST NIGHT ONLY 25 MINUTES BEFORE THE WALKOUT DEADLINE, WHICH HAD BEEN SET FOR 11:30 P.M. (E.S.T.)
THE STRIKE HAD BEEN CALLED AGAINST TWO SHUTTLE RAILROADS, THE INDIANA HARBOR BELT AND THE CHICAGO JUNCTION RAILROADS, WHICH PERFORM VITAL FREIGHT SERVICE IN THE CHICAGO AREA.
SEVERAL HOURS BEFORE STRIKE TIME, T.L. GREEN, GENERAL MANAGER OF BOTH LINES, ANNOUNCED THE BROTHERHOOD OF RAILROAD TRAINMEN HAD AGREED NOT TO STRIKE ON THE INDIANA HARBOR LINE. LATER HE SAID THE SCHEDULED WALKOUT HAD BEEN AVERTED ALSO ON THE CHICAGO JUNCTION ROAD, WHICH SERVES THE CHICAGO STOCKYARDS.
A STRIKE ON THE LINES WOULD HAVE DISRUPTED EAST AND WEST THROUGH FREIGHT SERVICE.
EARLIER IN THE DAY, PRESIDENT TRUMAN, ACTING UNDER THE RAILWAY MEDIATION LAW, HAD CREATED AN EMERGENCY BOARD TO INVESTIGATE THE DISPUTE OVER ALLEGED CONTRACT VIOLATIONS BY MANAGEMENT.
UNDER THE RAILWAY LABOR ACT, SUCH PRESIDENTIAL ACTION AUTOMATICALLY POSTPONES STRIKE ACTION FOR 60 DAYS TO GIVE THE BOARD TIME TO ACT, BUT GREEN SAID THAT EVEN FOLLOWING THE WHITE HOUSE ANNOUNCEMENT THE UNION HAD NOTIFIED HIM THE STRIKE WOULD GO ON.
ONLY AFTER LATER CONFERENCES WITH OFFICIALS OF THE NEW YORK CENTRAL RAILROAD, WHICH CONTROLS BOTH SHUTTLE ROADS, DID THE UNION LEADERS CHANGE THEIR PLANS.

NATIONS CREATE COMMISSION FOR ATOMIC CONTROL

UNO Assembly Takes Firs Decisive Action on Major Issue.

FACE POLITICAL RIFTS

Security Council Prepare to Tackle Iran, Indonesian, Greek Disputes.

LONDON, Jan. 24—(AP) Th United Nations today created commission to control atomic ener gy for peace, while the securit council prepared to tackle grav political issues in Iran, Indonesi and Greece, and possibly even in fourth area—Lebanon.

In its first decisive action on major world issue, the general as sembly of 51 nations created a atomic energy control commissio hailed by U. S. Secretary of Stat James F. Byrnes as necessary t save the world from an atomi armaments race.

Lebanese Premier Badaouy Pa cha announced in Beyrouth tha he had called his country's UNO delegation to ask the security coun cil to review the British-French agreement on withdrawal of troops and to intercede for the immediate evacuation of foreign troops.

Lebanese Issue Rises

The Lebanese issue was projected even as the UNO's powerful securi ty council prepared to deal to morrow with three disputes, two involving Britain and the third af fecting Russia.

Britain and Russia both have ve to power in the security council So does France, which would be involved if Lebanon makes a formal complaint to the council. The U. S. and China are the other two of the five permanent council members with veto power.

The council agreed earlier to consider the Soviet charges of Britis military "interference" in Greece and Indonesia and similar accusations by Iran against Russia. American officials appeared confident the council would decide to hold public hearings on the three issues next week.

A possibility that other cases might come before the security council was hinted during a meeting of the 14-member assembly steering committee. Soviet delegate Andrei Gromyko said his delegation had received "highly interesting" communications from the congress party of India and President Soekarno of Indonesia, and said the assembly should take note of these messages even if no action was envisaged.

The task of working out means for controlling atomic energy and applying its tremendous power to the betterment of mankind was assigned to Canada and the 11 members of the security council—the United States, Russia, Britain, France, China, Australia, The Netherlands, Poland, Egypt and Mexico.

Canada was included because she contributed to development of the atom bomb.

Byrnes Leaves

Byrnes, just before leaving by plane for Washington, told newsmen that America's next move would be to urge the governments represented on the commission to appoint their members as soon as possible, so the agency could be organized promptly when the UNO establishes headquarters in the United States.

Earlier, Byrnes had told the general assembly that the United States entered the wartime armaments race "not to destroy, but to save civilization."

Then, urging creation of the commission 'to avoid a race in armaments," Byrnes said that "if the race continues uncontrolled, the civilization we hoped to save may be destroyed."

He predicted there "will be the need for the continuation for some time to come of armies of occupation in Germany and Japan," but said "it will not make for a peaceful world to have armies of occupation in countries which we hope will soon join us in the united nations." He referred presumably to the former Axis satellites of southeastern Europe.

Andrei Vishinsky, the chief Russian delegate, called creation of the commission "a sound and realistic approach to the problem," and "the first important act of the joint efforts of the United Nations to obtain peace and security in the world."

Vishinsky, who arrived only yesterday from Moscow, received a tremendous ovation in his first appearance before the assembly.

As head of the Russian delegation, he is expected to be present at the security council session tomorrow afternoon when the council takes up the Iranian, Greek and Indonesian disputes in an open meeting.

Byrnes told reporters the United States favored the quickest possible public hearings on the three subjects, and that he considered they would not have been filed with the security council unless the countries bringing them had considered that they covered emergency situations.

Meanwhile in the assembly trusteeship committee Russia's Delegate A. I. Lavrentyev attacked a proposed American amendment on mandates, arguing it would delay establishment of the UNO trusteeship council.

UNO Votes To Create Atomic Commission

London, Jan. 24 (AP)—The United Nations today ordered the creation of a special commission to devise controls for atomic energy and moved swiftly toward action on three critical political issues involving Iran, Greece and Indonesia.

A few hours after the General Assembly had voted unanimously to set up the atomic commission under the Security Council, Secretary of State James F. Byrnes left for Washington in President Truman's plane, the "Sacred Cow."

Favors Early Action

In a leave-taking with reporters Byrnes announced that the United States favored the quickest possible public hearings by the Security Council on charges filed by Russia against the British in Greece and Indonesia, and by Iran against Russia.

The Security Council ordered a meeting of its eleven members tomorrow to take up the three cases, and American officials strongly expected that the Council would decide to hold public hearings on the three controversial cases next week.

In his opinion, Byrnes said, the quicker the three cases are given full hearings the better it would be.

Pleased By UNO Action

Particularly pleased that the first formal action of the Assembly on a major question had as its objective the limitation of military armament, Byrnes said the Americans next move on the atomic question would be to urge the governments to appoint their members to the new commission as soon as possible so it can get organized at UNO headquarters in the United States.

Other developments today included the proposal by the Americans before the General Assembly's trusteeship committee that hundreds of millions of people under colonial rule be assured that the ideals of the United Nations of self-rule and independence apply to them as well as to the people living under mandates and trusteeships.

Secretary's Salary Fixed

The General Assembly adopted a committee report setting the secretary general's net salary at $20,000 annually plus a $20,000 expense account, and fixing the term of his appointment at five years with the possibility of reappointment for a second five-year term.

Byrnes said he did not know whether Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower would reconsider his refusal to accept the secretary generalship since the question had not been raised recently.

Byrnes Backs Commission

He said Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., American member of the Security Council, would head the American delegation after his departure, and that Senator Tom Connally would be the American member of the important General Committee of the Assembly.

In a speech to the Assembly urging creation of the atomic commission, Byrnes said it was necessary to save the world from an atomic armaments race.

The vote came after little more than an hour of discussion during which both Byrnes and the chief Soviet delegate, Andrei Vishinsky urged prompt action.

The vote was 47 to 0, with four nations abstaining.

Commission Won't Get Secrets

The commission would have no power to compel the United States or any other country to disclose any of its atomic energy production secrets or disclose how the atomic bomb is made, according to interpretations given by Byrnes. Its responsibility will be to work out ways of keeping atomic energy from being used destructively.

It will be composed of representatives of the eleven nations on the Security Council and Canada, and will be responsible to the council for its work and policies.

Vishinsky Makes First Speech

In urging the creation of the commission, Byrnes declared that the United States entered an armaments race during the war "not to destroy but to save civilization." He added that "if the race continues uncontrolled, the civilization we hoped to save may be destroyed."

Vishinsky, who arrived only two days ago, made his first appearance before the assembly in support of the atomic commission proposal.

He called it a "sound and realistic approach to the problem" and the "first important act of the joint efforts of the United Nations to secure peace and security in the world."

Won't Choose Secretary

Duckworth Barker, UNO public relations officer, in announcing that the Security Council would take up the Iranian, Greek and Indonesian issues tomorrow, said the Council would not act at that time on the question of selecting a nominee for the key post of UNO secretary general, an issue on which the five major powers apparently were deadlocked.

"The Council will be asked formally what it wants to do about the Russian and Ukraine communications drawing attention to the presence of British troops in Greece and Indonesia," Barker said.

He said the council would be asked by Chairman Norman J. O Makin, of Australia, along what lines it should proceed with the Soviet charges against Britain.

Java Probe Opposed

The same question, Barker stated, would be asked about Iran's charges that Russia was interfering in Iranian internal affairs.

The official British attitude is that a UNO investigation into the Greek situation would be welcomed, but British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin was understood to hold the view that no inquiry into the Indonesian situation should be held now.

The British contend that a state of war still exists in Java and that Britain was asked by the combined chiefs of staff in Washington to send troops into Indonesia to clean up the Japanese and maintain order. They maintain that an investigation now would be inopportune.

Differences Cited

Failure of the big powers to reach an agreement on a candidate for secretary-general appeared to underscore differences between Soviet Russia and the Western powers.

The stumbling block on the secretary-general issue was said to be Soviet insistence that, since headquarters of the UNO are to be in the United States, the secretary should be from some nation in Eastern Europe.

Considered By Council

An official source said Russia strongly favored Norwegian Delegate Trygve Lie, while the British-American choice was Lester Pearson, Canadian Ambassador to the United States.

The Security Council secretly considered this question last night after a fruitless session earlier in the day by representatives of the United States, Great Britain, Russia, France and China, but the Council was unable to reach an agreement.

Under UNO rules, the Assembly cannot consider a candidate unless he has the unanimous indorsement of the five major powers.

Informed quarters said no further discussions would take place for several days.

In Athens ten Greek political parties, in a joint statement, questioned Russia's action in placing before the United Nations the matter of British troops in Greece. They expressed "surprise because the question of the withdrawal of British troops was raised without Greece's cognizance."

Indonesians Dispersed

Batavia, Jan. 24 (AP)—British troops, supported by tanks, have dispersed a concentration of Indonesian Nationalists [illegible] Tebel area southwest of the Soerabaja base, British headquarters said today.

Byrnes' Talk, Text of Atom Resolution

LONDON, Jan. 24 (AP)—The text of the address of Secretary of State James F. Byrnes before the United Nations General Assembly follows:

I wish to make a short statement in support of the very able report just made to the General Assembly by the Political and Security Committee.

The United Nations were obliged to unite in war to preserve their common freedom. The United Nations are now committed to remain united to preserve their common peace.

We won the war against aggression and tyranny by fighting together. We must now keep the peace by working together.

The report filed by the committee calls upon us to join in creating a commission to study, from the point of view of international control, the problems created by the discovery of atomic energy and of other forces capable of mass destruction.

It calls upon us to find ways which will permit and promote the use of our knowledge of the forces of nature for the benefit of mankind under safeguards which will prevent their use for destructive purposes.

Science is a monopoly of no one nation. The discovery of atomic energy, like other great scientific discoveries, is based on earlier discoveries and the research of many inquiring minds in many countries.

In a number of countries scientists were probing into the field of atomic energy before the war started. The United States, the United Kingdom and Canada decided to pool their knowledge and the United States, at a cost of $2,000,000,000, pressed forward with research and developments to insure that the nations fighting to preserve freedom on this earth should not lag in the race to discover the secret of the atom.

We entered this race not to destory but to save civilization. But if the race continues uncontrolled the civilization we hoped to save may be destroyed.

The problems presented by the discovery of atomic energy and of other forces capable of mass destruction cannot be solved by any one nation. They are the common responsibility of all nations. And each of us must do our part in meeting them.

In meeting these problems we must realize that, in this atomic age and in this interdependent world, our common interests in preserving the peace far outweighs any possible conflict in interest that might divide us.

At this first session of the General Assembly we must begin to put less emphasis on our particular viewpoints and particular interest and seek, with all our hearts and all our minds, to find means of reconciling our view and our interest for the common good of all humanity.

Peace and reconciliation cannot be achieved by unilateral action. Peace and reconciliation require common action. That is why the more common tasks we set for ourselves, the more likely we are to come to understand each other's problems and interests.

And certainly the problem of devising the necessary safeguards to ensure that atomic energy will be used for the benefit of humanity and not for its destruction is a common problem.

To consider this and other common problems in the spirit of peace and reconciliation, we must get back to conditions of peace.

There will be need for the continuation for some time to come of armies of occupation in Germany and Japan, but it will not make for a peaceful world to have armies of occupation remain in countries which we hope will soon join us in the United Nations.

We must see that the world ceases to be an armed camp. We must see that peace treaties with the states which were brought into unwilling partnership with the Axis powers are promptly concluded and occupation forces withdrawn. We must begin to live together and to work together.

I hope that the General Assembly will promptly approve the resolution which is before it. I hope that the commission will promptly set to work on its tasks. It will be comforting to the peace-loving peoples of the world to know that we are moving promptly to endeavor to find ways to avoid a race in armaments.

We who fought together for freedom must now show that we are worthy of the freedom that we have won.

Atomic Energy Resolution

The text of the resolution on atomic energy adopted yesterday by the General Assembly follows:

RESOLVED by the General Assembly of the United Nations to establish a commission, with the composition and competence set out hereunder, to deal with the problems raised by the discovery of atomic energy and other related matters.

I. Establishment of the Commission.

A commission is hereby established by the General Assembly with the terms of reference set out under Section V below.

II. Relations of the Commission With the Organs of the United Nations.

A. The commission shall submit its reports and recommendations to the Security Council, and such reports and recommendations shall be made public unless the Security Council, in the interests of peace and security, otherwise directs. In the appropriate cases the Security Council should transmit these reports to the General Assembly and the members of the United Nations, as well as to the Economic and Social Council and other organs within the framework of the United Nations.

B. In view of the Security Council's primary responsibility under the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security, the Security Council shall issue directions to the commission in matters affecting security. On these matters the commission shall be accountable for its work to the Security Council.

II. Composition of the Commission.

The commission shall be composed of one representative from each of those States represented on the Security Council, and Canada, when that State is not a member of the Security Council. Each representative on the commission may have such assistants as he may desire.

IV. Rules of Procedure.

The commission shall have whatever staff it may deem necessary, and shall make recommendations for its rules of procedure to the Security Council, which shall approve them as procedural matter.

V. Terms of Reference of the Commission.

The commission shall proceed with the utmost dispatch and inquire into all phases of the problem, and make such recommendations from time to time with respect to them as it finds possible. In particular the commission shall make specific proposals:

A. For extending between nations the exchange of scientific information for peaceful ends;

B. For control of atomic energy to the extent necessary to insure its use only for peaceful purposes;

C. For the elimination from national armaments of atomic weapons and of all other major weapons adaptable to mass destruction;

D. For effective safeguards by way of inspection and other means to protect complying States against the hazards of violations and evasions.

The work of the commission should proceed by separate stages, the successful completion of each of which will develop the necessary confidence of the world before the next stage is undertaken.

The commission shall not infringe upon the responsibilities of any organ of the United Nations, but should present recommendations for the consideration of those organs in the performance of their tasks under the terms of the United Nations Charter.

Connally Opposes Program.

London, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—Senator Connally (D.-Texas) today criticized the proposal for linking the World Federation of Trade Unions to the UNO, declaring it would create "a sort of international nobility."

Speaking before the General Committee of the UNO Assembly, he accused the supporters of the proposal of "violating the United Nations Charter," and asked that discussion be postponed until the Assembly meets in the United States.

The proposal is that the Assembly create a special category of official and permanent guests, among them representatives of the W. F. T. U. and similar organizations, who would be allowed to speak at certain meetings and would be consulted by the Economic and Social Council.

BRITISH ACTION URGED FOR BLOC IN WEST EUROPE

LONDON, Jan. 24 — (AP) Setting forth what he called a British "intelligent neighbor" policy for Europe, Lord Vansittart today urged the House of Lords to consider steps toward drawing the western part of Europe into a tight-knit economic and defensive group under the leadership of Britain and France.

He declared the British should take the lead toward establishing a Western Continental group of nations to match Russia in Eastern Europe and the United States in South America.

In Commons, Ivor Thomas, parliamentary secretary of the British Ministry of Civil Aviation, advocated a "world authority" to regulate international air traffic—an authority for which he said the world is not yet ready.

To Buy U. S. Planes

Thomas also announced that the British Ministry of Civil Aviation would buy five American Lockheed Constellations "which will enable the British Overseas Airways to operate a daily service across the North Atlantic beginning probably in July."

Lord Vansittart, leading British advocate of a "hard peace" for Germany and chief diplomatic advisor to the British Foreign Office from 1938 to 1941, referred to "American opposition" to a Western European bloc and declared:

"Every sane American knows that Western Europe was a bastion of American defense in two great wars. It is in America's interest to see that Western Europe is strong and it cannot be strong unless it is prosperous."

"Why Russia has opposed this western integration is a mystery," he declared.

"It is time we followed the examples of our gerat Allies" in setting up sphere of influence, Vansittart said.

Action Urged

He urged the Labor government to "proceed without delay to the closer integration" of Europe which "should consist in the first instance of Britain, France, the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg and Scandinavia."

"I predict today that the only alternative to the policy that I am propounding will be the eventual decline of the West," Vansittart said.

Thomas led off debate in Commons on the government's plan to convert control to British airways from the single government-sponsored British Overseas Airways Corporation (BOAC) to a system of three corporations, each directly owned by the government, to serve three distinct regions.

New Firms Proposed

The new corporations would be BOAC, operating to the United States; British South American Airways, already under going proving flights; and British European Airways for traffic presently handed by the new R.A.F. Transport Command.

Air Commodore A. V. Harvey, Conservative, said British "civil aviation is five years behind that of the United States" and argued that the "Americans . . . should cut something off the cost" of the new Constellations because of Britain's wartime concentration on military plane production.

Commons also got its first look at a comprehensive new social insurance bill which includes death benefits as a public payment for the first time. The bill also would raise old age pensions, unemployment, illness and maternity benefits and provide family allowances of five shillings ($1.00) weekly for each child after the first.

West Europe Bloc Urged

London, Jan. 24 (AP)—Lord Vansittart urged Britain today to take an immediate lead in establishing a western continental group of nations to match Russia's sphere in eastern Europe and the United States influence in South America.

The former permanent under secretary of the Foreign Office said this was a British "intelligent neighbor" policy.

Opposition "A Mystery"

"Why Russia has opposed this western integration is a mystery," Lord Vansittart said. He referred also to what he described as "American opposition" to a western European bloc and declared:

"Every sane American knows that western Europe was a bastion of American defense in two great wars. It is in America's interest to see that western Europe is strong and it cannot be strong unless it is prosperous."

Should Follow Example Of Allies

"It is time we followed the examples of our great allies in setting up spheres of influence," said Lord Vansittart.

He urged the Labor Government to "proceed without delay to the closer integration" of Europe, which he said "should consist in the first instance of Great Britain, France, the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg and Scandinavia."

"I predict today," he said, "that the only alternative to the policy that I am propounding will be the eventual decline of the West."

BRITAIN TO BUY FIVE U. S. PLANES

London, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—The British Ministry of Civil Aviation said today that it would buy five American Lockheed Constellations "which will enable the British Overseas Airways to operate a daily service across the North Atlantic beginning probably in July." The company now operates twice weekly to the United States, using British-made flying boats which land at Baltimore.

Ivor Thomas, speaking for the ministry, told Commons that twenty-five captured German Junkers-52 transports would be used in British internal flights until British craft are available. The three-engined monoplanes have cruising speeds of only 130 miles an hour.

"We must be large minded in civil aviation and cast away the impediment of petty nationalism," Thomas said, telling the House that the American-British agreement now being negotiated in Bermuda "would be a great development of air transport." He said an airport at Prestwick, Scotland, a United States Air Transport Command terminal during the war, would be designated as a permanent international airport.

WAR CRIMES TRIALS SLATED IN HUNGARY

LONDON, Jan. 24. — (AP) The Budapest radio said tonight that Ferenc Szalisi, former Nazi Puppet premier of Hungary, and members of his government would be tried Feb. 5 for war crimes by a Peoples Court.

Szalisi, who headed the notorious "Arrow Cross Party," previously was reported sentenced to death in a broadcast by the Berlin radio Dec. 9, 1945.

REPUBLIC PROPOSED

LONDON, Jan. 24—(AP) A bill proclaiming Hungary a republic was handed to the National Assembly today by Premier Zoltan Tildy, who asked the legislature to enact "its own historic decision in a dignified and unanimous manner," the Budapest radio said.

MRS. ROOSEVELT GIVES COUNSEL TO GI WIVES

LONDON, Jan. 24 (AP)—"You will understand men who have been in the war more than many American women will," Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt told approximately 1,000 GI brides tonight.

Speaking at a reception in Rainbow Corner, former Red Cross service club, she told the British girls that Americans "have not gone through the same experience as their men," while "the war has been right on your doorstep."

"Men will come and talk to you but will find it very hard to talk to their own families at home," she said. "Just remember that what you do not see is very hard to imagine and try to be patient."

The brides are awaiting transportation to their husbands in the United States during the next few months.

LITTLE LUXURIES THRILL G. I. BRIDES

Tidworth, England, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—Little luxuries long denied to British women excited and pleased a long line of G. I. brides at the post exchange of the United States Army's processing camp here today.

Candy bars, combs, safety pins and cosmetics were on sale. The United States-bound brides also had the privilege of buying cigarettes at the Army rate of fifty cents a carton, one-tenth of what they were accustomed to pay.

"I haven't seen anything like this for years," one girl said.

Two G. I. brides will make a surprise trip on the Argentina Saturday. Mrs. Alice Castle, with a number one priority because of her husband's illness in New York, arrived today. Her home will be at Watertown, N. Y. Mrs. Eva Goldstein, with her baby, is another to sail. She is on her way to join her husband, Carol Goldstein of Norfolk, Va.

Briton Calls A-Bomb 'Simply A Better One'

Oxford, England, Jan. 24 (AP)—Rear Admiral R. K. Dickinson, British chief of naval information, declared today he believes the atomic bomb "is simply a bigger and better bomb," and is "not likely to alter the fact that none of its predecessors has yet shaken the basic principles of war."

He made the comment in a speech on the British Navy's place in history, and emphasized that he was voicing his opinion "solely as a naval officer."

FRENCH PARTIES AGREE ON TRUCE

PARIS, Jan. 24. (AP)—The three major parties of France agreed today upon a political truce in the coming four months in the new government being formed by Interim President Felix Gouin.

The Communist, Socialist and MRP (Popular Republican Movement) party heads in a joint communique proclaimed that they had agreed unanimously "to publicly affirm the agreement of the Big Three (parties) on the necessity of avoiding all polemics of offensive or injurious character in oral or written controversies."

The parties also were reported to have agreed on a moderate financial program of deflation as a basis of the new administration.

Gouin, meanwhile, held a day-long series of conferences with prospective ministers. He also paid what was described as "a courtesy call" on Gen. De Gaulle at the hunting lodge of the former president outside Paris.

The parties announced they "would make an effort to cooperate" on the constitution for the Fourth Republic.

The agreement also called for the immediate application of the Constituent Assembly's recent vote for France to act alone, if necessary, in breaking relations with Franco's Spanish government.

The most serious inter-party disagreement has been on the constitution, with the Communists and Socialists aligned against the MRP in favoring an all-powerful unicameral legislative system with a figurehead president of France. The MRP, whose stand is believed to correspond with Gen. De Gaulle's views, wants a bicameral legislative system headed by a powerful executive.

3 French Parties Plan Coalition

Paris, Jan. 24 (AP)—France's three major parties formally announced a political truce today for the duration of their participation in a new interim government to be headed by President-elect Felix Gouin.

Following a meeting of Communist, Socialist and Popular Republican heads, a joint communiqué said they had agreed unanimously "on the necessity of avoiding all polemics of offensive or injurious character in oral or written controversies."

Agree On Program

The delegates were reported agreed on the composition and part of the program of the new interim government, with the post of Foreign Affairs going to the Popular Republicans, the economics ministries to the Socialists and the army and social ministries to the Communists. Georges Bidault, the present Foreign Minister, is a Popular Republican.

Part of the crisis last November was provoked by the Communists' demands for the army post or another of the major ministries, a demand which Gen. Charles de Gaulle refused to grant.

Gouin held a day-long series of conferences with prospective ministers and paid a courtesy call on General de Gaulle at the former president's hunting lodge outside Paris.

MADELEINE CARROLL HONORED BY FRANCE

PARIS, Jan. 24 (AP) Seven Americans, including movie actress Madeleine Carroll of Norwalk, Conn., have been elected to the French Legion of Honor, Order of Chevalier.

Miss Carroll was cited as a "great friend of France" for her work in cementing French-American relationships as a member of the American Red Cross.

Others elected were William T[illm]er of Washington, D. C.; Col. Joh[n] Whitaker of Chattanooga, Tenn; Lt. Col. John Knox; Lt. Col. Arthur Roseborough and Maj. Ridgway B. Knight of New York, and John H. Boyd of Wesson, Miss.

Further Vice Ban in Paris

PARIS, Jan. 24 (AP)—With [all] 119 licensed houses of prostitution due to shut down by March 15, the city's eighty recognized "rendezvous" hotels for the use of unattached prostitutes and couples were ordered today to close up after Sunday night.

Troop Redeployment To End At Marseille

Marseille, France, Jan. 24 (AP)—Redeployment of American troops from this port probably will end some time this week when the last of the 55 to 59-point men pass through the Calais staging area, the Army said today.

The Delta base section will cease to exist at midnight and will be absorbed into the Western Base Command at Paris. More than 700,000 men have been redeployed through Marseille.

NAZIS CARRIED OUT TERRORISM DRIVE, FRENCH CHARGE

NUERNBERG, Jan. 24.—(AP) A terror campaign against high French soldiers and their families when the Allies landed in France as planned by the Nazis as early as June, 1943, and was carried out with savage thoroughness a year later, French prosecutors charged today.

The Germans hoped by this program to stamp out the possible leadership of international resistance when the invasion came, the prosecution said. It submitted to the International Military Tribunal trying 22 ranking Nazis documents showing that both Joachim Von Ribbentrop's foreign office and the high command under Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel participated in the planning.

Thousands Seized

The outgrowth of this and other Nazi efforts to stamp out any type of resistance was a series of roundups in which many thousands of innocent persons were herded from their homes and shipped to prisons and concentration camps, the French asserted.

The number of Frenchmen and residents of other occupied Western European nations who perished as a result of these roundups has not been ascertained, French Prosecutor Charles DuBost, said, but he declared he was prepared to prove that 40,000 persons died in only one of the French prisons operated by the Germans.

DuBost declared that at least 29,660 Frenchmen, most of them selected at random, had been executed by the Nazis as hostages.

In the 1943 plan for rounding up the families of French generals and other high ranking officers who might become resistance leaders in the event of invasion, he said, a German foreign office telegram sent to its Paris office showed that the Nazis deliberately proposed that the families might best be interned in an area "particularly exposed to air attacks."

Case Resumed

The French resumed their case against the Nazis after a British prosecutor accused defendant Baron Constantin Von Neurath, a former foreign minister and "protector" of Bohemia and Moravia, of instituting a reign of terror designed to Germanize Czechoslovakia.

Conclusion of the case against Von Neurath ended for the time being the individual cases against the 22 defendants except for Rudolf Hess, whose counsel was out of court because of a broken ankle.

French Say Nazis Slew Hostages

Nuernberg, Jan. 24 (AP)—France charged today that the Nazis executed at least 29,000 inocent hostages in their occupation of the fallen republic.

Charles Dubost, the French prosecutor, made the accusation before the International Military Tribunal and attributed prime responsibility to Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel and former Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering. They are two of the leading 22 Nazis on trial as war criminals.

Neurath Accused

Another defendant, Baron Constantin von Neurath, former Foreign Minister and "protector" of Bohemia and Moravia, was called Hitler's "handiest tool" in German plans for conquest. The British demanded his conviction as a war criminal.

Dubost said Keitel, who was head of the German high command, levied harsh measures against the resistance movements which the marshal termed "communist activity." He said Keitel negated foreign-office efforts to obtain clemency and quoted this letter:

"Henceforth, the most severe measures ought to be taken in occupied territories. In the future, the death penalty should in general be carried out."

Punishment Ratio

Dubost accused Keitel of ordering 50 to 100 French Communists to be shot for each German killed in France, and said similar instructions to seize and execute hostages were sent to commanders in Belgium, Norway, Holland, Denmark, the Ukraine, Serbia and Greece.

Outlining Neurath's career, a British prosecutor accused him of instituting a deliberate reign of terror designed to Germanize Czechoslovakia.

As Reich protector, the prosecution said, Neurath obtained Hitler's approval for a plan to absorb "about half" the Czech population by dispersing the people throughout the Reich, with the remainder to be "eliminated" by deportation or other means.

Only Hess Remains

Presentation of the case against Neurath concluded for the time being the individual cases against the 22 defendants, with the exception of Rudolf Hess, whose counsel is incapacitated with a broken ankle.

G. I.'s Favor Pre-war Hitler

U. S. Army Poll Shows 51 P. C. Think He Helped Germany Before 1939.

Wiesbaden, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—A United States Army poll, taken last fall, of 1,700 men said to represent a cross-section of American troops stationed believed the Germans had some justification for starting the war and that 51 per cent believed Hitler did the Reich a lot of good before 1939.

The poll was not officially released for publication, but was made available by an authoritative person.

The survey had been kept an official secret for weeks. Authorities declared it revealed an amazing lack of knowledge of the causes of the war, and that it appeared to indicate that the United States soldier in some cases had fallen for the propaganda of Germans echoing Joseph Goebbels.

It showed large percentages of the soldiers ready to accept German explanations and willing to abbsolve the mass of Germans from responsibility for the concentration camp atrocities.

However, 80 per cent favored occupation of Germany for ten years by United Nations troops, and most said they believed the United States military government was not tough enough with Nazis or ordinary Germans.

German Excuses Reflected.

Twenty-two per cent of the men questioned said they believed the Germans under Hitler had "good reason" for the persecution of Jews. Another 10 per cent of the soldiers said they were undecided on the issue of German anti-Semitism.

The influence which the German excuses for the war had on the G. I.'s was sharply reflected throughout the poll. Nineteen per cent of the men said they believed Germany had either some or a good deal of justification for starting the world conflict and another 11 per cent said they were not quite sure.

The enlisted men questioned had talked to Germans, and 28 per cent said they agreed with some of the German explanations why Germany went to war.

Twenty-nine per cent conceded they had grown "more favorable" toward their former enemies since they had been in the country.

By comparison, only 14 per cent believed they had become less favorable toward the Germans, and the overall survey showed that approximately one in four had a "very favorable" or "fairly favorable" opinion of the German people.

On to Hitler's Name.

The Army report said that the soldiers on the whole believed the Germans knew quite well what Hitler was "up to," and favored their fuehrer before the war.

Twenty-four per cent of the soldiers questioned said the Germans had a "very good" or "fairly good" argument when they said that since Germany was Europe's most efficient country, she had the right to be a controlling influence on the Continent. The soldiers compared Germany's position with that of England in the British Empire and the United States in North and South America.

Thirty per cent of the soldiers said they liked the Germans better than the English or French. On the whole, those questioned like the Germans better than the French, and preferred the English to the Germans.

The questioners asked the men what they liked about the Germans. Forty per cent said nothing in particular, but those who admired German characteristics cited cleanliness and industriousness.

Of those who said they disliked the Germans, 25 per cent said they hated German arrogance, conceit, and the master race attitudes. Of all 1,700 men, 12 per cent said they believed some races were superior or inferior by nature and an additional 16 per cent were undecided.

SABOTAGE WARNING TIES UP RAIL LINE

Frankfurt, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—A mysterious warning that German saboteurs planned to blow up two vital railroad bridges tangled Army transportation over a 100-mile route between Frankfurt and Stuttgart over the week end.

Army authorities refused to say whether there was actual sabotage along the important passenger and freight line linking the northern and southern areas of the American occupation zone.

Guards went to the bridges and all trains between Frankfurt and Stuttgart were stopped. For ten hours, almost the entire stretch of railroad was searched. Every bridge and culvert was examined closely. The Army did not disclose whether explosives were found.

Twenty rooms have been reserved for Archbishop Spellman of New York and Archbishop John Glennon of St. Louis, also Cardinals-designate, for the Grand Hotel management said today.

U.S. Envoy Sees Stalin, Starts For D.C.

Moscow, Jan. 24 (AP)—United States Ambassador W. Averell Harriman conferred with Generalissimo Stalin and Foreign Commissar Molotov yesterday and started by air for Washington today by way of the Orient, where he will talk with high American officials.

The first leg of his journey will be to the Iranian oil port of Abadan on the Gulf of Persia. His flight will probably be across the troubled area of north Iran, where the presence of Russian troops provoked a complaint from Iran before the United Nations.

To See Marshall, MacArthur

From Abadan he will fly to Chungking, via India. He expects to confer with Gen. George C. Marshall, United States Ambassador to China, and perhaps see Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

He will then fly to Tokyo and confer with General MacArthur. He expects to visit Korea and talk with American commanders there. After visiting Korea, he will continue to Washington.

Interested In Korea Charge

Harriman, who was present at the discussions of Big Three Foreign Ministers in Moscow, will give the American commanders and diplomats details of the decisions.

The Ambassador noted with considerable interest a Tass dispatch from Korea this week asserting that United States commanders were inciting opposition to the Moscow decisions. He will probably discuss this report with the Americans in the southern zone of Korea.

Jewish Official Comments

JERUSALEM, Jan. 24 (AP).—Moshe Shertok, Jewish Agency political director, told a press conference today that Britain's announced intention of giving independence to mandated Trans-Jordan gave impetus to Zionist demands that Palestine be made a Jewish state.

Shertok said Trans-Jordan's political separation from Palestine in 1922 was then "stipulated only as a temporary one" and added that "Zionists always have believed a political arrangement would be arrived at making possible joint development schemes for Palestine and Trans-Jordan. These plans the Jews were prepared to initiate and execute in common with Arabs in the common interest of both peoples."

"The Voice of Israel," secret Jewish radio station, denied an allegation that letters threatening death to several Arab statesmen in Egypt and other Arab countries had been sent by Jewish organizations. The radio announcement said a thorough investigation within the Jewish resistance movement revealed the letters were forgeries.

[British Foreign Secretary Bevin announced in London, Dec. 13, that Britain and France had agreed to remove their troops from Lebanon, but no date for the withdrawal was given.]

RIOT TOLL RISES TO 14 KILLED, 500 HURT IN BOMBAY

BOMBAY, Jan. 24—(AP) Police battled sporadically tonight with bands of demonstrators who had thrown up flaming barricades earlier in riots in Bombay, and the toll in two days of bloody fighting mounted to 14 killed and at least 500 injured.

Police fired again today on the demonstrators, and the provincial information office in a statement tonight declared the situation remained "very dangerous."

Qualified observers predicted the riots would reach a peak by Saturday, when the Indians will celebrate the 16th anniversary of the Indian National Congress declaration of independence. Police officials said it seemed certain troops would be called if the rioting continues.

Police Station Attacked

A mob attacked the Khandiwadi police station in the latest incident.

Today's injured included seven officers and 56 men of the police force, mostly hurt by rocks and bottles thrown by demonstrators. One man was killed when police fired on a mob attempting to interfere with a fire engine enroute to a blaze.

The provincial information office and the Bombay branch headquarters of the Indian Congress Party both placed the death toll at 14. Leaders repeatedly urged Congress members to avoid violence, and emphasized they were not responsible for the outbreaks.

In one residential section virtually all roads were blocked by rioters who hurled stones on roadways to make them impassable, cut down trees and burned them as blazing barricades, and threatened motorists.

Firemen Stoned

False fire alarms were turned in, and firemen sped to lonely spots where they were stoned. Several municipal ambulances were reported burned by the mobs. Two police trucks were heavily stoned and some policemen in them were injured.

The police opened fire three times on a huge crowd that trailed the funeral procession of a Hindu victim of yesterday's riots. The order to fire was given when the crowd answered demands that it disperse by hurling bottles and stones at the police.

A strike was called by 175,000 textile and other industrial workers in protest against yesterday's shootings. At a rally the workers called for an investigation of the disturbances.

Pickets crying "down with repression!" began roaming the city jamming traffic wherever they found a spot not protected by the police. At one point they drew tear gas fire.

Student groups ordered merchants in the troubled areas to close their doors and most of them complied swiftly. The police kept strong guards in strategic areas, and watched closely over government warehouses, one of which was burned yesterday.

Bloody Riots Rife in Bombay

14 Reported Killed and 500 Wounded in Two Days as Police Try to Restore Order.

Bombay, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—Bombay faced another night of disorders after a riotous day in which the police repeatedly fired on bands of demonstrators in futile efforts to restore order.

First outbreak of violence today occurred when the police fired three times upon large, stone-throwing crowds following the funeral procession of a Hindu victim of yesterday's bloody riots. By nightfall tension was growing, and the toll of dead and injured mounted.

A police bulletin said twenty-five persons were wounded by gunfire during the day, bringing the number of wounded in two days of disorders to nearly 500. Headquarters of the All India Congress party said it had confirmed fourteen deaths, three more than the official total at noon. Congress party leaders repeatedly urged members to avoid violence.

Roadways Blocked.

Virtually all avenues into one residential section of Bombay were blocked by rioters, who flung boulders onto roadways, cut down trees and burned them as flaming barricades, and threatened motorists.

An epidemic of false alarms called fire engines to lonely spots, where they were stoned. Several municipal ambulances were attacked and some were reported burned. Two police trucks were stoned and the policemen injured. About 175,000 textile and other workers struck in protest against shootings yesterday. Roving students forced merchants to close.

The rioting started in celebration of the birthday of Subhas Chandra Bose, who served the Japanese as leader of what Tokyo called the "Indian National Army." Saturday is the sixteenth anniversary of the declaration of Indian independence of the Indian National Congress party.

Pupils went on strike. Road blocks were thrown up by demonstrators. Motor traffic was halted and rioters tried to force passengers to join the procession. Rocks laid on the rails halted street cars.

Police predicted that troops would intervene if the rioting continued tomorrow.

MACARTHUR BARS JAP BORROWING

TOKYO, Jan. 24 — (AP) General MacArthur's headquarters barred the Japanese government today from further borrowing and ordered immediate steps to pay off a $1,200,000,000 deficit in twin moves against inflation.

The government had proposed borrowing 14,000,000,000 yen ($393,000,000) through sale of bonds to the bank of Japan to refinance most of its deficit of 18,000,000,000 yen for November and December.

How much more the government already may owe the bank was not made public, but it was ordered to report the present amount of its overdraft with a plan for retiring it.

Spending Limited

Current spending was ordered limited to 2,000,000,000 yen a month ($133,000,000), exclusive of demobilization and food subsidy costs.

Another headquarters order, forbidding the government to use 500,000,000 yen (about $33,000,000) for scientific research, disclosed that this was part of a fund of 856,000,000 yen (about $57,000,000) remaining from voluntary contributions by the public during the war for service men's welfare and technical research. There was no indication of the use to which the sum might be put eventually.

Confers With Premier

Meanwhile General MacArthur conferred with Premier Kijuro Shidehara for more than an hour and a half on undisclosed subjects while the cabinet was reported to have agreed to leave the status of the emperor virtually unchanged in any constitutional revision.

Japanese papers said Shidehara was seeking MacArthur's views on several "urgent" matters, including possible food importations, the future elections, war crimes trials and economic reforms.

MacArthur Ends Jap Girls' Sale Into Slavery

Tokyo, Jan. 24 (AP)—General MacArthur today ended a centuries-old custom under which Japanese families sold their daughters into the slavery of prostitution.

MacArthur ordered the Japanese Government to obey that section of the Potsdam Declaration which guarantees "respect for the fundamental human rights." Under it Japan must annul all laws authorizing licensed prostitution and nullify all contracts committing any woman to prostitution.

The Japanese Government recently halted licensing of houses but not the law permitting the sale of girls. In 1941 the Government had made a radical change which permitted the sale of girls only by blood relatives, eliminating sale by husbands and sweethearts.

Brothel Keepers Act

Two weeks ago the Tokyo Brothel Keepers Association decided to release the girls from slavery-status contracts and permit them "the democratic right" of going into business independently.

Col. Crawford Sams, chief of Allied headquarters Public Health and Welfare Service, said the Japanese girls were sold to proprietors of openly maintained houses for loans of 500 to 1,000 yen ($33 to $67) to the parents — frequently against the girls' wishes.

MacArthur also acted to curtail inflation in economically bewildered Japan with an order which froze the Government's huge debt to the Bank of Japan. The debt was ordered retired quickly and the Japanese were directed to submit a complete Government borrowing program for the remainder of the fiscal year which ends April 30.

A spending limit of 2,000,000,000 yen a month was clamped on the Government's general account, which includes all net costs of Government except payments for food subsidies and to cover demobilization and repatriation expense.

The Japanese were told they could use the Bank of Japan to finance current deficits only as a last resort. The Government was instructed to report the present amount of the Government overdraft upon the Bank of Japan together with a plan for retiring it as soon as possible.

Arrests Ordered

Maj. Gen. Kikutano Aotsu, former commander of the Japanese 41st Infantry Division, will be arrested and confined in Sugamo prison upon arrival from Wewak, New Guinea, counterintelligence officers said today. He was the 11th Japanese General to be named as a war-criminal suspect in the past week.

Headquarters also ordered the Government to apprehend Lieut. Col. Shigeo Suzuki, a cavalry staff officer of the 10th Imperial Army on New Guinea, as a suspected war criminal.

Premier Shidehara conferred with MacArthur for more than an hour and a half today on undisclosed matters. There was no announcement by headquarters concerning this meeting. However, Kyodo news agency said Shidehara discussed the political situation since the recent Cabinet shakeup in compliance with Allied orders to rid the Government of men who helped plan and wage the Pacific war.

The press also said the Premier sought MacArthur's views on a number of urgent measures which the Government is said to be contemplating. Among these possibly are the forthcoming election, proposed importation of food and other basic commodities, economic reforms and prosecution of Japanese war criminal suspects.

In a further move to halt inflation, Allied Headquarters ordered the Government to cut expenses to a minimum, to finance deficits as much as possible from current savings to the Japanese people and to refrain from deficit financing through the Bank of Japan or "ordinary banks."

Jiji news agency quoted reliable sources close to the Cabinet as saying the status of the Emperor remains substantially unchanged except for a slight revision in the phraseology of Article 3 in the Cabinet's draft of the proposed constitutional amendment. Jiji said Article 3 reading "the Emperor is sacred and inviolable" has been changed to "the Emperor is supreme and inviolable."

MacArthur Rebuke Denied

TOKYO, Friday, Jan. 25 (AP)—An Associated Press story quoting a spokesman at General MacArthur's headquarters as criticizing the Russian Tass new agency drew this reaction today from Brig. Gen. Frayne Baker:

No such criticism was made by "General MacArthur's spokesman"—but there was no denial that a headquarters spokesman had rebuked Tass.

General Baker, who as press relations officer generally is regarded as General MacArthur's spokesman, said he had no way of knowing what any other responsible spokesman for headquarters might have said.

Questioned yesterday by some correspondents General Baker said "no statement or comment whatever was made by MacArthur's spokesman on the Tass story" and "MacArthur himself had not read the Tass dispatch."

Tuesday, a spokesman at General MacArthur's headquarters, who holds a responsible position, but who declined to permit the use of his name, was quoted at length by The Associated Press in an interview.

Japanese Teachers Ask Better Conditions

Tokyo, Jan. 24 (AP)—The National Council of the All-Japan Teachers Union handed the Education Ministry today a seven-point demand for improved conditions, including a 500 per cent increase in food and residence allowances, the newspaper Yomiuri Hochi reported today.

The council claims a majority of the nation's teachers as members.

The press reported, meanwhile, that a national organization of employés of all news agencies and newspapers in Japan would be formed and that employés of Kyodo news agency were demanding better treatment.

A few minutes after Russia broke silence, Mr. Keenan added other names to make the list read: United States, Great Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, China, France, Russia and the Netherlands.

U. S. to Seize Meat Plants At Midnight; AFL Workers Ordered to Return to Jobs

C.I.O. WILL DECIDE ON BACK-TO-WORK PROPOSAL TODAY

Union President Asks Truman Call Conference in Washington.

SILENT ON AFL MOVE

Government Seeks to Resume Normal Slaughtering as Soon as Possible.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24—(AP) A.F union officials tonight ordered 5 000 striking meat industry employ back to work under governme control Saturday, but no word w forthcoming immediately from C.I.O. union which has 196,0 members on strike.

Leaders of the A.F.L. Meat C ters and Butcher Workmen Uni telegraphed President Truman th issued the back-to-work call as result of his order directing t secretary of agriculture to ta over and operate 134 struck pla of 19 packing companies at 12 a. m. Saturday.

Return Ordered

"We have x x x notified all our local unions on strike to return to their jobs," the A.F.L. officials told Mr. Truman. "We shall cooperate with you in this seizure fully."

Informed of the A.F.L. union's decision to return to work, Gayle G. Armstrong, named by the government to operate the packing plants upon Federal seizure, said:

"If the amalgamated meat cutters are ready to report for work, their action signifies a good spirit of cooperation. It is an encouraging development."

A.F.L. pickets were ordered withdrawn. Union local representatives were directed to notify packers the A.F.L. workers were "willing to return to work Saturday, "but the two A.F.L. leaders expressed doubt "whether operations can begin before Monday morning."

A spokesman for the C.I.O. United Packinghouse Workers said that union would not have any comment tonight regarding the A.F.L. action.

He disclosed that Lewis J. Clark, C.I.O.-U.P.W. president, earlier today had asked President Truman to call a conference tomorrow of Labor department, Agriculture department, Wage Stabilization and Reconversion officials with packers and union representatives.

Wire Sent Truman

The C.I.O. spokesman said the request was contained in a telegram sent to the President at noon today, but that 100 hours later no reply had been received from the White House.

A meeting of the C.I.O. national wage policy committee, composed of approximately 200 delegates from union locals, is scheduled for tomorrow. The union spokesman said no back-to-work decision would be made until that meeting, that the decision "is up to the rank and file of our members."

This declaration also was contained in the telegram sent to the President.

"We order all of our members to obey the Presidential seizure order and make preparations to resume national," normal slaughtering as quickly as possible," Earl W. Jimerson, president, and Patrick E. Gorman, secretary-treasurer of the A.F.L. union, announced in a statement.

Gorman said the back to work order affected 55,000 packing plant employees and was sent to all of the unions 430 locals. Earlier the union had said 70,000 members were on strike.

Pickets Called Off

"By tomorrow there will be no picketing by our union members," Gorman said. "Locals are authorized to withdraw their pickets immediately upon receipt of the telegram even though they do not report for work until Saturday," he told a news conference.

"We intend to go back to government operated plants and our members will not go back to their jobs tomorrow," he added.

The A.F.L. statement said in part:

"Our interiational union cannot and must not disturb the President of the United States nor can it distrust the good motives of the United States government in seizing the plants as has been done.

(President Truman earlier today directed Secretary of Agriculture Anderson to take over and operate 134 struck plants of 19 packing companies at 12:01 a.m. Saturday.)

"Our membership now on strike in all places is ordered by the international executive board, through the powers given it in our international constitution as well as the authority vested in it by the packinghouse workers conference held in Chicago on January 11 and 12, to declare a temporary truce in its present existing strike at least until we know what the fact-finding commission will recommend."

The union, the statement said, "instructed" its members "to peacefully return to their jobs for the following reasons:

"1. Under government seizure of plants, the workers will receive justice.

"2. No point can be gained in continuing the strike under such circumstances, causing the workers to suffer pay losses approximating two million dollars per day.

"3. A continuation of the strike would cause an immediate shortage of meat still required to feed our soldiers in the Pacific area.

"4. A continuation of the strike would create unprecedented losses to the farmers, cattle raisers and cattle feeders of our nation, as more than four billion pounds of grain per day at present are being fed beef cattle that should have already been slaughtered.

"5. There is now no need to keep one hundred thirty million American citizens without meat.

"6. If we cannot uphold the government of the United States in its seizure of the plants to settle this vital question, then as Americans it appears there is no agency on earth that we can trust."

The union released the text of a telegram sent to President Truman under the signatures of Jimerson and Gorman. It read:

"Having been officially informed of your order of seizure of the strike bound meat packing plants of the United States we have complied with the order and notified all our local unions on strike to return to their jobs. We shall cooperate with you in this seizure fully."

The two union leaders told their local officials that "it is doubtful whether operations can begin before Monday morning x x x.

"A representative committee from your union is instructed to call up on the packers and state that our membership is willing to return to work Saturday, and if their services are needed, they should go to work on that day."

LABOR, INDUSTRY HIT BY TRUMAN

Unions, Companies Have Too Much Power, President Says.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 — (AP) President Truman expressed the view today that there is too much power on both sides in current labor disputes and Congress now must exert the power of the people.

He characterized some strikes as a test of strength between company and union, making the remark in specific discussion of the steel controversy at his news conference. He made it clear that he considers his fact-finding bill, still far from enactment by Congress, as the solution.

Conference Rejected

He told questioners that he does not think it would be practical at present to seize the strike-bound steel plants, although he quickly added that he was not saying this would not be done eventually.

He appeared to reject the proposal of Benjamin F. Fairless that he call a White House conference of management to consider "what kind of a wage increase the economy of this country can endure." Fairless, president of the U. S. Steel corporation, made his suggestion in a radio speech last night.

Mr. Truman commented that he already had held conferences with management executives and that he probably would have more. He went on to say that he did not make appointments through the press and radio but that company officials could come to Washington in the regular way and his door would be open.

But the best thing Benjamin Fairless can do, the President concluded, is send word: I accept. This was in reference to the chief executive's proposal that the steel dispute be settled with the wage increase of 18 1-2 cents an hour which the President has recommended; the C.I.O.-United Steelworkers agreed but the company refused.

Mr. Truman told the reporters he thinks he has now done everything he possibly can to get a settlement. The public interest demands, he declared, that the strikers go back to work andr the company accept the wage increase. In response to a question, however, he said that at the present time he didn't see how the workers could go back to work unless the management accepted his wage proposal.

Another question dealt with the tax refund situation which could provide funds to some corporations while they are shut down. The President said he was thoroughly familiar with it but had no suggestions to make on that score.

U. S. Has Utah Plant

Ae reporter inquired whether the government did not own some steel plants built during the war which it could operate during the strike. Mr. Truman replied that most of the government plants were integrated with privately-owned mills except for one near Provo, Utah, and government operation of this one is under consideration. It was built for the government by the U. S. Steel corporation and cost about $200,000,000. The Colorado Fuel & Iron company has entered a bid for it, and Henry J. Kaiser once expressed interest in it.

Mr. Truman somewhat tempered his remarks on the necessity for the government to exercise the people's power in settling strikes by observing that the American system of government provides for a division of power among the President, Congress and the judiciary, and that it is a good thing.

In a similar vein was his comment on the Senate filibuster against the bill for a permanent fair employment practices commission. Mr. Truman observed that several filibusters had occurred during his service in the Senate and that it was a matter for the Senate itself to settle without outside interference, especially from the President. He said, however, that in his own Senate service he always had voted for limitation of debate when filibusters occurred.

DETROIT, Jan. 24.—(AP) The Ford Motor Co. announced today that 15,000 employes would be laid off Friday night "due to the steel strike which has resulted in curtailed manufacturing operations."

Ford added the present curtailment of production "threatens a complete shutdown" unless the steel strike is settled.

An additional 25,000 Ford workers will be affected a week from now, M. L. Bricker, vice-president in charge of manufacturing, said in a statement.

At the same time General Motors Corp. denied charges of unfair labor practices filed by the C.I.O. United Auto Workers and asked the National Labor Relations Board to specify "the acts, words or deeds" of the corporation which "frustrated and avoided bona fide bargaining."

The NLRB is to hold a hearing on the union's charges at Detroit Monday.

"Inability of the plants' suppliers to get steel, coupled with the fact that some suppliers' employes are members of the striking steel workers union," are responsible for the Ford layoff, the company statement said.

The statement added:

"The present curtailment of production which threatens a complete shutdown unless the steel strike is settled speedily, is another of a long list of outside strikes which have slowed Ford production since last July."

Assembly lines and manufacture of service parts will continue "as long as material is available," Bricker said.

Details Asked

In a request for a bill of particulars, General Motors asked the NLRB to "specify the books or records 'containing information relevant to the question of ability to pay the proposed wages' which the union requested the corporation to 'produce or disclose'."

The corporation sought dismissal of the NLRB complaint made Jan. 13 and countered with a charge that the union "had failed to bargain in good faith" with GM.

The union, GM said, destroyed or frustrated the mutuality necessary for collective bargaining" in nine different ways.

It did this, the corporation con-

Steel Workers Ask President To Release U.S.-owned Plants

Pittsburgh, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—C. I. O.-United Steel Workers turned anew to President Truman today for a solution of the four-day-old strike.

The 175-member U. S. W. wage committee asked Mr. Truman to turn over "a billion dollars worth" of Government-owned steel plants for operation by individuals willing to accept "in the interests of the nation" his 18½ cents an hour pay increase suggestion.

There was no immediate comment from the White House on the proposal as the walkout of 750,000 steel workers stretched paralyzing tentacles toward other industries.

15,000 Coal Miners Idle.

Already the twenty-nine-State steel strike had forced 15,000 coal miners into idleness. Fabricating plants were curtailing hours and working forces.

There were no new peace movements to contradict the forecast of a long and bitter strike made by the trade magazine Iron Age. C. I. O.-U. S. W.'s president, Philip Murray, told newsmen he saw no reason why mediators should be assigned to attempt to bring management and union together again. The President himself had tried to mediate and the industry refused his recommendation, Murray said.

The steel union wage committee, after a meeting here to discuss with Murray his actions in the steel negotiations, reaffirmed his acceptance of the presidential wage proposal and declared U. S. W. members "will resume work at the plants of any company prepared to" the 18½ cents increase.

Government Owned Plants.

Regarding the Government-owned steel plants, Murray estimated that about three-fourths of these plants, with an annual capacity of 6,000,000 tons of steel, could be operated independently of privately owned facilities. These mills were built during the war to meet the all-time high demand for steel and were operated by existing companies under Federal contracts.

The maximum annual production capacity of the nation's entire steel industry is 95,500,000 tons.

Captive Mines Hard Hit.

The steel walkout struck hard at "captive" mines, owned by steel company subsidiary which produce coal only for the mills. A coal car shortage developed. Loaded cars, consigned to steel mills, lay idle on sidings with no steel workers to unload them.

Curtailments were reported at two Michigan fabricating plants. The Bundy Tubing Company laid off 1,000 workers and the Muskegon Piston Ring Company at Sparta adopted a four-day work week, both companies blaming a shortage of steel.

Fabricating firms in the Pittsburgh district renewed demands for separation of their contract bargaining with the U. S. W. from the national contract. In a telegram to President Truman, James S. Bevins, president of the Tri-State Industrial Association, urged that representatives of the employees bargain collectively with the management of each fabricating firm.

In the past Bevins said: "Fabricating companies frequently have been asked over the telephone by union representatives 'I suppose you won't settle for 2 cents (or 19½ cents) an hour will you?' That is not 'collective bargaining' by my definition."

Almost without exception, he continued, these users of steel need price relief even without increasing wages. "Steel fabricating companies cannot absorb both a wage increase and a steel price increase without simultaneous price relief on their own products," Bevins's telegram added.

Asked about fabricators, Murray said it has been "traditional" for wages paid in basic steel to parallel those paid in the fabricating industry. In the past, he continued, fabricators "invariably" have said they could not write an agreement with the union until a wage agreement is reached for basic steel.

Murray said Bevins's charges of telephone bargaining was "entirely wrong"; the union has bargained sincerely, or had tried to, with each individual fabricator employing members of the union.

Additional railroad workers were furloughed yesterday. The Louisville & Nashville said it was forced to lay off a large number of train crewmen because its freight business has been drastically reduced by the steel strike. More than 4,000 railroad workers already are idle in the Pittsburgh district.

Two small steel firms signed new wage agreements with the U. S. W. The Moser Steel Company of Dallas, Tex., granted a 5-cent hourly increase to 215 employees and Columbia Marine & Shipping Company of Dallas, Ore., signed a closed-shop agreement for its forty workers. Wages did not figure in the Columbia contract, a U. S. W. official said.

G. M. Denies Lay-Off Plan

DETROIT, Jan. 24 (AP).—A report that General Motors is contemplating laying off most of its 65,000 office and salaried workers beginning Feb. 1 brought an emphatic denial from the corporation today.

"The report is absolutely without any foundation," an official said.

C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors, was to leave Detroit tonight to appear before the Senate Committee on Labor and Education in Washington Friday.

Walter P. Reuther, U. A. W. vice-president, is scheduled to appear before the committee the same day, with R. J. Thomas, president, expected to be called later.

The committee is looking into President Truman's proposed legislation to set up fact-finding boards.

Ford, Chrysler Talks Renewed

New York, Jan. 24 (AP)—Top officials of two of the nation's largest producers of electrical appliances resumed negotiations today with representatives of 200,000 CIO electrical workers who went on strike nine days ago in sixteen states.

Detroit, Jan. 24 (AP)—Ford Motor Company and Chrysler Corporation today resumed wage talks with the CIO United Auto Workers, but neither the union nor General Motors showed signs of coming any closer to settlement of the strike now in its ninth week.

Yesterday's negotiating sessions brought only a brief union comment that "some progress" was made at the Chrysler meeting and a Ford official's statement that "we are still talking wages."

Norman Matthews, the UAW's Chrysler director, gave no hint yesterday as to whether the union had lowered its 30 per cent increase demand as it did in the case of Ford and General Motors.

Compromise Rumored

A 17½ per cent compromise figure, originally proposed for settlement of the GM strike by President Truman's fact-finding board, is still being proffered by the union in Ford negotiations, but the UAW has now returned to its 30 per cent demand on General Motors after the corporation refused to accept the proposal.

There were persistent rumors that further compromise was imminent in the UAW's discussions with Ford, which has offered a 7½-cent wage boost to counter the union's present 19½-cent demand. Settlement at an 18½-cent-per-hour increase would amount to a 15.5 per cent raise.

Chrysler spokesmen also refused comment on their meeting with the union. Mathews's only statement was "we revived the whole picture and made some progress at today's meeting."

The union's demand on G.M. went back to 30 per cent at midnight last Monday, the deadline set by the UAW for management's acceptance of the compromise. Since then neither side has made any move to seek resumption of negotiations.

PROGRESS REPORTED IN W.E. NEGOTIATIONS

NEW YORK, Jan. 24—(AP) Ernest Weaver, president of the Association of Communications Equipment Workers, (IND) today said some progress was being made in negotiations between the union and the Western Electric Company on a New York contract for 8,000 workers in 44 states.

At the conclusion of today's session of the closed meeting Weaver said: "We are considering a working agreement clause by clause, and making some progress. The conferences will continue until we reach an agreement or a deadlock."

Among the conferees were W. F. Hosford, company vice-president, and Joseph A. Beirne, president of the National Federation of Telephone Workers, parent body of the A.C.E.W.

Union members staged a three day walkout starting Jan. 11, causing a work stoppage by long distance phone operators. They returned to their jobs at the suggestion of the federation.

Congressmen On Fact Panels Held Impractical

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—President Truman said today he did not believe it would be practical for congressmen "to sit on fact-finding boards" investigating labor disputes.

He made the comment in a letter to Representative Landis (R., Ind.), who had written him to suggest that "a small committee from the Congress be present at some of the fact-finding hearings in order to report labor-management facts to other members of Congress."

Landis made both letters public.

Truman's Views

Mr. Truman wrote that he appreciated Landis's note and added:

"I wish it were possible to get the Congress vitally interested in the situation which we are facing.

"I don't believe it would be practical, however, for congressmen to sit on fact-finding boards.

"The findings of the boards necessarily can't become public documents until all the facts are in.

"As you know, the custom of the Congress is to attempt to find the facts in public. That procedure won't work in labor disputes.

"I do appreciate very much your suggestion, however."

Pressure On Industry Planned

Congressional efforts to put the heat on management, instead of labor, began to take shape meanwhile.

The drive is being sparked by foes of proposals for stern regulation of industrial strife, and some of these lawmakers claim that the White House is not averse to their plan.

"This new tack developed as several senators and representatives advocated speedy abolition or modification of present laws giving tax rebates to corporations whose 1946 profits drop below prewar levels.

Frequent Speeches Planned

Sponsors of this plan, including one congressman with reported White House backing, disclosed a program for frequent floor speeches defending labor and criticizing employers for their position in present strikes.

Presidential support was claimed for a House address in which Representative Biemiller (R., Wis.) asserted earlier in the week that the United States Steel Corporation would have "made money" if it had accepted the wage compromise proposed by President Truman.

Biemiller said the company would have added $200,000,000 yearly to its income through a $4-a-ton price boost, while paying out $180,000,000 in wage increases under the suggested 18.5-cent-an-hour raise. The $4 price boost reportedly would have been sanctioned by the Administration.

Figures "From White House"

Several of Biemiller's colleagues said his figures "came from the White House." Biemiller would say only that "they represent a compilation by the OPA and the Labor Department" and that "I was asked to make them public so people would know the situation."

Biemiller, along with other close friends of organized labor such as Representatives Hook (D., Mich.), Savage (D., Wash.), Bradley (D., Pa.), La Follette (R., Ind.) and Marcantonio (A.L., N.Y.), plan to make a series of similar speeches in the House. Senators Morse (R., Ore.), Kilgore (D., W.Va.) and Murray (D., Mont.) are expected to carry on along the same line in their chamber.

Pending Bills Opposed

These members hope to stave off quick passage of several pending labor bills which they consider too restrictive.

The pending measures include one by the House Military Committee to penalize unions for violating no-strike contracts and to limit union political activity, and one by the House Interstate Commerce Committee to regulate procedure of unions in the radio broadcasting field.

Senator Byrd (D., Va.) yesterday introduced a measure calling for labor unions—which he said have become "a big business" to register with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

La Follette introduced a bill banning tax refunds to companies which the National Labor Relations Board decides caused strikes by unfair labor practices. Representative Bailey (D., W.Va.) already has a bill pending to repeal entirely the provision for the refunds.

New Labor Code Being Drawn

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—Representative Stewart (D., Okla.), asserting that "unions are out of hand and Congress must act quickly," said today he is preparing new "labor code" legislation.

"One hundred million people who have no voice in labor or industry are affected by the strikes and they are wrought up to the point where they are demanding protection," Stewart said.

Stresses Three Points

The bill he is preparing, he said, has three principal points:

1. It would make unions, as well as management, liable under terms of their contracts and would take away from them the right of collective bargaining in event of violations.

2. It would "tighten up" the law on political contributions by labor unions, making applicable the same rules as control contributions by such business as banks.

3. It would "take foremen out of unions and put them on the side of management where they belong."

Opinion On Damage

Stewart said the bill is "practically a new labor code."

He suggested last month that unions be made liable for payment of damages in event of violation of contracts or in event of destruction of property.

"If we do not correct the evil of minority rule, the majority doubtless will assert themselves," he declared.

A.F.L. MINE UNION OPPOSES RETURN OF LEWIS GROUP

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 24.—(AP) The Progressive Miners' Union renewed its protests to the A.F.L. executive council today against possible readmission of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers to the American Federation of Labor.

President John Marchiando of the Progressives, chartered by the A.F.L. when Lewis' half-million U.M.W. members strode out of the federation in 1936, voiced the protest against taking Lewis back.

The U.M.W. chief has been flirting with the council for three years about getting back in the A.F.L., since he left the C.I.O. in a huff in 1942.

Vacancy on Council

Lewis has demanded a seat on the executive council as a condition to his return, and there is a vacancy at this mid-winter session of the council.

The chances were multiplying—despite the reluctance of A.F.L. President William Green and other council members to discuss it—that Lewis would take advantage of the vacancy to renew his application, pay up his per capital tax, and resume his place among the labor titans of the federation.

The vacancy on the council was caused by withdrawal of the 700,000 machinists from the A.F.L., and automatic ousting of their president, Harvey W. Brown, from the council table.

Marchiando, dapper boss of the 35,000 Progressive miners, patiently renewed his protests today. He has been appearing before the council at each of its quarterly meetings around the country whenever the name of Lewis comes up in speculation.

Green said the council never has given Marchiando an answer. It just listens and he goes away.

The A.F.L. president explained that when the U.M.W. was in the Federation the Progressives were outlawed because they had broken away from the recognized miners international union. Then with the departure of the U.M.W., the Progressives were recognized by the A.F.L. as the proper union for mine workers.

Marchiando Fighting

Marchiando is fighting for continued recognition, but he fears that Lewis' return would rob the Progressives of their present charter or and may precipitate a new threat to his organization. The union is concentrated principally in Illinois.

The A.F.L. Executive Council also has been asked to interpret certain phases of the decision its committee handed down in settling the seven - month Hollywood movie strike last year.

Eric Johnston, movie "czar" and representative of the producers, telephoned from New York asking to confer with the council later in its sessions. The carpenters and International Association of Theatrical Stage Employes and Motion Picture Operators (IATSE) also want a clarification, Green said.

Herbert Sorrell, chairman of the conference of studio unions representing the A.F.L. unions which had been fighting IATSE in the strike last year, has been in Miami but has remained in the background. Richard Walsh, head of IATSE, also wants to be heard by the council, Green said.

WAR DEPT. LAGGED ON HAWAII RADAR SETUP, SHORT SAYS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24—(AP) Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short declared today that the Army in Hawaii could have gone into a more stringent alert in "a matter of minutes" if the Navy or the War department had given any advance hint of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Washington had nine days to tell him that the alert he ordered as Hawaiian commander—only against sabotage—was not the correct one, Short told the Senate-House committee investigating the attack.

"They didn't," he added tersely. "If we had got the information from the Navy or the War department, it would have been simply a matter of minutes of going into the correct alert immediately."

Quick Switch Made

When the attack did come, Short recalled, the Army switched from the sabotage alert in seven minutes flat.

Short supplied these other arguments in upholding his conduct in the events leading up to December 7, 1941, in his third day of public testimony:

1. "It looked like the War department was more interested in developing radar on the mainland than in Hawaii."

2. General Douglas MacArthur in the Philippines was given "a great deal" of advance information which Washington did not send to him in Hawaii.

3. He felt that General George C. Marshall, chief of staff, would have told him an attack was due on Pearl Harbor if Marshall himself had expected it.

4. If the Navy didn't know in Hawaii of the type of alert he had ordered, it must have been due to "faulty staff work" by Admiral Husband E. Kimmel's officers.

5. To have made the maximum use of the forces he had in Hawaii, "we would have to have had something pointing to (an attack on) Hawaii."

6. He and Admiral Kimmel could have made the principle of Army-Navy cooperation work, but generally, he believes that "unity of command is a much stronger, much safer proposition."

Radar Delayed

Short read into the record a message which he described as an unsolicited telegram from an officer "whom I don't even remember." Signed Major George D. Leask, and dated January 22, 1946, at Waterloo, Iowa, it said:

"On December 10, 1941, I was transferred to Oakland, Calif., as assistant signal officer for the San Francisco Port of Embarkation. Lying on the Oakland pier for a long time were three 100-foot radar towers No. 271. x x x In my opinion if these radar towers had not been delayed on the Oakland docks you could have used them to good advantage December 7, 1941."

Short testified that the War department delayed completing radar installations in the Pacific outpost he commanded while it worked to complete them in New York city, Seattle and San Francisco.

Short said he had three incomplete and non-operating stationary radar stations in Hawaii, plus six mobile units. One of the latter did pick up the approaching Japanese planes but Short testified Lt. (now Lt. Col.) Kermit A. Tyler disregarded the report.

Tyler was in training and inexperienced, Short said.

Rep. Cooper (D-Tenn.) suggested that November 27, 1941, war warning messages of great similarity went to both Short and General MacArthur. The latter, Cooper noted, took such steps as extending his reconnaissance while Short went on an alert only against sabotage.

Short replied that in the Philippines the navy had not taken over the responsibility of reconnaissance, as it had in Hawaii. Also, he said MacArthur had the benefit of knowing what was in secret Japanese messages and further "had been told repeatedly" of the prospect of an attack on the Philippines.

Short Criticized

Cooper said he found it hard to understand how Short as "an officer of 40 years experience" should take only sabotage precautions on the basis of the Nov. 27 message from Marshall.

"I also knew from 40 years experience that if the chief of staff believed there would be an air attack or all-out attack, he would have said so," retorted Short.

The general noted that Washington officers who were denied the knowledge of intercepted Japanese messages left out the possibility of an attack on Pearl Harbor when they prepared situation estimates.

Short said he thought he knew generally about the navy's reconnaissance activities, but Cooper brought from him the statement that he did not know of a Navy decision not to reconnoiter the waters north of Pearl Harbor (whence the attack finally came).

MINIMUM WAGE BILL IS APPROVED BY SENATE GROUP

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24—(AP) President Truman's request for a new minimum wage floor of 65 cents an hour for businesses in interstate commerce won approval from the Senate Labor committee today.

But the group voted to space out succeeding increases to 75 cents in a four-year period instead of three years as the President had asked.

The legislation would amend the present law with its 40 cent minimum. Committee clerks and witnesses said the 65-cent provision would bring pay boosts for 2,000,000 to 4,000,000 workers. The others get more than that now.

Passage Predicted

Senator Pepper (D-Fla.), sponsor of the bill, told reporters he was confident of Senate passage. But Senators Taft (R-Ohio) and Ellender (D-La.), who teamed up in a futile effort to hold the new minimum to 55 cents an hour, predicted a battle.

"There will be many amendments offered, especially on the exemptions under the bill," Taft told a reporter.

In addition to rejecting the lower 55-cent proposals, the committee decided upon these points:

No change will be made in the present exemptions granted Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Maritime workers will be included for the first time under the wage provisions but will be excluded from hour provisions. This will eliminate payment of time and a half for overtime," they receive compensation in another form,

The present exemption for telephone exchanges with 500 lines will be liberalized to exempt those which 1,000 lines.

A time limit of two years will be set for employes to file wage claims against employers. There is no present limitation.

Messengers, such as those employed by the telegraph company, may have a lower minimum wage fixed by the wage and hour administrator.

The original bill called for a 70-cent level after one year and a 75-cent minimum at the end of two years. Senators Smith (R-N.H.) moved to delay these 5-cent increases each for two years and this was accepted by a voice vote.

Bill Altered

The bill first sought to prohibit employment of youths under 18. This was altered to bar messengers under 14, prohibit work during school hours by those 14 to 16 years, and permit lower than the 65-cent minimum.

Pepper said that the maritime workers would include those on inland waterways and coastwise shipping. The committee decided their food and quarters would not be counted as a part of wages.

The committee accepted a provision by Senator Donnell (R-Mo.) which made it clear that wholesale services were exempt when engaged in intrastate commerce. All intrastate retail and service institutions now are exempt.

Unemployment Rises 250,000 For December

U.S. Total Put at 1,950,000; Employed in Nation Are Reported at 51,360,000

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP).—Unemployment in December reached 1,950,000, an increase of more than 250,000 over November, the Commerce Department estimated today. Four months earlier, just before the end of the war with Japan, the level of unemployment stood at 83,000.

The department's estimate of unemployment for December does not include persons not actually looking for work. Thus were excluded all persons idle because of labor disputes, illness, vacations, bad weather, or temporary layoffs with instructions to return to work within thirty days.

Between November and December, the department said, the total number of persons working in non-agricultural industries rose by 860,000—from 43,310,000 to 44,170,000. The slack winter season, however, reduced agricultural employment by 1,250,000 and this was estimated at 7,190,000 in December.

Total employment stood at 51,360,000, a decline of almost 400,000 from the November figure.

HAWAII IS READY TO BECOME STATE, HOUSE GROUP SAYS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 — (AP) A House Territories Sub-committee reported today that "the Territory of Hawaii now meets the necessary requirements for statehood."

The report was submitted to Chairman Peterson (D.-Ga.) of the House Territories committee with the recommendation that the committee "give immediate consideration to legislation to admit Hawaii" as the 49th state.

President Truman in his State of the Union message to Congress Monday urged statehood for the islands.

The sub-committee, headed by Rep. Larcade (D.-La.), returned to Washington only yesterday from two-weeks of hearings on the statehood question at Honolulu and on various other islands in the Hawaiian group.

Closed Session Held

The report was discussed by the full territories committee for more than an hour behind closed doors today. After the meeting, Chairman Peterson told newsmen that no action was taken on the sub-committee's recommendations pending study of a transcript of the hearings.

"The people of the Territory of Hawaii have demonstrated beyond question not only their loyalty and patriotism but also their desire to assume the responsibility of statehood," the report said. It noted that it is the policy of the United States "that peoples be allowed to choose freely their form of political status."

The sub-committee said the mixed racial complexion of Hawaii—Caucasians, Hawaiians, part-Hawaiians, Japanese, Chinese, Koreans, Puerto Ricans and Filipinos—existed at the time Hawaii was annexted to the United States as a territory.

"(It) was not regarded as an obstacle to statehood," the report said.

The sub-committee listed figures showing that the Caucasian population has increased steadily since 1878 and now is 34.4 per cent, while the Japanese population, now 32.5 per cent, reached its peak percentage in 1940 "and has steadily declined since then due to prohibition of immigration, lower birth rate, and the increasing immigration of other peoples."

Republicans Lead Drive for Economy

Fail to Slash Truman's Salary; Actions May Be Reversed in the Senate

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—An economy drive by House Republicans sheared President Truman today of a $5,000,000 emergency fund and a $1,650,000 addition to the White House and stopped just short of cutting his salary.

The action came during passage of a $5,593,262,626 appropriation bill to finance a score of executive and independent agencies for the fiscal year starting July 1.

Representative John Taber, Republican, of New York, proposed an amendment to slash by 10 per cent the salary funds of all the agencies except the Veterans Administration. It failed on a rollcall vote of 175 to 145.

Technicality Raised

Representative Taber told reporters that his intention was to force a reduction in the number of employees. He said his proposal was not aimed particularly at trimming the President's $75,000 a year salary, but acknowledged it would have had that effect.

That would occur, the New Yorker said, despite a constitutional prohibition against changing the salary during the tenure of the occupant of the White House.

While the Constitution forbids such a change, he explained, it does not prevent Congress from refusing to furnish the money, thereby requiring the President to take court action to regain any cut, should he so desire.

The denial to the President of the use of a $5,000,000 balance remaining in his emergency fund was made when Representative Taber raised a technicality. It did not permit a vote.

Mr. Truman had said at his press conference today that a storm aroused by his proposed addition to the White House was just a tempest in a teapot, but the project was blown away only a short time after he had spoken.

No Salary for Mrs. Truman

A Republican effort to provide a $10,000-a-year salary for Mrs. Harry S. Truman, the President's wife, was blocked on a point of order.

Representative James G. Fulton, Republican, of Pennsylvania, who described himself as "her loyal opposition," made the proposal as an amendment. Mrs. Truman's job of maintaining the White House establishment, he said, "is the only case of involuntary servitude in America."

Representative Fulton framed the amendment so that, if adopted, the President could have no say-so whatever on the way Mrs. Truman could spend the $10,000.

Representative Clare E. Hoffman, Republican, of Michigan, told the House, to the accompaniment of laughter, that the amendment had "merit." "Now don't laugh," Representative Hoffman said. "Your wife is your better half."

He added that a President's wife "has to share the abuse that comes to her husband, and has to take some of her own besides."

A Democratic member of the Appropriations Committee raised a point of order against the amendment, on the grounds that it was not an appropriation authorized by law. The chair sustained the objection.

Contempt Move Voted By House Committee

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—The House committee investigating un-American activities voted today to bring contempt charges against a witness who refused to produce records asked by the group.

Chairman Wood (D., Ga.) announced the action against Miss Helen R. Bryan, executive secretary of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee of New York city.

The committee citation will be referred to House Speaker Rayburn (D., Texas). Whether or not the charges are to be pressed is subject to a majority vote of the House.

Ernie Adamson, committee counsel, told newsmen, however, that the Speaker has authority to refer the charges to the district courts himself for further action if no House member demands a vote.

The Next Step

If such action is taken or if the House upholds the committee, the district attorney would then present the facts in the case to a grand jury for a decision on whether or not to indict Miss Bryan.

Wood issued a statement calling the committee vote unanimous by all members present. He added:

"It is the purpose of our committee to determine in this case, once and for all, whether an organization such as the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee has the authority to defy the Congress of the United States, and we propose to vigorously pursue this case to its most rapid conclusion."

Miss Bryan's Statement

Miss Byran issued a counter-statement declaring:

"The Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, a relief organization engaged in helping Spanish Republican refugees opposed to Franco, is not engaged in any propaganda activities and therefore the House committee is without jurisdiction and has no right to examine the financial records of the organization.

"The financial records of the organization or the names of its contributors have nothing to do with any activities of the committee which might be in the province of the American activities committee."

Refused Permission

She told newsmen she attempted to read her statement to the committee but was refused permission.

Meanwhile, Wood notified Corliss Lamont, chairman of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, that the committee would notify him later if he is to appear again February 6 for questioning.

Lamont said Wood informed him the proposed investigation of the latter group "may be dropped."

FUEL OIL PRICE HIKED FOR EAST

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—(AP) Temporary price increases for kerosene and heating oils in the Midwest, and additional increases for fuel oils in the East and Gulf Coast areas, were authorized today by the OPA.

All of the price hikes are effective immediately and may be passed on to householders and other consumers. Granted to relieve shortages of these fuels, they will remain in effect through April 30.

In the Midwest the increase at all sales levels is a half cent a gallon for kerosene, range oil and Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4 heating oils.

Last December 19, OPA authorized increases of half cent a gallon on kerosene, range oil and No. 1 fuel oil, and 2-10 of a cent a gallon on Nos. 2, 3 and 4 heating oils in the East, excepting a small part of West Virginia, Western Pennsylvania and Western New York These increases also applied on Gulf Coast refinery and tanker terminal shipments to the East coast. They did not cover sales for export.

Today's action, while making no change in the temporary increase allowed on kerosene, range oil and No. 1 fuel oil, extends it — along with a 3-10 of a cent additional increase on Nos. 2, 3 and 4 heating oils—to all sales in the East and Gulf Coast districts, including the rest of West Virginia, Western Pennsylvania and Western New York.

OPA said the increases were being allowed as an incentive to refiners to make more kerosene and heating oils and less gasoline.

FEPC FILIBUSTER HIT BY BARKLE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 — (AP) The Senate filibuster stretched into a second week today with Senator Bankhead (D.-Ala.) contending that Japanese and German workers could oust "good American citizens" from their jobs if the Fair Employment Practices Commission bill became law.

The veteran Alabama senator said there had not been a filibuster yet because most of the opposing speeches dealt with the proposed FEPC.

Senator Barkley (D.-Ky.), Democratic majority leader, gave the lawmakers a verbal spanking as the Senate met, describing filibusters as "unjustifiable and indefensible."

The majority leader said he would sign a petition to limit debate—and thus assure a vote. He told the Senate he had received letters threatening him with political defeat if he voted for the bill. Barkley said senders of such threats might as well save their time and money.

Meanwhile supporters of the bill which would set up a commission with broad powers to prevent discrimination in employment because of race, creed, or religion started petitions to invoke the seldom-used rule to limit senate debate.

Senator Chavez (D.-N. M.), floor manager for the FEPC bill, told reporters just after the Senate quit for the night with the opponents still in control that there were 38 signatures on the talk-stopping petition. He added that he knew of "several" more who would sign. It takes two-thirds of those voting, however, to put such a rule in force —64 if the whole Senate takes part.

Truman for Cloture

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP).—President Truman today told reporters that he always voted for cloture to halt filibusters when he was a member of the Senate.

This was his only comment when he was questioned at his news conference about the current filibuster by Southern Senators against legislation to create a permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission.

The Senate majority leader, Senator Alben W. Barkley, Democrat, of Kentucky, condemned filibusters today as "unjustifiable and indefensible" and declared he would sign a petition to shut off the current sustained debate on the bill. He made the statement in the face of a poll conducted by Administration aids which showed that advocates of the bill could not muster the two-thirds majority they would need to end the debate. A petition to end the speechmaking—the parliamentary name for the device is cloture—was being circulated.

Truman Silent On Trustees

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—President Truman told his news conference today that he could say definitely that the national defense necessities of the United States be sacrificed in arranging United Nations postwar trusteeship.

He also said he believed the veto power of the Big Five members of the Security Council will be important in settling the trusteeship question.

The President, however, declined to answer a series of questions on trusteeships which were submitted to him through a secretary by William L. Lawrence, of the New York Times. He commented, without disclosing what the questions were, that he could not answer them now because the subject matter involved required negotiation between the Allies and through the United Nations Organization to accomplish the necessary purposes which the United States has in view.

Asked About Plans

Lawrence later said his written questions essentially were:

1. Whether the United States will submit soon specific proposals for trusteeships over former mandated islands?

2. Whether similar proposals for trusteeships over Japanese-owned islands will be submitted at the same time or subsequently?

3. Does the United States know whether Russia will ask that the Kuriles, flanking southeastern Siberia, be placed under its trusteeship?

Which Will U.S. Hold

4. What islands are to be held by the United States under exclusive trusteeship?

5. How will the trusteeship issue come before Congress for approval? Will the mandated and Japanese-owned islands be covered in a separate treaty or wrapped up into the final, general treaty with Japan?

A sixth question submitted in writing also was repeated by Lawrence orally. This, involving the veto power, was answered affirmatively by Mr. Truman.

Truman Backs Intelligence Service

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP).—President Truman today, termed the new National Foreign Intelligence Service a practical program and said that such a pre-war set-up might have minimized the chances of a Pearl Harbor attack.

He was asked at his news conference whether he thought the intelligence service created this week would have prevented the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor if it had been set up in 1940 or 1941.

Of course, he said, he could not answer that but he said he thought it would have contributed greatly toward ruling out the attack.

Deficit Seen in Surplus Salvage

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP).—Fear that American taxpayers would lose money in the salvage of war surpluses was expressed today by Senator James M. Mead, Democrat, of New York, chairman of the special Senate War Investigating Committee. "We have one hundred billion dollars worth of surplus property all over the world," the Senator said. "I believed that we could salvage from ten to twenty billion dollars of it. Now I am reluctantly coming to the conclusion that this salvage may cost the taxpayers another ten billion. I am afraid we are going to run into a deficit."

Senate Gets Coffee Pact

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP).—President Truman sent today to the Senate for ratification a protocol extending for one year from Oct. 1, 1945, with certain modifications, the Inter-American coffee agreement signed in Washington by the United States and fourteen other American republics on Nov. 28, 1940.

STATE DEPT. FAVORABLE TO KERR AS NEW ENVOY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 — (AP) The State department was reported today to have approved the British government's selection of Sir Archibald Clark Kerr as its next ambassador to the United States.

Officially, the State department had no comment but a person in a position to know, who asked anonymity, said the British Foreign Office had sought the department's reaction to such an appointment and had received a favorable reply.

Clark Kerr is the former British ambassador to Moscow. He recently was named special British representative to Indonesia where he will attempt to straighten out the current difficulties between Indonesian Nationalists and Dutch and British forces.

As ambassador to the United States, he will succeed the Earl of Halifax who is rounding out five years as ambassador here. Halifax is slated to give up his post this spring, probably in May.

ROSENMAN TO QUIT AS TRUMAN'S COUNSEL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24—(AP) Samuel I. Rosenman, special counsel to Presidents Roosevelt and Truman, will retire Feb. 1.

Soon after making this announcement today, Mr. Truman surprised the former New York jurist by pinning on him the medal for merit. The decoration was for "exceptionally meritorious services here and abroad during the war.

Rosenman, who will be 50 years old Feb. 13, was the first to hold the office of special counsel. He will become senior partner of the law firm of Rosenman, Goldmark, Colin and Kaye in New York city.

Rosenman gave up a $25,000 a year judgeship on the New York Supreme court in October, 1943, to take, at the request of the late President Roosevelt, the special counsel job at $12,000.

Prior to that he had assisted Mr. Roosevelt in many ways, especially in preparing data for speeches and in reorganizing government agencies. President Truman prevailed on him to stay after Mr. Roosevelt died last April.

RESIGNATION OF TRACY, LABOR AIDE, ACCEPTED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24—(AP) President Truman today accepted the resignation of Daniel W. Tracy as first assistant secretary of labor, effective tomorrow.

In an exchange of letters made public by the White House, Tracy gave no reason for stepping out. He said he had served in his present post more than five years under Secretaries Perkins and Schwellenbach and told President Truman:

"You have discharged yours duties, x x x with wisdom, courage and decision, to the admiration of all Americans x x x If you hink I can be of service in any emergency you have only to call upon me."

Tracy is a former president of the A.F.L. Electrical Workers Union. The President told him he had been a "pillar of strength" in the Labor Department.

BAY STATER APPOINTED TO RED CROSS POST

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 — (AP) Franklin T. Cleverley of Brewster, Mass., has been appointed American Red Cross commissioner in the Mediterranean theaten National Chairman Basil O'Connor announced today.

Cleverley, deputy commissioner in the theater since June, 1945, succeeds James F. Nields, Jr., of Hardwick, Mass., who resigned Dec. 31 to return to private business.

The new commissioner has been overseas with the Red Cross since July, 1943, first in North Africa and subsequently in Italy. Prior to his Red Cross appointment he was owner-manager of the High Brester hotel. His wife resides in Brewster.

Latin-American Envoys See Braden on Rio Parley

Seek to Avert Its Failure by U. S. Stand on Argentina

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP).—Latin-American ambassadors and Spruille Braden, Assistant Secretary of State, were reported today to have discussed the formulation of a plan to avert any failure of the forthcoming inter-American conference in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

One of the ambassadors said Mr. Braden was informed at a Panamanian embassy party last night that a majority of the American nations would like to go to the conference with some plan of action and if possible with assurances that the United States will sign a projected military defense treaty with Argentina.

The State Department has repeatedly said that it will not sign a treaty of military defense with Argentina as long as its government is controlled by Colonel Juan D. Peron. There has been a growing belief among Latin-American diplomats, however, that the State Department's attitude endangers the success of the Rio conference.

Luis Luti, Charge d'Affairs of the Argentine Embassy, was at the party, and was seen talking with Mr. Braden afterward.

Navy to Test Atom Bombs in May On 97 Ships at Marshalls Atoll

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 — (AP) Ships of the United States Navy's guinea pig fleet already are westbound in the Pacific for a test to determine what the atomic bomb has done to sea power.

This became known today as Vice Admiral W. H. P. Blandy announced detailed plans for a three-phase test of the world's most destructive weapon against this nation's traditional "first line of defense."

The target fleet of 97 vessels—not all of them yet en route—will include some famous veterans of American naval action as well as a sampling of the navies of Germany and Japan. With supporting ships for observation, supply and transportation, these vessels will constitute "Joint Task Force One," an operation in which the Army, the Army Air Forces and the Manhattan Project (the military custodians of the atomic bomb) will participate.

It will, Blandy told the Senate's atomic energy investigating committee, be designated by the code word "crossroads." That word, Blandy commented, was selected for two reasons: for reasons of brevity in communications and with an eye "to its possible significance."

Blandy did not elaborate on this latter comment, but his listeners concluded that he had in mind the arrival of traditional armament at the historical crossroads created by the advent of the atomic bomb.

Chairman McMahon (D.-Conn.) of the Senate committee, told newsmen after the admiral's testimony that "the entire security council" of the United Nations Organization ought to witness the test.

He said he would consult with the State department about inviting those and other foreign representatives.

Here are some of the facts disclosed by Blandy and others connected with the forthcoming tests:

1—The target fleet will include four American battleships, including the veterans Nevada and Pennsylvania; two heavy cruisers; two aircraft carriers, the old Saratoga and the modern Independence; 16 destroyers; five submarines; the Japanese battleship Nagato and light cruiser Sakawa, and the German heavy cruiser Prinz Eugen.

2—The first test, scheduled for early May, will be an atomic burst several hundred feet above target ships; a second test, tentatively scheduled for July 1, will be a surface level explosion among assembled ships; the third, which cannot be made this year, will be a deep water test in the open sea.

3—Site of the initial tests will be Bikini Atoll, in the Marshall group, with the aiming point a lagoon about 30 fathoms deep, 27 miles long and about 15 miles wide.

4—The gigantic experiment—estimates of the cost vary widely but include mention of $100,000,000—will be conducted by two groups, the task force of naval and military personnel and an "evaluation board" of scientists charged with handing down an impartial appraisal of results.

5—The mission is "primarily to determine the effects of the atomic bomb upon naval vessels in order to gain information of value to the national defense. The ultimate results of the tests so far as the Navy is concerned will be their translation into terms of U. S. sea power. x x x It is a test and not a contest." (The words are Blandy's.)

6—The experiments will determine atomic bomb effects not only on naval craft but army equipment as well. It is planned to mount tanks, artillery and other army equipment on the decks of some of the test ships so that results may be observed. Blandy explained that it would be impracticable to drop the bomb close enough inshore in the atoll to get results if the army equipment was stationed ashore.

To Protect Area

The fleet of about 50 supporting vessels will include patrol craft to guard against persons, ships or aircraft straying into danger areas. Of particular concern will be air and water "contaminated" with radio-activity. Blandy said the general flow of air and water in the area of the atoll is westward.

Blandy estimated the "contaminated cloud," (presumably the vapor, smoke and dust from the bomb explosion which, at least at the moment of explosion, has a deadly radioactive burden) will drift over Eniwetok, one of the major Marshall Islands 170 miles to the west, in a matter of a few hours. Water from the area would reach the shores of Eniwetok "in a matter of days or weeks."

In the second test with the bomb exploded at ocean level, Blandy said scientists believe one effect will be creation of a wave 100 feet high. The ringing atoll rocks, however, presumably will dampen the effect of this wave as it starts to spread seaward.

Committeemen asked the admiral if it was planned to use animals on some of the ships located on the outer perimeter of the testing area and which are not designated for immediate destruction. He replied that was under consideration "but we hope to get all the results from instruments."

Type Announced

The bomb used will be the "Nagasaki type" bomb, Blandy said in answer to another question. The bomb used on Nagasaki, second of the two dropped on Japanese targets, reputedly was considerably more powerful and efficient than the initial explosive used at Hiroshima.

While Blandy did not go into details regarding instruments, it is known that military officials and scientists are particularly interested in the effect of pressure waves, heat and extent of the blast area of bombs used at sea. The heat itself is described as one of the prime features of the bombs, some scientists estimating that at the core of the explosion heat of as much as 100,000,000 degrees Fahrenheit is developed. (Some steels melt at between 2,000 and 3,000 degrees.)

Brigadier General D. H. Blakelock, U. S. A., assistant chief of staff for logistics.

Sea Power Is Criterion

The mission of Joint Task Force 1 is primarily to determine the efforts of the atomic bomb upon naval vessels in order to gain information of valve to the national defense. The ultimate results of the tests so far as the Navy is concerned will be their translation into terms of United States sea power.

Secondary purposes are to afford training for Army Air Forces personnel in attack with the atomic bomb against ships and to determine the effect of the atomic bomb upon military installations and equipment.

The Army Air Forces, in addition to making the actual air drop, will participate actively in the operation, with regard to air transport, collection of data, observation of results and test of air force equipment. An Army Air Forces general officer, Major General W. E. Kepner, has been designated as deputy task force commander for aviation.

The Army Ground Forces will be given opportunity to test equipment, both on the target ships and ashore. A general officer of the Army Ground Forces, Major General A. C. McAuliffe, has been appointed special adviser to the task force commander for this purpose.

Total strength of personnel of the Joint Task Force will reach an aggregate of about 20,000, the naval crews of the operating and target ships constituting the majority.

First Test in May

The schedule of target dates for this operation, which will be known by the code word "CROSSROADS," now calls for the first test to be accomplished early in May, over target ships

Statement on Bomb Tests

From the Herald Tribune Bureau

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The complete text of Vice-Admiral W. H. P. Blandy's statement to a Senate committee on the forthcoming atomic-bomb tests:

This statement is to describe the atomic-bomb tests against naval vessels to be held this spring in the Pacific. One of the most important problems in connection with these tests will be the maintenance of proper balance between public information and security. It is our hope to make available to science and to the public all appropriate information derived from this historic test.

By direction of the joint chiefs of staff and with the approval of the President, the Army and Navy and qualified civilian scientists have been joined for this purpose to form a unit which is now known as Joint Task Force 1, of which I have been named the commander. It is desired to emphasize the fact that this is a joint effort in every sense of the word. My staff includes:

Major General W. E. Kepner, deputy for aviation.

Rear Admiral W. S. Parsons, U. S. N., deputy for technical direction.

Major General A. C. McAuliffe, ground forces adviser.

Dr. R. A. Sawyer, of the Manhattan District, technical director.

Captain J. A. Snackenberg, U. S. N., chief of staff.

Captain R. Brodie, U. S. N., assistant chief of staff for personnel.

Brigadier General T. J. Betts.

30.24-545

at an altitude of several hundred feet. The second test is tentatively scheduled for July 1, and will be a burst at the surface of the water among target ships.

Site of the test will be Bikini Atoll in the Marshall group. A complete description of this site and the problems in preparing for its use is now available. A list of ships to be used in the test is also available.

It will be noted that it contains German and Japanese ships as well as surplus United States naval vessels. The total number of target ships is ninety-seven and the total operating ships in the force will number about fifty.

The target ships will be anchored and placed in a manner calculated to give effects varying from probable destruction to negligible damage among the various ships of each type. Some of the landing ships and boats will be beached. The target ships will, of course, be unmanned.

Observers will include representatives from the United States military services, members of Congress, press and United States civilian scientific groups.

The question of inviting representatives of foreign nations and foreign news services is under discussion by the joint chiefs of staff and the Secretaries of State, War and Navy.

Role of Scientists

The staff of the deputy task force commander for technical direction, Rear Admiral W. S. Parsons, who reports also to Major General Leslie R. Groves, U. S. A., of the Manhattan District, will include officers and civilian scientists experienced with the atomic bomb. In this regard Dr. N. E. Bradbury, of the Los Alamos Laboratory, is primarily concerned with the bomb itself and Colonel Stafford Warren, of the Manhattan District, is organizing radiological measurements and prescribing safety factors. So far as the tight schedule permits, use will be made of all modern scientific techniques and equipment to observe, measure and record the effects of the bomb. For example, "drone" (unmanned, radio-controlled) aircraft will be used to obtain close-up recordings of radio-activity; automatic motion-picture cameras will record the explosions visually from ingenious heavily shielded shelters on the island ring which surrounds the anchorage.

Adequate measures will be taken to insure the safety of the personnel engaged in the test, the observers, the inhabitants of near-by islands and chance travelers by sea or air.

Repair and salvage facilities will be provided to effect repairs to target ships after the first test, to make seaworthy such targets as are to be returned to the United States after the second test and to destroy such as would be hazards to navigation.

This undertaking is not a combined or international operation, but rather a scientific experiment by the United States government alone.

Furthermore, it is a test and not a contest. A test contemplated for a later period is a deep-water test in the open sea. The technical difficulties in conducting such a test will not permit its accomplishment in 1946.

Details On Major Ships In Test

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—Here are details on the major ships chosen for the atomic-bomb test at sea:

	Tonnage	Length (feet)	Wartime Crew

New York	27.000	573	1.530
Nevada	29.000	583	2.100
Nagato (Japanese)	32.720	700	2.333
Pennsylvania	33.100	608	2.390
HEAVY CRUISERS
Pensacola and Salt Lake City	9.100	585	1.200+

AIRCRAFT CARRIERS
Saratoga	33.000	909	2.500+
Independence	11.000	610	1.400

In addition, the 6,000-ton Japanese light cruiser Sakawa will be a target, along with these other United States Fleet units:

DESTROYERS — Mayrant, Trippe, Stack, Rhind, Bagley, Helm, Ralph Talbot, Mugford, Lamson, Flusser, Conyngham, Smith, Anderson, Mustin, Wainwright and Hughes.

SUBMARINES — Skipjack, Tuna, Parche, Dentuda and Searaven.

After releasing the list of combatant vessels, the Navy said a change had been made and that eight submarines, instead of five, would be in the target group, but that it could not immediately name the three additional.

Site For Atom Test Long Way From Anywhere

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—Bikini atoll, the site picked for the atomic-bomb test on naval vessels, is a long way from almost anywhere.

It lies 170 miles from the Marshall Islands of Eniwetok and Kwajalein, which most people never heard of until they became scenes of battle in the Pacific campaign against the Japanese.

Its distances from better known places include Guam, 1,573 miles; Honolulu, 2,096; San Francisco, 4,150; Truk, 1,060; Yokohama, 2,442.

The coral atoll is 21½ miles long and consists of more than a score of tiny islands. The native dwellers number only 161. The Navy announcement of the bomb test said "adequate measures" would be taken to insure their safety.

The atoll lagoons average about twenty fathoms. The best anchorage, near the main island of Bikini is 1,400 yards from the beach and 11 fathoms deep.

TONS OF FISH EXPECTED TO DIE IN ATOMIC TEST

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24—(AP) "good many tons" of fish will undoubtedly be killed in the atom bomb tests at Bikini atoll, but the great commercial fishing grounds of the Pacific are not expected to be affected.

This was the forecast today of experts of the Fish and Wildlife service which will participate in research accompanying the historic bomb blasts.

Dr. Ira N. Gabrielson, director of the service, declared:

"It's our belief that there are no major fisheries close enough to the Bikini atoll to be disturbed to any serious degree."

Plan for World Atom Control To Be Sought at Rollins College

WINTER PARK, Fla., Jan. 24 (AP).—Leading American statesmen, scientists and representatives of business, labor and education will be guests of Rollins College the week of March 11 at a conference on world government and control of atomic energy, Dr. Hamilton Holt, president of the college, announced tonight.

Supreme Court Associate Justice William O. Douglas and five Senators—Claude Pepper, Democrat, of Florida; Joseph H. Ball, Republican, of Minnesota; Charles W. Tobey, Republican, of New Hampshire; J. W. Fulbright, Democrat, of Arkansas and Carl Hatch, Democrat, of New Mexico—have accepted invitations to attend.

Scientists who will attend include Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, of the California Institute of Technology, who was in charge of operations at Los Alamos, N. M., when the first atomic bomb was exploded; Dr. S. K. Allison, director of the Institute of Nuclear Studies of the University of Chicago; Dr. Harold Urey, of the University of Chicago; Dr. Lee A. Dubridge, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Dr. I. I. Rabi, of Columbia University, and Dr. Henry D. Smyth, of Princeton University.

Others include Lieutenant General James H. Doolittle, Owen D. Young, former chairman of the board of General Electric; Charles G. Bolte, president of the American Veterans Committee; Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; Rabbi Louis L. Mann, of Chicago, and Raymond Swing, radio news analyst.

The conference has been underwritten by R. T. Miller jr., of Winter Park and Scottsville, N. Y., formerly head of the American School and the American Technical Society, of Chicago.

In making the announcement of the conference, Dr. Holt said that it would aim to agree upon and recommend development of a world government strong enough to assume effective control of the atomic bomb and super-weapons of the present and future.

GI's To Return On Schedule

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—An army staff officer told the Senate War Investigating Committee today that all demobilization schedules for soldiers in the Pacific will be met by return of some 500,000 GI's before July 1.

"General MacArthur has concurred fully and assured that General Eisenhower's demobilization plans will be carried out," Col. Russell F. Eakers, of the War Department personnel staff, told senators.

Shipping Developments

The demobilization promise came as the special Senate committee resumed an inquiry into idle shipping in the Pacific. The public hearing brought these developments:

1. A report that more than 60 ships, idle in the Pacific since V-J day and loaded in part with building materials and construction equipment, have been directed to return to this country.

2. An estimate by Chairman Mead (D., N.Y.) that taxpayers may lose some $10,000,000,000 in salvage of war surpluses.

3. Reports that the 189 "idle merchant ships" reported to the investigating group on December 12 had been reduced to 67 ships on January 8.

4. Testimony that there now are in the Pacific sufficient troop-carrying ships to bring home all the veterans eligible in January and February for release.

Plan Backed

Gen. Eisenhower's call for 250,000 new draftees by July 1 won a conditional indorsement on Capitol Hill.

The special Senate investigators of the demoblization tempest reported that prospective selectees, plus volunteers, could insure the 1,500,000-man army which Eisenhower insists is essential to carry out commitments after mid-year.

The Army chief of staff emphasized when he testified before the inquiry that only if the lagging draft "is able to provide the 50,000 men per month we are asking for will the 1,500,000-man army be guaranteed under our present discharge policy."

More Recruits Seen

The Senate Military subcommittee recommended continuing "the rate of demobilization of the past few months." It also was of the opinion that the current recruiting drive would produce more volunteers than army estimates, thereby reducing the number of draftees required.

The report filed by the subcommittee yesterday advocated the discharge of all fathers in the Army by July 1, except volunteers—something Eisenhower testified could not be done.

The preliminary approval of the plan for bringing the Army up to postwar strength with increased draft levies in the ensuing five months evidently did not take into account strong sentiment in Congress to let Selective Service die when the present law expires May 15.

Discharges "Earned"

The subcommitee agreed with thousands of soldiers and their families that long-service men "have earned an early discharge and that it should be forthcoming without delay."

The unanimous report, signed by Senators Johnson, Briggs (D., Mo.), and Revercomb (R., W.Va.) quoted verbatim Eisenhower's promises last week that men with 45 points or 30 months' service would be released or be in the process by April 30, followed by men with 40 points or two years' service by June 30.

Both dates, the senators said, are the "absolute deadline," so that thousands of these men must be released ahead of time.

The subcommittee was named by Chairman Elbert Thomas (D., Utah) of the Senate Military Committee and its report was sent to him for consideration by the full military committee.

NAVY DISCHARGE PROGRAM PASSES HALF-WAY MARK

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 — (AP) The Navy passed the half-way mark in its demobilization today with discharge of its 1,500,000th Naval Reservist.

He was Eugene Lowell Smith, fire controlman second class, of Watsonville, Calif. He entered the Navy Dec. 14, 1942, at the age of 17 and won 11 Pacific battle stars. He was discharged at the Shoemaker, Calif., Separation Center.

Congratulations and wish for "Good Sailing" were broadcast to Smith over the Associated Broadcasting System by Vice-Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, chief of naval personnel.

Denfeld addressed "Mr." Smith as "symbol and representative of more than 3,000,000 citizen-sailors of America who did the grandest job with the greatest fleet in the most terrible war in the history of the world."

Navy Is Proud

"The Navy is proud of that figure, 1,500,000. It means that we have kept our word, and even bettered it a little," Denfield said. "That, in the face of difficulties, we will remain ahead of our demobilization schedule has given us a lot of satisfaction, and I believe the Navy will complete the job on time."

The Navy is scheduled to pass the two-thirds mark in demobilization by April 2.

Marine headquarters announced that Navy ships would bring 5,005 marines to West Coast ports from the Pacific between now and Feb. 13. They will arrive aboard 24 ships from embarkation points in China, Japan and Pacific Island outposts

U.S. Seeks Ship Deal With Britain On GI's

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—The United States has offered Britain the use of eleven Liberty ships as a substitute for the arrangement under which American troops are ferried home aboard the Queen Mary at a tentative charge of $100 each.

Government officials said the offer has not yet been accepted.

Presumably the British are weighing the need for troop carriers for their own Tommies and colonials against that of reaching a settlement which would supplement their dollar credit in this country.

Bill Now $11,419,600

Since the end of lend-lease September 2, the Queen Mary has brought home 84,804 American troops. The Queen Elizabeth, before being withdrawn from the United States run, carried 29,392.

together—unless the present charge is reduced or the American offer of the Liberty ships is accepted—the total charge to this country would be $11,419,600.

While lend-lease was still in effect, the British bore the cost of transporting GI's aboard the two "Queens" as part of reverse lend lease.

Subject To Revision

Technically, a fee of £25, or about $100, was assessed against this Government for each man. This, however, was wiped out at the time of the final lend-lease settlement and no cash changed hands.

When lend-lease ended, the same charge was retained. But Government officials said today that this, too, is subject to revision when the job of bringing the troops home has been completed.

As compared with the tentative charge, the price of a one-way, third-class trans-Atlantic passage aboard one of the Queens before the war was about $86. Third-class accommodations then, however, would be regarded as luxurious in comparison with the tier-on-tier arrangement now in effect.

U.S. Pays For Most Food

In addition, this Government bears the greater part of the cost of food eaten by the homeward-bound troops.

However, the Queens must make the homeward voyage traveling light because there are few paying passengers and little cargo.

In reaching the figure eleven Liberty ships as a substitute for a cash settlement, this Government figured in both their tonnage and the carrying capacity of the Queens. It also argued that the smaller ships would prove more economical for the British in picking up their scattered contingents.

Ownership of the Libertys would remain with this country.

Under the plan, the Queen Mary would continue to return American troops just as it has been doing. The Queen Elizabeth has not been in the troop redeployment run for some time now.

U. S. CHALKS HOOD UP TO PRINZ EUGEN

Boston, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—The Navy has disclosed that the German cruiser Prinz Eugen and not the pocket battleship Bismarck, as generally supposed, sunk the 41,100-ton British battle cruiser Hood midway between Greenland and Iceland in 1941.

A history of the 19,553-ton Prinz Eugen, furnished by the Navy, giving statistics of the German vessel and an account of her career, said:

"The Prinz Eugen placed a direct shot on the Hood, blowing up her magazines and thus sinking her in one of the major losses of the British sea forces."

The cruiser, largest German man-of-war afloat, came into Boston yesterday as a United States prize, with the Stars and Stripes flying at her stern and an

Order Stopping Work on Ships To Be Reviewed

Naval Committee of House Protests Plan to Scrap 22 Craft and Lay Up 15

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (AP).—E. T. Cummings, special assistant to Reconversion Director John W. Snyder, agreed today to review and reconsider an order canceling work on thirty-seven naval vessels.

The House Naval Affairs Committee protested that the order was "false economy" which would result in complete waste of huge investments already made.

Chairman Carl Vinson, Democrat, of Georgia, argued that it would be much more economical to complete those ships on which heavy investments had been made and add them to the fleet to replace obsolescent craft.

Mr. Cummings agreed that at least in some cases the order appeared uneconomical, and told the committee he would be "very glad" to restudy the entire program and report back to the committee next Wednesday.

Of the thirty-seven ships on which work was canceled, plans call for scrapping twenty-two and retaining fifteen in an "as is" status. A total of $94,319,372 has been obligated on the twenty-two designated for scrapping, and scrapping would cost another $24,264,040 for a total loss of $113,583,412. The cost of completing the twenty-two ships was set at $127,137,695.

Navy Developed War Jackets of Plastic Armor

Assault Troops Would Have Worn Them in Storming Japan; Glass-Cloth Used

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP).—The Navy revealed tonight that plastic body armor made of laminated glass-cloth was ready for combat use by Navy and marine assault troops poised before the war's end to storm Japan.

Experiments had shown the armor to be effective against bullets and fragments.

While these glass-cloth combat jackets for ground troops got no further in wart time than a preliminary test on Okinawa, the Navy said, laminated nylon flak suits were put into use by Navy and marine airmen for protection from heavy anti-aircraft fire over the Japanese home islands before the surrender.

Material Called Doron

The jackets of glass-cloth, called doron, were described as lighter, more pliable and more comfortable than steel, although the Navy acknowledged they "at present have the disadvantage of being bulky."

The weight of the nylon flak suits for airmen was given as slightly more than eighteen pounds, against twenty-eight to thirty-two pounds for the Hatfield suits of manganese steel, which got use in both World Wars.

The Naval Research Laboratory saying it is continuing experiments to keep abreast of future improvements in plastics, expressed belief that "advances in modern warfare will increase the need for fragment armor protection for both civilians and military personnel."

The laboratory's plastic armor research program was started in December, 1940, after its director, Rear Admiral Harold G. Bowen, saw a picture of Henry Ford hacking with an ax at a plastic automobile fender.

Commercial Scientists Helped

Commercial scientists co-operated with the laboratory in developing the plastic body armor. The experiments were supported by the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics and the Quartermaster Corps of the Army, which the Navy said had developed steel flak suits.

To "popularize the merits" of the glass-cloth armor, two officers of the Navy Bureau of Medicine and Surgery staged a spectacular demonstration in a shack near the Navy Medical Center at Bethesda, Md.

Lieutenant Commander Andrew Paul Webster, of Washington, D. C., fired a .45-caliber automatic pistol from a few yards' distance at his friend, Lieutenant Commander Edward Lyman Corey, of Charlottesville, Va., who wore a specially designed jacket in which plastic armor plates were inserted.

The bullet blunted itself against the plastic and fell harmlessly into Lieutenant Corey's hand, the Navy reported.

SPAATZ TO HEAD ARMY AIR FORCES

Appointment to Succeed Gen. Arnold Announced by Truman.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24. — (AP) The appointment of Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, 54, to be chief of the Army Air Forces, succeeding 59-year-old Gen. Henry H. (Hap) Arnold, was announced today by President Truman.

The changeover will become effective when Arnold, now on a tour in South America, returns to this country.

Spaatz, a native of Boyertown, Pa., has had a varied career in Army aviation since 1915, the year after he was graduated from West Point.

He was commander of all American strategic bombing in Europe during 1944 and 1945, and after Germany's downfall, commanded the strategic bombing forces in the Pacific.

Spaatz received the Robert J. Collier trophy last December for the outstanding contribution to aviation by an American.

Arnold, in ill health recently, has headed the Army's Air Force for more than seven years. Born at Gladwyn, Pa., he has been a flyer since 1911. He directed air corps administration in the First World War.

Previously the AFF announced cessation of activities at Dow Field, Bangor, Me.

CALLS LEND-LEASE DISASTROUS GIFT

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 24 (A. P.).—Farmer-author Louis Bromfield, sorrowing that "America's real wealth is gone," says lend-lease was the "biggest, most generous and disastrous contribution ever made by any nation to war in the history of the world."

"We shall be paying for it generations hence," he told the Pennsylvania Aberdeen-Angus Breeders' Association's banquet last night, a feature of the three-day State farm show here.

Debts of money can be paid off "easily enough under inflation," he said, "but nothing can restore to this nation the real wealth which gives value to that money"

—ore, oil, forests and labor of man.

He declared that when America's "real wealth is gone we shall become a third-or-fourth-rate nation," and emphasized that "we have been destroying our real wealth as rapidly as possible," to the point where many of our n tural resources "are exhausted or on the rapid way to exhaustion."

"Personally," said the doctor, "I would like to vote for any Hindu that has the welfare of the Indian people at large at heart. And I want the support of the Hindu when I seek to improve the standards of my country."

"India has asked for independence," said Dr. Hamied. "But first she must have internal unity and purpose. If this voting restriction were removed, I believe that a large degree of unity — excepting those minor skirmishes that always will exist where there are so many millions of people with so many millions of individual ideas—can be approached."

British Voting Restrictions Blamed for Disunity in India

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 — (AP) A requisite for political unity in India is abolishment of the British-imposed restriction which prevents Moslems and Hindus from voting for each other in a general election, says Dr. K. A. Hamied, a Moslem member of the Indian Legislative council.

Dr. Hamied, now concluding a visit to the United States as leader of a group of Indian chemists on a mission to study new American methods of research and manufacturing, said in an interview that this election restriction, established as part of the election laws of 1909, serves "to keep India divided as a government."

The scientist, president of the Indian Chemical Manufacturers' association, termed as false the impression that Moslems and Hindus "cannot get along together." As evidence, he said that although the majority of members in his association were Hindus "they unanimously named me, a Moslem, to be their president."

Regarding Indian politics, Dr. Hamied said 'n'o true representation of the wishes of the Indian people can be realized as long as Moslems must vote only for Moslems and Hindus only for Hindus."

He cited an example: "a Hindu wants to be elected. He knows he cannot by law have support from

THE HAGUE, JAN 24-(AP)-MAX VAN POLL, CATHOLIC PARTY MEMBER OF THE NETHERLANDS PARLIAMENT, SAID TODAY THAT HUBERTUS J. VAN MOOK, NOW EN ROUTE TO BATAVIA WITH THE LATEST DUTCH PROPOSALS FOR SETTLEMENT OF THE VEXING INDONESIAN PROBLEM, IS WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO MAKE ANY BINDING COMMITMENTS ON BEHALF OF HIS GOVERNMENT.

THE RESULTS OF TALKS WHICH VAN MOOK, ACTING GOVERNOR GENERAL OF THE EAST INDIES, EXPECTS TO HAVE WITH INDONESIAN NATIONALIST LEADERS MUST BE SUBMITTED TO THE NETHERLANDS PARLIAMENT FOR FINAL APPROVAL, VAN POLL DECLARED IN AN INTERVIEW.

VAN POLL, WHOSE MOTION TO SEND A PARLIAMENTARY COMMISSION TO JAVA WAS ACCEPTED BY THE PARLIAMENT LAST WEEK, DECLINED TO DISCUSS A RUSSIAN MOVE TO HAVE THE WHOLE INDONESIAN QUESTION BROUGHT BEFORE THE UNITED NATIONS ORGANIZATION. THE MATTER, HE SAID, IS A QUESTION THAT CONCERNS ONLY THE KINGDOM OF THE NETHERLANDS---A FACT WHICH, HE ASSERTED, ALREADY HAS BEEN RECOGNIZED BY BOTH BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES.

THE AMERICAN MEMBER OF THE TEAM, COL.DAVID H.FORD, SAID IN A RADIO REPORT TO HEADQUARTERS HERE THAT "RELATIONS WERE CORDIAL" AFTER A MEETING BETWEEN COMMUNIST AND NATIONAL GENERALS.

ANOTHER TEAM SENT TO TATUNG, IMPORTANT NORTH SHANSI RAIL AND MINING CENTER, REPORTED FIGHTING HAD CEASED OVER A RADIUS OF 70 MILES. THERE HAD BEEN REPEATED REPORTS THAT TATUNG WAS ENCIRCLED AND BESIEGED BY COMMUNISTS, BUT THE TRUCE TEAM'S REPORT DID NOT CONFIRM THIS.

OTHER FIELD REPORTS SAID "FIGHTING HAS DECREASED" IN THE VICINITY OF LIENYUN (HSUCHOW) IN KIANGSU PROVINCE, WHERE BOTH SIDES HAVE CALLED ATTENTION TO INCIDENTS ALONG THE LUNGHAI RAILROAD AND EXTENDING UP AND DOWN THE TIENTSIN-PUKOW RAILWAY WHICH CROSSES THE LUNGHAI LINE.

TOKYO,JAN.24-(AP)-A FAMILY GOVERNMENT WITH CONTROL OVER THE PERSONAL LIVES AND FORTUNES OF DOZENS OF PEOPLE HELD TOGETHER THE INDUSTRIAL HOUSE OF MITSUI DURING MOST OF ITS NEARLY THREE CENTURIES OF ECONOMIC POWER.

ITS REGULATIONS, AS UNCOMPROMISING AS THOSE GOVERNING JAPAN'S IMPERIAL FAMILY, ARE UNDER SCRUTINY OF GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS AS A RESULT OF A RECENT DIRECTIVE ORDERING ADDITIONAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE ZAIBATSU, OR BIG FAMILY MONOPOLIS.

MITSUI'S 11 FAMILIES LIVED AND EXPANDED UNDER THE MOST ELABORATE RULES OF THE ZAIBATSU. BUT OTHER HOUSES ALSO GOVERNED THEMSELVES WITH SIMILAR DETAILED CHARTERS AND THROUGH THEM MAINTAINED A DOMESTIC DISCIPLINE WHICH INSURED PERPETUATION OF THEIR CONTROL OVER VAST INDUSTRIAL INTERESTS.

WASTRELS, FOR INSTANCE, WERE PLACED UNDER AN OVERSEER WHO CONTROLLED THE INDIVIDUALS' PROPERTY AND SUPERVISED HIS PERSONAL CONDUCT.

SUCH DECISIONS WERE MADE BY A "HOUSEHOLD COUNCIL," A SORT OF CENTRAL GOVERNMENT COMPOSED OF ALL THE FAMILIES' MALE MEMBERS, EXCEPT MINORS AND THOSE RETIRED.

THE COUNCIL MET AT LEAST ONCE A MONTH, VOTED UNDER SPECIFIC REGULATIONS AND MAINTAINED AN OFFICE FOR CLEARANCE OF HOUSE BUSINESS. THE LATTER WAS FINANCED BY MEMBER FAMILIES FROM THEIR SHARE OF THE PROCEEDS OF THE MITSUI HOLDING COMPANY.

THE COUNCIL'S DECISION WAS REQUIRED ON SUCH MATTERS AS MARRIAGE, DIVORCE, ADOPTION AND SUCCESSION. IT DECIDED THE BUDGET FOR EXPENDITURES BY EACH MEMBER OF THE HOUSE.

THE CURRENT MITSUI RULES, REVISED IN 1900 FROM AN EARLIER CHARTER, SO TIGHTLY GOVERN ALL FAMILY MEMBERS THAT THEY CONTROL LITTLE MORE THAN THEIR PERSONAL PROPERTY.

THE RULES DESIGNATED BY NAME SIX FAMILIES WITHIN THE HOUSE. THEY SPECIFICALLY DETAILED THE SHARE OF MITSUI HOLDING COMPANY PROFITS

WHICH WOULD BE [illegible] TO EACH CATEGORY, REGARDLESS OF THE INDIVIDUAL FAMILY'S INVESTM[illegible].

FAMILY CONTR[illegible] OVER THE BUSINESS WAS GUARANTEED BY SEVERAL CLAUSES. MEMBERS WERE REQ[illegible]ED TO ENGAGE IN BUSINESS OF MITSUI HOLDING COMP- ANY OR AFFILIATES[illegible] IF THE CONTROLLING GENERAL STOCKHOLDERS SO DEMAND- ED. THE COUNCIL [illegible]S REQUIRED TO APPROVE ALL FAMILY APPLICATIONS TO BEGIN NEW ENTE[illegible]RISES OR INVEST IN BUSINESS OUTSIDE THE INDUST- RIAL EMPIRE. THE [illegible]HARTER PROVIDED

TO BEGIN NEW ENTERPRISES OR INVEST IN BUSINESS OUTSIDE THE INDUST- RIAL EMPIRE. THE CHARTER PROVIDED FOE EARMARKING A CERTAIN SHARE OF PROFITS AS A RESERVE FUND FOR EMERGENCIES.

THE COUNCIL WAS EMPOWERED TO STRIP AN INDIVIDUAL MEMBER OF ALL OF HIS PROPERTY AND ASSETS FOR VIOLATING THE RULES OR IF "HIS CONDUCT IS A SUBJECT OF REPROACH OR IF HE COMMITS SUCH ACTS AS TO DAMAGE THE DIGNITY OF THE HOUSE."

A VERDICT IS EXPECTED TOMORROW FROM THE WAR CRIMES COMMISSION. HIRATE IS SPECIFICALLY CHARGED WITH RESPONSIBILITY IN THE DEATHS OF SUTTLE AND THREE OTHER PRISONERS OF WAR.

A COMMISSION MEMBER, COL.WILLIAM B.YANCEY OF HARRISONBURG,VA., ASKED THE SOFT-SPOKEN FORMER LIBRARIAN "IN VIEW OF THE FACT YOU IGNORED THE ILL PRISONER'S FIRST PLEA FOR MEDICAL ATTENTION, DO YOU FEEL YOU CONTRIBUTED IN ANY WAY TO HIS UNTIMELY DEATH?"

YESTERDAY HE TESTIFIED HE HAD IGNORED SUTTLE'S FIRST PLEA FOR A DOCTOR BUT GRANTED A SECOND REQUEST THE NEXT DAY. THE BRITISH PRISONER DIED OF PNEUMONIA.

EARLIER TODAY HIRATE DENIED THAT HE HAD ORDERED THE BEATING OF TWO DUTCH PRISONERS OF WAR WHO DIED AT MURORAN.

QUESTIONED CONCERNING THE DEATHS OF SGT.J.PELLENCAU OF SOER- ABAJA,JAVA, AND SGT.VAN DAALEN MEYER OF DJAMBOELAAN, BATAVIA, HE CONSULTED HIS PERSONAL RECORDS AND ADMITTED HE HAD ORDERED PELLEN- CAU CONFINED TO THE GUARD HOUSE FOR ONE DAY'S MAJOR IMPRISONMENT FOR STEALING NOOD FROM A WAREHOUSE. PELLENCAS DIED THE NEXT DAY, MARCH 7, 1943. HIRATE SAID HE COULD NOT REMEMBER DETAILS OF THE CASE WHEN ASKED IF IT WERE NOT STRANGE THAT THE PRISONER WAS WELL WHEN HE ENTERED, YET DIED WITHIN A DAY.

HE DENIED HE HAD GIVEN A MEDICAL SERGEANT ORDERS TO BEAT MEYER ON APRIL 4, 1943, BUT ADMITTED ONE OR TWO CASES OF PRISONER BEATINGS INVOLVING A SGT.MAJOR ARAKI.

MONTEVIDEO, JAN. 24-(AP)-THE FOREIGN OFFICE MADE PUBLIC TODAY THE UNITED STATES' FORMAL REPLY TO A URUGUAYAN PLAN PROPOSING MULTILATERAL INTERVENTION SHOULD A WESTERN HEMISPHERE NATION DENY ITS PEOPLE ESSENTIAL RIGHTS OR FAIL TO FULFILL ITS INTERNATIONAL OBLIGATIONS.

THE NOTE REAFFIRMED WASHINGTON'S ADHERENCE TO THE PROPOSAL IN PRINCIPLE BUT SUGGESTED FURTHER STUDY SO THAT ADEQUATE SAFEGUARDS COULD BE SETUP TO PREVENT ITS ABUSE.

THE UNITED STATES SAID THE SAFEGUARDS MIGHT TAKE THE FORM OF (1) SPECIAL REQUIREMENTS ON THE PART OF AMERICAN NATIONS BEFORE THEY COULD INITIATE DISCUSSIONS OF INTERVENTION IN A SISTER NATION; (2) A SPECIFIC NUMBER OF AFFIRMATIVE VOTES BEFORE ANY INTERVENTION COULD BE APPROVED; (3) OR LIMITATIONS ON THE FORM OR TYPE OF SANCTIONS.

THE PLAN WAS ADVANCED SOME TIME AGO BY URUGUAYAN FOREIGN MINISTER EDUARDO RODRIGUEZ LARRETA. AT THE TIME SECRETARY OF STATE JAMES F.BYRNES ANNOUNCED THE UNITED STATES' "UNQUALIFIED ADHERENCE," DECLARING THAT IF THE AMERICAN REPUBLICS WERE TO PRESERVE THE PEACE THEY "CANNOT PERMIT OPPRESSIVE REGIMES TO EXIST IN THEIR MIDST."

TODAY'S NOTE REAFFIRMED ADHERENCE BUT AT THE SAME TIME SAID "THERE IS NOTHING IN THE FOREIGN POLICY OF THE UNITED STATES MORE FIRMLY ESTABLISHED THAN THE DOCTRINE OF NON-INTERVENTION BY ONE STATE IN THE INTERNAL OR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS OF ANOTHER. IT IS VITAL TO GOOD NEIGHBOR POLICY."

THE NOTE SAID THE GOVERNMENTS OF THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE WOULD DO WELL TO CONSIDER THAT THERE EXISTS A PARALLEL BETWEEN DEMOCRACY AND PEACE AND THAT "VIOLATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS BY ANY GOVERNMENT OF FORCE IS CONSEQUENTLY A MATTER OF COMMON INTEREST THAT PROPERLY CAN BE MADE MATERIAL FOR CONSULTATION OF DISCUSSION AMONG ALL THE GOVERNMENTS."

BY SUCH DISCUSSIONS, THE REPLY SAID, PUBLIC OPINION WILL BE FOCUSED ON THE EVILS WHICH EXPERIENCE HAS DEMONSTRATED CAN CAUSE INTERNATIONAL CONFLICTS.

NEW YORK, JAN.24-(AP)-LIFE MAGAZINE SAYS FORMER PRIME MINISTER WINSTON CHURCHILL IN A SECRET SPEECH TO COMMONS ON APRIL 23, 1942, SAID "I HAVE ALWAYS HOPED FOR THE ENTRY OF THE UNITED STATES (IN THE WAR) XXX ALTHOUGH THE IDEAL WAS TO HAVE AMERICA IN WHILE JAPAN REMAINED OUT."
THE MAGAZINE IN A COPYRIGHTED ARTICLE ALSO QUOTED CHURCHILL AS SAYING IN THE 10,000-WORD TALK THAT:
THE AXIS HAD SUNK OR DAMAGED MORE THAN ONE-THIRD OF BRITAIN'S CAPITAL SHIPS IN ONE SEVEN-WEEK PERIOD.
NO INVESTIGATION SHOULD BE MADE OF THE SINGAPORE DEBACLE BECAUSE IT WOULD "HAMPER THE PROSECUTION OF THE WAR."
HE WAS SURPRISED AT THE STRENGTH OF THE JAPANESE FORCES.
SINGAPORE, WITH A FORCE OF 100,000 MEN, SURRENDERED TO 30,000 JAPANESE.
PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT HAD TOLD HIM "I FEEL BETTER ABOUT THE WAR THAN AT ANYTIME IN THE PAST TWO YEARS."
LIFE SAID THE FULL TEXT OF THE HITHERTO UNREVEALED, SECRET DOCUMENT HAD BEEN RELEASED FOR PUBLICATION TO THE MAGAZINE BY CHURCHILL.
THE BRITISH LEADER IN HIS RESUME OF THE PERILOUS STATE OF ALLIED ARMS IN THE DARK DAYS AFTER PEARL HARBOR, AS PUBLISHED BY LIFE, SAID, IN PART:
"WE HAVE BEEN AND ARE AT PRESENT OUTNUMBERED BY THE SEA, LAND AND AIR FORCES OF JAPAN THROUGHOUT THE FAR EASTERN THEATER.
"THE HOUSE MUST FACE THE SITUATION SQUARELY. NOT ONLY HAVE WE FAILED TO STEM THE ADVANCE OF THE NEW ENEMY, BUT WE HAVE HAD TO WEAKEN SERIOUSLY THE HOPEFUL OPERATIONS WE WERE CARRYING ON AGAINST THE OLD.
"THE VALIANT AND HITHERTO SUCCESSFUL RESISTANCE OF RUSSIA HAS ALONE RENDERED THESE HIGHLY DANGEROUS DIVERSIONS (OF MEN AND MATERIEL TO THE FAR EAST) POSSIBLE WITHOUT DISASTROUS CONSEQUENCES SO FAR."
CHURCHILL THEN TOLD COMMONS:
"ON THE EARLY MORNING OF DEC.19 (1941) HALF A DOZEN ITALIANS IN UNUSUAL DIVING SUITS WERE CAPTURED FLOUNDERING IN THE HARBOR OF ALEXANDRIA. FOUR HOURS LATER EXPLOSIONS OCCURRED ON THE BOTTOMS OF THE VALIANT AND QUEEN ELIZABETH, (BATTLESHIP) PRODUCED BY LIMPET BOMBS FIXED WITH EXTRAORDINARY COURAGE AND INGENUITY, THE EFFECT OF WHICH WAS TO BLOW LARGE HOLES IN THE BOTTOMS OF BOTH SHIPS AND TO FLOOD SEVERAL COMPARTMENTS.

A32
"THUS WE HAD NO LONGER ANY BATTLE SQUADRON IN THE MEDITERRANEAN."
DISCUSSING THE ITALIAN FLEET, CHURCHILL SAID "ACCORDING TO PRE-WAR NOTIONS AND INDEED ALL THE PAPER CALCULATIONS THERE WAS NO REASON WHY A LARGE GERMAN AND ITALIAN ARMY SHOULD NOT HAVE BEEN FERRIED ACROSS TO INVADE NOT MERELY LIBYA OR PALESTINE OR SYRIA, BUT EGYPT, ITSELF."
CHURCHILL READ AN ADMIRALTY DOCUMENT, PERTAINING TO THE SUCCESSFUL CHANNEL AND DOVER STRAITS DASH OF THE GERMAN CRUISERS SCHARNHORST AND GNEISENAU, WHICH 10 DAYS BEFORE THE VENTURE SURMISED THE MOVE.
ONLY EIGHT DESTROYERS WERE AVAILABLE TO ATTACK THE CRUISERS, CHURCHILL SAID, BECAUSE "THE REST OF OUR FLOTILLAS WERE, AND ARE, OUT ON THE APPROACHES FROM THE ATLANTIC CONVOYING FOOD AND MUNITIONS FROM THE U.S. WITHOUT WHICH WE CANNOT LIVE."

REPORTING ON THE FALL OF SINGAPORE, CHURCHILL SAID:
"AFTER A LONG REAR-GUARD ACTION DOWN THE MALAY PENINSULA, THERE WERE ABOUT 100,000 MEN GATHERED IN THE ISLAND OF SINGAPORE BY THE MORNING OF FEB.3, (1942).
"ON THE NIGHT OF FEB.8 ABOUT 5,000 JAPANESE MADE A LODGMENT AND WERE GRADUALLY REINFORCED UNTIL PERHAPS 30,000 MEN HAD BEEN LANDED. AFTER FIVE OR SIX DAYS OF CONFUSED BUT NOT VERY SEVERE FIGHTING THE ARMY AND FORTRESS SURRENDERED."
THE PRIME MINISTER SAID HE DID NOT "SEE THAT THE JAPANESE WOULD GET GREAT ADVANTAGES BY INVADING AUSTRALIA IN FORCE" BUT ADDED THAT THEY HAD THE ABILITY "TO INVADE AND OVERRUN A LARGE PART OF INDIA, TO TAKE CALCUTTA AND MADRAS."
CHURCHILL, IN DISCUSSING JAPANESE STRATEGY, SAID "IT WOULD SEEM THAT THEIR BEST PLAN WOULD BE TO PUSH RIGHT AHEAD NORTHWARD FROM BURMA INTO CHINA AND TRY TO FINISH UP CHINESE RESISTANCE."
OF THE IMPENDING NAZI OFFENSIVE AGAINST RUSSIA, THE PRIME MINISTER SAID, "WE DO NOT KNOW WHAT RESERVES THE RUSSIANS HAVE GATHERED. EVERYBODY HAS ALWAYS UNDERRATED THE RUSSIANS. THEY KEEP THEIR OWN SECRETS ALIKE FROM FRIEND AND FOE." HE ADDED:
"WHILE THE GERMAN ARMIES WILL BE BLEEDING COPIOUSLY UPON A 2,000-MILE FRONT IN THE EAST WE SHALL BE ON THEIR BACKS IN THE GERMAN HOMELAND. THE BRITISH BOMBING OFFENSIVE UPON GERMANY HAS BEGUN."
THEN, CHURCHILL SAID THAT WHEN HE VISITED THE UNITED STATES IN DECEMBER, 1941, "I PROPOSED TO THE PRESIDENT THE PREPARATION OF A COMBINED BRITISH AND AMERICAN INVASION OF GERMAN-OCCUPIED EUROPE.
"WE HAD EXPECTED TO FIND THE U.S.ATTENTION CONCENTRATED UPON THE WAR WITH JAPAN, AND WE PREPARED OURSELVES TO ARGUE THAT THE DEFEAT OF JAPAN WOULD NOT SPELL THE DEFEAT OF HITLER.
"WE WERE RELIEVED TO FIND THAT THESE SIMPLE BUT CLASSICAL CONCEPTIONS OF WAR, (THE BRITISH PLAN THAT GERMANY SHOULD BE DEFEATED FIRST) ALTHOUGH VEHEMENTLY OPPOSED BY THE POWERFUL ISOLATIONIST FACTION, WERE EARNESTLY AND SPONTANEOUSLY SHARED BY THE GOVERNMENT AND DOMINANT FORCES IN THE UNITED STATES."

30.24-561

HE CONTINUED: "IT WILL NO DOUBT BECOME COMMON KNOWLEDGE THAT THE LIBERATION OF THE CONTINENT BY EQUAL NUMBERS OF BRITISH AND AMERICAN TROOPS IS THE MAIN WAR PLAN OF OUR TWO NATIONS."

CHURCHILL THEN READ A PORTION OF A MESSAGE WHICH HE SAID HE JUST HAD RECEIVED FROM PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT SAYING:

"I AM DELIGHTED WITH THE AGREEMENT WHICH WAS REACHED BETWEEN YOU AND YOUR MILITARY ADVISERS AND (GEN.GEORGE C. MARSHALL AND (HARRY) HOPKINS. THEY HAVE REPORTED TO ME OF THE UNANIMITY OF OPINION RELATIVE TO THE PROPOSAL WHICH THEY CARRIED WITH THEM AND I APPRECIATE EVER SO MUCH YOUR PERSONAL MESSAGE CONFIRMING THIS.

"I BELIEVE THAT THIS MOVE WILL BE VERY DISHEARTENING TO HITLER AND MAY WELL BE THE WEDGE BY WHICH HIS DOWNFALL WILL BE ACCOMPLISHED. I AM HEARTENED AT THE PROSPECT AND YOU CAN BE SURE THAT OUR ARMY WILL APPROACH THE MATTER WITH GREAT ENTHUSIASM AND VIGOR.

"WHILE OUR MUTUAL DIFFICULTIES ARE MANY I AM FRANK TO SAY THAT I FEEL BETTER ABOUT THE WAR THAN AT ANY TIME IN THE PAST TWO YEARS."

HIS COMMENT WAS CABLED FROM LONDON IN RESPONSE TO A MESSAGE FROM KENT COOPER, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS, SUGGESTING CLARIFICATION OF THE UNITED STATES POSITION ON A PROPOSAL FOR EARLY ACTION TOWARD CALLING AN INTERNATIONAL PRESS CONFERENCE TO INSURE WORLD FREEDOM IN THE HANDLING OF THE NEWS.

UNO'S 14-MEMBER GENERAL STEERING COMMITTEE DECIDED CONSIDERATION SHOULD BE DEFERRED WHEN PEDRO LOPEZ, PHILIPPINES DELEGATE, ORIGINALLY PRESENTED THE SUBJECT IN LONDON. LOPEZ TOOK HIS FIGHT TO THE FLOOR JAN.14, BUT WITHDREW THE REQUEST FOR IMMEDIATE ACTION AFTER VANDENBERG EXPRESSING THE GREATEST SYMPATHY WITH THE FREE PRESS PROPOSAL, ANNOUNCED THE AMERICAN DELEGATION SUPPORTED THE COMMITTEE RULING.

"THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY IS SEEKING TO ELIMINATE ALL SUBSTANTIVE MATTERS FROM THE AGENDA FOR THIS INITIAL SESSION BECAUSE IT WANTS TO GET ITS MACHINERY IN GEAR BEFORE ATTEMPTING TO PUT IT TO WORK," VANDENBERG SAID IN HIS LATER COMMENT.

"THIS IS, IN MY OPINION, THE ONLY REASON WHY A WORLD FREE PRESS RESOLUTION WAS REJECTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE AT THE PRESENT SESSION.

"SUCH A RESOLUTION SHOULD BE PRESSED TO A CONCLUSION AT THE SECOND SESSION OF THIS ASSEMBLY TWO OR THREE MONTHS HENCE. I AM SURE OF THE UNANIMOUS ATTITUDE OF THE AMERICAN DELEGATION UPON THIS SCORE. IT WAS THE REASON FOR MY VIGOROUS STATEMENT TO THIS END ON THE FLOOR OF THE ASSEMBLY WHEN THE GENERAL COMMITTEE MADE ITS REPORT."

IN HIS SPEECH AT THE TIME, THE SENATOR TOLD UNO DELEGATES:

"INTERNATIONAL KNOWLEDGE WILL DISARM INTERNATIONAL SUSPICION. THE END OF SUSPICION WILL BE THE BEGINNING OF MUTUAL CONFIDENCE. MUTUAL CONFIDENCE IS THE CORNERSTONE OF PEACE X X X

A11

"THE TOWN MEETING OF THE WORLD (UNO) WILL NEVER PERMANENTLY TURN A DEAF EAR TO ANY PLEA FOR THE FREEST POSSIBLE EXPRESSION OF HUMAN ASPIRATIONS AND NO TOWN MEETING OF THE WORLD WILL EVER PERMANENTLY DENY THE VITAL IMPORTANCE OF PROMOTING WORLD-WIDE FREEDOM FOR THE EXCHANGE OF NEWS AND VIEWS. IT IS INHERENT IN THE CHARACTER OF OUR DEDICATION. IT IS INHERENT IN THE SPIRIT OF THE WORLD'S TOWN MEETING WHICH WE ASSERT OURSELVES TO BE.

"THE UNITED STATES DELEGATION AGREES WITH THE DECISION OF THE GENERAL COMMITTEE TO PUT THIS AND OTHER SUBSTANTIVE SUBJECTS FORWARD TO FUTURE AGENDAS BECAUSE WE AGREE THAT OUR IMPERATIVE TASK AT THIS FIRST SESSION OF THE FIRST ASSEMBLY SHOULD BE CLOSELY CONFINED TO THE BUSINESS OF SETTING UP OUR MACHINERY, PUTTING IT IN GEAR AND GIVING IT A CHANCE TO GET IN RUNNING ORDER BEFORE WE ATTEMPT ITS SUBSTANTIVE USE.

"BUT WE WOULD NOT AGREE THAT ANY SUCH POSTPONEMENT REGISTERS ANY LACK OF TOTAL SYMPATHY WITH THE OBJECTIVE BROUGHT TO US BY THE PHILIPPINE DELEGATION UPON THIS OCCASION, OR THAT WE INTEND TO NEGLECT THIS VITAL SUBJECT AT THE EARLIEST OPPORTUNITY WHEN IT MAY BE APPROPRIATELY EXPLORED. OUR PERSISTENTLY FAITHFUL MOTTO MUST BE: 'LET THERE BE LIGHT.'"

UNO ISSUES ORDER FOR GLOBAL ARMY TO KEEP PEACE

Security Council Also Agrees to Consider Political Disputes Monday.

MILITARY MEETING SET

Gathering of Staff Chiefs Scheduled Before February 2

J. Daly 15

LONDON, Jan. 25—(AP) The United Nations Security Council today ordered formation of a Global "peace army" and agreed to consider on Monday Iranian, Greek and Indonesian military and political issues described as imperiling peace.

Russia which earlier in a note to the council had declared that Iranian charges of Soviet interference in Iran's affairs were "without foundation," reserved the right to oppose anything more than a formal hearing of Iran's case. The note declared that pending questions could best be settled by two-way negotiations, and that the council should not intervene.

Militarists to Meet

In a 60-minute session, the council scheduled an organization meeting of its military chiefs of staff before Feb. 2, and set next Monday for tackling the issues raised concerning Iran, Greece and Indonesia.

The decision to give quick attention to these matters came on a motion by Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., American member of the 11-nation council who declared "any country in the United Nations with a complaint has a right to be heard at this table."

British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, drawing attention to the case of Greece, said he was "so tired of these charges by the Soviet Union in private" about British actions in that country that he was glad to have the situation aired promptly.

The council adopted an Egyptian proposal that Iran, the Ukraine and Greece, who are not members of the council, be invited to attend the Monday session. Thus those three nations will be given a chance to express views on controversies in which they are directly concerned. It was the Soviet Ukraine that filed the Indonesian complaint. The Netherlands, from whom the Indonesians are seeking independence, is a member of the council.

During the discussions on the council's peace army, Soviet delegate Andrei Vishinsky said bad weather between Moscow and London might prevent Soviet members of the military staff from arriving in time for the first meeting of the UNO's high command, and Bevin replied with a chuckle, "The United Kingdom will do its best to dispel the fog by Feb. 1.

Vishinsky said he hoped so because there was more fog in London than in Moscow, and Bevin replied "yes, political and non-political."

Soviet Reply Filed

Vishinsky filed the surprise Soviet reply to the Iranian charges barely two hours before the council met. At the council session he demanded and received assurances from President N. J. O. Makin of Australia that the decision to discuss the Iranian case would not affect adversely Russia's argument that the situation is an internal one outside the council's province.

Makin said that at the next council meeting the Soviet Union could take whatever position it wished. The discussion presumably would be preliminary to a decision by the council as to whether it should investigate formally the three situations or take any action on them.

Bevin said "it would be a mistake to have any power, great or small feel they cannot come to this council and state their case."

He said he would offer no objection to the "fullest discussion" on Greece, but said the Indonesian case was a matter concerning The Netherlands government.

"The problem in Indonesia is a question of disarming the Japanese and it must be argued by the government primarily responsible," he added.

At this point Dutch Foreign Minister Eelco Van Kleffens said his government had no objection to the council's discussing the Indonesian question.

The result of the council action, according to a British interpretation, was that it leaves the way open for Russia to propose on Monday that the security council should not go into the question for the reasons stated in the Soviet note. This presumably would open a debate.

The American view, also tentative, was that by placing the case on the agenda and agreeing to invite Iran to the meeting, the council has given Iran an opportunity to elaborate her protests. Then Russia could make a counterstatement and at this point Vishinsky could move that the council throw out the case.

Agreement Reached

There was agreement among the leading nations that a majority of seven votes would be required for approval of such a move. Russia may vote but in this ballot, under procedural rules, here veto power would not apply.

The Iranian delegate and foreign minister, Nasrulla Entezam, declared in an interview that his country had a "complete answer" to the Soviet note filed with the council.

He said his government suggested some time ago that Former Premier Hakimi and his foreign minister should go to Moscow "to get the situation threshed out, but nothing came of the offer."

The council agreed also to discuss Monday a Yugoslav proposal for admitting Albania into the United Nations.

Five main points were made in the Soviet note to the council. They were, in brief:

1. The Iranian government failed to prove last November the same charges made before the council, and had expressed satisfaction with arrangements with Russia, so that the facts "bear witness quite convincingly to the incorrectness and groundlessness" of the Iranian charges.

2. Contrary to the Iranian account, negotiations actually were carried out between the two states last November.

3. The presence of Russian troops in Northern Iran is covered properly by treaties with Iran and with Britain, and the troops are not responsible for the Azerbaijan revolt.

Propaganda Grows

4. Propaganda hostile to Russia is growing stronger in Iran, and political power of certain groups in Iran creates a danger of hostile action for Azerbaijan and Baku, but these questions should be settled by direct negotiation.

5. The Soviet-Iran situation does not come within provisions of the UNO charter as a situation threatening international friction, and Russia is "categorically opposed" to council consideration of the case.

The military chiefs of staff, in their organization meeting scheduled for before Feb. 2, will start work on agreements in which United Nations members are to make land, sea and air forces available to the security council for enforcing security orders. The size of each nation's contribution has not been fixed.

Greek, Indonesian Issues Also Will Be Considered

J. Hightower

London, Jan. 25 (AP)—The United Nations Security Council formally agreed today to discuss the tense military-political situations in Iran, Greece and Indonesia at its next meeting.

The council thus disregarded a request from Soviet Russia that it decline to take up the dispute over Iran.

The next meeting will be held Monday.

Military Group Will Meet

The eleven-member council, proceeding to put the new world peace organization in working order, took steps to gets its military staff committee functioning. The council ordered military representatives of the principal powers to hold their first meeting here by February 1, when work will be started on the special agreements by which nations are to pledge land, sea and air forces to enforce Security Council orders when necessary.

The action to take up the situation in Iran, Greece and Indonesia came two hours after Russia had registered categoric opposition to discussion of the Iran complaint that the Red Army has been interfering in Iran's internal affairs.

The chief Soviet delegate, Vice Commissar of Foreign Affairs Andrei Vishinsky, filed a letter with the Council president, N. J. O. Makin, of Australia, setting forth a five-point reply to the Iranian charge. He declared Iran's complaints were groundless and incorrect and said the channels of direct negotiation between the two countries were open.

Lists Five Points

Vishinsky's note offered five main points to bear out his contention that the Security Council should refuse to entertain the Iranian appeal. These were:

1. The Iranian Government failed to substantiate its charges made last November in a complaint to the Soviet Union. This complaint was the same as that presented to the Council. The Soviet "categorically refuted" the Iranian charges in its reply of November 26. The note said that the Iranian Government, in another message December 1, "expressed its satisfaction" that Soviet officials were not interfering in Iran's internal affairs.

2. "Equally in contradiction with reality" is the statement of the Iranian delegation that efforts to negotiate were fruitless. The Soviet answer said Iran not only attempted to negotiate with Russia, but did.

Troops' Presence "Legitimate"

3. The presence of Soviet troops on Iranian soil is legitimate, as Iran gave permission in the Soviet-Iranian treaty of February 29, 1921, and the Soviet-British-Iranian treaties of 1942. Events in Azerbaijan have no connection with the presence of Soviet troops there. These events are a demonstration of the population for national autonomy.

4. Propaganda hostile to the Soviet Union is growing stronger in Iran and does not differ from Fascist propaganda. "Anti-democratic and pogrom activity" by reactionary forces, influential ruling classes and police authorities in Iran create for Azerbaijan and Beku "a danger of organized hostile action" which "cannot be tolerated." However, the Soviet Union believes such questions can and should be settled by direct negotiations.

5. International peace and security are not threatened and the Iranian appeal, therefore, is without grounds.

Lebanon Will Make Protest

As the council members opened the historic meeting, they learned that they might have another knotty problem handed to them even before they finish their first major tests.

The Government of the tiny republic of Lebanon said last night that it had ordered its United Nations delegation to present to the council Lebanon's demand for immediate withdrawal of British and French troops from her soil.

At the same time some delegates foresaw the possibility that Egypt might present still another case to the Council.

Ministers May Resign

Egypt, which has been demanding evacuation of British troops stationed there, was in the midst of a Cabinet crisis, with three Ministers threatening to resign, asserting that Foreign Minister Abdel Hamid Badawin Pasha had declared he would not ask the UNO to intervene.

Prime Minister Mahmoud Fahmy Nokrashi Pasha disclosed in Cairo last night that he had telephoned the Foreign Minister, Egypt's chief UNO delegate, in an effort to resolve the crisis. He did not disclose what he told the Foreign Minister and Badawin Pasha could not be reached for comment.

Charge Would Involve France

The filing of charges by Lebanon would involve a third of the five permanent members of the Security Council—France—in disputes to be heard by the peace agency.

Soviet Russia became the first of the major powers to be involved when the Iranians charged that Soviet troops in Iran's Azerbaijan province were jeopardizing peace by interfering in the country's internal affairs.

Two days later the Russians filed cases against Great Britain, charging that the maintenance of British troops in Greece and Indonesia endangered world security.

The announcement of the Lebanese Government, projecting the months-old Levantine turmoil into a new phase, reflected sharp dissatisfaction with the Anglo-French military agreement of December 13, 1945.

Provided For Troops

The pact pledged both powers to withdraw from Lebanon's sister state of Syria but to keep some forces in Lebanon itself until the United Nations were ready to guarantee the region's security.

The two states, which before the World War I comprised a province of Turkey-in-Asia, were mandated to France by the League of Nations. France proclaimed them independent in 1942 but retained her garrisons and kept some economic advantages. Some French nationals remained in key governmental and industrial posts.

Levantine protests culminated in rioting and armed clashes last spring. The British intervened, saying that the area's stability was essential to the Allied war effort.

Soviet Statement on Iran

LONDON, Jan. 25 (AP).—The complete text of the Soviet statement on the Iranian government's charges of Soviet interference in the Iranian Province of Azerbaijan:

Soviet Delegation,
13, Kensington Palace Gardens,
January 24

Dear Mr. Makin:

[N. J. O. Makin, president of the Security Council.]

The delegation of the Soviet Union, acting in behalf of the Soviet government, considers it necessary, in connection with the appeal of the Iranian delegation addressed to the Security Council, to make the following statement:

Point 1. The allegation of the Iranian delegation of interference by the Soviet Union through its officials and through the armed forces in the internal affairs of Iran is in contradiction with the reality and lacks any foundation.

In this particular case, the Iranian delegation repeats the statement made by the Iranian government to the Soviet government in November, 1945.

This statement, however, was categorically refuted by the Soviet Embassy in Iran in its note of Nov. 26. It should be noted also that in its reply of Dec. 1, 1945, the Iranian government not only failed to disprove the facts referred to in the Soviet note of Nov. 26, but also expressed, as is stated in the above mentioned Iranian note, "its' satisfaction in connection with the fact, which was confimed by the contents of the reply note of the embassy, that the interference of the Soviet officials in the internal affairs of Iran in northern regions is not in accordance with the facts."

Moreover, in the same note the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Iran "expressed its satisfaction at the fact that, as has been pointed out, the Soviet officials fully respect the tripartite agreement and the declaration of the leaders of the three great powers and allies with Iran, signed and published in Tehran."

These facts bear witness quite convincingly to the incorrectness and groundlessness of the statement of the Iranian delegation regarding the alleged interference on the part of the Soviet Union in the internal affairs of Iran.

Point 2. Equally in contradiction with reality is the statement of the Iranian delegation concerning the fact that the Iranian government has attempted to initiate negotiations of the above mentioned question with the Soviet government which were fruitless.

The above-mentioned facts refute this statement of the Iranian delegation, because the Iranian government not only attempted to negotiate but actually did negotiate with the Soviet government on the question, as can be seen from the Iranian note of Dec. 1 referred to above.

Point 3. The Soviet delegation considers it necessary to point out that the Iranian government is trying to use the presence of foreign troops in Iran in order to represent this fact as a violation of Iranian sovereignty and as a cause of the events which are taking place in Iranian Azerbaijan.

As a matter of fact, the presence of Soviet troops on the territory of Iran is quite legitimate, in so far as such a right was granted to the Soviet government by the Soviet-Iranian treaty of Feb. 26, 1921, and the Soviet-British-Iranian treaties of 1942.

The events in Iranian Azerbaijan have no connection with the presence of Soviet troops, and this is confirmed by indisputable and quite objective facts. These events are of an exclusively Iranian and internal nature. As is known, what is happening in northern Iran is a demonstration of the population of northern Iran for national autonomy within the limits of the Iranian state and of achievement of the wishes of the local population, which is nothing unusual for democratic countries.

Point 4. At the same time, the Soviet delegation cannot fail to draw attention to the fact that propaganda hostile to the Soviet Union is growing stronger in Iran and is far from being discouraged by the Iranian government. This propaganda does not differ in any sense from the Fascist propaganda which was instigated against the Soviet Union at the time of Reza Shah.

Anti-democratic and pogrom activity on the part of reactionary forces in Iran, hostile to the Soviet Union, which is quoted by certain influential Iranian groups drawn from the ruling classes and the police authorities, creates for Azerbaijan and for Baku [oil-producing center and chief city of the Azerbaijan Soviet Republic] a danger of organized hostile action, diversions and so forth. Such a situation cannot be tolerated.

However, the Soviet government thinks that such questions which affect the relations between two neighboring states, the U. S. S. R. and Iran, can and should be settled by means of bilateral negotiations between the Soviet government and the Iranian government. The Soviet government did not and does not refuse to accept this method of settling such disputes arising between neighbors.

Point 5. In view of these facts, and taking also into consideration that in this particular case the conditions envisaged by Articles 34 and 35 of the charter of the United Nations Organization are not present, the Soviet delegation regards the appeal of the Iranian delegation to the Security Council as lacking grounds, and is categorically opposed to the consideration of the mentioned appeal of the Iranian delegation by the Security Council.

A. VISHINSKY,
Chief of the Soviet delegation, to the United Nations Assembly.

ALBANIA FILES APPLICATION FOR UNO MEMBERSHIP

LONDON, Jan. 25 — (AP) The first application to the United Nations Organization for membership since its organization was made today by Albania, and brought to the front the question of when will new members in the world peace agency be considered?

Sweden, Switzerland, Iceland and Portugal have expressed interest in the UNO, Sweden and Switzerland particularly. They have not applied formally for membership, however, and most countries have indicated they prefer to proceed slowly rather than risk a refusal.

Deep Interest Shown

Some of these nations are following the UNO's first assembly session closely, from the visitors' gallery as well as through press reports.

A particularly arresting position is that of Switzerland, determined to guard her traditional neutrality and yet join in the greater effort toward international cooperation.

Swiss Minister to London Paul J. Reugger said that Switzerland wanted to keep her 'traditional status synchronized with international law."

Whether she would accept UNO membership without recognition of that status, Reugger said, was "for the Swiss people to decide," since the final decision would be by popular vote.

A Swedish spokesman said his country was "in no hurry to join because she wants "things to develop quite naturally."

"No nation can afford to receive a refusal from the UNO on an application," he declared.

Portugal Waiting

Speaking for Portugal, an embassy representative asserted his country would wait for more definite indication of neutral countries' status.

A spokesman for Iceland said his country has not had a personal observer at the meetings, but had followed all reports.

"We do not expect applications to be accepted at this session," he explained. "But at the earliest possible date, when we are assured there will be no objections, we will send in our application."

UNO delegates have said that any application from Generalissimo Francisco Franco's Spain would be looked upon with disfavor.

As for the former enemy "satellite" nations, including Italy, Finland, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria and Austria, only one—Italy—has so far angled for membership. But Italy, too, has adopted a policy of waiting.

BRITAIN TO GIVE GREECE BIG LOAN, CANCEL WAR DEBT

LONDON, Jan. 25.—(AP) Britain announced today she would try to help war-impoverished Greece back on her economic feet by lending her $40,000,000 without interest, cancelling her war debt and selling her clothes clothing and farm equipment.

In return, the announcement said, Greece will establish a new foreign exchange rate and eliminate her budget deficit by raising taxes and cutting non-productive expenditures.

Greek Premier Themistokles Sophoulis, expressing gratitude for "this new token of sympathy and friendship," announced in Athens that the now greatly inflated drachma would be stabilized at the rate of 5,000 to the dollar and 20,000 to the pound sterling.

The financial agreement was disclosed in an exchange of letters between British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Vice Premier Emmanuel Tsouderos of Greece.

In agreeing to cancel Greece's $180,000,000 war debt to Britain and to sell her $2,000,000 worth of clothes and agriculture tools, Britain called upon Greece to stabilize wages in line with the new exchange rate, and to set up price control for rationed materials. It was stipulated also that Greece negotiate with the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration an agreement "for increasing the price of UNRRA goods and reducing the number of indigents who receive free rations."

The British loan, which must be approved by Parliament, is to be granted in the form of credit deposited in the Bank of England along with $60,000,000 supplied by Greece toward a $100,000,000 Greek currency stabilization fund. Repayment of the loan, in 10 annual installments, is to begin July 1, 1951.

The agreement requires that a committee authorized to manage Greece's currency be formed, consisting of the Greek ministers of coordination and finance and American and British representatives.

Answering a question in Parliament, Bevin said the agreement did not stipulate that Greece spend her borrowed funds in Britain, but added, "if they have to spend sterling, I don't know where else they can spend it."

Greece Getting $40,000,000 British Loan

London, Jan. 25 (AP)—Great Britain will lend Greece £10,000,000 ($40,000,000) without interest to help stabilize skyrocketing Greek currency and assist the nation in restoring production, Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin announced today.

This loan, together with the cancellation of Greece's £45,000,000 ($180,000,000) war debt to Britain, was announced in a letter from Bevin to Emmanuel Tsouderos, Greek Vice Premier, closing two months of negotiations.

Clothing And Farm Aid

The British Government also will sell at cost to the Greeks £500,000 ($2,000,000) worth of clothing and agricultural implements, "in spite of the acute shortage in the United Kingdom," it was announced.

The program specifies that "on the invitation of the Greek Government" British advisers will be appointed to work under and be responsible to certain Greek Ministers.

Two-Year Limit Set

The letter said the assistance "should be of a temporary nature and should not extend over more than 18 months or, by agreement between the two governments, two years."

The Greek Government will make an "early announcement of a new foreign exchange rate and formulate a program for eliminating a budget deficit through increased taxation and non-productive expenditures," the letter said.

Greece To Stabilize Wages

In addition, Greece is called upon to stabilize wages, establish price controls for rationed items and "work out an agreement with UNRRA plans for increasing the price of UNRRA goods and reducing the number of indigents who receive free rations."

Repayment Plan

The British loan, which is subject to approval by Parliament, would be deposited in the Bank of England, together with £15,000,000 ($60,000,000) to be contributed by Greece to the currency-stabilization fund.

The loan is to be repaid in ten annual installments starting July 1, 1951.

Tsouderos, in a letter replying to Bevin's, called the agreement typical of the "friendly understanding which the Brittish have always shown to their Greek ally," thanked the United States for her participation in drafting the loan agreement and welcomed the proposed appointment of an American to the newly established monetary commission.

Will Stabilize Drachma.

Athens, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—Premier Themistocles Sophoulis said today the inflated Greek drachma would be stabilized at 5,000 to the dollar and 20,000 to the pound.

A plan to create a stabilization fund was announced after Britain agreed to loan Greece $40,000,000 without interest.

In black market operations, the drachma recently has plunged as low as 180,000 to the gold sovereign ($8.24), compared with the legal rate of 4,000.

Sophoulis said the British grant was made "despite all difficulties in an effort to assist the rehabilitation of Greece" and expressed the "gratitude of the Greek people for this new token of sympathy and friendship."

BRITISH NAME NEW ENVOY TO UNITED STATES

Halifax Successor May 1 To Be Lord Archibald Clark Kerr

London, Jan. 25 (AP)—Lord Archibald Clark Kerr will become the British Ambassador in Washington May 1, succeeding the Earl of Halifax, the Foreign Office announced tonight. Lord Archibald now is British Ambassador to the Soviet Union.

The announcement said Halifax, 64, who has represented Britain in the United States since 1941, had "asked leave to resign his appointment." Expected generally to retire when the war ended, he is understood to have stayed on to aid in the recent negotiations for the $4,400,000,000 loan to Britain from the United States.

A Career Diplomat

Lord Archibald, 63-year-old native of Scotland, is a career diplomat with 40 years of service in world capitals, and was made a baron by King George VI a few days ago. He has not yet assumed a title. He is now en route to Java on special assignment to assist in negotiations of the Dutch-Indonesian dispute.

The square-set Lord Archibald has been popular in Moscow's official circles, where he is regarded as a favorite of Premier Stalin. Stalin often smokes a London-made pipe given him by the British envoy.

British Jews Urge Open Palestine

London, Jan. 25 (AP)—Prof. Selig Brodetsky, president of the Board of Deputies of British Jews, told an American-British investigating committee today that unlimited Jewish immigration into Palestine was a matter "of life and death to the Jewish people."

He appeared as a witness with Rabbi I. Gruenfeld, representative of the chief Rabbinate of Great Britain, as the committee began a week of hearings on the Palestine question.

The American-British agreement to examine jointly Jewish immigration into Palestine and to agree, if possible, on a permanent solution for submission to the UNO, was announced last November. Previous hearings have been held in Washington.

"They Want Palestine Home"

Brodetsky asserted that a majority of Jews in Europe would not return to the countries from which the Nazis moved them.

"Not only do they want to have a home in Palestine, to live among Jews and have security, they feel they have been deprived of the right to live as human beings," he said.

He suggested that facilities be provided to permit Jews "to go to Palestine as fast as possible."

He mentioned the possibility of making Palestine a Jewish state affiliated with Great Britain and said:

"We British Jews feel that under the British flag there is a possibility of freedom which does not exist under other flags."

RAF Strikers Are Warned

London, Jan. 25 (AP)—The Air Ministry, disclosing for the first time that RAF men overseas had gone on "strike" in protest against demobilization policies, warned today that such "serious breaches of discipline" would not be tolerated.

A number of Royal Air Force personnel were reported to have quit their duties in India, Egypt, Palestine and Ceylon. The Air Ministry's statement said the original strike, involving 2,000 men at Karachifi had ended after four days. Numbers were not given for other posts.

The Air Ministry said the complaint that RAF men were being released more slowly than Army and Navy personnel was unfounded and that RAF demobilization was abreast of that in other services.

REPORT ON KOREA EXPLAINED BY TASS

LONDON, Jan. 25 (AP) An "authorized" statement released by the Soviet News Agency Tass and broadcast by the Moscow radio tonight denied reports the agency said were spread by newspapers in American-controlled Southern Korea "suggesting that the Soviet Union was trying to attain the establishment of a trusteeship in Korea."

"Tass has been authorized," the broadcast said, "to deny these incorrect statements and to describe the true state of affairs."

The agency was quoted as saying the United States had proposed to the recent foreign ministers' conference in Moscow that a four-power administration (Russia, U. S., China and Great Britain) be established to lead Korea through a transitional period aimed at full independence.

The American proposal was withdrawn, the statement said, in favor of a Soviet plan which called for immediate establishment of a provisional, democratic Korean government, and placing an absolute five-year limit on guidance of the four-power trusteeship.

The American plan, Tass said, would have permitted as much as ten years' rule by the four powers, administered by a joint military command.

GI BRIDES SLATED TO SAIL TODAY

TIDWORTH, Eng., Jan. 25—(AP) More than 600 GI brides sailing for the United States tomorrow talked tonight with growing excitement of many things on their last night in England—things like bananas and ball games, steaks and stockings.

All major preliminaries had been completed for the great pilgrimage towards homes and husbands. They were ready to start moving on two special trains to Southampton, where the liner Argentina, the first bride and baby special, was scheduled to leave at 5 p. m. (12 o'clock noon EST.)

Twelve of the original contingent, the only unhappy people in this big camp, have been told that they would have to wait for later sailing. One lucky bride arrived from London today to take the place of one of these and head for Texas sooner than she had hoped.

"I want to give Mary (her baby daughter) a taste of banana and see if she likes it," declared Mrs. Priscilla Hyland, wife of Cpl. William A. Hyland, of Manchester, Mass.

Nine of the 12 who will not sail tomorrow were suffering from minor illnesses or had personal reasons for delay. The other three expect babies soon.

U. S. LOAN VITAL TO FRANCE, GOUIN TELLS SOCIALISTS

PARIS, Jan. 25—(AP) Socialist deputies declared today President Felix Gouin had told them that only a loan of $2,500,000,000 from the United States could save France from financial chaos.

The Socialist president, seeking to win complete three-party support of a drastic financial program aimed at halting spiraling inflation, pleaded with party members to approve the plans of Pierre Mendes-France, an Independent Radical Socialist and former finance minister and minister of national economy under Gen. Charles De Gaulle.

The Socialists said Gouin outlined France's financial and food situation pessimistically, and delivered an ultimatum that he would resign if the financial program were rejected.

General approval of the program was announced by all three major parties—the Communists, Socialists and Popular Republican movement (M.R.P.)—but prospects for quick formation of a new cabinet darkened tonight when Gouin announced that Mendes-France had declined to become finance minister in his cabinet. Gouin said Mendes-France declined because the Radical Socialist Party had decided not to participate in the government.

Cuts Proposed

The Mendes-France program calls for an immediate cut of 40,000,000,000 francs ($336,000,000) in armament expenditures, freezing of government employes' salaries for a year and an end to their recruitment for an indefinite period, changes in the capital tax structure with some increases, and the immediate freezing of prices and bank deposits.

The Communists were reported seeking moderation of the proposed program, particularly in the freezing of government employes' salaries.

Socialist deputies said Gouin told them the recent devaluation of the franc gave the French treasury francs representing 100 days expenditures, but at the end of that time France would be "at the edge of a precipice."

Gouin declared the bread ration could not be assured after May without importing 370,000,000 bushels of wheat and that the meat situation could be improved only by imports, the Socialists said.

French Plan 'Deflation'

Paris, Jan. 25 (AP)—French leaders, including President Felix Gouin, approved proposals today for "a program of deflation" designed to help solve France's financial crisis, said reports that the new President would name members of his cabinet during the day.

Pierre Mendes-France, an independent Radical Socialist and former finance minister and Minister of National Economy under Gen. Charles de Gaulle, sponsored the proposals.

The new financial program was adopted at a tense meeting, attended by ten representatives of the Socialist, Communist and MRP parties. Reports said that Gouin had threatened to drop his attempts to form a government if the proposals were rejected.

The program intended to launch the new administration on a sounder credit basis by a severe program of financial cutbacks and also to ease France's business dealings with Britain and the United States, was reported to include freezing of prices and government salaries.

FLIERS TORTURED, SLAIN BY NAZIS, ARMY COURT TOLD

NUERNBERG, Germany, Jan. 25—(AP) A French prosecution witness told the International Military Tribunal today that 47 American and Dutch fliers were tortured and stoned to death at Mauthausen murder camp, and said the German people knew "very well" of the misdeeds of their masters in Nazi concentration camps.

The witness, Maurice Lampe, once a prisoner at Mauthausen, also declared the Germans at that Austrian murder camp executed fifty Russian officers and political commissars as a special treat for Heinrich Himmler, Gestapo chief.

As the French, by means of Lampe and the documents, told the court trying 22 Nazi leaders of the horrors of the camp, Fanz Von Papen ripped the earphones from his head and sat with his hands covering his face; Hjalmar Schacht and Joachim Von Ribbentrop took off their headphones; Grand Adm. Karl Doenitz sat with his chin on his chest.

German Civilians Knew

Lampe, declaring German civilians, were not ignorant concerning events in concentration camps, said:

"We were divided into work corps, most of them were sent into towns to work side by side with Germans whom we told what was happening. Sometimes one of our number would be summoned from work to be executed."

He testified that the American and Dutch fliers arrived at Mauthausen the morning of Sept. 6, 1944. They were barefooted and dressed only in their underwear, he added, continuing:

The fliers were taken before the SS commandant and told they were condemned to death for trying to escape. One American officer requested the privilege of dying "like a soldier" but he was beaten. The group was led, still barefooted, to the bottom of a stone quarry.

"Each man was then loaded with stones and had to go to the top of the quarry—up all 186 steps," Lampe said.

"That first trip each man carried 25 to 30 kilograms (55 to 65 pounds) of stone. They were beaten all the way. They had to run back down again.

Blood Covered Steps

"On the second trip, the loads were heavier still. The blows on them were redoubled and stones were hurled at them. The same process was repeated the whole day.

"That evening the party in which I was working came from the quarry and climbed the steps which were covered with blood. I almost stepped on the jaw of a man.

"Twenty-one bodies were lying there and the 26 others died the following morning."

Of the executions of the Russians, Lampe said he watched the Russians kiss one another farewell before they were marched singly down the steps to the execution chamber.

Prosecutor Charles DuBost declared that the similarity of Gestapo tactics of torture in all occupied countries of Western Europe proved that orders to employ brutality came from a higher authority, perhaps even from Reichmarshal Goering himself as war minister.

50 EXECUTIONS FOR HIMMLER

Frenchman Tells of Show for Gestapo Head.

NUERNBERG, Jan. 25 (AP)—Fifty Russian officers and political commisars were executed as a special treat for Gestapo Chieftain Heinrich Himmler at Mauthausen murder camp in September, 1944, and 47 American and Dutch flyers were tortured and stoned to death the same month, a former inmate testified today befor the International Military Tribunal.

The witness, Maurice Lampe, a Frenchman, telling a particularly graphic story of the beatings and stonings of the flyers, said the Americans and Dutchmen arrived at the camp the morning of September 6.

Barefooted and dressed only in their underwear, the flyers were taken before the SS commandant and told they were condemned to death for trying to escape.

Led Into Quarry

When one of the American officers requested the privilege of dying "like a soldier" he was beaten and then the entire group was led, still barefooted, to the bottom of a stone quarry.

"Each man was then loaded with stones and had to go to the top of the quarry—up all 186 steps," Lampe related.

"That first step each man carried 25 to 30 kilograms (55 to 65 pounds) of stone. They were beaten al the way. They had to run back down again.

"On the second trip, the loads were heavier still. The blows on them were redoubled and stones were hurled at them. The same process was repeated the whole day.

Steps Covered With Blood

"That evening the party in which I was working came from the quarry and climbed the steps, which were covered with blood. I almost stepped on the jaw of a man.

"Twenty-one bodies were lying there, and the 26 others died the following morning."

Lampe said he was in the block house opposite Mauthausen's ill-famed death house and crematorium the day of Himmler's Roman holiday and watched the assembled Russians kiss one another farewell before they were marched one by one down the steps to the execution chamber.

"Every Shot Heard"

"The executions went on all afternoon," he testified. "Each victim was compelled to wait on the steps and hear the shot which killed his predecesor. Every shot reached our ears."

Lampe's testimony was part of the French case against the 22 defendants.

French prosecutors, describing Nazi refinements on medieval tortures, charged that Gestapo agents placed burning wads of oil-soaked cloth between the toes of French prisoners.

Assistant Prosecutor Charles Dubost produced documents which he said showed that youths in French prisons were burned with soldering lamps and bitten by police dogs.

Orders to the Nazi inquisitors often came directly from the headquarters of Field Marshal William Keitel, chief of the German High Command, as well as from other defendants now on trial, Dubost charged.

Protest On Testimony

Efforts by the French to introduce as evidence police reports on Nazi prison conditions ran into a hitch when the court-appointed counsel for the defense objected "as a matter of principle" to testimony which had not been given under oath.

The tribunal recessed twice to study the question.

The objection was finally overruled and the court accepted the French police interrogations.

As the story of savage tortures unfolded, Nazi defendants were unable to conceal shame over the actions of the regime of which they were a part.

Took Off Headphones

Franz von Papen, pale and shaken, ripped the earphones from his head and sat thereafter with his hands covering his face. Hjalmar Schacht and Joachim von Ribbentrop also cast off their headphones. Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz sat woodenly with his chin on his chest as though unable to face the courtroom.

Prison physicians announced that an electrocardiograph test on Julius Streicher, who collapsed from a heart attack in the prisoners' dock three days ago, revealed no gross abnormalities. The general condition of Ernst Kaltenbrunner who has missed all but a half dozen sessions of the trial because of a cranial hemorrhage, was said by the physicians to be gradually improving.

Field Marshal Afraid To Dial Foreign News

Nuernberg, Jan. 25 (AP)—Field Marshal Siegmund Wilhelm List, former commander in chief of Army Group "A" in the Caucasus, was afraid to listen to foreign radio broadcasts, he admitted today.

"It was against the Führer's orders and I wouldn't dream of taking the chance, especially since I had a maid whose political convictions were unknown to me," he told Allied intelligence officers.

He said Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel fired him after he refused to undertake an "asinine" offensive through the Caucasus passes in order to establish a foothold on the shore of the Black Sea.

Back in civilian life, List said he heard rumors that the high command was to be thrust upon him and he lay awake nights thinking up ways and means of dodging it.

Then the war became a soft blur to him because his only information came from the official German communiqués, which he distrusted. Allied officers asked him why he didn't listen to foreign broadcasts and he replied:

"The maid—I didn't dare."

Von Below told British questioners that the 1944 bomb explosion knocked him unconscious, and that afterward he saw Hitler come out a doorway of the shattered conference room with his uniform badly torn, but unhurt except for a leg bruise. But later, he said, Hitler showed signs of the effect of the shock, and Von Below declared this led to deterioration of the Fuehrer's mind and nerves.

Von Below said he did not attend the marriage ceremony but that he saw Hitler and Eva Braun come out of their rooms after the wedding, and that later he drank a champagne toast with Hitler and his "bunker family."

The Luftwaffe officer insisted the date of the marriage was the evening of April 28. British intelligence officers last November said Hitler and Braun were married on the evening of April 29. The marriage contract purportedly entered into by Hitler and Braun and found by American intelligence officers was dated April 29.

British intelligence personnel said today they were inclined "to think that Von Below's statement is the closest and therefore the most reliable account and we are inclined to accept the 28th as the wedding day."

Von Below, who had been Hitler's air force adjutant since 1937, was arrested by the British security police several days ago at Bad Godesberg. He was posing there as a law student at nearby Bonn University under the name of Klaus Nagel.

Later Von Below was called to a separate room where he found Hitler, Joseph Goebbels and Martin Bormann. There he was told by Hitler that he had been with him for such a long time he was to sign as one of the witnesses of Hitler's private will.

He read it and added his name after those of Bormann and Goebbels. He was not informed of Hitler's political will until, the next day, April 29, when he was told that Hitler had appointed a new government to rule after his death.

Von Below said "arrangements had been made for the destruction and the burning of Hitler's and Braun's bodies." He said that late in the afternoon of April 29th, it was realized in the bunker that the Russians would reach the Chancellery by the 30th or by May 1 at the latest.

He said it was generally known in the bunker that Hitler and Braun would commit suicide.

Von Below said Hitler gave him permission to escape from Berlin and ordered him to attempt to reach Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel and put up a "brave fight."

Escaped from Berlin

Von Below took his official leave of Hitler about 11 p. m. on April 29—16 hours before Hitler's presumed suicide and left the bunker at midnight. He managed to escape from Berlin but by May 3 he had realized the impossibility of reaching Keitel in the Kiel area. Changing into civilian clothes after the capitulation, he eventually reached Bonn.

Von Below, son of a professional soldier, was one of the earliest fliers of the Luftwaffe at a time when it existed on a secret and illegal basis. In 1937, he was appointed Luftwaffe adjutant to Hitler. His duties consisted of carrying out Hitler's instructions about preparations for meetings and special flights.

He accompanied Hitler on all important occasions including the annexations of Austria and the Sudetenland, the Godesberg and Munich conferences and the occupation of Prague.

Witnessed Will

The British believe him to be the last surviving witness of Hitler's last will and testament, signed in the Berlin Bunker on April 29, the same date as the marriage contract.

The account from Von Below's interrogation continued:

Von Below took up his quarters in one of the three bunkers outside the Reichschancellery in Berlin on April 20, 1945, to prepare for a fight to the finish at the side of Hitler. He was present at the conference at which Hitler decided to stay in the blazing capital.

The party after the marriage ceremony lasted about an hour and numerous toasts were given to "old times."

Hitler Suffered from Shock After Bomb Blast, Aide Says

HERFORD, Germany, Jan. 25—(AP) Adolf Hitler suffered bomb shock in the July 20, 1944, attempt on his life that later led to deterioration of his mind and nerves, a statement by his Luftwaffe adjutant, 28-year-old Col. Nicolaus Von Below, said today.

Von Below, arrested after disguising himself as a university student, also said that Hitler and Eva Braun were married in the Berlin Reichschancellery last April 28, not April 29 as indicated by other evidence.

Bomb Upset Hitler Mind, Nazi Says

Herford, Germany, Jan. 25 (AP)—Bomb shock suffered in an attempt on his life July 20, 1944, started Adolf Hitler on the road to mental deterioration, Luftwaffe Gen. Nicolaus von Below disclosed today.

Below, [illegible] witness to Hitler's will, escaped from the Reichschancellery bunker in Berlin the night before the Führer and Eva Braun entered their suicide pact.

Was With Hitler In Blast

As Hitler's adjutant, the 38-year-old Below was with the Führer when the bomb exploded in the July plot and he told British interrogating officers that Hitler showed signs of shock after the blast which led to deterioriation of his nerves and mind.

Below was arrested by British security police several days ago at Bad Godesberg, where he was posing as a law student at nearby Bonn University.

Last Survivor To Will

He is believed by the British to be the last surviving witness of Hitler's last will and testament, signed in the Berlin bunker on April 29, 1945. Propaganda Minister Goebbels and Deputy Führer Martin Bormann, the other witnesses, are believed dead.

Below told his questioners that he was rendered unconscious by the July, 1944, bomb explosion and that afterward he saw Hitler come out of a doorway of the shattered conference room with his uniform badly ripped but otherwise unscathed save for a bruise on the leg.

PATHETIC PLEAS MADE FOR SHIPS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A shipping bottleneck is keeping more than 200 South Africans from visiting Europe to hunt for missing next-to-kin, while more than 10,000 persons are waiting in England for passage to South Africa.

"Every day we receive pathetic letters," said an immigration and passport officer, "but there is little we can do. Our allocation works out at 50 berths a month, out of which urgent business and other priorities must be accommodated.

"Some of the South Africans stranded in England are young war widows and children in dire financial straits because of being unable to return home."

The South Africans waiting for passage to Europe are mostly naturalized settlers from the Balkan countries, many of whom left their families behind. The Red Cross and other organizations have made strenuous efforts to find some trace of their kin, without success.

Censorship Put On Java Press And Radio

Batavia, Jan. 25 (AP)—The British commander in Java clamped censorship on Java's press and radio today in advance of renewed negotiations between Indonesian Nationalist leaders and the Dutch Government.

Lieutenant General Sir Philip Christison's order left foreign correspondents free to report the news but decreed: "No newspaper or radio station may publish anything offensive or likely to inflame opinion or in any way incite the people directly or indirectly to commit acts prejudicial to law and order."

New Dutch Proposals

Japanese prisoners, acting on British orders, swarmed through Batavia today eradicating Indonesian political slogans which had been painted on buildings, walls and streetcars.

Dock Area Guarded

A British announcement said that Dutch troops "wearing American-style battle dress" had taken over a 24-hour guard duty in the dock area, where wide-scale looting had previously been reported.

Meanwhile, some fighting was reported at Semarang, where the Indonesians used mortars against British positions, and in the vicinity of Soerbaja, Bandoeng and Buitenzorg.

NEW OFFERS MADE CHINESE FACTIONS BY NATIONALISTS

CHUNGKING, Jan. 25—(AP) In a dramatic attempt to break the deadlock over government reorganization, Foreign Minister Wang Shi-Chieh tonight called personally on Chou En-Lai, leading Communist delegate to the Chinese Unity Conference, and Lo Lung-Chi, prominent Democratic League delegate, to offer concessions.

Proposals Made

These were:

1. An all-party state council would be granted power to make appointments.

2. Either the president's power to act in an emergency would be relegated to the council, or the council would be authorized to override the president's veto with a majority vote. (The proposal now before the conference calls for a two-thirds vote).

Lo said the Communists and the League were withholding a decision until Chou En-Lai could discuss the proposals with other Communist committee members, and until the League ascertains whether the appointive power also would include the power to dismiss.

Lo added that after concrete results had been obtained, the council would recess for a few days to enable Chou En-Lai to fly to Yenan to confer with Communist Chairman Mao Tse-Tung.

The conference's first three-day extension, necessitated by the continuing deadlock, expires Saturday.

An estimated 500 Chinese students, demonstrating in front of the National Government headquarters, demanded that the conference not quit without achieving concrete results.

It was not clear what organization, if any, was behind the students. They were addressed by a non-partisan member of the concultation conference, and members of the Democratic League reported that the so-called youth party had "spiritually seceded" from the League's coalition.

This followed recurrent reports that the Youth Party, one of six minor groups which had banded together with the Democratic League in opposition to the Communists and the Government Party, had decided secretly to support the government program at the conference.

Conference Stalled

The conference nevertheless remained stalled on the form of government reorganization and the composition of a national constitutional assembly.

The Communists have contended that the government program for bringing other parties into its structure is insufficient and would not be a real coalition.

(Whether a trip to Yenan would succeed was questionable, for an Associated Press dispatch from that Communist center said that Mao, the country's chief Communist, has refused to participate in or discuss the unity efforts even informally. Mao was pictured as exhausted and disappointed over his own unsuccessful efforts to work out a coalition at Chungking last October, and determined to sit idly on the sidelines).

China Students March, Demand Hongkong

Chungking, Jan. 25 (AP) — Five thousand Chinese students demonstrated outside Government headquarters today, then paraded past the British and French embassies shouting demands for the return of Hong Kong and Macao and the recall of the French consul general.

Uniformed police and secret service men guarded the embassies.

Outside the British Embassy they screamed in English "We want Hong Kong back. We want Kowloon back. We want Macao back."

Ouster Demanded

In front of the French Embassy, only 200 yards from the British, the demonstrators shouted "We demand dismissal of the French consul general at Shanghai."

Two officials of the Chinese Foreign Office marched with the demonstrators to dissaude them if they attempted violence.

Correspondents asked one of the student leaders why they were not demanding the return of Dairen and Port Arthur to China. He replied that the Russians were in those cities by treaty.

A British correspondent said, "So are the British in Hong Kong."

Inequality Charged

"Yes, that's so, but that's under an unequal treaty." the student replied.

British and French officials worked serenely on in the embassies as the students marched past. Occasionally a demonstrator shook his fist at the correspondents, who stood in the gateway of the British Embassy and were mistaken for officials. On the whole, however, the demonstrators were orderly.

The students made 24 demands in all as they marched past Government headquarters, where committees of the political consultation conference are mapping reforms in China's Government. Most of their requests were domestic.

Plot Laid To French

Of the French they demanded the recall of the French consul general in Shanghai, Jean Filliol, for his alleged part in spiriting a suspected collaborationist, Paul Tosoli, to Saigon aboard a French cruiser.

The students further demanded an immediate halt to construction of a new airfield at Hong Kong.

Other demands include democratization of the government; nationization of the army; fair elections for national assembly seats; a halt to truce violations and elimination of party influence from educational estblishments.

Finally, they asked that the consultation (unity) conference should not terminate before concrete results are attained. The conference had planned to adjourn probably tomorrow.

Use Address System

The demonstration was well organized. Students set up a public address system in the compounds of the government office building. They also brought individual lunches.

Mo Te-hui, one of the nonpartisan delegates to the political conference, addressed the students. They cheered his statement that there would be no more civil war in China. He told them that Generalissimo Chang Kai-shek always had carried out his pledges. He made no reference to the students' demands for the return of Hong Kong or Macao, or the recall of Filliol.

Chiang already had promised most of the other changes the students demanded.

Death Toll Reaches 22, Over 600 Wounded as Riots Continue.

BOMBAY, Jan. 25—(AP) Police hurled tear gas and fired at least four times on mobs today, but failed to halt riots in areas of Bombay bloodied by three days of fighting in which 22 persons have been killed and more than 600 wounded.

In an effort to preserve peace during tomorrow's celebration of Indian independence day, the India Congress party directed 250 volunteer police to move into the trouble areas of the city.

Curfew Imposed

Tonight there was some evidence of a decrease in the rioting, which began Wednesday with a demonstration on the birthday of Subhas Chandra Bose, former leader of the Japanese-sponsored Indian National army. A curfew was imposed in the affected areas from 9 p. m. to 6 a. m.

Although this was Moslem Prayer Day, there was not the slightest suggestion of Hindu-Moslem trouble, police said. The Moslems were abstaining rigidly from participating in the rioting, the authorities declared.

Indian Congress officials appealed again to students and others to end the disturbances. Tired police still looked forward to the calling out of military forces if necessary to assist them in rounding up the demonstrators.

Police officials said students were to blame for much of the rioting, but they declared gangs of hoodlums were responsible for the looting of grain shops and postoffices.

Three government grain shops have been looted and part of the supplies burned, despite a current grain shortage. Two postoffices and a railroad booking office were ransacked.

U. S. Reporters Warned

Police, in warning American correspondents to stay out of the riot area, approximately in the center of the city, said "this is an anti-English and anti-authority disturbance, and you're in European clothes and likely to get a concentration of soda water bottles and stones."

Some of today's demonstrations were directed against shops owned by the local colony of Parsees and shops owned by Persians. Police suggested the Parsees, the Indian followers of Zoroaster, were perhaps the most "Europeanized" of any Indian group.

The greater part of Bombay was unaffected by the disturbances, and downtown districts, with the exception of the very center of the city, remained peaceful. In the riot areas, however, it was unsafe for any European to appear either on foot or automobile.

Police fired today on stone-throwing rioters who had set fire for a second time to a railway ticket office and who had begun blocking traffic in Kalbadevi Road, one of the main and most crowded streets serving Bombay.

India Riot Death Toll 18; Police Fire On Mob

Bombay, Jan. 25 (AP)—Police turned rifles and tear-gas guns on rioting mobs today as anti-English, anti-authority demonstrations which have brought death to eighteen persons and injuries to more than 600 continued for the third day.

Police officials, just about ready to call for troops to quell the bloody strife, ordered a curfew into effect for tonight, from 9 P.M. to 6 A.M., in an effort to halt the looting, arson and stoning that have made the Hindu section in the center of a Bombay battleground.

American correspondents were warned to stay out of the trouble area.

"This is an anti-English and anti-authority disturbance and you're in European clothes and likely to get a concentration of soda-water bottles and stones," officials said.

Today's attacks, in addition to their anti-English trends, were directed against shops owned by the local colony of Parsees and against shops owned by Persians. Police suggested that these attacks might have been caused by the fact that the Parsees are the most "Europeanized" of any Indian group.

Grain Shops Looted

Three Government grain shops have been looted and part of the supplies burned despite a grain shortage. Two post offices and a railway ticket office have also been burned.

Kalbadevi road, busy central thoroughfare, was the scene of much of today's rioting. Pedestrians along the road were stripped of neckties and hats by the demonstrators, because wearing such attire was not in keeping with Indian nationalism.

One group broke through a police cordon guarding a suburban railway ticket office that had been set afire yesterday and burned it again. Police used tear gas, charged the mob and finally resorted to gunfire.

Five persons wounded by rifle fire were carried away, but police were made the targets of a barrage of stones and pop bottles taken from a near-by refreshment stand when they attempted to remove obstructions from the road and side streets leading into it.

Student Strike

Student factions, in the forefront of the rioting, which began Wednesday with the celebration of the birthday of Subhas Chandra Bose, former leader of the Japanese-sponsored "Indian National Army," were reported to have called another school strike today.

Heavy police concentrations were assigned to watch funeral processions of riot victims, since one such procession yesterday was the signal for some of the worst disorders of the day and drew heavy police fire. The police suffered sixty-three casualties—mostly as a result of stones and bottles thrown by demonstrators—in yesterday's fighting, and expressed apprehension that the demonstrations would reach a climax tomorrow, when Indians will celebrate the sixteenth anniversary of the declaration of independence by the Indian National Congress.

During that celebration a large mass meeting is scheduled to be held at Chowpatty Beach, from which a march began Wednesday. Thus far the rioting has been confined almost wholly to a mile square area in the Hindu section of the city.

9 NATIONS JOIN TRIBUNAL TO TRY JAP WAR LORDS

TOKYO, Jan. 25—(AP) All of the nine nations to which Japan surrendered—including Russia — will participate in the international trials of Hideki Tojo, his Pearl Harbor cabinet, and other war leaders charged with "crimes against peace and against humanity."

This was assured today when Russia, France and the Netherlands joined the war crimes tribunal.

Announcement of their participation ended weeks of uncertainty during which only the United States, China, and four members of the British Commonwealth had taken part in preparations for the trials scheduled to begin in March.

Russia Finally Joins

Russia's long silence had given rise to speculation that Moscow had decided that since the Soviet Union was not at war with Japan when Tojo was in power, it should not participate in the prosecution. Only recently Joseph B. Keenan, U. S. chief prosecutor, said Moscow's continued silence "makes it look pretty certain Russia won't come in."

Today Keenan announced receipt of a message from Moscow naming a judge and an associate prosecutor to the court. The Netherlands, he said, also had named a judge and was selecting an associate prosecutor, and that France had notified Allied headquarters she would send the names of her representatives soon.

Representatives of the other six countries—China, the United States, Great Britain, Australia, Canada, and New Zealand—already have been named, and the British delegation is expected here shortly. The court, however, cannot set definite trial dates until the whole tribunal is assembled.

Narcotics Ban Tightened

Japan's reformation under Allied tutelage meanwhile advanced another step. General MacArthur ordered the government to establish an effective system for narcotics control and to set up severe penalties for violators.

Japanese laws already penalize opium smoking severely, but the penalties for distribution, sale, or use of "white narcotics"—morphine, heroin and cocaine—have been light and ineffective.

The anti-narcotic move followed a directive issued by the supreme commander yesterday ordering the abolition of licensed prostitution, and the enactment of laws outlawing an old Japanese custom—the sale of daughters to brothel operators.

The finance ministry reported that Allied occupation for the approximately four months ending Dec. 31 cost the Japanese government 701,192,00 yen ($46,746,133.)

Kyodo News Agency said the note issue of the Bank of Japan had increased more than a billion yen in the 10 days preceding Jan. 20, reflecting increased demand for currency caused by soaring commodity prices.

In Tokyo's Osaki precinct 150 policemen underlined the practical significance of the bank's figures by threatening to resign unless the city upped their pay 300 per cent.

Russ, French Dutch In On Jap Trials

Tokyo, Jan. 25 (AP)—Russia, France and the Netherlands today joined the international tribunal that will try Japan's top war crimes suspects, including Hideki Tojo, Japanese Premier at the beginning of the war.

Announcement of their participation ended weeks of uncertainty during which only the United States, China and four members of the British Empire had participated in preparations for the trials, which may start in March.

All nine signatories to the surrender of Japan aboard the Missouri September 2 thus will take part in the trials of Tojo, his Pearl Harbor Cabinet and other top-flight Japanese, said Joseph B. Keenan, chief United States prosecutor.

Empire Representatives

Empire representatives are Great Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

A radio message from Moscow announced that Russia had named a judge and an associate prosecutor. Only a few days ago, Keenan, who came here as chief prosecutor at General MacArthur's invitation, had said Russia's continued silence "makes it look pretty certain Russia won't come in." Moscow had ignored two invitations to participate.

Russia named a major general to sit in judgment on the Japanese and a man described as "director of judicial science" to be an assistant prosecutor, but their names were garbled in the cable to Allied headquarters.

Dutch Judge

Keenan said the Netherlands had selected Judge Roling of the Court of Utrecht as judge and would forward the name of an assistant prosecutor in a few days. Names of the French judge and associate prosecutor were expected soon.

Representatives of the six other countries were named a few days ago.

British delegates to the international tribunal are expected to arrive shortly, but the court cannot meet to study the recently announced charter specifying its duties or set dates for the trials until members assemble from all nations.

Delays Expected

The necessity of filing charges and specifications and waiting until the tribunal names defense counsel who, in turn, must prepare their cases, will delay the start of the actual trials. The hearings until today had been scheduled tentatively for about March.

Meanwhile, the United States staff under Keenan is busy assembling material for the trial.

On the home front, MacArthur ordered the Japanese Government to establish an effective system for narcotics control and to enact legislation with severe penalties for violators.

Col. Crawford F. Sams, chief of the headquarters public health and welfare section, said the directive includes narcotics necessary for legitimate medical needs but which constitute a menace if not properly controlled.

"White Narcotics"

Japanese laws provide severe penalties for opium smoking, but the penalties for distribution, sale or use of "white narcotics," Sams said, "have been so light they have not proved effective." White narcotics named in the directive are morphine, heroin and cocaine.

Allied occupation for four months and one week through December 31 cost the Japanese Government 701,192,000 yen ($46,746,133), the Finance Ministry reported today. Allied forces spent 450,222,000 yen and the Japanese Government 250,970,000 yen for facilities of occupation forces.

The Ministry had set aside 3,000,000,000 yen ($200,000,000) to cover the occupation cost for three months.

Kyodo said that, reflecting increased demand for currency as a result of soaring commodity prices, the note issue of the Bank of Japan aggregated 56,064,000,000 yen ($3,737,000,000) on January 20, an increase of 1,161,000,000 yen in ten days.

DENIES M'ARTHUR IN ON TASS REBUKE

Tokyo, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—Gen. MacArthur's press relations officer said today he had no way of knowing what any other responsible headquarters spokesman may have said about the Russian Tass news agency, but Tuesday's reported rebuke of the agency did not come from "MacArthur's spokesman."

Brig.-Gen. Frayne Baker, the public relations officer, generally is regarded as MacArthur's spokesman.

On Tuesday, a headquarter's spokesman, who declined use of his name, told the Associated Press that criticism by Tass of the American command in southern Korea is part of "a definite program to discredit MacArthur and force further changes in present occupation policies and command."

Baker, questioned by some correspondents, said "no statement or comment whatsoever was made by MacArthur's spokesman on the Tass story" and that "MacArthur himself had not read the Tass dispatch." However, Baker did not deny that a headquarter's spokesman in responsible position had rebuked Tass.

Tass, in a dispatch from the Russian-occupied north sector of Korea, said mass demonstrations in the American-occupied south sector against the Moscow conference decision of a trusteeship for Korea were inspired by the United States military command.

BODY OF COLIN KELLY BELIEVED AT MANILA

MANILA, Jan. 25 (AP)—A body re-buried recently in a Manila cemetery was tentatively identified by United States Army headquarters here today as that of Capt. Colin P. Kelly Jr., America's first widely-publicized air hero of World War II.

Headquarters said positive identification hinged on a check of dental work and a comparison of data, including a crudely drawn map marking the spot of the first interment of the body at Fort Stotsenberg, long since leveled by Japanese bombs.

Officers said a Filipino told them that in December, 1941, he saw the sergeant of a field crash truck point to one of two bodies recovered in the crash of a bomber and say, "Why, that's Captain Kelly."

Captain Kelly dived his early-type Flying Fortress on the Japanese battleship Haruna in Lingayen Gulf on Dec. 10, 1941—for which he received the posthumous award of the Congressional Medal of Honor.

He flew the shot-up, burning plane back to within four miles of Clark Field here, then ordered the crew to jump. Six men, including Sgt. Meyer Levin of Brooklyn, the bombardier, who was later lost in action in the South Pacific, parachuted. Captain Kelly and the body of Staff Sgt. William J. Delehanty of Brooklyn, who had been killed by a Japanese shot, went down with the plane.

The two bodies mentioned by the Filipino were buried at the post cemetery at Fort Stotsenberg on Dec. 11, 1941. A map was made of the burial location, but dog tags had been removed from both bodies by Filipinos at the crash scene, headquarters said.

Manila Exchange Opens As Mining Shares Soar

MANILA, Jan. 25 (AP).—The Manila Stock Exchange opened today amid indications of a boom in Philippine mining shares. Some issues were more than double the values listed at the last trading, Dec. 6, 1941.

The bull market was attributed by brokers to a large supply of cash and the scarcity of share certificates. Many certificates and company records were lost during the battle for Manila. Only three gold mines in the entire archipelago are reported intact. Production is months or years in the future.

Santiago Picornell, the only surviving partner of one of Manila's largest brokerage houses, said several Philippine mining issues are selling in the San Francisco Mining Exchange at prices four to five times the Manila quotations because of difficulty in transferring shares. Mr. Picornell said most transactions here are still over-the-counter. The Manila Exchange demands street certificates and deeds of sale for stock transactions.

Jap PW Camp Chief Is Sentenced To Hang

Yokohama, Jan. 25 (AP)—Kaichi Hirate, Japanese Government librarian who became commandant of a prisoner-of-war camp, was convicted today and sentenced to be hanged for responsibility in the deaths of four British and Dutch soldiers.

Hirate appeared surprised as Col. Oliver E. Trechter, president of the military commission which convicted him, read the verdict. He was convicted of every charge except one — misappropriation of Red Cross supplies.

He was found guilty of causing the death of Pfc. Raymond C. Suttle, of Hadleigh, England, and allowing subordinates to cause the deaths of Sapper Ernest J. Glover, of Hemsworth, Yorks, England; Sergt. J. Pellencau, of Soerabaja, Java, and Sergt. Van Daalen Meyer, of Djamboelaan, Batavia.

Parents Send Plea

After sentence was pronounced, the prosecutor, Major Joshua J. Evans, of Vinita, Okla., made public a radiogram from Suttle's parents who said, in part:

"We are so glad the Americans are trying this brute. . . . I know you will do your best for (Raymond's) broken-hearted mother. They have murdered my lovely, curly-headed, blue-eyed baby. Will you please get this message through for me? It's just this: Ask one of your men to give him a blow of some kind before they hang him for me. Please, I beg of you to grant me just this request."

Fourth Conviction

The message was not introduced at the trial.

Hirate commanded the camp at Muroran, Hokkaido. He was the fourth Japanese prison-camp official convicted in Japan of brutalities to Allied military personnel. Lieut. Kei Yuri was sentenced to be hanged and two were given life prison terms.

A fifth, Isao Fukuhara, former commander of POW Camp 17B, at Omuta, will go on trial Monday on charges of cruel and brutal atrocities against prisoners. He succeeded Yuri at Omuta.

Government Seizes Meat Plants; CIO Union Heads Refuse to Order Their Workers to Return to Jobs

55,000 MEMBERS OF AFL GO BACK TO WORK TODAY

Eleven Companies Taken Over by Armstrong Without Formal Ceremony.

MORE TO BE SEIZED

193,000 CIO Workers Remain Idle; Demand Pay Boost Immediately.

CHICAGO, Jan. 26—(Saturday)—(AP) The government seized at 12:01 a. m. today 11 meat packing companies, including the nation's five largest, all of which have been tied up by striking A.F.L. and C.I.O. union workers since Jan. 16.

Gayle G. Armstrong, government representative for President Truman and the secretary of agriculture, took over possession of the plants without formal ceremony through each company's officials, whom he had designated as his aides.

The head of each company had been instructed earlier to display the United States flag and post the official notice of government seizure. Armstrong said he would deliver subsequent orders to the company heads who would in turn delegate authority to plant officials "down the line" as necessary.

CIO Refuses Pleas

Union leaders of 193,000 United Packinghouse Workers (CIO) yesterday refused to order their membership to return to work, but officers of the 55,000 Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen (AFL) on Thursday ordered their members to return to work for Uncle Sam in a temporary truce.

The AFL group consented to work for government operators at existing wage rates, awaiting outcome of hearings by a federal fact-finding panel, but the UPW declared its membership would not return to work without assurance from the government the union's wage demands would be put into effect during federal occupation of the plants.

The government seizure was effective at 12:01 a.m. (EST) in the Eastern Time zone then westward at hourly intervals in the various time zones.

Eight other companies listed in the President's original seizure order Thursday will be signed up this morning, Armstrong said, when their officials reach Chicago.

Possession of the plants included "without limitation, all real estate, buildings, machinery, tools, equipment, inventories, and all livestock, materials, supplies and articles of production and processing of meat and meat products whatsoever," said Armstrong's directive to the company heads.

Officials Remain in Charge

"You are hereby appointed company manager for the government of the United States x x x, you are authorized and directed, subject to my control and supervision as government representative, to manage the operation of said plants, facilities and property in the normal course of business, while continuing to serve as an officer and employe of the company. x x x

"You will incur no obligations chargeable to the government of the United States without specific authority from the government representative or his duly authorized agent."

Accusing President Truman of engaging "in a strike-breaking action," an announcement of the union national wage policy committee action read by Lewis J. Clark, C.I.O. union president, also declared the seizure order was "a complete double-cross" and the government was "giving the workers a raw deal."

A.F.L. Return Ordered

Clark said the committee decision was "unanimous." He and other union leaders said it was "final" because the committee included "delegated representatives" of all 267 locals throughout the country.

The A.F.L.-Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen's Union, which also has been on strike since Jan. 16, directed its 55,000 striking members to return to work and assured Mr. Truman that "we shall cooperate with you in this seizure fully."

The C.I.O. decision caused hasty conferences in the nation's capital but there was no immediate action. The White House, agriculture and labor departments declined immediate comment. So did representatives of major packing companies in Chicago and Gayle G. Armstrong, designated by the Agriculture department to direct operation of the seized plants.

C.I.O. Protests

The C.I.O. called the seizure order, directing workers to return at least temporarily at old rates of pay, a "double cross," contending the union had received government assurance the order would contain provisions for making effective any wage increases a fact-finding panel might recommend.

On this point Secretary of Agriculture Anderson in Washington said he telegraphed Clark to tell him that he, Anderson, would apply immediately for approval of any such recommendations and would so advise the wage stabilization board and other agencies.

Clark and C.I.O. headquarters said they had not received this telegram officially and therefore would not comment.

Hasty conferences in Washington followed the C.I.O. decision. The White House declined comment and so did packers representatives in Chicago, as well as Gayle G. Armstrong, New Mexico rancher designated by the Agriculture department to operate the seized plants.

Armstrong was deep in conferences with his assistants and packers' representatives concerning details of the terms and conditions of the seizure.

In a statement prepared for newsmen, Armstrong said: "Our job out here is to get the packing industry back into production. We need meat for the armed forces and for all our people. If we have the cooperation of labor and management we can have meat in the markets in a matter of days."

Return Asked

Before the C.I.O. Action Secretary of Agriculture Anderson in telegrams to Clark and Earl W. Jimerson, president of the A.F.L. union, asked them to direct their members to return to work for Uncle Sam. The secretary called attention to fines or imprisonment which could be invoked under the War Labor Disputes Act against anyone participating by strike or other interruptions in interference with operation of government-possessed facilities.

Fred Dowling, Toronto, Can., C.I.O. strike committee director, and counsel for the union, said they did not believe such violations entered into the picture because the union decision was made before the government actually took possession.

Jimerson said, while there might be some members of his A.F.L. union who would "rebel" against the back-to-work order without assurance of the demanded wage increases, he did not anticipate any friction with C.I.O. pickets.

"Our union has no membership in plants where the C.I.O. is the bargaining agent, just as the C.I.O. has none where we have the collective bargaining contract, so of course the problem of A.F.L. men crossing C.I.O. picket lines will not arise," Jimerson asserted.

He added that although some A.F.L. members may refuse to return to work, "it must also be remembered that there probably also will be plenty of CIO members who will object to obeying the C.I.O.'s stay-out order in opposing the government's management of the packing industry."

President Criticized

Clark's announcement of the C.I.O. wage policy committee action said:

"The President of the United States, in directing the seizure of the plants, has engaged in a strike-breaking action, the sole effect of which can be to play into the hands of the packers x x x.

"The government seizure order is a complete double-cross because prior to the announcement of the seizure this union had received from high governmental offices assurances that the order would contain provisions for making effective (wage) increases that the (fact-finding) panel might recommend."

The statement also called on "the entire trade union movement and on groups of citizens everywhere" for support and added:

"The United Packinghouse Workers of America desire to cooperate with their government. But under all the circumstances they can only believe that the government is helping the cause of the packers and giving the workers a raw deal." It also said:

"We are prepared to return to work at such time as we are assured that the equalities of our case will be given consideration and that a substantial wage increase will be put into effect."

Text of C.I.O. Meat Union's Strike Statement

CHICAGO, Jan. 25 (AP).—Following is the complete text of the statement issued today by the wage policy committee of the United Packinghouse Workers of America, announcing refusal of the Congress of Industrial Organizations unionists to return to work under government operation of strike-bound meat-packing plants:

STATEMENT IN CONNECTION WITH WHETHER WE GO BACK TO WORK OR NOT

In a meeting of delegated representatives held in Chicago today, Jan. 25, the packinghouse

workers organized in the U. P. W. A., C. I. O., determined that they would not return to work when the government takes over the operation of the packing plants on Saturday. They reached this conclusion for the following reasons:

1. Packinghouse workers joined in the no-strike pledge given by the C. I. O. to the President of the United States during the war. That pledge was maintained practically 100 per cent. There was not one single major strike in the packing industry during the entire period of the war. During this same period and on two different occasions the National War Labor Board denied their application for wage increases while granting such increases to other industries.

In addition, we desire to again direct the public's attention to the fact that even during the present strike situation we have, upon request of the United States Army, ararnged to handle meat products belonging to the Army and now present in the plants, so as to assure the Army of the delivery of their supplies.

2. Packinghouse workers are among the lowest-paid workers in the nation: working in an occupation that is hazardous, unpleasant and unclean. Over 75 per cent of the employees of Swift & Co., according to company figures, the largest packers in the industry, are employed at wage rates of less than 87 cents an hour. Since prior to Pearl Harbor no general wage increase has been granted in the industry. The last increase of five cents an hour came in August, 1941. During this period the cost of living has risen by at least 33 per cent, according to official government admission, but more realistically, for low-paid people, around 50 per cent.

Cites Bargaining

3. The packinghouse workers have been bargaining with the employers, seeking a wage increase since September, 1945. The offers obtained from the large packers vary from four cents an hour to 10 cents an hour. This, in spite of the fact that other major industries have proposed wage increases substantially in excess of those offered by the packers. From September to Jan. 16, at which time the strike took place, this union called to the attention of the appropriate governmental officials the dangers of the situation, sought their assistance in resolving the dispute and urged them to take action that would prevent a strike. Although many assurances were given, no concrete action was forthcoming.

4. The President of the United States, in directing the seizure of the packing plants for Saturday at 12:01 a. m., has engaged in a strike-breaking action, the sole effect of which can be to play into the hands of the packers.

Prior to the announcement of the seizure, this union had received from high governmental officials assurances that the order would contain provisions for making effective increases that the panel might recommend. The order for seizure, however, is a complete double-cross, in that no such provision is contained therein.

Under this order of seizure, the Department of Agriculture, notoriously sympathetic to the packing interests, will operate the plants. The seizure is not a seizure in reality but only in fiction, since it has already been announced that the Department of Agriculture will carry on its operations through the existing personnel who are employees of the packers and through presidents or chairmen of the boards of the various companies.

It is interesting to note in passing that the Secretary of Agriculture has also been authorized to use such facilities of the War Department as may be necessary, and this at a time when G. I.s throughout the world are clamoring to be returned home. It is significant that although the government is unable to bring our soldiers home from China and other foreign countries they have ample forces available, apparently, to attempt to break a strike and to maintain the packers' profits.

Contrasts Steel

Under the circumstances, it is obvious that the packers will continue to profiteer and the workers are expected to return without any wage increases. It is significant that this discriminatory treatment is being meted out to the packinghouse workers, whereas the President has done nothing to enforce his recommendation to the steel companies for a settlement of the steel case other than expressious wishes that the steel companies would co-operate. Nor has he taken any action to make effective the report of the fact-finding panel in the General Motors situation.

If the government were sincere in the action which it now proposes to take, the least they could do would be to insure that during the period of government operation, the owners of the packing companies would make no profit, but that the cost of meat to the consuming public would be reduced. If the government were sincere in taking this action, the least that it could do would be to give assurance to the workers of the industry that their just request for wage increases would be met. Neither of the assurances have been forthcoming but rather, as indicated above, groups sympathetic to the packers are placed in charge of the operations of these plants and no assurances are given to the workers of any remedies for their needs.

(5) Under all these circumstances, we suggest to the President of the United States the following action and we call upon him to make these suggestions effective as soon as practicable:

A. Since the packing industry is concerned with the production of an essential item of food, we ask that he transmit a message to Congress calling upon the Congress to establish the packing industry as a public utility and to provide for its regulation as such, so that the consumer and the farmer may be protected against the packers' practices, which have resulted in these two groups, along with the employees of hte packing industry, bearing the burden of packer profiteering. The regulation of the industry as a public utility would insure to the public a knowledge of the costs and the profits of these companies, which are not now available, and the guaranty that the price of meat would be maintained on a level consistent with the public interest and the farmer in his turn would receive a living wage for the livestock that he produces.

Investigation Asked

B. When the government takes over control of the packing industry at 12:01 a. m. Saturday, it institutes immediately an investigation into the operations of the packers, since it then presumably will be in possession of all the books and records of these companies, for the purpose of ascertaining violations, if any, of the anti-trust act and other monopolistic practices. Also, the degree to which the packers have complied with all regulations of O. P. A. on which there has been much litigation during the war years.

It is also suggested that an inquiry be made into the packers' selling and buying practices, distribution methods and their employment methods so that the public at large may be advised as to the reason for the packers' insistent demand, in spite of their tremendous profits, for increased prices.

C. We also urged the Secretary of the Treasury to accept the proposal of Philip Murray, of the C. I. O., calling for the repeal of the carry-back and carry-forward provisions of the tax laws, which have become anti-democratic weapons in the hands of the big corporations to be used against the people of the United States.

This union calls on the entire trade union movement and on groups of citizens everywhere to join with them in assuring that the action suggested here will be made effective. The United Packinghouse Workers of America desire to co-operate with their government, but under all the circumstances they can only believe that the government is helping the cause of the packers and giving the workers a "raw" deal. We are prepared to return to work at such time as we are assured that the equities of our case will be given consideration and that a substantial wage increase will be put into effect.

Lewis Returns to AFL With 500,000 Miners

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 25—(AP) John L. Lewis returned today to the American Federation of Labor which he split asunder a decade ago.

The big man who created the C.I.O., and then left it in a huff over the 1940 Roosevelt election, which he bitterly opposed, brought his 500,000 United Mine Workers back to the parent federation and was quickly elevated to a seat on the policy-making executive council.

He would not have come back without that place among the 13 all-powerful union heads on the council. Previously he turned a cold shoulder on re-affiliation without an assured council seat.

A.F.L. President William Green, mindful of the stories that Lewis' return to the federation boded an end to his reign of more than two decades, emphasized he would remain as president.

Announcement Made

Lewis will be the 13th vice president, but Green said the line of succession to the presidency is not numerical.

Green made the long-heralded announcement of Lewis' return to a room-full of reporters. He looked almost grim. Speaking slowly, he said that Lewis' action was "significant."

"It might be interpreted as a move designed to place the house of labor in order," said the 72-year-old A.F.L. head.

"It is significant in this respect: That the membership of the workers of the country are placing more and more emphasis upon the need of unity and solidarity. It will have a profound effect upon a united labor movement.

"I interpret this step taken by the mine workers as evidence on their part of a desire to wipe out division and establish unity."

There was no mention of Lewis' brain-child—the C.I.O.— which is locked in postwar wage struggle at present. C.I.O. unions are striking in steel, electrical manufacturing, meat packing General Motors, and similarly came to grips over pay in the oil refining and glass industries.

Green has made much of the comparative absence of strikes among A.F.L. unions. Lewis has a contract which can be reopened, if he chooses, prior to April 1, but he has not thus far lined up in the fight for continuation of wartime wages.

Lewis Heads for Florida

Lewis who will be 66 on Feb. 12 and became a grandfather a fortnight ago, was en route to Miami from Springfield, Ill. He is expected here Sunday or Monday, to take his place on the council. Only routine business is anticipated next week, however. He succeeds Harvey W. Brown, president of the machinists, who quit the A.F.L.—at least temporarily—in a jurisdictional tussle with the carpenters.

It was the carpenters' boss—William L. Hutcheson—who paved the way for Lewis' return. Lewis and "Big Bill" traded punches at the 1935 A.F.L. convention in Atlantic City. They patched up their differences in 1940 when Lewis came out for Republican Wendell L. Willkie, against the late President Roosevelt. Hutcheson is a staunch Republican. Lewis supported Roosevelt actively only in 1936. In most other presidential elections he has been in Republican ranks.

When he left the C.I.O., Lewis established a catch-all "District 50" in his mine workers' union and brought variety of trades under it, including construction, chemical workers, office and supervisory workers, and even dairy farmers.

Because of its constant jurisdictional over-lap with A.F.L. unions, this created an obstacle to Lewis' return to the A.F.L. for some time.

Green said these problems would be disposed of by the council, as they arise. Lewis was believed to have insisted upon a council seat for this reason, as much as any.

Lewis sent in a check for $9,000, representing January dues for 600,000 members. An associate said prior to the miners' return that there were 400,000 bituminous miners, 72,000 anthracite miners, and another 130,000 carried on the union rolls but still in the armed forces.

Progressives Opposed

John Marchiando, president of the A.F.L.-Affiliated Progressive Miners Union with 35,000 members, voiced vigorous opposition to readmission of the U.M.W. and said a convention of Progressive miners will be called quickly to "decide whether to accept the A.F.L. verdict."

Marchiando said the readmission of Lewis and his U.M.W. violated the A.F.L. constitution, which he said contains a clause providing that when a charter is held by one organization, its written consent is required before a rival organization may be chartered.

The Progressives' convention will be called in Springfield, Ill., as soon as possible, Marchiando stated. The group was chartered by the A.F.L. in 1938 and given the same jurisdiction over coal workers that Lewis' U.M.W. held previously.

FORD, AUTO UNION REPORTED NEARER WAGE AGREEMENT

DETROIT, Jan. 25—(AP) Wage negotiations between the C.I.O. United Auto Workers Union and the Ford Motor Co. were recessed today until next week with persistent rumors that the two-cents an hour difference had been narrowed sharply.

There was no statement, however, from company or union as the fifth session this week was adjourned.

The union which originally demanded a 30 per cent wage rate increase was offered to settle with Ford for about 16 per cent—19 1-2 cents an hour—while the company had countered with a proposal of 14.4 per cent or 17 1-2 cents an hour.

The union demands on Chrysler Corp., also have been cut from 30 per cent to about 17.1 per cent. What the company has offered has not been disclosed but the negotiators were also reported "close together." A corporation spokesman said merely that "progress is being made." The conferees will meet again tomorrow.

GM Deadlock Holds

Meanwhile the deadlocked General Motors strike which has kept 175,000 production workers idle for 65 days was making itself felt elsewhere in the industry. Packard Motor Car Co. began laying off assembly line workers as its stock of crankshaft and connecting rod bearings, obtained from GM, neared exhaustion. The first of 8,000 Packard workers scheduled for lay-off during the ensuing week were sent home today.

At the Ford Motor Company's Rouge plant in nearby Dearborn, 15,000 workers were laid off today because of the steel industry strike. Another 25,000 are to be released next week. Ford currently is employing about 110,000 workers.

Shortages developing from the recently settled glass industry strike have resulted in the laying off of 8,700 Chrysler Corp. workers in the Detroit area. Similarly 2,600 Briggs Manufacturing Co. workers have been idled by lack of parts for automobile body and other car industry equipment.

WILSON HOLDS U.S. COULD PUT END TO STRIKES

General Motors Head Ties Higher Prices to Any Rise in Wages.

DENIES A CONSPIRACY MOVE

Tells Senate Body He Knows of No Mutual Strategy to Resist C. I. O. Wage Demands.

Washington, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors Corporation, testified today that the present waves of strikes would end if the Government "clarifies its position on wages, prices and strikes."

"I think the parties could get together then," he said at a Senate Labor Committee hearing on fact-finding legislation asked by President Truman.

Opposing this and any other legislation to force settlement of labor disputes, Wilson apologized for seeming to be evasive on Senators' questions.

Senator Ellender (D.-La.), pleading with Wilson to be a little more specific, asked if Congress should pass legislation to control strikes when both collective bargaining and mediation fails.

"My answer is no," Wilson said. "The reason I say no is that this would infringe upon the right of men to strike and the rights of management. Along with the right to strike goes the right of management to say no."

Wilson avoided a direct answer when a committee member proposed that the two-month-old strike against his firm be submitted to an arbitrator named by President Truman.

Wilson said that "if you want higher wages paid you are going to have higher prices."

He opposed fact finding, compulsory arbitration or extension of the wartime presidential powers for Government seizure and operation of industry during strikes.

At one point Wilson said that if the country was going to "hold the line on prices, then we'll have to worry along with strikes and all take a big loss," he added. "I think we're going to have some awful bad strikes before the men go back to work at the wages at which the men were working before."

Senator Murray (D.-Mont.), chairman of the committee, said General Motors was in an impregnable situation because during the strike period it could recover excess profits taxes to offset losses.

"That had nothing to do with our case," Wilson replied. "You may think it funny but I did not figure on getting any money back."

Murray said that the corporation could recover taxes even if the strike lasted a year.

"I don't think the strike is going to last a year," Wilson said. "What bothers me is plans for plant modernization. We have not enough money in General Motors to carry out those plans."

Denies Conspiracy.

At the same time, Wilson told the committee that General Motors was not a party to any "industrial conspiracy" against labor and that industry so far as he knew had not agreed on any mutual strategy to resist C. I. O. wage demands.

Under close questioning by Senator Morse (R.-Wash.) he made no direct answer to the Senator's proposal that both the United Automobile Workers and General Motors submit their wage dispute to an impartial arbitrator, named by the President, and agree to accept the arbitrator's decision.

Morse declared that "in view of what looks like a knock down, drag out fight," between labor and management, both sides should agree to that type of settlement.

To avoid what he called a possible economic civil war Morse said the Government likewise should agree to make necessary price adjustments to compensate for such arbitrated wage increases if that course is found necessary.

Wilson observed that one of the difficulties in settling labor disputes by arbitration was a belief by both management and labor that impartial arbitrators were difficult to find.

Asked by Morse regarding charges by Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, of an industrial conspiracy to fight labor, Wilson replied:

"It is not true that industry is organized on an economic basis equivalent to the C. I. O."

"You mean that it is not true that there is one mutual strategy?" asked Morse.

"It is not true," Wilson replied. "I have talked with other men because I'm worried about the situation just as they are. But it would be impossible for us to get together on a mutual basis."

On the other hand, Wilson accused the C. I. O. of having a labor monopoly, declaring that Murray has "terrific power, a monopoly power—and he has a great responsibility as to how it is used or abused."

"If that were true on industry's side," he continued, "we'd break it up in this country."

He said that the pending bill, to give statutory being to fact-finding boards, would seriously interfere with collective bargaining and tends toward a socialistic state.

643 G.M. Strike Families Now On Relief

Detroit, Jan. 25 (AP)—Daniel J. Ryan, city welfare director, said today that 643 families of General Motors strikers are on relief in Detroit and that 1,164 have applications on file.

The director explained that those on relief here did not have to prove the merits of the strike to get assistance, adding:

"They had to submit documentary proof of their need, and where that existed they were qualified.

"Our tight intake policy has kept the number low, but no one who really needs help is refused. How they got into their financial predicament is not our primary concern."

Based On Needs

Ryan said relief payments are based on minimum needs of the individual family. For example, a man and wife and two children, aged 2 and 3, would receive $49.81 every two weeks.

The General Motors strike, entering its sixty-sixth day, has made idle some 30,000 production workers in Detroit.

The United Automobile Workers (CIO) provides soup kitchens for strikers' families and pays doctor bills and other emergency expenses from its strike fund.

This is largely financed by contributions of union members. The UAW's G.M. staff members from Director Walter P. Reuther on down have contributed their entire paychecks since the strike began.

General Motors offered on December 19 to pay strikers' hospitalization insurance while they are off the job. Substantial participation in the plan locally was reported by the corporation, but no figures were available.

Savings, Bonds Gone

Ralph McPhee, chairman of Michigan's Citizens Committee to Aid GM Strikers, estimated recently that 40,000 of the 175,000 idle in the nation had exhausted their savings and war bonds.

McPhee announced appointment of a welfare subcommittee of prominent social workers to screen requests for aid by strikers from a fund financed by public contributions. He said twenty Detroit doctors had offered their services free to destitute strikers.

Steel Walkout Hits Other Lines Harder

Pittsburgh, Jan. 25 (AP)—The nation-wide steel strike bit deeper into related industries today, with no hint that either union or management planned a new move to bridge the 3½-cent-an-hour wage gap that has kept 750,000 CIO steelworkers idle for the last five days.

More than 50 coal mines were closed in four states, with 17,000 miners idle. About 5,000 workers were furloughed by railroads serving steel mills.

The Ford Motor Company announced that it was threatened with "a complete shutdown unless the steel strike is settled speedily." A spokesman said 15,000 workers would be laid off tonight and 25,000 more in a week.

Fairless Stands On 15 Cents

Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the United States Steel Corporation, which is the tacitly accepted bargaining agent for most of the steel producers and fabricators and also ore mines and aluminum plants, reiterated his stand that 15 cents an hour is the highest raise the industry can pay.

President Truman rejected a suggestion from Fairless for an all-industry wage conference at the White House and reiterated his belief that the steel companies should give an 18½-cent raise. Fairless did not comment on the President's statement.

Mr. Truman disclosed that the Government is considering operation of its big steel plant at Provo, Utah.

Kaiser's Suggestion

From Henry J. Kaiser, West Coast steel producer, came a suggestion that the steel strike could be solved by granting workers an increase of approximately 18½ cents an hour, plus an incentive bonus for high production.

Kaiser has accepted the 18½-cent figure for his Fontana (Cal.) plant. Kaiser's statement underscored the word "approximate" in speaking of the 18½-cent raise, but went on, "provided a bonus clause based upon higher productivity is included."

Tax Refunds Fought

In Washington, meanwhile, the Treasury Department had under study a congressional proposal to deny corporations the right to recover a portion of the 1945 excess-profits taxes. Representative Bailey (D., W.Va.), who introduced legislation to repeal the excess profits carry-back provision, said Chairman Doughton (D., N.C.) of the Ways and Means Committee had referred the bill to the Treasury for its opinion.

The 1946 tax law provides that corporations may recover a part of their 1945 excess-profits tax payments if they operate at a loss in 1946. Bailey contends that this encourages them to fight pay-raise demands.

"Entirely aside from this angle," Bailey declared, "I would favor repeal of the carry-back provision as a sound business policy. What will happen to the President's budget if the nation's large corporations claim any large percentage of the $20,000,000,000 they have paid in as excess profits?"

Another Law Proposed

Another bill that may have an effect on the steel strike was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Eberharter (D., Pa.). It would deny tax-refund claims by corporations for the time their plants were closed by strikes.

Eberharter declared that United States Steel "led the rest of the steel industry in thumbing its nose at the President" in rejecting his 18½-cent raise proposal, and added:

"Under our present tax laws, if the arrogant rule or ruin attitude of the steel trust results in the production in 1946 of not a single ounce of steel, the Treasury of the United States may be called upon to deliver to the steel companies in the form of tax refunds amounts estimated to run as high as $145,000,000."

Legislation of the sort offered by Eberharter was called for recently by Philip Murray, president of the CIO steelworkers.

Strikers Buying Less

The economic pinch of the strike was beginning to be felt. At Aliquippa, Pa., where 10,000 Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation workers are on strike—about a third of the town's population—a grocer said, "We're beginning to feel it. The wives are buying more frugally."

Pennsylvanians on strike are entitled to unemployment insurance after a five-week waiting period, but actually it will be about two months before the first checks arrive.

One 14-Cent Raise Given

At Valparaiso, Ind., 400 members of the CIO United Steelworkers at the Indiana Steel Products Company voted to continue working after the firm offered a raise of 14 cents an hour on the basic hourly rate, with a production bonus of 3 cents. The company, which had been working three 48-hour shifts, said it would revert to three 40-hour shifts.

Andrew C. Doyle, of the New York State Labor Mediation Board, invited representatives of the American Locomotive Company and the Car Wheel Company and their union employes to meetings Monday. The union said it would accept; the companies had not commented.

A USW official said five small steel fabricating plants in the Detroit area had "made overtures" to settle. "We told them we'd go back to work for 18½ cents an hour, retroactive to January 1, and they said they'd get in touch with us later," he said.

At Birmingham, the Rheem Manufacturing Company closed its production lines, making many of its 250 workers idle.

STRIKE MAY HALT EXPORT OF STEEL

Washington, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—Unless the steel strike is terminated by next Monday the 800,000-ton quarterly allocation the industry had promised the export trade will be canceled, it was learned today in authoritative quarters.

The industry, on request of the Civilian Production Administration and the foreign commerce section of the Department of Commerce, almost on the eve of the declaration of the strike, entered into the export allocation agreement, it was stated. An estimated $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 in steel exports per quarter year, is involved.

It was learned that the industry has notified Government authorities that unless the strike ends by next Monday, the allocation priority will be canceled.

REP. M'CORMACK SAYS G.O.P. BACKS DRIVE ON LABOR

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25 — (AP) Rep. McCormack of Massachusetts, House Democratic leader, said tonight that the Republican party has "given the nod to big business" and told it to "go ahead and break the unions."

In a speech prepared for an NBC broadcast, he called for continuation of a Democratic administration and Congress to maintain and strengthen "the social gains of yesterday."

Industry Deadlocked

McCormack declared that as the people "behold industry locked in a standstill on the very threshold of a new and promising age, I believe they can already identify the forces that have brought the wheels of industry to a stop."

"Why," he asked, "are certain great corporations in America refusing to accept reasonable compromises of their wage disputes—compromises of the kind that have always been regarded in the past as the way of reasonable men, the American way of 'splitting the difference' and then going ahead and getting back to work?

"Why do these recalcitrant corporations suddenly abandon the American way at this time? Why do they refuse to match labor's acceptance of the compromises reached by fact-finding boards? Why do they stand pat and ignore their responsibilities to the public?

"If this is a last-ditch struggle to break the back of organized labor and end collective bargaining in America, if this is a war of attrition against the working people of America, which party in government has given its political blessing to that war, who has flashed the green-light signal?

G.O.P. Flashes Pa

"I have sat in ... Congress and I ha... men... speak bitter wo... lized labor. I have w... olitical scene-setting for this crisis through many months of haranguing by my Republican colleagues in the House of Representatives.

"Yes, the Republican party has long ago given the nod to big business, has long ago said, 'Go ahead and break the unions as you broke them after World War I. Crush them, fell them, and let the consequences descend upon America where they may!'

"But as I once believed in the integrity of government under a Democratic administration with President Franklin D. Roosevelt at its head, so do I believe in the integrity of our government under the leadership of President Harry S. Truman."

Stockman Calls British Loan A Handout

Washington, Jan. 25 (AP)—Asserting the American people would be left "holding the sack" if the Government made the proposed $3,750,000,000 loan to Great Britain, Representative Stockman (R., Ore.) said today it would be the opening wedge for requests for loans from other nations.

"We played Santa Claus to the world once before—after the first World War," Stockman said in a speech prepared for House delivery. "We ought to have learned a little from experience. I contend that we will have enough to do to pay off our own debts without also advancing some four and one half billion dollars to finance British imperialism abroad."

Says Others Expect Handouts

He said if the British "get their feet inside the door of the United States Treasury we'll have plenty of other customers right behind them, all expecting handouts." Russia hopes to get $6,000,000,000, he said, while France, Italy, Belgium, Poland and other countries are once again "looking to good old Uncle Sam to bail them out of their economic difficulties at the expense of the American taxpayers.

He said it was perfectly obvious the United States could not make the loan without bankrupting itself. He said there were two agreements in the proposed British loan—one for an outright loan of $3,750,000,000 and other to accept $650,000,000 in full payment of a "$25,000,000,000 lend-lease aid.

He said the loan would be repaid over a period of 50 years with five years' grace before any interest is paid.

"Vets Would Like Those Terms"

"I know lots of people who would like to borrow money on terms like that," Stockman said. "There are, for example, any number of veterans out in Oregon who would jump at a chance of buying a farm if they could get an interest rate of 1.62 per cent interest instead of three or four per cent, and five years to get on their feet before a payment becomes due. I think we could do a lot more good and have a better chance of getting this money back, if we used it to make loans to veterans or to further develop the resources here at home that will provide a higher standard of living for our own people."

He said: "We will be required to lower our trade barriers and permit foreign goods to flood our domestic markets in competition with things we produce, thus lowering wages, stifling industry, throwing American workers out of jobs and decreasing the demand for products raised on our own farms. I can well imagine the reaction of our wool growers in Oregon, for example, upon being told that we must increase our imports of wool from Australia to make sure that Britain doesn't default on her loan."

U. S.-British Deal On Troopship Cost

May Cancel Out Millions in Bookkeeping Charges

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25 (AP)—British sources said today their country had expressed willingness to accept a deal to erase multi-million-dollar bookkeeping charges for ferrying home thousands of United States and British soldiers.

Under this arrangement, proposed by the United States, the British would cancel the bill for transporting G. Is from Europe aboard the Queen Mary. In return the United States would mark off charges for the use of ten Victory ships which have been taking home British and colonial troops in the Pacific.

The exact amounts on each side of the ledger were not disclosed, but British sources said they were about the same. These sources, which cannot be named, reported that British approval of the plan had been forwarded to the War Shipping Administration.

Since the termination of lend-lease a tentative charge of $100 a soldier has been assessed by the British against this government for each G. I. carried home. This figure, however, was subject to revision at the time of final accounting. A similar financial arrangement was made for the British troops moving homeward on the ten Victories.

The British sources said that the troop-carrying capacity of the ten Victories was slightly under that of the Queen Mary but that the cost of operating them was roughly the same.

BYRNES NAMES ATOM BOARD

Lilienthal To Head Group Guarding 'Know-How'

Washington, Jan. 25 (AP)—David E. Lilienthal, chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority which helped power the making of the atomic bomb, was named today to head a consulting board to safeguard the "know-how."

The board members will advise a five-man committee which Secretary of State Byrnes established on January 7 as he left for the United Nations meeting in London. The committee is to study "controls and safeguards" for protecting America's interests when the United Nations commission on atomic energy starts to function.

Board members named today by the State Department in addition to Lilienthal are: Chester I. Barnard, president of the New Jersey Bell Telephone Company; Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, of the California Institute of Technology; Charles A. Thomas, vice president of the Monsanto Chemical Company, and Harry A. Winne, vice president and manager of the engineering apparatus department of the General Electric Company.

To Furnish Information

The board will furnish technical and other information and advice to the State Department committee. This group consists of Under Secretary of State Dean Acheson, chairman; John J. McCloy, former Assistant Secretary of War, and the three men who supervised development of the bomb—Dr. Vannevar Bush, Dr. James B. Conant and Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves.

Byrnes set up the committee in anticipation of the United Nations action in naming a commission to study the problem of atomic energy control. While it advocated formation of the commission and will participate in its study, the United States retains the right to decide, in Byrnes's words, "what information the Government should place at its disposal." The State Department committee's function will be to make recommendations in this field.

Meanwhile, the special Senate committee on atomic energy added a note of novelty to its protracted hearings on legislation covering domestic control of the new power source.

Professors Hold Round Table

Robert M. Hutchins, chancellor of the University of Chicago, and three members of his faculty, engaged in an hour's round-table discussion of the control problem in the presence of the committee. The senators had a question period at the end.

Urging that domestic use of atomic energy be subordinated to international agreements against the use of atomic weapons, Hutchins cautioned that still more destructive engines of war might be developed. He said his knowledge led him to believe that the atomic bomb might be overshadowed by new and more terrible weapons.

R. G. Gustavson, a chemistry professor, gave a hint of possible future developments when he noted that studies were being made of a particle of matter known as the mesotron. He said it was smaller than a neutron but larger than an electron. He hinted that vast quantities of energy might be tapped if the neutron could be broken up with electrons.

Supremacy "Only This Morning"

Hutchins emphasized that every possible step must be taken to prevent another war. He said:

"The assumption that there is going to be a war would lead to the conclusion that we had better start the war this morning, because only this morning can we be sure of having supremacy in atomic bombs.

"No plans for atomic energy, and no plans for anything else, for that matter, can be made on the supposition that we are going to have war. Any war we have will be so destructive that no plans can be carried out."

Robert Redfield, anthropology professor, declared a major war would "destroy both combatants as leaders of civilization."

Edward H. Levi, law professor, cautioned against permitting monopolies and cartels to control fissionable material.

Half-A-Billion Cost Seen For Atom Test

Washington, Jan. 25 (AP)—The test of the A-bomb versus the modern warship stacked up today as a proposition that will cost close to half a billion dollars, if not more.

The exact amount was impossible to calculate, but navy figures supplied an indication of what would be involved in the forthcoming atomic experiment in the Pacific.

Hull-And-Engine Costs

This is what they show:

It cost $239,000,000 alone for the hull and engines of the 47 United States combat units assigned to the guinea-pig fleet.

It cost more than $100,000,000 for the navy transports which make up about half of the 47 noncombat types which also will be targets.

Moreover, navy men have unofficially estimated that the operating expenses involved in staging the experiment next spring will run about $100,000,000. The pay of personnel and cost of supplies would boost the total.

No Data On Nazi, Jap Ships

No estimates are available on the one German and two Japanese warships that will be used in the test, but all are of the most costly types.

The hull-and-engine costs are but a part of the total outlay for the United States warships, but no figures could be obtained on the expense of armament and fittings that boost the final cost total. On the other hand, the ships will be stripped of much of their guns and fittings for the tests.

The figures do not take into account subsequent expenditures for modernization, which in the case of the battleship Nevada ran more than $7,000,000, exceeding her original hull-and-engine cost.

Over 30 Years Old

Vice Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, commander of the experiment, declined yesterday to estimate the current worth of the ships or the cost of the operation.

Noting the age of the warships, which exceeds 30 years for all four of the American battleships, he insisted that they were of negligible value now for fighting purposes and that monetary cost values would be irrelevant.

"The value of the experiments will be greater than the cost," he maintained, declaring the information to be obtained toward shaping the national defense to the atomic era would be of incalculable worth to the country's future.

Dr. Hutchins Testifies

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25 (AP).—Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, chancellor of the University of Chicago, told Senators today that if the United States is going to assume an atomic war is coming "we had better start the war this morning."

Discussing control of the new power source before the Senate atomic energy committee, he declared it is impossible to frame domestic control legislation, the subject before the committee, on the assumption there is going to be such a conflict.

Dr. Hutchins and three other members of the University of Chicago faculty conducted a round-table discussion of the control problem for the committee. His colleagues were R. G. Gustavson, chemistry professor; Robert Redfield, anthropology specialist, and Edward H. Levi, law professor.

BYRNES RETURNS FROM UNO MEETING

Washington, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—Secretary of State Byrnes returned from London today and said he was "greatly gratified" at the progress made by the United Nations Organization during the last two weeks.

30.24-573

President Truman's four-engined transport plane, the Sacred Cow, bringing Byrnes and his party, landed at National Airport at 12:45 P. M.

Byrnes told newsmen who met him at the plane that he intended to confer with President Truman at the White House as soon as possible. Postmaster - General Robert E. Hannegan and Under-Secretary of State Dean Acheson were among Government officials on hand to welcome him. He left Washington on January 7 to attend the first meeting of the UNO.

Byrnes told newsmen that he had been particularly anxious to attend the London meeting because the United States was the principal sponsor of the atomic energy resolution.

"I wanted to see that resolution adopted without amendment and I am happy to say that it was accepted unanimously," he said.

Asked when he expected the UNO's first session to end, Byrnes said:

"My guess would be about February 7."

He declined comment on Russia's notification to the UNO Security Council that the Soviet Union believed its difficulties with Iran should not be taken up by the council.

story:

1. He read in the morning papers of January 25, 1942, that the Roberts Commission, appointed by President Roosevelt, had found him and Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, commander of the Pacific Fleet, guilty of "dereliction of duty."

2. He telephoned General Marshall, 1941 chief of staff and friend of 39 years' standing, immediately and Marshall told him to stand pat.

Marshall Quoted

3. The next day, Marshall sent a memorandum to the Secretary of War, Henry L. Stimson, saying he had told Short "to take no action at the present time, that we had not yet had an opportunity to read the proceedings (of the Roberts Commission)" but that "I am now of the opinion that we should accept General Short's application for retirement today and to do this quietly without any publicity."

4. There followed correspondence between Secretary Stimson, the Secretary of the Navy, Frank Knox, and Attorney General Francis Biddle on how to phrase the acceptance of Short's request.

5. Finally it was decided the best way to phrase it without provoking a request for an immediate court-martial was "without condonation of any offense or prejudice to any future disciplinary action."

6. Short's retirement was made effective February 28, 1942.

Representative Murphy (D., Pa.) said the whole story wasn't being told.

He said there were many off-the-record sequences in the report of the army board which investigated Pearl Harbor.

Keefe Comments

Representative Keefe (R., Wis.) commented that at one time Marshall testified before this board for an hour and twenty minutes off the record.

Short also read an October 20, 1944, letter he received from Secretary Stimson relating to his counsel's efforts to get to records in the War Department.

The letter said much of the matter was secret, involving military security.

It concluded with an offer to let the information be communicated orally to Short "upon your written undertaking to me that you will not disclose any of this classified information to any person except with the prior approval of the Secretary of War."

"Naturally, I refused," said Short. "That would have meant I couldn't have used it in preparing for this committee."

Testifies On Navy

Earlier today Short testified that the Navy in Hawaii never passed on to him its pre-Pearl Harbor advice from Washington that Tokyo had ordered Japanese consulates to destroy their codes.

He gave that testimony after previously saying Admiral Kimmel had always informed him of anything the Admiral considered important.

"That was important, was it not?" Murphy asked.

"Very important," Short agreed.

Under Murphy's questioning, Short testified that the last conference he had with Kimmel before the December 7, 1941, attack was on December 3. That was the same day the Navy Department sent Kimmel word of Tokyo's code-destroying instructions to the embassies here and in London.

Short Not Notified

Short received no similar message from the Army.

Murphy asked if Short's own intelligence officers had not advised him that the Japanese consulate in Honolulu was burning its papers.

Col. George W. Bicknell did advise him December 6 that the consulate was burning some papers, Short said, but Col. (now Brig. Gen.) Kendall J. Fielder, head of his intelligence section, regarded the burning as "routine, something we were doing ourselves all the time."

Murphy said Bicknell had testified at secret Pearl Harbor inquiries by an army board that when he learned of the burning of the papers he considered war imminent.

He also said Short told this board he did not know about the burning of the papers until after the attack.

Statement Read

Murphy opened the transcript of the board's hearing and read this statement which Short was recorded as making:

"As a matter of fact, I did not know they were burning anything until after the FBI arrested them on the afternoon of the attack."

Acknowledging he had given such testimony, Short said that on talking later with Bicknell and Fielder he had learned he was mistaken. He said he felt certain now that they had told him earlier about the destruction of the papers.

Murphy referred frequently to Short's previous testimony and drew a protest from the witness that he was not stating it precisely.

"I think you are misquoting me again," Short remarked with warmth at one point.

Murphy's Face Flushes

"Again?" Murphy shouted, his face flushing. "All right, I'll produce the quotations. I want to be eminently fair to you, but I want the facts."

Short said he did not mean to imply that the committee member was deliberately misquoting him.

Murphy asked how often Short's army staff held a conference.

It was routine to have one every Saturday morning, Short replied, adding that one was held on December 6.

port on the inquiry.

"I've got other work to do," Keefe declared. "I can't go on here forever."

Democrats Seek Early End

Democratic members generally have been agitating for an early end to the hearings. They contend that little new evidence is likely to materialize after the committee finishes with Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, the 1941 Hawaiian army commander who now is on the stand.

Keefe's statement apparently indicated a division of opinion among the committee Republicans, most of whom have been urging as lengthy an inquiry as they believe evidence warrants.

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) said, that while he still hoped for completion of the inquiry by February 15, he saw little chance for such an early windup.

60 More Witnesses On List

However, Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) was of the opinion that many of the remaining 60-odd prospective witnesses could be dispensed with and the inquiry concluded by February 15.

Keefe said he thought the committee could cover all the ground necessary for compiling an intelligent report if it calls only five more witnesses.

He listed them as Capt. L. F. Safford, former head of navy communications; Col. R. S. Bratton, formerly chief of the Far Eastern division of Army Intelligence; Capt. Alwin D. Kramer, naval officer who delivered intercepted Japanese messages to high officials; Capt. A. H. McCollum, formerly of naval intelligence, and Capt. Ellis M. Zacharias, who reportedly forecast the Pearl Harbor attack.

Safford May Be The Next

Safford may be the next witness after Short, who was under cross-examination today by Representative Murphy (D., Pa.).

Murphy said he wants to find out from Short why army planes were held in a stage of readiness that required four hours' notice to get them into the air at the time of the December 7, 1941, attack.

Short told the committee yesterday that fourteen army fighters which did get into the air shot down ten Japanese planes.

The planes were lined up wing to wing on the airfields to prevent sabotage. Murphy said he couldn't understand why some of them weren't warmed up.

Short Replies Tartly

"You had those airplanes there to stop an air attack, didn't you?" he demanded of Short.

"That didn't mean that we had been told there was an air attack coming," Short answered tartly.

"No," said Murphy, "you were told that war was imminent and you wanted them (Washington officials) to tell you where the strike was coming."

"Yes, sir, if Washington had the information, and I think it did," the witness replied

Short contends that Washington withheld information which he would have evaluated as heralding an attack on Hawaii.

misquoting me again."

"I'll produce the quotations," Murphy reported. "I want to be eminently fair to you, but I want the facts."

Short said that Bicknell got the information about the code destruction on December 5, but did not tell Short about it until the next day.

He said Col. (now Brig.-Gen.) Kendall J. Fielder of his staff regarded the burning of papers as "routine, something we were doing ourselves all of the time."

Admits His Mistake.

Later Murphy returned to a point in Short's previous testimony where the retired general had said that he did not receive the information that the Japanese Consul was burning his codes until after the attack.

"As a matter of fact," Short had testified then, "I did not know they were burning anything until after the FBI arrested them on the afternoon of the attack."

Short said he had been mistaken in that statement, he found later after talking with Bicknell and Fielder. He now is sure, he said, that they told him about the destruction of papers at the consulate.

In response to questions, Short said that Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, then commander in chief of the fleet, had not told him about several messages dealing with Japanese code destruction orders, which were received at Pearl Harbor.

Short also termed incorrect a report made by Kimmel to the Navy Department, shortly after the attack, that Army anti-aircraft guns in the area were not manned.

Keefe told a reporter he already has notified other member that he will not attend sessions after that date, which Congress has

Marshall Said 'Stand Pat,' Then Urged He Be Retired, Short Says

Washington, Jan. 25 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short told the Pearl Harbor committee today that Gen. George C. Marshall recommended acceptance of Short's retirement request one day after "he had told me to stand pat" and to take no action toward leaving active service.

Short, 1941 army commander at Hawaii and a witness in the Senate-House investigation of the December 7, 1941, disaster, previously has contended that the War Department singled him out to be the scapegoat.

Short Tells His Story

The 65-year-old retired General, removed from the command shortly after the Japanese attack, used documents he said he got from War Department files to round out this Short testified that on September 20, 1942, he agreed to pass up his rights as to time limitations on a court-martial provided that when he was granted one, it be in open court.

Murphy asked: "You were insisting on the public disclosure of all our war plans for winning the war?"

"If they wanted to try me in a court-martial, I wanted all the facts disclosed to the people," said Short.

Keefe Threatens To Quit War Probe

Washington, Jan. 25 (AP)—Representative Keefe (R., Wis.) threatened today to walk out on the Pearl Harbor investigation if its hearings continue beyond the February 15 deadline.

Keefe said he already has notified other members of the Senate-House committee that he will not attend sessions after that date, which Congress has fixed for a re-

SHORT CLASHES WITH MURPHY

Charges He Was Misquoted at Hawaii Inquiry.

Washington, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—Gen. Walter C. Short protested today at the Pearl Harbor committee hearing that Representative Murphy (D.-Pa.) was "misquoting" him.

A brief flareup between the two came after Murphy asserted that Short had testified at previous inquiries that he did not know the Japanese consulate in Honolulu was burning its papers before the Japanese attacked on December 7, 1941.

Short, Army commander in Hawaii then, had just testified that his intelligence officer, Col. George W. Bicknell, informed him on December 6 of the consulate's action.

Demands Quotations.

Murphy contended that at three previous hearings Short had said he did not know about destruction of the papers.

Demanding the direct quotations of his former testimony, Short said: "I think you are fixed for a report on the inquiry.

"I've got other work to do," he declared. "I can't go on here forever."

Democratic members generally have been agitating for an early end to the hearings. They contend little new evidence is likely to materialize after the committee finishes with Short.

Keefe's statement apparently indicated a division of opinion among the committee Republicans, most of whom have been urging as long an inquiry as they believe evidence warrants.

ICKES ASKS STORING OF SCARCE METALS

We Have a Hundred-Year Supply of Only Nine Major Minerals, He Warns

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25 (AP)—Secretary Ickes urged today the stockpiling of scarce metals, along with increased exploration for new reserves.

Terming the war's drain on national assets "staggering," Mr. Ickes advocated the importation and storage of metals which were in short supply in this country.

In addition, Mr. Ickes said in a letter transmitting the Interior Department's annual report to President Truman, that this country should add to the import-built reserves from domestic production whenever the output exceeded actual use.

Mr. Ickes told the President that only nine of the major minerals remained in our known domestic reserves in sufficient quantity of usable grade to last 100 years or more. Known usable reserves of twenty-two other essential minerals had dwindled to a thirty-five-year supply or less, he said, while assured domestic petroleum deposits would last from fourteen to twenty years at the present rate of use.

The Secretary added, however, that prospects of making good on some of the war losses in oil reserves were "fairly good."

Mr. Ickes listed the nine minerals plentiful enough to last for 100 years as iron ore, nitrogen, magnesium, salt, bituminous coal and lignite, phosphate rock, molybdenum, anthracite and potash. He added:

"There are only nine of them out of the long list of metals that we must get at home or abroad in quantities as great as we need in order to hold our high place among the nations," he remarked.

"In the games of war and trade which nations play a century is only a little while. Military and economic campaigns have been planned that far ahead. Consequently, it behooves us to learn the true meaning of our meager supply, which is not that we will be weak in a hundred years but that we are relatively weak now.

"But we cannot henceforth count on any appreciable lapse of time between the threat and the event of a war."

Mr. Ickes advocated intensification of experiments in extracting metals from low-grade domestic ores by means of new and improved processes. He also suggested research to find more efficient methods of reusing scrap metals.

The Secretary called "our continued waste" of natural gas "inexcusably profligate."

Mr. Ickes predicted two programs already under way in the department would help conserve resources: regional development of river basins and exploration of the continental shelf.

Truman Delays Return of Some German P. W.s

Workers to Stay 60 Days to Boost Beet, Cotton and Pulpwood Output

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25 (AP)—President Truman today postponed for sixty days the scheduled return to Germany of prisoners of war working in this country.

The action was taken "principally in order to meet a temporary labor problem in the production of sugar beets, cotton and pulpwood."

Those affected are the so-called "contract prisoners," for whose labor farmers and other employers have contracted with the government. The employers pay the government for the labor at the prevailing wage and the government pays the prisoners 80 cents a day, keeping the rest of the money.

The War Department had announced that all prisoners would be withdrawn from agriculture and industry here by the end of February and would be repatriated by the end of April. Under the new order, the prisoners will be withdrawn from labor starting April 1 and will be sent home by the end of June.

German prisoners in this country now total about 198,000. Prisoners of other nationalities are not affected by today's order. The last Japanese were due to depart this month, and the War Department said some 10,500 remaining Italians would leave in the next few days.

N. E. Group Will Ask Truman Take Surplus Control from RFC

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25 — (AP) President Truman will be asked within a few days to put the administration of surplus war machinery and tools for small business under an agency other than the RFC.

The request will be made either directly by New England senators and representatives or through the special House Small Business committee of which Rep. Patman (D-Tex) is chairman.

This action was decided upon tonight by a special New England congressional committee named to obtain faster action in getting modern, surplus tooling and equipment to the small manufacturers and shop owners who are returning to peacetime production, Rep. Clason (R-Mass) chairman of the group, announced.

Procedure Mapped

Clason with Senator Saltonstall (R-Mass) and Reps. Ryter (D-Conn), Talbot (R-Conn), and Merrow (R-NH) agreed upon the procedure they will follow to "force immediate action on behalf of small business."

Clason disclosed that the problem was presented to Patman, but added that if action is not forthcoming in the "next seven to ten days we will go to the president ourselves."

The New Englanders recommended that authority given to RFC to exercise priority in obtaining surplus for small business be removed from that agency and that a provision of the 1944 law permitting small businessmen to turn in obsolete and worn-out equipment for surplus machinery and tooling be "immediately enforced."

The exchange provision has not been used. Former Surplus Property Administrator W. Stuart Symington notified New Englanders that administrative difficulties prevented its use heretofore.

Agencies Criticized

Criticizing administration of the Surplus Property Act by various agencies, Clason declared "we believed vigorous use of priority powers should be exercised for small businesses. This act is more than a year old, but small business has not received the treatment expected by Congres when it passed the law."

Originally small business matters were handled by the Smaller War Plants Corporation, but the President abolished that agency in a recent executive order, splitting its functions between the Commerce Department and the RFC. New England congressmen and businessmen both contended that RFC would be in "the untenable position of having to exercise priorities for small business against its own subsidiary, The War Assets Corporation." The result, they added, would be harmful to small businessmen attempting to reconvert their shops and plans.

Manufacturers of jewelry and silver products are confronted with the possibility of laying off workers in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut unless the government releases silver, New England senators were told today.

Edward Otis, secretary of the New England Manufacturing Jewelers and Silver Association, Providence, R. I., declared the industry, employing about 50,000 in the three New England states, "is beginning to feel the shortage."

Plea Made to Senators

Otis, former Senator Sinclair Weekes of Massachusetts and William McChesney, vice-president of the Gorham Company, Providence, appealed to members of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee to approve a bill aimed at releasing government-held silver.

The measure, sponsored by Senator Green (D-RI), would permit sale of silver for industrial uses at 71.11 cents an ounce.

The legislation, however, has met the opposition of senators from silver-producing states who are demanding that the government set a $1.29 per ounce minimum for silver.

Virtually no silver is available for industrial users, Otis declared, at the legal price ceiling of 71.11 cents an ounce. "Industrial workers are beginning to be laid off and this will continue in increasing numbers unless relief comes immediately." Otis estimated that 90 percent of the silver and jewelry manufacturers represented by his organizations were in the three states.

Senate Bill Asks Top Vet Priority

Washington, Jan. 25 (AP)—A bill to give veterans top priority in obtaining Government surplus property was introduced yesterday by Senators Maybank (D., S.C.), O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) and Chavez (D., N.M.).

The bill would give veterans first rights over all other priorities in obtaining property for their own use and to establish business, professional and agricultural enterprises.

New National Housing Administrator Named

Washington, Jan. 25 (AP)—President Truman today appointed his housing expediter, Wilson W. Wyatt, administrator of the National Housing Agency, effective February 1.

Wyatt, former Mayor of Louisville, Ky., who was brought in recently to push home construction, thus will have charge of all Government activities in the housing field. A housing agency source who asked not to be quoted by name said Wyatt had found himself handicapped to some extent by lack of authority.

John B. Blandford, Jr., the present housing administrator, will go to China shortly to set up a budget system for the Chinese Government, the White House announced. Blandford was assistant director of the Budget Bureau when President Roosevelt, in 1942, consolidated sixteen agencies dealing with housing into the National Housing Agency and put him in charge. He will remain an employé of the United States Government in his new assignment, on loan to the Chinese.

LUBIN QUITS U. S. POST

Washington, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—President Truman has accepted the resignation of Isador Lubin as Commissioner of Labor Statistics and associate United States representative on the Allied Reparations Commission.

The White House said today that Lubin's resignation is effective January 31. In accepting it, Mr. Truman wrote Lubin that he would still call upon his services whenever "the occasion warrants."

Lubin told the President in a letter that "personal obligations" were responsible for his departure from Federal service.

Charles G. Ross, press secretary, who disclosed the resignation, was asked whether Edwin Pauley will be replaced as head of the American reparations group in view of his nomination for Under-Secretary of the Navy. Ross said he didn't know and was not quite certain of the present status of the Reparations Commission.

PLATTSBURG IS 'SURPLUS'

Army Finds No Further Use for Old Civilian Training Post

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25 (AP)—The Army barracks at Plattsburg, N. Y., celebrated prior to the first World War as the site of the country's first civilian military training camps, were declared surplus today.

The barracks were used until recently as a convalescent center by the Army Air Forces and also had been utilized in recent years as an indoctrination school for naval officers.

In the peacetime years between the two World Wars the post, established in 1814, was garrisoned by the Twenty-sixth Infantry Regiment of the First Division.

The barracks are on Lake Champlain near where was fought, in October, 1776, the opening naval battle of the Revolutionary War.

Broken Leg Keeps Him in Army

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25 (AP).—After waiting three and one-half years to become a civilian again, Technician Fourth Grade William Faldner, of Cleveland, a concert violinist, must remain eight more weeks in the Army because of a fall on the ice. The War Department reported today that Mr. Faldner was within one day of separation when he fractured a leg in a fall at Fort Myer, Va. He cannot be discharged until the injury heals. He was a first violinist in the New York Metropolitan Opera orchestra prior to entering the Army, the War Department said.

VA Set To Guarantee Artificial-Limb Supply

Washington, Jan. 25 (AP)—The Veterans Administration today promised disabled war veterans an adequate supply of best-quality artificial appliances "even if the Federal Government has to go into the artificial arm, leg and eye business itself."

The pledge came from Walter Bura, head of the Veterans Administration prosthetic appliances services. Bura himself has but one leg. The other he lost in an accident.

Advisers Mostly Veterans

Most members of his newly appointed advisory committee are physically handicapped war veterans.

30.24-575

"You may be sure we have the welfare of the handicapped at heart," Bura said.

"We intend to set up five 'pilot' plants for manufacturing artificial eyes for war veterans.

"We will spend $1,000,000 a year in research on artificial legs and limbs. There will be an ultra-modern orthopedic shop in New York city under Dr. Mandell Shimberg, an outstanding authority.

Question Of Co-Operation

"The results of this research will be available to private appliance manufacturers who co-operate with us. If full co-operation cannot be obtained from the artificial limb industry, we will go ahead and do the job ourselves."

Bura said that supplying veterans with artificial aids will become effective immediately if the private manufacturers co-operate. His plans, approved by the committee, included these points:

1. Authority for veterans to choose any kind of appliance they want, which the Government will pay for, rather than one purchased by the Government on a low-bidder basis and handed to the veteran regardless of whether it suits him.

2. Issuance of credit cards to all handicapped veterans who require prosthetics, good in virtually any prosthetics appliance shop in the United States, for the repair of artificial aids. The bills would be sent to the Veterans' Administration.

3. The hiring of handicapped persons in Veterans Administration offices to be in charge of assembling equipment for testing and developing aids, and to make reports on the quality of devices offered veterans.

Aids For The Blind

4. Authority for the Veterans' Administration to purchase Braille books, typewriters, radios and similar equipment for blinded veterans.

5. Preparation of a catalogue of information on all types of artificial aids offered by private manufacturers and the Government.

600 WOMEN CONVENE ON NATIONAL DEFENSE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25 (AP)—Six hundred women, delegates from thirty-two patriotic and veterans' auxiliary organizations, opened tonight a two-day convention dedicated to establishing a 'womens' plan for national defense.

"Actually this is the first great organized step by American women for world peace," said John Stelle, national commander of the American Legion, whose women's auxiliary is sponsoring the meeting.

Mrs. Walter Craven, president of the auxiliary and convention chairman, set the theme in the opening address in which she endorsed universal military training.

Asserting that causes of war "can be ironed out by a properly functioning United Nations Organization," she added:

"Next we can see to it that our youth is equipped through universal military training to defend us in very short order."

But the greatest preventives of war, she said, were universal knowledge that wars do not pay and public sentiment against war.

The convention is the twentieth annual Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense, sponsored each year by one of the thirty-two organizations.

GOP Weighing Bloc Action On Strikes

Washington, Jan. 25 (AP)—Republican congressmen weighed today the advisability of a bold move to seize leadership in determining what form of strike-control legislation is to pass the House.

Minority Leader Joseph Martin (Mass.) declared that if they acted in concert they could easily take the lead away from the Democrats. The majority party is sharply divided on the strike-control question.

Some leading Democrats conceded Martin was right. They were skeptical, however, whether the Republicans could put up a solid front either. "The Republicans are just as weak and vacillating as some members of our own party," said Representative Cox (D., Ga.).

Meeting Next Week

Martin said the minority would meet next week to decide whether to take bloc action on various pending labor bills.

One member of his party was quick to express reservations. "If we get control and strikes get settled as a result," he said, "we will get full credit. But if things continue messed up, we'd get all the blame."

If the strategy is adopted, it will be tested when a modified fact-finding bill comes before the House late next week or early the following week.

Earlier Success

Several Republicans said they could make 'bloc voting' work in the House just as they did earlier this week in the Labor Committee.

At that time Representative Landis (R., Ind.) lined up all Republican committee members behind his modified version of fact-finding, even those who do not favor it. As a result, the committee approved the Landis bill.

Substitute Bill Planned

Landis said he will ask his party colleagues to stick together again when he tries to persuade the committee to draft a substitute. He explained he had decided his present version is "too weak and needs strengthening."

It would establish fact-finding boards to settle labor disputes, but it would not give them power to subpoena records and witnesses and would not ban strikes while the boards deliberate.

President Truman has asked that the boards have subpoena authority and that a 30-day no-strike "cooling-off" period be provided.

FEPC FIGHT BLOCKS CURBS ON STRIKES, SENATOR CHARGES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25 — (AP) Senator Eastland (D-Miss) told the Senate today that the Fair Employment Practice Bill and the minimum wage measure are being used to prevent passage of legislation to end industrial strife.

"If it is a filibuster," Eastland said of the move by Southern Democrats to keep the FEPC bill from coming to a vote, "it is a filibuster within a filibuster."

Action Delayed

Eastland said the Senate Labor Committee had reported out a bill to raise minimum wages from 40 to 65 cents an hour "instead of reporting out legislation to stop labor strife." He charged that "this is the strategy of the C.I.O. to prevent Congress from passing labor legislation" to bring back prosperity.

Eastland said that when the minimum wage bill comes to the Senate floor he will attempt to submit a substitute measure "designed to settle the strife between labor and management."

Earlier the Southern Senators let Senator Smith (R-NJ) speak for more than an hour in favor of the measure to set up a permanent commission with broad powers to prevent racial or religious discrimination.

After a hasty conference, the Southerners decided their parliamentary position would not be jeopardized and Senator McClellan (D-Ark), who held the floor, yielded temporarily.

The day brought no prospects of an end to the filibuster which has tied up the Senate since Jan. 17. Opponents of the bill belittled the possibility that any acceptable compromise could be worked out.

Smith told his colleagues he is aware that the racial question is "very dangerous and inflammatory," but believes the bill should be considered for that very reason.

Amendment Offered

Smith said he had been "deeply shocked at the implications" of some senators who have spoken against the bill that Negroes are "a hopelessly inferior and depraved race."

Smith offered an amendment to make the bill affect employers of 25 or more persons, rather than six or more, as approved by a committee.

Later Senator Capehart (R-Ind) introduced others. One would raise the base still higher, to 50 "citizens."

Senator Olin Johnston (D-SC) took up the talk. He said he worked in a cotton mill for 10 years and if the mills of South Carolina began mixing white and Negro workers "you wouldn't get the tranquility this bill talks about."

Johnston suggested that Senators supporting the FEPC bill ought to "hire some of these people themselves." He said the measure applies to Senators.

CLARK WARNS LABOR FIRMS

Tells 'Big Men' Public Is Kicked Around Too Much

Indianapolis, Jan. 25 (AP)—Tom C. Clark, United States Attorney General, tonight warned the "big men" of labor and business to "quit this tug of war for power."

"They have too much power now," Clark said in a speech prepared for delivery at the annual meeting of the Indiana Bar Association. "They must come forward in the interest of America and settle their differences. Otherwise your Government will have to step in—and when it steps in it will not be wearing patent leather slippers, either."

Earlier at a press conference, Clark promised that the Department of Justice would emphasize anti-trust and tax evasion prosecutions, and "be as tough as Federal law will permit" in dealing with adult criminals.

Silent On Meat Strike

He refused to comment, however, on today's refusal by the CIO packing-house workers' union to go back to work when the Department of Agriculture seizes strike-bound meat plants early tomorrow.

But he declared that strikes were resulting in too much "kicking around of the public" and added that "you can be sure that your Government will put an end to that."

In his speech to the State bar group he said, however, that "disputes cannot be settled with a stroke of the pen, because we have never given power like that to anyone's pen, and we never shall."

Warns Against Coercion

He warned against coercive legislation, declaring that labor restraints would lead to business restraints. He urged extension of the Price Control Act as a means of controlling inflation, and asked for public support of President Truman's fact-finding proposal for labor disputes.

Clark also said the recent loan agreement with Britain was necessary to assure adequate foreign markets for America, and urged its approval by Congress.

In his press conference, the Attorney General said he planned a continued war on monopolies without making the campaign a "witch hunt or a fishing expedition." He promised criminal prosecutions against price-fixing conspiracies and wartime profiteers who have evaded their full tax responsibilities.

Protection For Veteran

The Department of Justice, Clark declared, will also watch sales of surplus war commodities—to encourage business competition and to make sure the veteran gets his priority.

Clark said he could foresee no waning of war-fraud cases, saying "we've had rising complaints." He reported that war-plant workers seem readier to tell of violations after they have left their jobs. He also expects war-contract termination and renegotiation cases to increase.

PICTURES TRUMAN AT ERROR IN STRIKES

BOSTON, Jan. 25 (AP)—President Truman was described tonight by Col. Herman W. Steinkraus, president of the Bridgeport Brass Company, as "in the strange position where he is becoming the chief negotiator for the unions."

"It is not a sound position for the President to be in," he told the Industrial Relations Council of metropolitan Boston. "I believe the time will come when he will regret making the White House a conference room for collective bargaining."

Decrying the publicity set-ups now in action in national labor disputes, Mr. Steinkraus said he believed that if collective bargaining did not return to the local level, but was handled by national organizations, then it was no longer an effective way of handling labor relations." He added:

"I wish I could hear a little less about the right to strike and more about the right to work." Of current disputes he said:

"I can only believe there are forces at work that desire conflict instead of agreement, strikes instead of peace. The people are upset after the war and just ripe for leaders who have certain political ends."

OPA Settles Sun Oil Case For $162,700

Washington, Jan. 25 (AP)—The OPA announced today that it had settled a claim with the Sun Oil Company for $162,700.

The agency said in a statement that this represented the amount of overcharges on petroleum products sold by the company between January 22, 1945, and January 1, 1946. OPA added that the overcharges did not occur at retail.

Settlement was made without court action, OPA said. It added that investigation of the company's sales prices was started by the OPA's Cleveland regional office.

"After it had been determined by OPA that sales were being made in excess of ceiling prices," the agency noted, "the investigation was continued by New York regional OPA enforcement men who checked sales volume record at Sun Oil's principal office in Philadelphia.

RESENTS ATTACKS ON ARMY OFFICERS

Cincinnati, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—Brig.-Gen. Emmet (Rosie) O'Donnell, leader of the first B-29 raid on the Japanese home islands, yesterday accused "iconoclastic news columnists" of seeking to put the regular Army in a bad light universally by playing up isolated instances of abuse of rank.

"We of the regular Army face the almost unbelievable situation of having to defend ourselves for our conduct in the war and our future behavior," the former commander of the Twentieth Command's Seventy-Third Wing on Saipan told the American Legion.

As a result of "a campaign to discredit the Army," he said, "mothers and fathers are being led to believe that their sons were poorly led and that regular officers were not interested in their welfare.

"Nothing," O'Donnell declared, "could be farther from the truth." The general asserted it paper or magazine without seepaper or magazine without seeking a story or a picture "about a general flying to Miami for a golf game, officers sitting around their club while enlisted men serve them drinks, or ranking officers avoiding front-line action during the war."

Terming it an answer to critics, whom he did not name, O'Donnell declared, "Flying officers must fly to maintain the proficiency. If I had a char-play a golf game in Miami, certainly would take a plane an go down. What difference does make whether I fly there o somewhere else?

"I was in the war four years and I never saw or heard of a enlisted soldier serving a drin to an officer except when he was paid for it and had volunteered for the job on his own time."

O'Donnell continued, "If brass hats avoided danger why is it that seven out of the eleven men on the West Point coaching staff with me in 1938 were killed in action?'"

RULING FAVORS WAR VETERANS

Goldstein Puts Preference on All Civil Lists.

Albany, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—Attorney-General Nathaniel L. Goldstein ruled today that civil service preference to war veterans, under a constitutional amendment voted last November, applies to all lists from which appointments and promotions are made after January 1, 1946, including existing lists.

The Attorney-General held that the amendment, effective since January 1, needs no implementing legislation.

Preference extends to both disabled and non-disabled veterans of any war, he said, but is limited as to non-disabled veterans to the period ending December 31, 1950, for those who left the armed forces before January 1, 1946, and to a five-year period for those discharged thereafter.

The opinions were among a score rendered to the Civil Service Department, which requested clarification of the amendment.

Other Opinions.

In his other opinions Goldstein said that:

1. Conscientious objectors inducted for non-combat service were eligible but those assigned to civilian camps without induction were not.

2. The right of preference does not arise until honorable discharge or release, which does not occur until expiration of terminal leave.

3. A release from active duty in the case of reserve personnel determines the period of eligibility, even though there is no discharge from inactive reserve status.

Members of the Waac, Wac, United States Naval Auxiliary Reserve, United States Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard Reserves who saw active duty, the women's reserves of the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, and the commissioned corps of the United States Public Health Service are eligible.

Members of the Merchant Marine, the United States Maritime Service, the Army Specialist Corps, as well as temporary personnel of the Coast Guard Reserve whose duty was on a gratuitous part-time basis, are not to be considered veterans within the meaning of the amendment.

UNO COMMITTEE TO RETURN TODAY

Tour of Stamford-Greenwich Area and Westchester Section Planned.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25—(AP) Cancelling plans for an air trip in a U. S. Navy blimp, the United Nations headquarters site inspection committee announced tonight that the group will tour tomorrow in Northern Westchester county, N. Y., and in Connecticut.

Dr. Stoyan Gavrilovic, committee chairman, said weather conditions caused cancellation of the blimp trip over the Hudson valley and Connecticut region.

Instead, he said, the group will leave at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow by car for Greenwich and North Stamford, Conn. In the afternoon the North Westchester area, which has been inspected previously, will be toured again. Dr. Gavrilovic will hold a news conference at 4:30 p. m. in the Hotel Roger Smith at White Plains, N. Y.

Dr. Gavrilovic disclosed that Grover Whalen, chairman of Mayor William O'Dwyer's New York city commitee on UNO, had offered the use of Manhattan Center or the City Center as assembly halls in the event that New York was selected as a temporary headquarters.

The Sperry Gyrosope plant at Lake Success in Nassau county, N. Y., as the possible site for the interim headquarters was described as "very good indeed" by Dr. Gavrilovic, but he said its possibilities were limited by lack of adequate housing.

Another survey of the Hyde Park, N. Y., area will be made on Monday by another subcommitee. Dr. Gavrilovic said a letter written by Fred A. Smith, chairman of the executive committee for the Hyde Park for UNO Headquarters, indicated that the Hyde Park committee was willing to expand its earlier estimates and offer the amount of land needed.

Gavrilovic said the entire seven-man inspection group would begin writing a report on its recommendations to the UNO General Assembly on Monday night, and would prepare to leave for London with that report on Feb. 3.

ONE OFFICIAL SAID THAT UNLESS A COMPROMISE WAS REACHED BY THE DEPUTIES OF THE UNITED STATES, RUSSIA, GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE, THE FOUR POWERS MIGHT HAVE TO FIGHT THE MATTER OUT WITH 17 OTHER NATIONS AT THEPARIS PEACE CONFERENCE IN MAY.

RUSSIA WAS REPORTED TO BE PLANNING TO LINK HER AFRICAN ASPIRATIO WITH THE FACT THAT THE UNITED STATES DEMANDS CONTROL OF STRATEGIC PACIFIC ISLANDS.

NUERNBERG, JAN. 26-(AP)-RUDOLF HESS' ATTORNEY, DISOBEYING THE WRITTEN ORDER OF HIS ECCENTRIC CLIENT, WAS AT WORK IN A HOSPITAL WARD TODAY PREPARING A CASE THAT MIGHT SAVE THE FORMER DEPUTY FUEHRER'S LIFE.

THIN, SCHOLARLY GUNTHER VON ROHRSCHEIDT BROKE ONE OF HIS ANKLES IN AN ACCIDENTAL FALL LAST MONDAY AND RECEIVED HIS "DISMISSAL" BY HESS AT ALMOST THE SAME TIME.

AS SOON AS DOCTORS HAD SET THE DIFFICULT FRACTURE AND INFORMED VON ROHRSCHEIDT THAT HE WOULD BE BEDFAST UP TO FOUR WEEKS, THE VETERAN GERMAN ATTORNEY ORGANIZED A LEGAL OFFICE IN THE HOSPITAL, BROUGHT IN HIS TWO SECRETARIES, SENT TO THE PALACE OF JUSTICE DAILY FOR CATALOGUED DOCUMENTS AND PORED OVER THE OFFICIAL TRANSCRIPT OF EACH SESSION OF THE INTERNATIONAL MILITARY TRIBUNAL HE HAD MISSED.

THE TRIBUNAL HAS WITHHELD A DECISION ON HESS' LATER FORMAL REQUES THAT HE BE ALLOWED TO CONDUCT HIS DEFENSE ALONE. NONE OF THE BATTER OF ATTORNEYS DEFENDING THE 21 OTHER NAZI WAR CRIMINALS, HOWEVER, CONSIDERS IT LIKELY THAT THE ALLIED JUDGES WILL HUMOR HESS TO SUCH AN EXTENT.

HESS' NOTE TO VON ROHRSCHEIDT ASSERTED IN EFFECT: "I DO NOT WANT ANY WITNESSES. I DO NOT WANT ANY AFFIDAVITS OR DOCUMENTS. I DO NOT WANT ANY LAWYER. I DO NOT WANT ANY DEFENSE."

WRYLY HIS ATTORNEY COMMENTED: "HE HAS NO APPARENT FEAR OF EXECUTION AND SEEMS TO BE COMPLETELY THGOUTHLESS OF HIS OWN LIFE. BUT I BELIEVE HE WOULD SEEK IF POSSIBLE TO DEFEND HIS IDEA OF THE GERMAN PEOPLE AND THEIR POLITICAL FAITH."

ARMY POLL (220)

WIESBADEN, GERMANY, JAN. 25-(AP)-NINETEEN PER CENT OF 1,700 MEN QUESTIONED LAST FALL IN A U.S. ARMY POLL OF AMERICAN TROOPS STATIONED IN GERMANY BELIEVE THE GERMANS HAD SOME JUSTIFICATION FOR STARTING THE WAR.

THE POLL, SAID TO REPRESENT A CROSS-SECTION OF THE U.S. TROOPS IN GERMANY, WAS NOT OFFICIALLY RELEASED FOR PUBLICATION, BUT WAS MADE AVAILABLE BY A THOROUGHLY AUTHORITATIVE SOURCE.

(WASHINGTON A WAR DEPARTMENT SPOKESMAN SAID THAT POLLS HAD BEEN TAKEN TO ASCERTAIN THE DEGREE TO WHICH ENEMY PROPAGANDA HAD BEEN ABSORBED, SO THAT COUNTER MEASURES COULD BE EFFECTED.)

AUTHORITIES SAID THE POLL INDICATED AN AMAZING LACK OF KNOWLEDGE OF THE CAUSES OF WAR AND TENDED TO SHOW THAT IN SOME CASES U.S. SOLDIERS HAD SWALLOWED LARGE DOSES OF PROPAGANDA OF THE TYPE ONCE SERVED UP BY JOSEPH GOEBBELS.

THE POLL ALSO SHOWED:

FIFTY-ONE PER CENT SAID THEY BELIEVED HITLER DID THE REICH A LOT OF GOOD BEFORE 1939.

EIGHTY PER CENT FAVORED OCCUPATION OF GERMANY FOR 10 YEARS.

SEVENTY-ONE PER CENT SAID THE U.S. MILITARY GOVERNMENT WAS NOT TOUGH ENOUGH WITH NAZIS; 62 PER CENT SAID IT WAS NOT TOUGH ENOUGH WITH ORDINARY GERMANS.

TWENTY-TWO PER CENT SAID THEY BELIEVED THE GERMANS HAD "GOOD REASONS" FOR THE PERSECUTION OF JEWS.

THIRTY PER CENT SAID THEY LIKED THE GERMANS BETTER THAN THE ENGL OR FRENCH.

HERFORD--SECOND ADD HITLER X X X ON THE LEG.

VON BELOW, WHO HAD BEEN LUFTWAFFE ADJUTANT TO HITLER SINCE 1937, MOVED INTO ONE OF THE THREE BUNKERS OUTSIDE THE CHANCELLERY ON APRIL 20 AND PREPARED TO FIGHT TO THE END AT HITLER'S SIDE. HE WAS AMONG THOSE ATTENDING THE CONFERENCE AT WHICH THE FUEHRER DECIDED TO REMAIN IN THE BLAZING CAPITAL.

VON BELOW INSISTS THAT HITLER AND EVA BRAUN WERE MARRIED ON THE NIGHT OF APRIL 28, NOT ON THE FOLLOWING NIGHT AS BRITISH INTELLIGENCE OFFICERS PREVIOUSLY REPORTED, AND THEREFORE SPENT TWO NIGHTS IN THE BUNKER AS MAN AND WIFE. THE YOUNG ADJUTANT SAID HE DID NOT WITNESS THE MARRIAGE CEREMONY HIMSELF BUT SAW HITLER AND HIS NEW WIFE IMMEDIATELY AFTER THE SERVICE WITH THE REGISTRAR WHO PERFORMED IT.

DESCRIBING THE CHAMPAGNE PARTY WHICH FOLLOWED THE WEDDING, VON BELOW SAID IT LASTED ABOUT AN HOUR, WITH MANY TOASTS DRUNK TO "OLD TIMES."

LATER, VON BELOW WAS CALLED ASIDE INTO ANOTHER ROOM TO WITNESS HITLER'S PRIVATE WILL AND SIGNED IT AS A WITNESS.

LATE IN THE AFTERNOON OF APRIL 29 IT WAS REALIZED THAT THE RUSSI WOULD REACH THE CHANCELLERY BY THE NEXT DAY OR BY MAY 1 AT THE LATE AND "ARRANGEMENTS HAD BEEN MADE FOR THE DESTRUCTION AND BURNING OF HITLER'S AND BRAUN'S BODIES," VON BELOW SAID. VON BELOW TOOK HIS OFFICIAL LEAVE FROM HITLER ABOUT 11 P.M. ON APRIL 29, SIXTEEN HOURS BEFORE HITLER AND BRAUN ARE BELIEVED TO HAVE COMMITTED SUICIDE.

TOKYO, SATURDAY, JAN. 26-(AP)-AN ALLIED OFFICER SAID TODAY THE JAPANESE PRESS INDICATED SATISFACTION WITH FAIRNESS OF THE CURRENT WAR CRIMES TRIALS BUT HE DEPLORED WHAT HE TERMED SOME INSTANCES OF OMISSION OR POOR REPORTING OF FACTS PRESENTED BY THE PROSECUTION.

HE SAID THE LEGAL SECTION WAS INTERESTED ONLY IN THE ASSURANCE THE JAPANESE PEOPLE ARE RECEIVING THE FULLEST POSSIBLE REPORT IN AN UNBIASED, INTELLIGENT MANNER.

"THIS, I BELIEVE, IS THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE PRESS IN A COUNTRY ASPIRING TO A DEMOCRATIC WAY OF LIFE."

JAPANESE SUSPECTS HAVE THE ADVANTAGE OF THE ANGLO-AMERICAN JURISPRUDENCE SYSTEM WHICH HOLDS A PERSON INNOCENT UNTIL HE IS PROVEN GUILTY, CARPENTER EMPHASIZED, IN CONTRAST WITH THE JAPANESE SYSTEM UNDER WHICH THE DEFENDANT MUST PROVE HIS INNOCENCE.

THE NEWS CONFERENCE WAS IN THE NATURE OF AN ATTEMPTED EXPLANATION OF TRIAL SYSTEM PROCEDURE FOR THE JAPANESE PRESS REPRESENTATIVES.

IN ANSWER TO A QUESTION, CARPENTER SAID THE JAPANESE COURTS AT PRESENT HAVE THE RIGHT TO TRY ANY WAR CRIMES CASES BUT THIS WOULD NOT BAR PROSECUTION OF THE SAME CASES BY OCCUPATION FORCES. HE CITED TWO INSTANCES IN FORMOSA WHERE THE JAPANESE ALREADY HAD TRIED THEIR OWN PEOPLE FOR WAR CRIMES.

"IN HAWAII, THE PROBLEMS OF HOUSING AND PUBLIC HEALTH, WHICH ARE NOW EXTREMELY CRITICAL, WILL NEED CONTINUED ATTENTION FOR SOME TIME AFTER THE WAR.

"THERE MAY BE A PARTIAL REVERSAL OF THE WARTIME INFLUX OF WORKERS FROM THE MAINLAND; BUT, IN ANY CASE, AS A RESULT OF THE SEVERE IMPACT OF THE WAR UPON HAWAII'S ECONOMY, THE READJUSTMENT OF INDUSTRY AND AGRICULTURE AND THE REHABILITATION OF RETURNING SERVICEMEN AND LOCAL LABOR, WILL PRESENT PROBLEMS CALLING FOR REAL INTELLIGENCE."

ALL THE TERRITORIAL AREAS--ALASKA, HAWAII, PUERTO RICO AND THE VIRGIN ISLANDS--ARE TRYING "TO ESTABLISH A MORE WORKABLE FORMULA FOR THEIR POLITICAL RELATIONSHIP WITH THE CONTINENTAL UNITED STATES," ICKES SAID.

"WE SHOULD SUPPORT THESE 2 1/2 MILLION AMERICAN CITIZENS WHO ARE TRYING TO EVOLVE A SOUNDER RELATIONSHIP WITH US AND WHO ARE, IN EFFECT, GIVING US THE OPPORTUNITY TO MAINTAIN OUR LEADERSHIP AS A PROGRESSIVE NATION."

"IN EVERY TERRITORY," ICKES CONCLUDED, "CERTAIN ECONOMIC PROBLEMS WILL REMAIN FOR SOLUTION, NO MATTER WHAT FORM OF POLITICAL STATUS MAY BE ADOPTED. IT WILL BE FORTUNATE IF, AS DISCUSSIONS OF 'STATEHOOD,' 'INDEPENDENCE,' AND 'DOMINION STATUS' PROCEED, LEADERS OF OPINION, IN THE TERRITORIES AND ON THE MAINLAND, WILL CONTINUE TO GIVE ATTENTION TO THE COMMON ECONOMIC PROBLEMS THAT LIE BEFORE THEM."

SHINGTON,JAN.25-(PRESIDENT TRUMAN WAS ASKED TODAY TO COMMUTE A COURT MARTIAL SENTENCE GIVEN A PILOT FROM MISSOURI FOR "SWIPING" AN ARMY FIGHTER PLANE AND GETTING HIMSELF CAPTURED BY THE GERMANS--ALL WITHOUT PERMISSION.

THE REQUEST WAS MADE BY REP. PLOESER (R-MO) IN BEHALF OF SECOND LIEUTENANT MARTIN J. MONTI OF ST. LOUIS COUNTY.

AN ARMY COURT MARTIAL IN NAPLES, ITALY, PLOESER SAID, SENTENCED THE 26-YEAR-OLD AIR CORPS OFFICER ON AUG.6, 1945, TO DISMISSAL FROM THE ARMY, LOSS OF PAY AND 15 YEARS AT HARD LABOR FOR "MISAPPROPRIATING" A P-38 AND FOR BEING ABSENT WITHOUT OFFICIAL PERMISSION.

THE CONGRESSMAN SAID THIS IS WHAT HAPPENED:

AFTER BEING SENT TO INDIA, MONTI DESIRED TO GET INTO ACTION,

AND RETURNED TO ITALY WHERE SOME OF HIS FORMER BUDDIES WERE STATIONED. HE WAS ACCUSED OF TAKING THE P-38 FROM AN AIR FIELD WITHOUT PERMISSION OF COMMANDING OFFICER AND FLYING TO THE FRONT LINES.

OVER THE LINES, HIS MOTOR WAS KNOCKED OUT BY GERMAN FLAK AND MONTI BAILED OUT. CAPTURED BY THE GERMANS HE FINALLY MANAGED TO ESCAPE AND ATTEMPTED TO JOIN A U.S. UNIT WHICH HE CONTACTED.

"I CERTAINLY DO NOT CONTEND THAT HIS ACTIONS SHOULD BE CONDONED, BUT ON THE OTHER HAND I DO EMPHATICALLY MAKE THE POINT THAT THE SENTENCE OF 15 YEARS METED OUT TO HIM SEEMS TO BE IN THE EXTREME. "IT WAS THIS VERY SPIRIT IN OUR YOUTH THAT WON THE WAR."

LAST JUNE AFTER HE WAS DISCHARGED FROM THE CANADIAN NAVY, RATCLIFFE SAID, HE DECIDED ON A MOTOR TOUR OF THE UNITED STATES AND STOPPED OFF AT WASHINGTON WHERE THE CANADIAN EMBASSY SAID HE COULD REMAIN IN THE COUNTRY 90 DAYS.

HIS TROUBLES BEGAN IN JACKSONVILLE, FLA., WHERE HE RAN A RED LIGHT. A POLICEMAN SAID HE HAD TO HAVE A DRAFT CARD SINCE HE HAD BEEN IN THE COUNTRY MORE THAN 29 DAYS.

SO HE REGISTERED AND AT THE JACKSONVILLE DRAFT OARD "THEY LAUGHED AND SAID THAT REGISTERING WAS JUST A FORMALITY--THEY EVEN FIXED MY TICKET WITH THE COP. I THOUGHT THEY WERE SWELL."

ON HIS RETURN TO WASHINGTON LAST AUGUST, HE SAID, HE NOTIFIED THE DRAFT BOARD OF HIS CHANGE IN ADDRESS AND PROMPTLY GOT BACK A NOTICE TO REPORT IN WASHINGTON FOR INDUCTION.

"I WENT UP THERE TO EXPLAIN. INSTEAD I WAS LOADED INTO A TRUCK AND TAKEN TO THE ARMORY AT BALTIMORE. THERE I TOLD A LIEUTENANT I DIDN'T WANT TO GO IN THE AMERICAN ARMY--AND SHOWED HIM MY PAPERS. HE SAID I WOULD HAVE TO TAKE THE OATH OR BE LISTED AS A CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTOR."

HE REFUSED TO TAKE THE OATH "BUT IT DIDN'T SEEM TO MAKE ANY DIFFERENCE BECAUSE WHEN THEY WERE THROUGH I WAS ORDERED WITH THE OTHERS TO FORT MEADE. I STAYED THERE UNTIL I WAS SENT HERE (FORT BELVOIR) FOR TRAINING AS AN ENGINEER."

RATCLIFFE SAID HE WAS ENGAGED TO A GIRL WHO WAS "WAITING" FOR HIM IN TORONTO.

NIGHT LEAD FACT-FINDING

WASHINGTON, JAN 25-(AP)-THE SENATE LABOR COMMITTEE HEARD R. J. THOMAS' OBJECTIONS TO THE FACT-FINDING BILL TODAY BUT HALTED HIS READING OF A NINE-PAGE STATEMENT WHEN IT DEVELOPED INTO A BITTER ATTACK ON SENATOR VANDENBERG (R-MICH).

THOMAS, PRESIDENT OF THE CIO UNITED AUTO WORKERS, HAD DISTRIBUTED COPIES OF HIS STATEMENT TO COMMITTEEMEN AND REPORTERS. IT SAID THAT VANDENBERG "CARRIED THE GM TORCH" AND "HELPED LAY A TRAP INTO WHICH PRESIDENT TRUMAN HAS STEPPED."

THE "TRAP," THOMAS ALLEGED, WAS VANDENBERG'S PROPOSAL THAT THE PRESIDENT CALL A LABOR-MANAGEMENT CONFERENCE. HE ASSERTED THE SENATOR "KNEW THAT THE AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY WANTED THE LABOR-MANAGEMENT CONFERENCE TO FAIL." THE INDUSTRY, HE ADDED, "MADE SURE THAT NO AGREEMENT WOULD BE REACHED, AND THAT THERE WOULD BE LEGISLATION PROPOSED BY MR. TRUMAN IF NO AGREEMENT WERE REACHED."

THOMAS CONTENDED THAT THE PROPOSED FACT-FINDING BILL WAS THE RESULT.

THOMAS HAD DEVELOPED ONLY PART OF THIS ARGUMENT, BUT HAD MADE OTHER DEROGATORY REFERENCES TO VANDENBERG, WHEN THE COMMITTEE MEMBERS STOPPED HIM IN THE MIDDLE OF HIS THIRD PAGE. SENATOR MORSE (R-ORE) MADE THE FIRST REMONSTRANCE, CALLING THE TESTIMONY IRRELEVANT, AND SENATORS DONNELL (R-MO), SMITH (R-NJ) AND TAFT (R-OHIO) QUICKLY JOINED IN THE PROTEST.

CHAIRMAN MURRAY (D-MONT) FINALLY ORDERED THOMAS TO CEASE HIS ATTACK "ON A SENATOR WHO IS NOT HERE TO DEFEND HIMSELF." VANDENBERG IS A DELEGATE TO THE UNITED NATIONS MEETING IN LONDON; HE IS NOT A COMMITTEE MEMBER.

THOMAS RETURNED A FIRM "NO SIR" TO QUESTIONS OF SENATOR LAFOLLETTE (PROG-WIS) AS TO WHETHER ANY NEW LABOR LEGISLATION IS NEEDED.

SENATOR ELLENDER (D-LA) ASKED THOMAS IF THE GOVERNMENT COULD DO NOTHING BUT LET GENERAL MOTORS AND THE UNION "SWEAT IT OUT?"

"I THINK IT'S GOT TO BE SWEATED OUT," THOMAS SAID GRIMLY. "I THINK THE BEST THING TO DO IS LEAVE THE SITUATION ALONE IF WE ARE GOING TO HAVE A DEMOCRACY."

SENATOR FULBRIGHT (D-ARK) ASKED THOMAS WHETHER HE THOUGHT THE PRESENT STRIKE SITUATION WAS A BENEFIT TO THE PUBLIC.

"NOT RIGHT NOW BUT IN THE LONG RUN IT WILL BE," THOMAS REPLIED.

THOMAS' TESTIMONY FOLLOWED THAT OF PRESIDENT CHARLES E.WILSON OF GENERAL MOTORS CORPORATION WHO LIKEWISE OPPOSED THE FACT-FINDING BILL. WILSON ARGUED THAT FACT-FINDING IMPEDES COLLECTIVE BARGAINING AND MAKES IT DIFFICULT TO REACH AGREEMENT IN LABOR DISPUTES.

A45WX

WILSON ASSERTED THAT THE 19 1/2-CENT HOURLY WAGE INCREASE RECOMMENDED BY THE GENERAL MOTORS FACT-FINDING BOARD HAD LED UNIONS TO HOLD OUT FOR A SETTLEMENT AT THAT FIGURE.

UNDER QUESTIONING, HE SAID HE WOULD NOT BE WILLING TO SUBMIT THE TWO-MONTH-OLD GENERAL MOTORS STRIKE TO ARBITRATION UNLESS "CONGRESS SAID THAT WAS THE THING TO DO."

WILSON DENIED GENERAL MOTORS HAD PARTICIPATED IN ANY JOINT INDUSTRIAL ACTION AGAINST LABOR OR WAS A PARTY TO ANY "MUTUAL STRATEGY" OF CORPORATIONS TO FIGHT THE CIO WAGE DRIVE.

NIGHT LEAD UNDATED STRIKES (750)

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

(CX) CIO PACKINGHOUSE WORKERS -- THREE-FOURTHS OF THE NATION'S STRIKING MEAT WORKERS -- GAVE A RESOUNDING "NO" YESTERDAY (FRI.) TO PROPOSALS THEY GO BACK TO WORK FOR THE GOVERNMENT IN STRUCK MEAT PLANTS TODAY.

THE ACTION, MARKING THE FIRST TIME IN A MAJOR LABOR DISPUTE THAT STRIKING EMPLOYES HAVE REFUSED TO WORK IN GOVERNMENT-SEIZED PROPERTIES, RAISED A BIG QUESTION MARK OVER GOVERNMENT EFFORTS TO BRING A NORMAL MEAT SUPPLY TO AMERICAN DINNER TABLES.

OFFICERS OF THE 55,000 STRIKING AFL AMALGAMATED MEAT CUTTERS AND BUTCHER WORKMEN, HAVE PLEDGED THEIR MEN WILL BE BACK ON THE JOB.

THE CIO DECISION APPARENTLY CAUGHT THE GOVERNMENT BY SURPRISE. THERE WERE HASTY CONFERENCES IN WASHINGTON BUT NO IMMEDIATE ACTION. NO IMMEDIATE COMMENT CAME FROM THE WHITE HOUSE, LABOR DEPARTMENT OR SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE ANDERSON, BOSS OF THE FEDERAL MEAT SETUP UNDER THE SEIZURE ORDER.

LEWIS J.CLARK, PRESIDENT OF THE CIO MEAT UNION, ANNOUNCED THE UNION'S NATIONAL WAGE POLICY COMMITTEE HAD VOTED "UNANIMOUSLY" FOR ITS 193,000 STRIKING MEMBERS TO STAY OFF THE JOB WHEN THE GOVERNMENT ASSUMES OPERATION OF THE PLANTS AT 12:01 A.M. TODAY.

THE OTHER DEVELOPMENTS ALONG THE LABOR FRONT INCLUDED:

1-THE BROTHERHOOD OF RAILROAD TRAINMEN BEGAN MAILING STRIKE BALLOTS TO ITS 215,000 MEMBERS IN A DISPUTE OVER WAGES AND WORKING CONDITIONS AND WILL KNOW THEIR ANSWER IN THREE WEEKS. A BRT

STRIKE WOULD TIEUP ALL RAILROADS, UNION SPOKESMEN SAID. IN CHICAGO, A RAILWAY LABOR OFFICIAL WHO DECLINED TO PERMIT USE OF HIS NAME SAID 18 RAILROAD BROTHERHOODS AND THE NATION'S MAJOR CARRIERS WOULD AGREE TO ARBITRATE THEIR DEMANDS. HE SAID THE BRT AND THE BROTHERHOOD OF LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEERS WERE NOT INCLUDED.

2-C.E.WILSON, PRESIDENT OF THE STRIKE-BOUND GENERAL MOTORS CORPORATION, TESTIFIED BEFORE SENATE LABOR COMMITTEE THAT LABOR AND MANAGEMENT COULD GET TOGETHER ON THEIR PROBLEMS IF THE GOVERNMENT "CLARIFIES ITS POSITION ON WAGES, PRICES AND STRIKES." WILSON AVOIDED A DIRECT ANSWER WHEN SEN.MORSE (R-ORE) PROPOSED THE GM STRIKE BE SUBMITTED TO AN ARBITRATOR NAMED BY PRESIDENT TRUMAN. HE CONTENDED FACT-FINDING LEGISLATION WOULD "SERIOUSLY INTERFERE WITH COLLECTIVE BARGAINING" AND TENDS "TOWARD A SOCIALISTIC STATE."

3-A FACT-FINDING BOARD'S STUDY OF A STRIKE OF 30,000 CIO INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY EMPLOYES STALLED IN CHICAGO ON THE QUESTION OF MAINTENANCE OF COMPANY PROPERTIES. THE BOARD WENT INTO A CLOSED SESSION BETWEEN MANAGEMENT AND THE UNITED FARM EQUIPMENT UNION

4-NEGOTIATIONS BETWEEN THE FORD MOTOR COMPANY AND THE CIO UNITED AUTO WORKERS--2CENTS AN HOUR APART ON THEIR WAGE ISSUE--WERE ADJOURNED IN DETROIT UNTIL NEXT TUESDAY.

5-THE SHIP BUILDING WAGE STABILIZATION CONFERENCE IN WASHINGTON RECESSED UNTIL TUESDAY WITHOUT BREAKING ITS STALEMATE ON WAGE INCREASES IN THE SHIP BUILDING INDUSTRY.

A40CS

6-DISORDERS BROKE OUT AT THE MAIN BUILDING OF THE STRIKE-BESET WESTERN UNION COMPANY IN NEW YORK, RESULTING IN THE ARREST OF SIX PERSONS.

7-UNION LEADERS IN SAN FRANCISCO ANNOUNCED MORE THAN 30,000 LONGSHOREMEN IN CALIFORNIA, OREGON AND WASHINGTON WOULD VOTE NEXT WEEK ON A RECOMMENDATION OF THE CIO INTERNATIONAL LONGSHOREMEN'S AND WAREHOUSEMEN'S NEGOTIATING COMMITTEE TO STRIKE ON OR BEFORE APRIL 1.

CLARK'S STATEMENT IN THE MEAT INDUSTRY DISPUTE ACCUSED PRESIDENT TRUMAN OF ENGAGING IN "A STRIKBREAKING ACTION" IN DIRECTING SEIZURE OF THE PLANTS "THE SOLE EFFECT OF WHICH CAN BE TO PLAY INTO THE HANDS OF THE PACKERS."

HE TERMED THE SEIZURE "A COMPLETE DOUBLE-CROSS," ASSERTING HIS UNION HAD "RECEIVED FROM HIGH GOVERNMENTAL OFFICIALS ASSURANCES THAT THE ORDER WOULD CONTAIN PROVISIONS FOR MAKING EFFECTIVE INCREASES (IN WAGES) THAT THE (FACT-FINDING) PANEL MIGHT RECOMMEND."

HE CHARGED THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, WHICH WILL OPERATE THE PLANTS, WAS "NOTORIOUSLY SYMPATHETIC TO THE PACKING INTERESTS."

CLARK TOLD NEWSMEN HE "ASSUMED" HIS UNION WOULD CONTINUE PICKETING. THEN REFERRING TO THE AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT'S AUTHORITY TO CALL IN THE ARMY, IF NECESSARY, HE SAID:

"IT IS SIGNIFICANT THIS DISCRIMINATORY TREATMENT IS BEING METED OUT TO THE PACKINGHOUSE WORKERS, WHEREAS THE PRESIDENT HAS DONE NOTHING TORENFORCE HIS RECOMMENDATION TO THE STEEL COMPANIES F SETTLEM

NOTHING TO ENFORCE HIS RECOMMENDATION TO THE STEEL COMPANIES FOR A SETTLEMENT OF THE STEEL CASE OTHER THAN EXPRESS PIOUS WISHES THAT THE STEEL COMPANIES WOULD COOPERATE.

"NOR HAS HE TAKEN ANY ACTION TO MAKE EFFECTIVE THE REPORT OF THE FACT-FINDING PANEL IN THE GENERAL MOTORS SITUATION."

THE UNION HEAD SAID THE MEN WOULD BE READY TO RETURN TO WORK "AT SUCH TIME AS WE ARE ASSURED THAT THE EQUITIES OF OUR CASE WILL BE GIVEN CONSIDERATION AND THAT A SUBSTANTIAL WAGE INCREASE WILL BE PUT INTO EFFECT."

ONE PEACE WAS MADE IN THE LABOR SITUATION, HOWEVER, WITH JOHN L.LEWIS' UNITED MINE WORKERS REAFFILIATING WITH THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR. AT THE SAME TIME SOME 90,000 WERE TAKEN OFF THE ROLLS OF STRIKE-IDLE BY SETTLEMENT OF A TRUCK DRIVERS STRIKE IN ST.LOUIS.

LEWIS, WHO BROUGHT HIS 500,000-MEMBER ORGANIZATION BACK INTO THE AFL, WHICH HE BOLTED IN 1936 TO FORM THE CIO, WAS ELECTED A MEMBER OF THE AFL'S EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

THE ST.LOUIS TRUCK STRIKE, WHICH LASTED 18 DAYS, HAD PARALYZED DISTRIBUTION AND DELIVERY SERVICE IN THE ST.LOUIS AREA AND FORCED 60,000 PERSONS INTO IDLENESS IN THE IMMEDIATE VICINITY OF THAT CITY AND 30,000 OTHERS IN OTHER STATES.

WITH THE SETTLEMENT, THE NUMBER OF STRIKE IDLE IN THE NATION DROPPED TO ABOUT 1,620,000.

New Iranian Note To UNO Stands Pat In Russian Row

STEP TAKEN AFTER SHIFT IN PREMIERS

Security Council Told Interference Charges Can Be Proved

J. Parris

London, Jan. 26 (AP)—Iran's delegation to the United Nations asserted in a new note to the Security Council tonight that Soviet interference in Iran's affairs "can be fully proved."

The new note, dated January 26, was disclosed shortly after Premier Ahmed Qavam es-Saltaneh, a long-time friend of Russia, was elected new premier of Iran. Ahmed Qavam's announcement that he would seek direct negotiations with Russia had given rise to speculation that his Government might withdraw or defer action on the complaint put before the Security Council.

Reply To Soviet Letter

The new 2,000-word note, it was understood, was delivered to the Security Council by the Iranian delegation on its own initiative, in reply to a Russian letter yesterday.

The Soviet letter opposed Security Council consideration of Iran's complaint, on grounds that the Soviet position in Iran was legal and justifiable under Soviet-Iranian treaty, and favored direct negotiation of the dispute by Russian and Iran.

An Iranian spokesman said his delegation had not yet received any new instructions from Tehran, but it was reported such instructions might be sent, possibly over the week end. The Security Council is slated to discuss the Iranian, Greek and Indonesian questions Monday.

Termed Treaty Violation

Today's Iranian note declared: "The refusal of the Soviet Government to allow passage of Iranian security forces through part of Iranian territory is clearly a breach of the tripartite treaty of Alliance of 1942, and the declaration of Tehran, by which the Allied powers undertook to respect the territorial integrity, sovereignty and political independence of Iran."

The Iranians said the Soviet delegation had mistranslated a[illegible] misquoted the Iranian note of December 1 so that "the sense has been so altered it is exactly the opposite of what was said in the note." The Iranians said Russia quoted Tehran as denying Soviet interference, while the opposite was the truth.

Calls Attention To Protest

The new note called attention to American and British representations to Russia over the situation in Azerbaijan province.

Expressing agreement with a United States letter to the Soviet Government last November 24, which declared there no longer was any reason for the presence of foreign troops in Iran, the delegates' note said, "it is desirable that all foreign troops leave Iranian territory immediately."

It asserted that the Soviet-Iranian treaty of 1921—which Russia cited in partial defense of her stand—"is not relevant" because it "is only meant to apply to a case where Iran is occupied by a hostile power and by reason of this fact Iranian territory becomes a base of aggression against the USSR" which the Iranian Government could not eliminate "by its own action."

No Hostile Third Party

The note added that "no hostile third parties exist, and the Iranian Government is able to deal effectively with any situation that has arisen if it is allowed by Soviet authorities to send its troops and officials to disaffected areas."

Saying, however, that "withdrawal of Soviet troops is not the question before the Security Council," the statement asserted that the dispute "arises out of the fact that Iranian authorities have not been allowed by Soviet authorities to carry out their duties of administering law and order in areas in which Soviet troops are stationed.

Earlier Ahmed Qavam, elected premier by one vote in the Iranian Parliament, succeeding Ibrahim Hakimi, said he would support fully the Iranian delegation to the UNO. Ahmed Qavam also said he would negotiate with leaders of the recently proclaimed autonomous government in Iran's northwestern province of Azerbaijan.

Opens Speed-Up Drive

As the United Nations ended its second week, the United States delegation launched a speedup drive to bring the first General Assembly session to a close within ten days, so that the new peace organization could be moved to a site in the United States as soon thereafter as possible.

Russia and the United States received a setback during the day when they lost a fight in the Assembly to override a committee recommendation which prohibited nominations in the 51-nation organization.

The motion to override was put by the Soviet Ukraine. It grew out of the election without nomination of Paul Henri Spaak, of Belgium, as president of the Assembly. He defeated Soviet-nominated Trygve Lie, foreign minister, of Norway.

British Delegate Philip J. Noel-Baker, who had supported Spaak led the fight to prohibit nominations and won by an assembly vote of 25 to 18.

Frank Walker, United States delegate; Dmitri Manuilsky, Ukraine delegate; Andrei Gromyko, Soviet delegate, and Terje Wold, Norwegian delegate, argued against the prohibition.

Walker said that under such a prohibition he was not sure that "we are not denying freedom of speech to the members." Manuilsky said such a prohibition was undemocratic and that he sought, in the interest of the United Nations and the small nations, to "abolish lobbying behind the scenes." Gromyko said that under such a rule issues would not be discussed in the Assembly, where they should be discussed. Wold held the prohibition would be a "grave breach in the normal proceedings of the Assembly."

New Premier May Shelve Iran Case

J. Hightower

London, Jan. 26 (AP)—Selection of Ahmed Qavam as Premier of Iran probably will give Russia at least a temporary victory in the first political dispute placed before the United Nations Security Council, American and British informants said today.

The Iranian delegation, which appealed to the Council a week ago to intervene in the Soviet-occupied zone of northern Iran, said new instructions were expected over the week end.

Premier Friendly With Russia

Officials predicted that Qavam, who is known to back friendly relations with Russia, would order the case either dropped or shelved while he negotiated directly with Moscow for a settlement.

Direct negotiation was advocated by Russia in a letter to the Security Council yesterday. Russia denied charges of interference in the internal affairs of Iran and said she was "categorically opposed" to Council consideration of the case.

Case May Be Refiled

One possibility known to have received consideration by Britain is that if the Iranian case is withdrawn from the Council by the Iranians themselves it might be refiled by some other nation on the ground that the dispute endangers world peace and security.

This was the ground on which the Soviet Uuion and the Ukraine asked the council to investigate British activities in Greece and the Dutch East Indies.

JAN 28 1946

Already Slated For Monday

The Security Council agreed unanimously yesterday to take up the Iranian case Monday and decide whether the charges wararnt an investigation.

Leaders of the big powers were reported trying to wind up the London meeting of the General Assembly within ten days and move the UNO to a site in the United States as soon as possible.

Russia, U.S. Lose In Assembly

Meanwhile, the Soviet Ukraine, backed by Russia and the United States, lost a fight in the General Assembly today to override a committee recommendation prohibiting nominations in the 51-nation body.

The issue grew out of the election of nonnominated Paul-Henri Spaak, of Belgium, as President of the Assembly. He defeated Soviet-nominated Foreign Minister Trygve Lie of Norway.

British Delegate Philip Noel-Baker, who had backed Spaak, led the fight to prohibit nominations, and the Assembly upheld him, 25 to 18.

Called "Undemocratic"

Dmitri Manuilsky, of the Ukraine, argued that to prohibit nominations was "undemocratic." He was supported in this argument by Russian Delegate Andrei Gromyko, American Delegate Frank Walker and Norwegian Delegate Terje Wold.

Wold said such prohibition would "constitute a grave breach in the normal proceedings of the Assembly" and would limit the rights of every member of the Assembly."

Walker declared that by prohibiting nominations he was "not sure that we are not denying freedom of speech to members."

Gromyko said if there were no nominations "candidates would be discussed in the corridors and lobbies, at cocktail parties and dinner parties."

"They would not be discussed," he said, "at the place where they should—in the Assembly."

Noel-Baker argued that the nominations led to embarrassment to members of the Assembly.

"Would Cause Lobbying"

Manuilsky contended that if members were not permitted to make nominations it would result in "lobbying and behind-the-scenes intrigues to which the Fascists in our time pointed as evils of the parliamentary system."

"In the interests of the United Nations and the small nations," he said, "we should abolish lobbying behind the scenes."

Noel-Baker won on the vote, however.

Session May End Soon

Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., head of the United States delegation and a member of the Security Council, told a delegation meeting this morning that he was hoping for a windup of the London session in ten days.

The British and Russians were reported by other American officials to have joined the speed-up drive.

Two big jobs remaining here were the selection of a site for UNO headquarters in the United States and the election of a secretary general. Gladwyn Jebb, UNO executive secretary, has wired a request to the site inspection committee now in New York to get back here by February 2 rather than February 4.

May Lead To Debate

Best reports are that the committee may not recommend a specific place for the UNO to settle down, but merely describe two or three locations in the New York area and a similar number around Boston without giving any one place priority. That might start a wide open debate here.

All progress on a five-power agreement on a secretary general is stalled at the moment, with the Russians awaiting new instructions from Moscow. They favor a candidate from a small eastern European nation, while the United States is complaints.

Decision To Act Applauded

Meanwhile, new confidence in the ability of the UNO to keep peace developed as a result of the Security Council's decision to consider the Iranian, Greek and Indonesian disputes promptly.

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) was quoted as saying the council had made a "magnificent' beginning.

Representatives of both large and small nations said the Council, by voting to discuss the disputes—involving two of the five permanent members of the eleven-nation agency, Great Britain and Russia—had shown a capacity for coming to grips with pressing world problems.

Pleased With Atmosphere

None would be quoted directly, but many expressed satisfaction with what they termed the "easy" atmosphere of the Council's first "issue meeting" in the face of the delicate diplomatic controversies at hand.

An American spokesman said that was the view of the American delegation, and a British official expressed a similar opinion. At yesterday's Council meeting both United States and British delegates urged prompt consideration of the complaints despite Russia's objection to having the Iranian case discussed.

Committees Make Reports

With the three cases set for council consideration Monday, the General Assembly met to receive committee reports on procedural problems, and committees concerned with organizational work arranged to meet this afternoon.

The Greek delegation announced, meanwhile, that it had been instructed by its Government to be present when the Council takes up Russia's charges that British military actions in Greece endangered world peace.

Expect Instructions

An adviser said the delegation expected further instructions from Athens on the exact line to take in the discussions. Greek Premier Themistokles Sophoulis already has stated that British troops are in Greece with the full consent of the Greek Government.

NEW IRAN PREMIER BACKS UNO INQUIRY

Ghavam, Named by 52-51, Plans Parleys With Russia —Soviet Reply Disputed

J. Goodwin

By The Associated Press.

TEHERAN, Jan. 26—The Iranian Parliament by a one-vote margin chose today as Premier Ahmad Ghavam Saltaneh. The new Premier promised to seek direct negotiations with the Soviet Union in an attempt to resolve the dispute over Azerbaijan Province.

Mr. Ghavam, 65, a three-time Premier who once was banished from Iran on a charge of plotting against the life of the late Riza Shah, said he would "recognize fully and give full support" to Iranian representatives to the United Nations Organization, whose Security Council has before it an Iranian petition for settlement of the dispute with Russia.

[Iran's delegation to the United Nations Organization made public Saturday a letter to the Security Council in rejoinder to the Soviet denial of Teheran's charges against Russia. This document accused Moscow of misrepresentation of facts of the dispute over Azerbaijan Province and repeated a request that the Council study the conflict.]

[In Washington the Iranian Ambassador, Hussein Ala, said he feared that by direct negotiations "we will only be wasting time," and expressed the hope that the new Premier would not withdraw Iran's appeal to the Security Council.]

Mr. Ghavam succeeds Ebrahim Hakimi, who resigned Jan. 20 after having announced that Iran would appeal to the Security Council. The Parliament gave Mr. Ghavam 52 votes and former Premier Pirnia 51. Mr. Hakimi received one vote.

Owns Lands in Azerbaijan

The new Premier asserted that he would seek to negotiate with representatives of the autonomous Government set up in Azerbaijan, where he owns large estates.

After Mr. Hakimi's resignation, Mr. Ghavam had said that he had been "assured that Moscow will hear my presentation of the Iranian problem."

Mr. Ghavam was hailed by his supporters as the "only man" capable of negotiating with Russia and was strongly challenged by his opponents in Parliament as "pro-Soviet."

Iran's dispute with Russia arose when Red Army occupation troops barred Iranian forces from entering Azerbaijan, which borders Soviet territory, after having been dispatched there by Teheran to quell disturbances in the northwest. Later an autonomous Government was set up in the province, with headquarters in Tabriz, in defiance of authorities in Teheran.

Mr. Ghavam headed Iranian Governments from June, 1921, to January, 1922, June, 1922, to February, 1923, and June, 1942, to February, 1943. He resigned his last Premiership following Teheran bread riots.

Backed Oil Leases to U. S.

Before the first world war he was almost successful in sponsoring legislation which would have granted oil concessions in northern Iran to an American company. The negotiations were terminated after the assassination of a United States vice-consul.

He was arrested in 1921 while Governor of Khorrasan during the Saiyid Zia-Ud-Din coup d'etat and passed 100 days in jail. He was banished from the country in 1923 on a charge of plotting against the life of the late Riza Khan, then the power in the country, who became Shah in 1925.

In 1929 Qavam was permitted to return and later re-entered public life, holding various government portfolios before becoming Premier in 1942. Since his resignation in 1943 he has been the active leader of the minority group in the Parliament.

Stalin Confers With Clark Kerr On Indonesia

Briton Also Meets Molotov Before Leaving for Java and, Later On, America

MOSCOW, Jan. 26 (AP).—British Ambassador Sir Archibald John Kerr Clark Kerr, who leaves here

JAN 27 1946

tomorrow on a special mission to Indonesia, said today that he had talked with Premier Stalin and Foreign Commissar Viacheslav M. Molotov about the situation in Indonesia and that both had expressed considerable interest.

Sir Archibald, newly designated ambassador to the United States, said good by last night to Stalin and lunched today with Molotov. He will try to help settle the dispute in Indonesia over Nationalist demands for independence from the Dutch.

Sir Archibald, who will succeed the Earl of Halifax at Washington on May 1, told a news conference that he believed his task in Indonesia would take two months and that he wanted a vacation in his native Scotland before taking up his assignment at Washington.

He said the Russians had approved Great Britain's nominee for his successor to the Kremlin and that the appointment would be announced very shortly at London.

Asked to name the high point of his service for Britain since 1942 in the Soviet Union, Sir Archibald replied unhesitatihgly: "Stalin. Stalin is always my high point."

Van Mook at Batavia

BATAVIA, Jan. 26 (AP).—Dr. Hubertus J. Van Mook, acting governor-general of Netherlands Indies, arrived at Batavia today after a visit home and conferences with Dutch and British leaders. Van Mook is reported to have brought new proposals from his government for settling the dispute over Indonesian demands for independence from the Dutch.

The Netherlands public relations office said today nine Dutch soldiers had been wounded by grenades and pistol bullets near Manado, Island of Celebes, a week ago when Japanese deserters attacked a patrol. It also declared some Japanese Navy deserters were helping Indonesians near Bandoeng, Java. A British statement said British artillery drove off Indonesians who had fired on Gurkhas mopping up positions near Bandoeng. One Gurkha was wounded.

Envoy Here Stands Fast

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26 (AP).—Iranian Ambssador Hussein Ala said today he hoped his country's newly appointed Premier would not withdraw Iran's appeal to the United Nations Security Council to intervene in the Soviet-occupied zone of Iran.

"I am rather afraid that by direct negotiation with Russia we will only be wasting time and lose this opportunity to bring up the matter before the Security Council," he told a reporter who informed him of the selection of Ahmed Qavan.

"It would be better," Ala said, "if we talked with Moscow concurrently with the investigation now scheduled by the Security Council."

Ala, who has been a frequent critic of alleged Russian interference in Iran's northern Azerbaijan Province, said he hoped the change in premiers "will not change my position in Washington."

RUSSIANS CLAIM ALL OF KURILES

Moscow Reports Agreement on Ownership of Islands Was Reached at Yalta.

LONDON, Jan. 26—(AP) The Moscow radio said tonight that the United States and Great Britain had promised Russia the Kurile islands of northern Japan under terms of a Crimea agreement.

The broadcast noted what it said was U. S. Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson's recent statement that he believed no definite commitments were made at Yalta, and said Tass, official Soviet news agency, had been "officially authorized" to disclose that Russia would get the Kuriles, southern Sakhalin and adjacent islands.

"On the question of the Kurile islands, Mr. Acheson is definitely wrong," the Tass statement was quoted as saying.

"At the Yalta agreement of the three powers, signed on the 11th of February, 1945 (which was then not published for very understandable reasons), it was clearly set out that after victory over Japan the Kurile islands would be handed over to the U.S.S.R. In addition, southern Sakhalin and the adjacent islands would return to the U.S.S.R."

British Labor Hit On Diplomacy

London, Jan. 26 (AP)—Harold MacMillan, former Conservative Cabinet member, charged today that under the Labor Government British relations with Russia "have steadily deteriorated," and "our relations with the United States are far less intimate than they were."

"We were told that the return of a Socialist Government would immediately improve our relations with Soviet Russia," he told a Preston by-election rally, but "now the old alliance is dangerously threatened."

Refers To "Promises"

MacMillan, air secretary in Winston Churchill's last Cabinet, said Labor candidates had promised "utopia around the corner, and all we get is pompous appeals for patience and austerity."

Parliament next week will argue a bill to bring Britain's entire coal industry under state ownership, Anthony Eden, opposition leader during Churchill's vacation, has already posted a motion of rejection.

Fuel and Power Minister Emmanuel Shinwell, also stepping ahead of time into the coming debate on the coal bill, declared nationalization of the mines would not increase the consumer's cost of coal.

Mrs. Roosevelt Wants One Common Language

To Lead Move in U. N. O. for Compulsory School Study

LONDON, Jan. 26 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt announced today that she would sponsor within the United Nations Organization a move for compulsory teaching of one internationally understood language throughout the world.

Citing the many tongues spoken at the U. N. O. eGneral Assembly, where fifty-one nations are represented, Mrs. Roosevelt said "the language barrier is a very severe one—to international peace. She added: "I hope to bring up the fact in the organization that every child throughout the world should learn the language of his own country and one agreed language which would be the same all over the world."

Addressing more than 400 American soldiers at a London theater, Mrs. Roosevelt asserted that economically and politically the United States was "tied up with the rest of the world." She added: "We had better learn to think of other people's needs."

War Damage Cost in Britain

LONDON, Jan. 26 (AP).—Great Britain paid to individual claimants a total of £315,729,000 ($1,262,916,000) in war damages through Dec. 31, 1945, and claims are still coming in at the rate of 1,000 a week, "The Board of Trade Journal" said today.

No Post Offered to Windsor

LONDON, Jan. 26 (AP).—Prime Minister Attlee said today that no diplomatic or official government post had been offered to the Duke of Windsor. Attlee's statement was a written reply to a parliamentary question submitted by T. E. Naylor, of the Labor party.

GI's Battle British In Girl Roundup

London, Jan. 26 (AP)—Dozens of girls were questioned by police today following a "comb-out" of dance halls and other amusement places in mass raids which touched off fist fights involving United States soldiers.

Policemen, acting as a raiding force for the first time, conducted the search for female suspects and service deserters. Many officers who shadowed the policewomen broke up the fights.

Fists flew outside an American club when soldiers protested the questioning of their girl friends. Bottles were thrown in a pub. A soldier smashed a newspaper photographer's camera.

"Stick with me, Joe," some of the girls shouted as they were led away after failing to produce identity cards. As a result, the lobby of police headquarters was crowded with Allied soldiers waiting for their dates to emerge from the questioning room.

453 British Brides Board Ship for U.S.

Bringing 173 Babies, Sing 'God Bless America'

SOUTHAMPTON, England, Jan. 26 (AP).—The tearfully sung strains of "There'll Always Be an England" gave way tonight to "God Bless America" as 453 wives of American soldiers and their 173 babies departed from Southampton on the liner Argentina for their new homes in America.

Captain Thomas Simmons, skipper of the Argentina, said the ship is due in New York on Feb. 1. But he added: "I will slow down the ship just as soon as the weather gets bad."

No more than two mothers with children were assigned to each four or six bed cabin. Many of the brides were amazed at the ship's stock of 18,000 diapers and pleased at the prospect of bananas and other fruit for the children. As for themselves, they just "couldn't wait" to buy a slacks and sweater set and stockings as soon as the Argentina got out to sea.

GIs' British Brides Leave Space For America

Southampton, England, Jan. 26 (AP)—The liner Argentina sailed from Southampton for New York late today with more than 600 GI brides and babies en route to new homes in the United States.

The vessel departed at 4.05 P.M.

White-helmeted military police had helped the women carry aboard the children and baggage for the six-day voyage.

Tired from five days of grappling with their youngsters and filing through customs and emigration lines at the Tidworth processing camp, the women, upon boarding the ship, were relieved at the sight of neat staterooms and baby playpens.

In the line coursing up the gangplank was Military Policeman Matt Kastelic, of West Dallas, Wis., gingerly carrying a 7-month-old baby, while the mother, Mrs. Joan Hardiman, wife of Lieut. Francis Hardiman, of New York city, clutched 19-month-old Francis, Jr., in her arms.

Toys Provided

"And me a bachelor," said Kastelic, obviously embarrassed.

Dance music was being played over the ship's amplifiers as one bride, Mrs. Dorothy Randt, carried 7-month-old Maureen along the corridors to her cabin.

"I think this is ideal," she said. "It seems much cleaner and fresher after the camp."

Typical of the delight of the young mothers in finding the improvised nurseries was the observation of Mrs. Vera Bennett, wife of Tech. Sergt. Royal T. Bennett, of Provolt, Ore., whose baby was playing with the toys provided aboard the ship.

"She won't come out of the pen now," said Mrs. Bennett. "It's a blessing to be able to dump her somewhere."

Mrs. Charles Halcomb, who is going to Princeton, N.J., with her year-old daughter, Patricia, to rejoin her husband, a lieutenant commander in the United States Navy, said:

"It is such a relief to see how well the ship is fitted up. We were all very anxious, as the camp was far from perfect, although the authorities did what they could."

GOUIN NAMES HIS CABINET

Rumors Indicate Assembly May Prolong Own Life

By Wilson

Paris, Jan. 26 (AP)—France's week-long government crisis ended formally tonight when interim President Felix Gouin announced formation of a three-party, Socialist-dominated Coalition cabinet pledged to drastic financial reforms. The cabinet will hold its first session tomorrow.

The new government came into being amid persistent rumors that it might urge the Constituent Assembly to prolong its own life from May until next November, and to postpone the scheduled spring elections.

Harder Talk Ahead

"My task of constructing the French Cabinet is done; now begins a more difficult task," said Gouin, former head of the Assembly who became President after the resignation of General de Gaulle.

Gouin, who will serve while the Assembly drafts a Constitution for the Fourth Republic, gave nine Cabinet posts to his own Socialist party, and distributed seven each to the Communists and Popular Republicans (MRP). One post went to an independent.

De Gaulle's Foreign Minister, Georges Bidault, MRP member, retained that post.

Among the notable casualties in de Gaulle's former cabinet were two ministers of state, Vincent Auriol, Socialist, who had been attending the United Nations General Assembly with Bidault, and Louis Jacquinot, Rightist.

The important and difficult post of minister of finance was taken from Rene Pleven, Independent, and given to Socialist Andre Philip. De Gaulle's colonies minister, Jacques Soustelle, and his information minister, Andre Malraux, also were replaced.

Gouin Forms Cabinet

Paris, Jan. 26 (AP)—President Felix Gouin announced tonight the formation of a new three-party coalition Cabinet, formally ending the French Government crisis which followed the resignation of General de Gaulle as President.

Gouin took the posts of President of the Cabinet and Minister of National Defense. He kept de Gaulle's Foreign Minister, Georges Bidault. Socialist Andre Philip was named Finance Minister. The President plans "massive reductions" in Government spending.

The Socialists, Gouin's party, received nine ministries and the Communists and the Popular Republicans (MRP) seven each. One post went to an independent.

Other Posts Assigned

Assignments in addition to those of Gouin, Bidault and Phillip:

Armies—Armand Michelet, MRP.

Armament—Charles Tillon, Communist.

Agriculture — Pierre Tanguy-Prigent, Socialist.

Industrial Production — Marcel Paul, Communist.

Education — Marcel Naegelen, Socialist.

Public Works and Transport—Jules Moch, Socialist.

JAN 27 1946

JAN 27 1946

30.24-593

Labor—Ambroise Croizat, Communist.

Public Health—Robert Prigent, MRP.

Reconstruction — Francis Billoux, Communist.

Veterans Affairs—Laurent Casanova, Communist.

Food—Henri Lonchambron, nonparty.

Under Secretaries

Named as Under Secretaries of State attached to the Presidency of the Cabinet were:

Information — Gaston Deferre, Socialist.

Labor—Marius Patinaud, MRP.

National Economy—Andre Gazier, Socialist.

Production and Coal — Auguste le Coeur, Communist.

In announcing the Cabinet, Gouin said that "a more difficult task" lay ahead. He had called upon the three major parties to accept his financial retrenchment program.

Financial Plan

Leaders of the three parties were asked by Gouin to reply to a letter describing his financial plan and calling upon them to agree on the "supreme problem of the day—defense of the franc."

General approval of Gouin's program, which includes large military cutbacks, had already been announced by the three parties. The newly elected President took the position, however, that he could form a new government only if every point were accepted.

Gouin announced earlier that Pierre Mendes-France, independent Radical Socialist and former Finance Minister, had declined to accept the finance appointment in his Cabinet.

Surpluses Sold in Europe.

Paris, Jan. 26 (A. P.).—The Foreign Liquidation Commissioner's office announced today that more than $35,000,000 worth of United States surplus war stocks in Europe have been sold, principally to the UNRRA which, with first buying priority, has taken up more than $60,000,000 worth.

U. S. to Allow Private Aid for Some Germans

Children, Pregnant Women, Aged and Ill to Receive Help From Relief Units

BERLIN, Jan. 26 (AP).—The United States government has given permission to the American Council of Voluntary Agencies to send relief to "special categories" of German civilians, it was announced today.

Eight representatives of the relief group are touring the American, British and French occupation zones under orders approved by the President's War Relief Control Board and the War and State Departments.

Lieutenant General Lucius D. Clay, commanding the American military government, said the committee was authorized to arrange only for the shipment of such items as medical and sanitary supplies, soap, cod liver oil, powdered milk and infant's food and clothing for the aged, young children, pregnant and nursing mothers and the ill.

Army May Supervise

The military government reserves the right to supervise the distribution of relief, which in the American zone is to be made through existing German welfare agencies. Details have not been worked out for distribution in the British and French zones.

Members of the council on tour are James Flint, of the Congregational Relief Society; Gilbert White and James Read, of the American Society of Friends; John Buttinger, of the International Rescue and Relief Committee; Dr Steward Herman, of the World Council of Churches; the Rev. James Hoban, of the Catholic Charities; Anthony Suchek, of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and Leon Denneneberg, of the American Federation of Labor.

Western Europeans in U. S. Camps

FRANKFURT ON THE MAIN, Germany, Jan. 26 (AP)—The overseas subcommittee of the Mead Senate Investigating Committee demanded an official Army explanation today of why more than 1,000 western Europeans were being allowed to remain in NURRA displaced persons camps in the American zone in Germany.

UNRRA officials said at a public hearing at Army headquarters that 212 French, 312 Italians, 206 Greeks, 148 Netherlanders, 122 Belgians and Luxembourgers, twenty-seven Norwegians and six Danes were at present being allowed to remain in the camps.

Mrs. Floretta Pomery, deputy American zone director of UNRRA, said the western Europeans "for various reasons don't want to go home." An Army source unofficially said the major factor seemed to be political.

5 MILLION TO VOTE ON COUNCIL POSTS IN GERMAN TOWNS

FRANKFURT, Germany, Jan. 26 —(AP) Political observers in the American zone said today they expected middle-of-the-road and slightly right-of-center political parties would take the leadership when German more than 10,000 communities vote tomorrow for rural councils.

Nearly 5,000,000 persons are eligible to vote.

Some sources expected a slightly better showing this time by the Communists, who trailed badly in last Sunday's test of political strength in greater Hesse.

Today the slightly right-of-center Christian Democratic union, made up of church and middle-class rural elements, assumed 949 of 1,070 uncontested seats in northern Baden, the left-of-center Social Democrats picked up 71 unopposed seats in the rural councils; the Democratic People's party 10; various independents 40, and Communists, none. There were no contests in 20 Gemeinden (communities under 20,000 population) in northern Baden.

Voters in the remaining 233 northern Baden Gemeinden, along with those in Baden-Wuerttemberg, Bavaria and the Greater Hesse towns which did not vote last week, will take part in tomorrow's election.

Results Last Week

In last week's voting in 1,200 Greater Hesse communities, the Social Democrats, with a mildly socialistic platform, received 146,508 votes of the 376,794 cast. The Christian Democrats received 99,591, the Communists, representing the extreme left, polled 16,508, and the extreme right Liberal Democrats trailed far behind with 5,662.

With the second election, the Social Democrats were expected to lose some ground to the Christian Social Democrats and the Christian Democratic Union. The Democratic Union and the Christian Social Democrats in reality are the same, although they go by different names in different areas. Their main strength lies in Bavaria, greatest and most conservative province in the American zone.

In contrast with last Sunday, when slightly more than 400,000 persons were eligible to vote, the Military Government estimated that approximately 4,788,000 would be eligible tomorrow.

Rightists Win North Baden Seats

Frankfurt, Germany, Jan. 26 (AP). With contests lacking, German Christian Democratic Union candidates today assumed 949 of the 1,070 seats in rural councils of northern Baden, a day in advance of elections throughout the American zone.

This party, slightly right of center, is an amalgamation of church interests and middle-class rural voters. It had the largest number of candidates entered in the 253 gemeinden (towns of under 20,000 population) of northern Baden where only one slate was filed. The left of center Social Democratic party picked up 71 unopposed seats, the Democratic People's party ten, the Communists none, and Independents 40.

In the 233 remaining gemeinden in northern Baden where more than one ticket has been entered, the communities will vote tomorrow with about 10,000 other communities in Baden-Wurttemberg, Bavaria and greater Hesse.

Hess Lawyer, 'Fired' Still Works On Case

Nuernberg, Jan. 26 (AP)—Rudolf Hess's attorney, disobeying the written order of his eccentric client, was at work in a hospital ward today preparing a case that might save the former deputy Führer's life.

The lawyer, Gunther von Rohrscheidt, broke one of his ankles in an accidental fall last Monday and received his "dismissal" by at almost the same time.

As soon as doctors had set the difficult fracture and informed Rohrscheidt that he would be bedfast up to four weeks, the veteran German attorney organized a legal office in the hospital, brought in his two secretaries, sent to the Palace of Justice daily for catalogued documents and pored over the official transcript of each session of the international military tribunal he had missed.

Own-Defense Request

The tribunal has withheld a decision on Hess's later formal request that he be allowed to conduct his defense alone. None of the battery of attorneys defending the 21 other Nazi war criminals, however, considers it likely that the Allied judges will humor Hess to such an extent.

Hess's note to Rohrscheidt asserted in effect: "I do not want any witnesses. I do not want any affidavits or documents. I do not want any lawyer. I do not want any defense."

Wryly his attorney commented: "He has no apparent fear of execution and seems to be completely thoughtless of his own life. But I believe he would seek if possible to defend his idea of the German people and their political faith."

Hess's wife and son, about whom he asks no questions from the American guards, are reported living on the charity of friends in one rented furnished room in a Bavarian mountain village. Hess's home in Munich was destroyed in the war.

3 DOOMED NAZIS GAIN CLEMENCY

BAD TOELZ, Germany, Jan. 26— (AP) Three of the 36 Dachau concentration camp officials sentenced last month to hang for cruelties to prisoners won commutation of their sentences to long prison terms today.

Lt. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott, commander of the Third Army, who reviewed the cases passed by a military court, also shortened the sentence of one of the four who had received prison sentences in the same trial.

Those whom Truscott saved from hanging were Dr. Hans Eisele, Dr. Fridolin Puhr and Emil Mahl.

The rest of the sentences were approved by Truscott but still are subject to review by the European theater commander, Gen. Joseph T. McNarny.

Eisele, whose death sentence was commuted to life imprisonment, appealed for clemency on the claim that he tried to improve the lot of the prisoners. Puhr, who was physician for the SS troops and had little contact with the prisoners, had his death sentence changed to 20 years in prison.

Mahl was himself a prisoner at Dachau and in a dramatic appeal to the court pleaded that he acted as the hangman of fellow inmates only under compulsion by the SS guards. Truscott reduced his sentence from death to 10 years in prison.

The ten-year sentence originally given to Johann Schoepp was cut to five years on the appeal that he was a Romanian soldier drafted into the SS after his country's capitulation.

MUNICH, Germany, Jan. 26 (AP) —The first party newspapers in the American zone of Germany were published today. They are organs of the Christian Socialist, Social Democrat and Communist parties, and are licensed for publication of a single sheet once a week.

Pope Praises U.N.R.R.A. for Aid to Children

Receives 35,000 Rome Boys and Girls at St. Peter's in His Largest Audience

VATICAN CITY, Jan. 26 (AP).—Pope Pius XII, receiving 35,000 Rome children in the largest audience of his pontificate, praised the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration today for aid to needy children throughout the world, and called on children to pray and "resist evil."

He called U. N. R. R. A. "United Nations benefactors . . . heralds of kindness and distributors and thus pioneers of harmony and peace in the world" and thanked all public institutions and persons who aid the needy. He also received U. N. R. R. A. officials.

The Pope made his discourse in Italian and then closed with these words in English:

"The cry of children is rising over land made desolate by war. Hungry, cold, crippled they are calling, alas in vain, for a mother who would soothe them, for a gentle hand that would soothe their aching tired bodies.

"City streets are sadly echoing the braggart shout and hollow laugh of mere children, defenseless and guideless, as they slide along the ways of vice and crime.

"Theirs is the voice of tomorrow and it is a challenge: Are such as these to shape and build the future?

"Through them we hear the voice of their Creator, and its appeal, welling up from depths of infinite love: what you will do for them you do for me." . . .

"Our fervent prayer is that God's blessing may descend upon you all!"

The children sang hymns and acclaimed the Pontiff as he was carried through the main aisle of St. Peter's to the altar, giving the papal blessing. Massed in the nave and transepts—the boys on the right and the girls on the left—the children saw rather than heard the Pope speak, because the microphone was not working. Their voices hushed as the Pontiff lifted his hands and his face beamed with happiness over the enthusiasm of the children's ovation.

In greeting the children at St. Peter's the Pope stressed that it is the "largest church in the world" and added: "It seems to want to stretch itself to make room not only for the children of Rome who could not come but also for all your small needy brothers and sisters of Italy and the world and to receive all the young and old who hear the voice of the Lord."

Genoa Fascist Aide Gets Death

ROME, Jan. 26 (AP)—A dispatch from the Italian news agency ANSA said today that Carlo Emanuele Basile, former Fascist Prefect of Genoa, had been sentenced to death by the Pavia tribunal. Basile was arrested last April carrying 30,000,000 lire, which he said he was taking to Benito Mussolini.

Athens Papers Cut to One Sheet

ATHENS, Jan. 26 (AP)—Because of a shortage of newsprint, Athens newspapers will be reprinted on a single tabloid-size page starting Monday.

SOVIET DISAVOWS AIM TO RUN LISPE OIL FIELD

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Jan. 24 (Delayed) (AP)—A Russian source declared today that reports that the Russians intended to take over management of the Lispe oil field from the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey were untrue.

He insisted that the reports were based on an ambiguous translation of a document presented to the American management by a Soviet officer assigned by Marshal Klementy E. Voroshilov to supervise production in the field, near the Hungary-Yugoslav frontier.

Americans agree that since the talks began between the Red Army Marshal and Maj. Gen. William S. Key, head of the United States military delegation on the Allied Control Commission for Hungary, the only apparent difference of opinion has been in the field's rate of production, now about 14,000 barrels a day.

Discussions on the field are conducted amicably and American members of the control council express confidence that an agreement can be reached.

RUSSIAN TROOPS SOON WILL RETIRE FROM MANCHURIA

PEIPING, Jan. 26—(AP) An exchange of farewell messages of good will between Chiang Kai-Shek and the Russians in Changchun lent emphasis today to reports that most of the Red army would be out of Manchuria by the first week in February.

The generalissimo's message to "the brave and gallant Soviet officers and men" was read for him yesterday by Madame Chiang Kai-Shek, who went to the Manchurian capital to decorate 100 Red army officers. She returned to Peiping today.

"It was for the purpose of promoting early realization of total peace and also in pursuance of a policy of concerted action with other Allied nations that your troops have come to our northeast," Chiang said.

"Under the great leadership of Stalin and with your unrivalled bravery and superior equipment, seconded by the efforts of our brethren in the northeast (Manchuria) you brought about in a surprisingly short time the collapse of an invader deeply entrenched in the northeast. Our people will be ever grateful for your glorious military achievement."

The message added that "now that you have concluded your mission in the northeast and are about to return home" the generalissimo wanted to express his appreciation and "to bid farewell to you."

A representative of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky, the Soviet commander who has returned temporarily to Russia, replied:

"In the past, present and future we always desire and want to cooperate with the Chinese people, who have shown themselves willing and ready to fight for their own liberation and who have lived on friendly terms with the Soviet Union.

"I believe that during your visit here you will see for yourself that the Red Army and the Soviet people are good friends of the Chinese people and a safeguard of the peace of the Far East."

Russian troops are due to leave Changchun and Mukden, Manchuria's largest city, for home this week, but a fuel shortage was slowing transportation. The current deadline for the Manchurian withdrawal is Feb. 1.

The Russians today were reported already pulling back toward Siberia from three points in two Chinese-contested northern provinces lying west of Manchuria—Chengteh, capital of Jehol province; Chihfeng, important railway in Jehol, and Tolun in Chahar province.

In Chungking, the political consultation (unity) conference expected to prolong its sessions, scheduled to have ended Saturday, for three or four days to gain time for resolving two unsettled questions — reorganization of China's peacetime government and the composition of the national assembly which will adopt a new constitution.

A subcommittee finished work on a draft of the constitution, providing for an elective house of representatives, a senate named by provincial legislatures with no legislative power save that of veto over certain measures, and a cabinet responsible to the house.

Russians Leave Chihfeng

CHUNGKING, Jan. 26 (AP)—A Communist dispatch reported today withdrawal of Soviet troops on Wednesday from Chihfeng in Jehol Province.

Chihfeng figured prominently in negotiations leading to the declaration of truce in China's civil strife. Before the Communists would sign the truce, they insisted that the Government waive plans for occupation of the city by its forces.

Chinese Women To Meet

Chungking, Jan. 26 (AP)—The Chinese National Women's Conference will be convoked by Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, Chungking newspapers said today. Yet to be decided are its dates and other details.

Chinese Pirates Peril Army Boats

Hong Kong, Jan. 26 (AP)—Increasingly bold Chinese pirates along south China's Kwangtung province coast have led United States Army personnel seeking the graves of missing American aviators in the region to ask for submachine guns while traveling by boat.

An order for the automatic weapons was dispatched after pirates shot a Chinese boatman this week at an isolated spot to which an American three-man team was scheduled to proceed.

The pirates have been raiding smaller craft and occasionally staging major coups by boarding crowded ferries as passengers, then commandeering them with pistols and grenades.

An American six-man team, under Lieut. Frank Wallace, of Bremerton, Wash., is seeking the graves of missing aviators in the Hong Kong-Canton region. The team has found about twenty American graves in this region, but some are unidentified.

Repatriates On Way

Singapore, Jan. 26 (AP)—The Choran Maru left today for Japan with 5,300 repatriates, including 499 army personnel described as unfit for work.

Mid-Pacific Army Paper Being Stopped

Honolulu, Jan. 26 (AP)—The middle Pacific edition of the army newspaper Stars and Stripes will discontinue publication Wednesday because "of lack of qualified personnel," Lieut. Gen. Robert C. Richardson, Jr., announced today.

In a special message to his mid-Pacific command, Richardson said:

"The necessity of returning promptly to the mainland officers and enlisted men eligible for discharge will almost completely deprive the paper of its staff and management personnel.

Circulation 90,000

"The passing of Stars and Stripes will be viewed with real regret by thousands of men of the armed forces who, have been so ably served through its columns."

The outspoken mid-Pacific edition began publication May 14, 1945. It averaged 90,000 circulation along the world's longest paper route—from Honolulu to Okinawa.

Richardson consistently supported the staff—all enlisted personnel—in its free and aggressive policy. From him the paper received only one admonition: not to call anyone "names." But he permitted criticism of policy, of Congress, the War Department or its lower echelons.

RAF STRIKERS WIN PLEDGE AT SINGAPORE

SINGAPORE, Jan. 26 (AP)—Amid shouts of "ships for blighty; not for Java," Air Marshal Sir Keith Park assured 4,000 RAF men today that he had met their demand for speedier discharges with a recommendation to the British Air Ministry for a reduction of overseas tours of duty for single men.

Sir Keith addressed the men in a hangar at the Seletar air base, outside Singapore, after a strike by ground crew personnel halted all flying operations.

Shouts of protest greeted an assertion by Sir Keith that the Air Ministry had agreed to a reduction of the duty tour "when possible." He said he had recommended that the tour for single men be reduced from three years and six months to three years.

CALCUTTA, India, Jan. 26 (AP)—Twelve hundred non-commissioned RAF personnel struck today at Lumbadum, twelve miles from Calcutta. A similar stoppage entered its third day at Colombo, Ceylon. Seven hundred men at Lydda, Palestine, and 700 near Cairo returned to their jobs today. A three-day strike near Karachi ended yesterday.

More RAF Men Strike

Calcutta, Jan. 26 (AP) — Twelve hundred noncommissioned RAF personnel struck today at Lumbadum, 12 miles from Calcutta, in the fifth "I want-to-go-home" demonstration by British airmen this week.

[A Reuter dispatch from Colombo said it was officially announced tonight that all RAF personnel who went on strike on Thursday at Katunayake Aerodrome, near Colombo, have resumed their duties.]

Seven hundred men stationed at Lydda, Palestine, and a like number at Almaza, near Cairo, returned to their jobs today, ending a walkout which had threatened to interrupt the withdrawal of troops from the Indian theater.

A three-day strike at the Mauripur camp near Karachi ended yesterday.

General Neyland Returning

Calcutta, Jan. 26 (AP)—After fourteen months as commanding officer of the Calcutta base section, Brig. Gen. Robert T. Neyland, who in peacetime coached University of Tennessee football teams, is returning to the United States, it was disclosed today. He will be succeeded by Brig. Gen. Walter King Wilson, Jr., of Fort Barracas, Fla.

INDIANS CELEBRATE

BOMBAY, Jan. 26—(AP) Thousands of Indians in holiday garb paraded and attended a mass meeting tonight in a quiet observance of the congress party's declaration of independence day.

Police earlier had expressed fear that holiday celebrations might precipitate fresh violence in rioting which left 22 persons and injured 600 in the last three days. Authorities had described the riots as anti-British and anti-police.

The only outbreaks today consisted of stone throwing incidents in which five police were injured. Authorities said small groups of hoodlums were responsible.

Today's celebration marked the anniversary of the Congress party's 1929 declaration for complete independence instead of dominion status for India.

JAPAN MANEUVERS FOR EXPANSION OF HER FISHING AREAS

TOKYO, Jan. 26—(AP) Vanquished Japan, having lost her mighty war fleet and her globe-girdling merchant marine, has been maneuvering to regain at least her fishing empire in the Pacific.

In pursuance of this policy, Allied headquarters disclosed today, Japanese government and fishery officials have carried on a systematic campaign to break out of the restricted fishing areas assigned to the Nipponese since surrender and to resume their exploitation of distant waters.

Lt. Col. Hubert G. Schenck, chief of General MacArthur's natural resources section, said that in the four and a half months since surrender, the Japanese had submitted six requests for revision of fishing areas. Four were denied.

Schenck asserted that some of the requests were for areas so far from the home islands that there could be no doubt the Japanese were aiming to lever their way back into the world market—although their argument was the need of increasing Japan's home supply of sea products.

One fishing concern, he said, wanted the right to operate off northern Australia, in the Indian ocean and off the west coast of Mexico.

Meanwhile the Japanese government had its hands full trying to placate public discontent over the food situation, which flared up again recently in a raid by some 3,000 persons on a former arsenal in which food was stored.

Kyodo news agency said investigation showed that the commodities seized by the citizenry belonged to former workers there, and that arrangements for distribution were made before the raid.

The government promised in the future to ration stocks of concealed food and warned sternly against mob action.

Japs Out To Get Fishing Trade Back, U.S. Says

Tokyo, Jan. 26 (AP)—General MacArthur's headquarters charged Japanese Government and fishery officials today with a systematic campaign to break out of fishing areas assigned Japan since surrender and to regain gradually a semblance of their former dominant fishing empire.

Lieut. Col. Hubert G. Schenck, chief of MacArthur's natural resources section, revealed that within the four and a half months since the surrender the Japanese have submitted six requests for revision of fishing areas. Four were denied.

Plead For Extensions

"While the Japanese plead for extensions in order to increase their home food supply of sea products," Schenck said, "some of the requests are so far from the home islands there can be no question that their produce would be used on the black market.

"It is apparent that, since most of the fish taken by the Japanese in distant waters before the war went to markets outside Japan, the Japanese must have been able to supply their home needs through operation of home-based fleets in an area somewhat similar to the one in which they now are permitted to operate."

3027—595

Schenck said that even as the extension requests were pressed field inspections indicated "that in too many instances the Japanese are not making full use of the areas available to them."

Area Near Mexico Sought

A private concern sought fishing rights in waters as far distant as those north of Australia, the Indian Ocean and off the west coast of Mexico. The request was denied.

The Japanese government and a group of private companies asked permission to operate in the Yellow Sea and East China Sea. The Fishery Federation of Hokkaido asked for permission to fish between northern Hokkaido and Karafuto and the waters surrounding Kunashiri Island in the Kuriles. Both were denied.

Because of a food shortage, permission was granted on November 8 to conduct winter whaling operations in waters around Ogasaware (Bonin) and Kazan (Volcano) islands, which were outside the authorized areas.

Production Noted

Schenck's report showed that prior to the war, home and overseas fisheries production amounted to five to six million metric tons annually.

Meanwhile, the Japanese Government promised to ration stocks of concealed goods as a result of a recent raid by some 3,000 persons on a former arsenal in which food was stored.

Kyodo news agency said reports showed that the commodities seized by the citizenry belonged to former workers at the arsenal and that arrangements for distribution were made prior to the raid.

The Government warned sternly against seizures by the people themselves.

Communist Speaks

A gathering of Japanese Communists was told by Sanzo Nosaka, party member who recently returned from Yenan, China, that the Government of Premier Kijuro Shidehara has no concrete plan for the reconstruction of Japan.

Nosaka urged that key industries be operated for the general welfare and that monopolistic capital be controlled. The Communist asserted that reactionary bureaucrats are attempting to hinder democratization of the nation.

Cabinet Moves Continue

Reorganization of the Shidehara cabinet continued with the appointment of Giichi Murakami as minister of transportation. He is president of the Japan Railway Association and a former director of the South Manchuria Railway Co.

Kyodo reported the appointment of Dr. Tatsukichi Minobe, former professor at Tokyo Imperial University, as privy councillor. He is recognized as an authority on constitutions.

MACARTHUR GIVES MEDAL TO KRUEGER

Two Generals Celebrate Birthday with Ceremony in Tokyo.

TOKYO, Jan. 26—(AP) General MacArthur celebrated his 66th birthday today by decorating a comrade-in-arms for more than 40 years—Gen. Walter Krueger, retiring commander of the famed U. S. Sixth Army.

It was a double-barreled celebration, because it also was the 65th birthday for Krueger, who led MacArthur's spearhead all the way from the south Pacific through the Philippines.

Appearing as vigorous and alert as he was when he came out of the Philippines in the black days of 1942, MacArthur pinned the Distinguished Service Cross and an Oak Leaf cluster on Krueger.

"No Army in military history ever had a greater leader than General Krueger," MacArthur said, "and no army ever had a record of accomplishment greater than that of the Sixth Army."

Today the Sixth Army was formally inactivated. All its high-point veterans already are home, its low-pointers have been transferred to the U. S. Eighth Army of occupation, and Krueger himself will sail soon aboard the battleship New Jersey for home and retirement.

The Eighth Army also is stripping its ranks of veterans. More than 9,000 officers and enlisted men will sail from Yokohama Sunday and Monday.

Japan's Land Reform Program Held Lacking

Tokyo, Sunday, Jan. 27 (AP)—Japan's land reform program, ordered by General MacArthur to give the little farmer a chance to own his own land, has not come up to requirements, the agriculture division of headquarter's natural resources section reported today.

It marked the second straight day of critical comment by that section, which yesterday charged the Japanese Government and fishery officials were trying to break out of the restricted fishing areas assigned since the surrender.

The Japanese still have until March 15 to submit a complete land reformation program which must meet headquarter's approval before being instituted.

Poisoning Of Japanese At Iwo Jima Reported

Tokyo, Jan. 26 (AP)—Kyodo news agency today quoted a Japanese survivor of the Iwo Jima campaign as charging that 169 wounded Nipponese were tricked into drinking poisoned water just before United States Marines completed the capture of that volcanic island.

The soldier said that the Japanese corps commander, adopting suicide tactics, sent the precious water to a hospital tent in which were 170 severely wounded men. Only the man who related the story survived.

8th Army 45-Point Men Due To Come Home

Yokohama, Jan. 26 (AP)—All enlisted men in the 8th Army with 45 or more points were to have been in disposition centers by yesterday for return to the United States for discharge, headquarters announced tonight.

Also called in were officers with 67 points.

Enlisted men with 34 months' service and officers with 43 or more by January 31 are due at the centers on that date.

Mine Man Defends Jap In War Trial

Yokohama, Jan. 26 (AP)—A Japanese mining compan, official testified at the war-crime trial of Capt. Hiroji Honda today that the prison camp commandant protested against mistreatment of Allied prisoners.

The defense witness, Hisashi Terada, said Honda made the protests after prisoners were mistreated by civilian employés of the Joban Mining Company, near Honda's Sendai camp.

Terada testified that because the Joban mine was new, Allied prisoners there worked under better conditions than did Japanese miners elsewhere.

Honda is charged with responsibility for brutal treatment of prisoners.

German Woman In Japan Asks Damages

Kobe, Japan, Jan. 26 (AP)—Mrs. M. Schrirmer, 67, who described herself as German "but no Nazi," today asked General MacArthur's headquarters for $10,000 because of the destruction of her two "foreign houses" by American bombers.

She wrote that the houses "were burnt to the ground from your bombers" August 5 and "they were in a very quiet village with no factories at all."

She asked MacArthur's headquarters to forward her letter to the United States Court of Claims, Washington.

Sergeant Smashes Jap Black-Mart Ring

Fukuoka, Kyushu, Jan. 26 (AP)—An Air Corps sergeant today was credited with smashing a Japanese black-market ring in the midst of a plot involving theft of goods valued in excess of $1,000,000.

After posing six weeks as a henchman of the black-market operators, Sergt. Frank J. Oliver, 23, of Cross City, Fla., brought about the arrest of six Japanese and the confiscation of two truckloads of Japanese army goods and currency worth $2,000.

The Army Public Relations Office said the Japanese planned to seize 150 truckloads of Japanese property assigned to United States redistribution centers in the area. The goods would have yielded more than 15,000,000 yen ($1,000,000) on the black market.

GUERRILLA LEADER STIRS KOREANS AS HE RETURNS HOME

By ROBERT MYERS

SEOUL, Korea, Jan. 26—(AP) A newly-arrived character as colorful and controversial as ever figured in a mystery drama has moved into the wings and may at any moment step to the center of the stage in Korea.

This shadowy figure is known as Gen. Kim Il Sung, reputed Communist and hero in fact or fancy to thousands of Koreans, who credit him with leading guerrilla warfare against the Japanese in Manchuria for nearly 15 years.

Everything about him at present is seen in a sort of legendary half-light, and reports concerning him are difficult to confirm, but it is indisputable that he has appealed to the imagination of many Koreans.

Little boys playing soldier vie to impersonate him. It has been said that the Japanese spent nearly $1,000,000 trying to capture him.

It also is said that he twice was decorated by the Soviet Union for bravery and leadership of guerrillas beginning with the 1931 Manchurian incident.

Recently it was reported that Kim had returned from Yenan, Communist capital in China, to Heijo, the largest city in Russian-occupied northern Korea. These same unconfirmed but widespread reports said thousands of his guerrillas followed.

When it was rumored that Kim would visit Seoul, welcoming committees were formed from the ranks of his leftist admirers, but he is not known to have come to the American-occupied zone.

On the other side of the picture, rightist elements openly scoff. One spokesman of Kim Koo's unrecognized Korean "provisional" government declared the present Kim Il Sung was an imposter and that the real Kim Il Sung was dead.

The Kim in Heijo admittedly is young, his age variously given as 33 to 37 years. Skeptics say this alone proves he is too young to have launched such a career in 1931 as is claimed for him.

Kim Il Sung's admirers say the very youth of their fiery hero was part of his original appeal to Koreans. A member of the underground told me two months ago about him, who then was reported still in Yenan but soon expected in Korea.

Red Hero Back in Korea

SEOUL, Korea, Jan. 26 (AP)—A newly arrived character, as colorful and controversial as ever figured in a mystery drama, may at any moment stride to the center of the stage in Korea. He is Gen. Kim Il Sung, a Communist and a hero to thousands of Koreans, who credit him with leading guerrilla warfare against the Japanese in Manchuria for nearly fifteen years.

A Korean leftist newspaperman, Sue Pyun Koon, told today of a trip to Heijo to interview Kim Il Sung, who now is secretary of the Northern Korea branch of the Communist party and is reported to be planning political activity.

Return Of Goods Abroad Secondary, Probers Told

Manila, Jan. 26 (AP)—Representative Bates (R., Mass.), inquiring whether heavy road equipment could be returned to the United States in view of the current steel strike, was told today that demobilization requirements had made handling of surplus material a secondary project.

Bates is chairman of the House Naval Affairs subcommittee touring the Pacific.

Commodore A. D. Hunter, public works officer of the Seabees, said used material now in storage would be useless within a year because of deterioration.

Junking Proposed

Capt. Philip White, in charge of navy air logistics in the Philippine area, suggested that the best method of disposing of a large proportion of the surplus in his department would be "by junking it or sinking it."

White added that airplane motors usable in commercial planes undoubtedly could be salvaged.

Vice Admiral James L. Kauffman, commander of the Philippine Sea frontier, said there is 1,000,000 tons of material, of which 400,000 could be declared surplus, in his area. He said this included construction materials.

Pooled Bids Urged

Rear Admiral E. G. Morsell, representing the Foreign Liquidation Commission, said there were tremendous amounts of materials to be disposed of in the area assigned the commission—Australia, China, Japan, Korea, Netherlands East Indies, New Caledonia, New Guinea, New Zealand, the Philippines and all other Pacific islands except Hawaii and the Aleutians.

Small buyers are being encouraged to pool their bids to eliminate small transactions which he said would require a staff far larger than the Army and Navy could provide because of the increased tempo of demobilization.

Other subcommittee members are Representatives Rivers (D., S.C.) and Fogarty (D., R.I.).

ARMY'S PACIFIC GHQ IS MOVING TO TOKYO

MANILA, Sunday, Jan. 27 (AP)—General Headquarters of the United States Army Forces in the Pacific will be transferred officially from Manila to Tokyo on Monday, Brig. Gen. Carl A. Russell, acting deputy chief of staff for administration, announced today.

He said that by Feb. 7 all remaining headquarters personnel except a few clean-up men will be out of Luzon. More than 3,000 GHQ officers and men are moving to Tokyo this week.

GHQ has functioned in Manila since February, 1945. Gen. Douglas MacArthur moved elements of his command to Tokyo just before the formal Japanese surrender aboard the battleship Missouri on Sept. 22 and followed up with the advance echelon of GHQ, consisting of several hundred officers and more than 1,000 enlisted men.

Army Forces, Western Pacific, known as "AFWESPAC," under Lieut. Gen. W. D. Styer, has the responsibility of administering Army functions in the Philippines and Okinawa.

Philippine Army To Total 40,000

Manila, Jan. 26 (AP)—The Philippine Government plans a regular peacetime army of 40,000 officers and men, Brig. Gen. Macario D. Peralta, new Filipino army deputy chief of staff, said today.

Twenty-two thousand will be in the Military Police Command, replacing the prewar constabulary force of 7,000. The remainder will be used for garrison duty and for training a citizen's army.

Peralta, 32, was a wartime guerrilla leader.

Jap Prisoners Retained

Manila, Jan. 26 (AP)—Approximately 65,000 Japanese prisoners of war will be retained in Western Pacific army installations as laborers until July 1, Lieut. Gen. Wilhelm D. Styer told members of a House agriculture subcommittee today. The theater commander said they were needed to help construct permanent installations.

Union Recedes From 30% Demand; No Increase in Retail Prices Seen

Reuther Adamant On Figure for G. M.

Says Company Must Give 17.5% Boost; Lack of Steel Still Bars Output

By The Associated Press

DETROIT, Jan. 26.—The Congress of Industrial Organizations United Automobile Workers Union settled its wage disputes today with the Ford Motor Company and the Chrysler Corporation at approximately half the originally demanded 30 per cent increase.

Close on the heels of an agreement between Ford and the U. A. W. providing for an 18-cent-an-hour (15.1 per cent) increase, Chrysler and the union announced that their dispute had been settled on the basis of an 18½-cent-an-hour (16.2 per cent) increase.

One hundred thousand Ford workers participate in the increase, which brings their average wage to $1.37 an hour. Forty-eight thousand production and hourly rated employees share in the rise in Chrysler wages, which will average $1.32½ an hour.

The increases add $39,000,000 annually to the Ford pay roll and $18,000,000 a year to Chrysler wages.

No Effect on Prices

The increases granted by Ford and Chrysler are not expected to have any effect on new auto prices recently set by the Office of Price Administration.

A Ford spokesman said no requests for upward adjustment of auto prices would be sought, while Chrysler officials declined formal comment.

The new wage scale leaves Ford's average hourly wage 4½ cents an hour higher than Chrysler's, while under the old pay levels Ford paid 5 cents an hour more.

Union spokesmen pointed out that the newly formed Kaiser-Frazer Auto Company agreed on Jan. 9 to pay its workers the $1.19 hourly average rate now in effect at Ford. In addition, the company is to add whatever wage increases the U. A. W. obtains from General Motors. The Kaiser-Frazer contract also stipulates that a bonus of $5 an auto produced is to be set aside in a fund for distribution to workers on a per capita basis.

Announcement of the settlements brought no immediate comment from officials of the General Motors Corporation, whose 175,000 production workers have been on strike since Nov. 21.

Demands 19½ Cents

In Washington, however, R. J. Thomas and Walter P. Reuther, U. A. W. president and vice-president, respectively, announced that the union would expect more from General Motors than was obtained in the Ford settlement. "G. M. will have to go higher," said Mr. Thomas, "because its present rates are lower than Ford's."

The General Motors average now is $1.13.

Said Mr. Reuther: "We will not settle with G. M. for less than 19½ cents."

The U. A. W. in August demanded a flat 30 per cent wage increase from the entire motors industry. It lowered this figure after President Truman's fact-finding board recommended 19½ cents, or 17½ per cent, to settle the General Motors strike. General Motors' best offer was 13½ cents, or 11.6 per cent, and when the company rejected the fact-finding board's recommendations the U. A. W. returned to its 30 per cent demand against General Motors.

Despite the Ford and Chrysler settlements without strikes, however, the car industry's assembly lines, which have made approximately 125,000 passenger vehicles since last July, are expected to come to a standstill within the next fortnight if the steel strike continues.

Some of the plants have been able to continue limited production with dwindling stocks of glass, also short because of strikes. In a few instances cars have been shipped from factory to dealer with cardboard in the windshield frame and a notice that the plate glass could be installed later in the retailers' service departments.

But in the making of automobiles steel is essential, and even Ford, which makes a considerable volume of the metal, has already been forced to curtail operations. Ford announced the laying off of 15,000 Detroit area workers this week and plans to send home 25,000 next week because of the steel strike. Ford currently employs about 110,000 workers.

Aside from the direct requirements of the car factories, the assembly lines are dependent also upon the movement of steel to their supplier concerns. It is from these latter companies that most of the car makers obtain their frames, transmissions, gears, pumps and such parts of the finished vehicle.

G. M. Last Hold-Out

The Ford and Chrysler settlements, representing the largest agreement reached nationally since the close of the war, leave only General Motors of the Big Three yet to come to terms with the union, Henry J. Kaiser's new auto manufacturing company having already signed.

Both the Ford and Chrysler agreements must be submitted to the workers for ratification. The effective date of the Ford agreement was left to further discussions. The Chrysler contract, effective today, will run until Feb. 15, 1947.

The new contract, a joint Chrysler-union statement said, "recognizes the interest of both the union and management in peaceful settlement of differences through collective bargaining and also in high productivity. . . .

"We negotiated in a friendly and a constructive spirit, and both the union and the company earnestly intend to see to it that in our day-to-day relations these purposes are kept foremost in mind.

"In the same spirit we agree that there should be no vilification of the other by either the union or the company."

The Chrysler wage negotiations dated back to last Sept. 25. Both sides made concessions. Chrysler spokesmen said, which "will improve employee-management relations, better the procedures for handling grievances and raise productivity."

Joint Ford Statement

The Ford settlement was announced in the following joint management-union statement:

"An agreement on a wage increase of 18 cents an hour was reached today by the Ford Motor Company and the U. A. W.-C. I. O.

"The effective date of the wage increase still has not been decided. Details connected with fair, efficient and uninterrupted production will be discussed at an early date and we hope that the wage increase will become effective not later than Feb. 1.

"We have every confidence that there will be an early termination to all matters remaining to be negotiated."

The statement was signed by John S. Bugas, Ford industrial relations director, and Richard T. Leonard, national Ford director for the U. A. W.

The agreement will now be submitted to the U. A. W. strike strategy committee and, if approved by that body, will be passed on by the membership of the Ford U. A. W. local.

At a news conference following announcement of the agreement, Mr. Leonard said the union had taken the initiative in reaching the settlement.

He said he believed it would have a "strong impact" on negotiations with other automobile manufacturers as well as in the steel industry.

Asked why the union had scaled down its wage demand, Mr. Leonard said: "In nine weeks of negotiating we got to know more about the company's financial condition. We are convinced 18 cents per hour is all they can afford right now."

Company officials would add nothing to the prepared announcement.

Nothing on "Company Security"

Yet to be disposed of is the Ford company's demand for a "company security" agreement. There was no disclosure in today's announcement whether that had been dealt with. Neither was there any mention of an earlier management stipulation that any wage agreement must be coupled with the attainment of volume production.

The management originally stipulated it would agree to a wage increase only after output volume reached a minimum of 80,000 units a month. Current production is at a rate of about half that volume. Ford's normal production is close to 100,000 units monthly.

Formal negotiations between Ford and the union extended back to Nov. 20, when the conferees first met on the union demand for a 30 per cent wage increase. Previously they had exchanged correspondence with the company, taking the position on Nov. 14 that this was not "the time" to consider a wage increase.

Ford's first wage increase offer was for 15.5 cents an hour, or approximately 12.4 per cent, by company estimate, on an average wage of $1.19 an hour. The union turned down the offer.

Second Offer Made

The second Ford offer was a 17½ cents an hour increase, or 14.7 per cent. This offer, which the company said would involve an outlay of $37,000,000 a year, was made shortly after President Truman's fact-finding board in the General Motors strike recommended a wage increase of 19½ cents an hour for General Motors workers.

The U. A. W. departing from its 30 per cent demand, asked the company to match the 19½ cent recommendation in the General Motors dispute, which also was based on an original union demand for a 30 per cent rise.

Ford and the union then were

JAN 21 1946

30.24—597

stalemated at "17½ cents versus 19½ cents."

The Ford company's "security" proposal took a prominent place in the earlier negotiations.

Management proposed a $5-a-day fine for workers engaging in unauthorized strikes, the money to come from the union treasury.

The union countered with a proposal for a $3 fine for a wild-cat striker's first offense and $5 for the second, the company to collect the amount from the offender's pay checks.

Protest on General Motors

The action of the U. A. W. in ordering tool and die workers to stop all work on tooling for General Motors brought a protest today from Chester A. Cahn, managing director of the Automotive Tool and Die Manufacturers Association.

In a letter to Mr. Thomas, the U. A. W. president, and the heads of two U. A. W. tool and die workers, Mr. Cahn charged the action was a violation of the union's bargaining agreement with tool and die companies.

Asking the union to reconsider its action, Mr. Cahn said: "We fail to see where any security exists for us in any kind of an agreement drawn with you if we are to be the victims of secondary pressure on another employer—now or at any other time."

There was no union comment.

CIO Meat Union Orders Work On Monday

Chicago, Jan. 26 (AP)—The CIO United Packing House Workers Union today urged its 198,000 members to return to work Monday in packing plants now under Government control but it did not call off its strike.

Coupled with assertions by the AFL Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen that its 55,000 striking members were back at work today or ready to go back, the CIO action, if carried out, would assure Uncle Sam that the 248,000 men on strike since January 16 would get meat production going again next week.

This decision of the UPW leadership, announced by Lewis J. Clark, union president, was a reversal of a stand taken yesterday before Federal seizure of the plantt at 12.01 A.M. today.

Clark said at a news conference that the unions national wage policy committee had made the decision and that he was telegraphing all locals throughout the country to withdraw pickets at 5 P.M.

A statement said the return to work was based upon assurance from Secretary of Agriculture Anderson that he would "apply immediately" for approval of any wage increase a fact-finding board might recommend.

It also said the union expected that "retroactive payments will be forthcoming."

May Resume Strike

When a reporter asked Clark what would happen if a recommended increase were unsatisfactory to the union, he replied:

"The strike will be on as usual. We are reserving our right to act on any wage increase through the national wage policy committee."

Clark also said that "we have kept in touch with Phil Murray (CIO president) all along."

Clark said he would meet later today with Gayle G. Armstrong, Government operator of the seized plants.

Armstrong's Comment

Armstrong, apprised of the CIO action, made this statement:

"The action fo the CIO packing house workers union this afternoon in deciding to go back to work shows a good spirit of co-operation and a national interest. With the co-operation of both labor and management now assured, we can get meat back into the markets within a matter of days.

"We need meat, and all plants should be back in full operation as quickly as possible. At the same time, it is very important that all shippers check with their agents before starting shipments. Marketing must be orderly, with shipments in line with plant capacities, in order to avoid gluts."

Clark's Statement

The CIO statement issued by Clark said further:

"We have received from Secretary of Agriculture Anderson in a telegram assurances which we understand to be a commitment on the part of a member of the President's Cabinet of the United States that he will use his high office to insure justice and equity for the packinghouse workers.

"He has assured us that he will take the necessary steps to make effective the report of the fact-finding panel. The packing-house workers regard these assurances from the Government of the United States as a recognition that workers are entitled at least to equality of treatment with big business."

Seizure "Regrettable"

The statement termed "regrettable" the government seizure action "and in that connection we are in complete agreement with William Wright, president of the American National Livestock Association, when he stated that seizure 'would be a retreat from collective bargaining,' and that his organization 'regarded seizur a neither equitable not justified.'"

The statement also said:

"It takes two to make a bargain, and the big packers saw fit to refuse to make that bargain."

AFL Agreed Earlier

The AFL union which struck with the CIO packing-house workers ordered its members back to work earlier.

Patrick E. Gorman, secretary-treasurer of the AFL union, said its 55,000 striking members "returned to work peacefully; we'll be slaughtering in AFL plants Monday and back to normal by Wednesday."

Gorman said Anderson's telegram about the fact-finding board and wage recommendations "is the written assurance we wanted following previous verbal assurances."

The AFL men decided before the seizure to return to work under Government operation. Both unions have been on strike since January 16 after failing to reach agreement with the packers over wage demands.

Armstrong Acts

Armstrong, Government operator of the plants, met with representatives of eleven packing companies before the seizure. He said they agreed to co-operate and he designated the president of each company as his agent. They were instructed to appoint a manager for each plant as a Government representative. Armstrong planned similar meetings today with officials of the eight other companies involved.

The following is the complete text of a United Packinghouse Workers statement urging members of the Congress of Industrial Organizations union to return to work Monday at struck meat plants seized by the government:

The people of the United States are confronted with an attack on their lives, liberties and happiness by big business organized in a conspiracy to create uncontrolled inflation and to destroy the trade-union movement.

The United Packinghouse Workers of America stated their attitude with reference to that question in a statement issued yesterday. Since the issuance of that statement we have received from the Secretary of Agriculture, in a telegram sent from Washington at 8:24 p. m. Friday, assurances which we understand to be a commitment of a member of the President's Cabinet of the United States that he will use his high office to insure justice and equity for the packinghouse workers.

He has assured us that he will take the necessary steps to make effective the report of the fact-finding panel.

Call for Equal Treatment

The packinghouse workers regard these assurances from the government of the United States as a recognition that workers are entitled at least to equality of treatment with big business. It is regrettable that the government saw fit to take the seizure action, and in that connection we are in complete agreement with William Wright, president of the American National Livestock Association, when he stated that seizure "would be a retreat from collective bargaining" and that his organization "regarded seizure as neither equitable nor justified."

It takes two to make a bargain, and the big packers saw fit to refuse to make that bargain.

The United Packinghouse Workers of America are not calling off their strike. They are urging their membership to remain at work and to return to work on Monday morning, Jan. 28. In doing so they are attempting to co-operate with their government with the understanding that their government will co-operate with them. In taking this action we are fully mindful of special needs of the farmers and their close relationship to this industry. We solicit their continued support in insuring that a substantial wage increase be granted to the packinghouse workers.

We desire that it be clearly understood that the return to work under these circumstances will be for a sufficient period to enable the government to comply with its commitments. We, of course, reserve the right in the final analysis to be the judge of whether the increase made effective pursuant to the Secretary of Agriculture's telegram will be a substantial increase meeting the family needs of the workers of this industry, taking into account the low level of packinghouse workers' wages. And in this connection we expect that retroactive payments will be forthcoming.

Ask Utility Designation

We renew the requests made to the President of the United States calling for the establishment of the industry as a public utility and demanding a complete investigation of the industry now that the government is in possession and operation of its facilities. We again urge that the carry-back and carry-forward provisions of the tax laws which have become anti-democratic weapons in the hands of the big corporations be repealed.

We call upon all peoples, the entire trade union movement and all community groups who are interested in a free and prosperous America to rally to the cause of free collective bargaining and to the defeat of the big business conspiracy. We ask them to be vigilant with us in making certain that justice is done, not only in the case of the packinghouse workers but of all underprivileged people.

Statement by Meat Union

CHICAGO, Jan. 26 (AP).—Following is the complete text of a United Packinghouse Workers statement urging members of the Congress of Industrial Organizations union to return to work Monday at struck meat plants seized by the government:

The people of the United States are confronted with an attack on their lives, liberties and happiness by big business organized in a conspiracy to create uncontrolled inflation and to destroy the trade-union movement.

The United Packinghouse Workers of America stated their attitude with reference to that question in a statement issued yesterday. Since the issuance of that statement we have received from the Secretary of Agriculture, in a telegram sent from Washington at 8:24 p. m. Friday, assurances which we understand to be a commitment of a member of the President's Cabinet of the United States that he will use his high office to insure justice and equity for the packinghouse workers.

He has assured us that he will take the necessary steps to make effective the report of the fact-finding panel.

Call for Equal Treatment

The packinghouse workers regard these assurances from the government of the United States as a recognition that workers are entitled at least to equality of treatment with big business. It is regrettable that the government saw fit to take the seizure action, and in that connection we are in complete agreement with William Wright, president of the American National Livestock Association, when he stated that seizure "would be a retreat from collective bargaining" and that his organization "regarded seizure as neither equitable nor justified."

It takes two to make a bargain, and the big packers saw fit to refuse to make that bargain.

The United Packinghouse Workers of America are not calling off their strike. They are urging their membership to remain at work and to return to work on Monday morning, Jan. 28. In doing so they are attempting to co-operate with their government with the understanding that their government will co-operate with them. In taking this action we are fully mindful of special needs of the farmers and their close relationship to this industry. We solicit their continued support in insuring that a substantial wage increase be granted to the packinghouse workers.

We desire that it be clearly understood that the return to work under these circumstances will be for a sufficient period to enable the government to comply with its commitments. We, of course, reserve the right in the final analysis to be the judge of whether the increase made effective pursuant to the Secretary of Agriculture's telegram will be a substantial increase meeting the family needs of the workers of this industry, taking into account the low level of packinghouse workers' wages. And in this connection we expect that retroactive payments will be forthcoming.

Ask Utility Designation

We renew the requests made to the President of the United States calling for the establishment of the industry as a public utility and demanding a complete investigation of the industry now that the government is in possession and operation of its facilities. ARBITRATION SET IN RAIL DISPUTE

Brotherhood Of Trainmen To Hold Strike Vote, However

Chicago, Jan. 26 (AP)—Officials of eighteen rail unions representing 1,250,000 workers and the nation's major railroads agreed today to submit union wage demands to arbitration.

In Cleveland, however, A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, one of two unions which walked out of the conferences here, said the agreement would not alter his union's plan to conduct a strike vote.

Ballots Mailed To 215,000

Whitney and Alvanley Johnston, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, left the hearing, both asserting that the Mediation Board's proposal was limited to the wage question and would not include changes in working rules.

"They undertook to ignore our request on rules changes and the railroads did the same," Whitney said.

The brotherhood chief said strike ballots had been mailed to some 215,000 brakemen, flagmen, dining car stewards, yardmasters, switch tenders and "about two thirds of the conductors" represented by his union. He estimated three weeks would be required to complete the balloting.

Plan Two Arbitration Boards

The engineers have arranged to meet next month to consider taking a strike vote.

The agreement signed today embraces approximately 85 per cent of the nation's rail employés. Management representatives said they were willing to enter a similar agreement with the other two unions representing the other fifteen per cent.

Under the agreement two arbitration boards will be set up. One of six members will function in the case of the fifteen nonoperating brotherhoods and a three-man board will decide the operating unions' dispute.

Decisions Are Binding

Wage demands include an increase of $2.50 a day for operating workers and 30 cents an hour more for nonoperating personnel. Decisions by the board of arbitration are binding on both parties.

Harry H. Schwartz, chairman of the Mediation Board which brought about the agreement, said this "was the first instance in which a group of employés of the magnitude of the American railroads and such a large number of employés have voluntarily submitted the issues of rates of pay to arbitration."

Whitney Stands On Ballot

CLEVELAND, Jan. 26 (AP)—A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen said today that the agreement of major railroads and eighteen rail labor unions to arbitrate union wage demands would not alter the brotherhood's plan to conduct a strike vote.

"In order to arbitrate, the brotherhood would have to abandon proposed rule changes it is seeking in addition to a wage increase," Mr. Whitney commented.

"The National (Railway) Mediation Board proposed arbitration for the trainmen and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers last week, but arbitration they suggested was limited to the wage question.

"They undertook to ignore our request on rule changes and the railroads did the same."

Mr. Whitney asserted the trainmen "would not permit the other railroad labor organizations or the railroads to tell us what to do."

"If they want to arbitrate, that's all right for them, but they'll have to abandon their demands for rule changes," he said. "We're not aping those people.

"The trainmen will proceed with the strike vote and then consider what action is to be taken next."

Mr. Whitney's brotherhood represents some 215,000 brakemen, flagmen, dining car stewards, yard masters, yardmen, switch tenders and "about two-thirds of the conductors."

Truman Hails Agreement

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26 (AP)—President Truman today congratulated the National Mediation Board, 134 railroads and eighteen of the twenty railroad labor unions on their agreement to submit a wage dispute to voluntary arbitration.

His statement was as follows:

"I have just received a telegram from the National Mediation Board reporting on the conclusion of mediation proceedings in Chicago. A wage dispute between all the 134 principal railroads of the nation and the railroad labor unions had been in process of mediation for the past three weeks.

"The telegram informs me that an agreement to submit the dispute to voluntary arbitration in accordance with the Railway Labor Act has just been concluded between the railroads and eighteen of the twenty railroad labor unions.

"About 1,300,000 employes are covered by the agreement.

"As the Mediation Board pointed out, 'this is another demonstration that collective bargaining is still functioning in this industry that has operated under the Railway Labor Act for the past twenty years.'

"I am highly gratified at this report from the National Mediation Board and congratulate the board and the parties concerned on their fine accomplishment."

DIRE EFFECTS PREDICTED IN STEEL STRIKE

Early Closing Of Many Plants Expected As Tieup Persists

Pittsburgh, Jan. 26 (AP)—The gigantic steel strike, heading into its second week, threatened today to cut deeper and deeper into the nation's economic system with no apparent sign of a break in the wage deadlock between management and the CIO-United Steelworkers.

Steel men expected the walkout of 750,000 workers and the shutdown of the mills from coast to coast, cutting off the flow of steel supplies for the automobile, construction and many other industries, would be greatly reflected in the next week or two as stocks on hand diminish.

At Detroit, Frank Rising, general manager of the Automotive and Aviation Parts Manufacturers, Inc., said the shortage will cause the closing of many automotive parts plants by the end of next week. He estimated 200,000 workers would be made idle.

Some Industries Cut Operations

Some industries were scaling down their operations. In Syracuse, N.Y., the Manufacturers Association reported industries not directly involved by the strike were beginning to shorten the work week, stretching out their existing stocks. The move was designed to avert layoffs.

Based on November figures of the American Iron and Steel Institute, the amount of lost wages to workers in the first week of the strike is computed at more than $23,000,000.

The strike was felt by workers in the coal, railroad, automobile and river shipping industries, directly or indirectly curtailed.

Thousands of bituminous coal miners were made idle in fluctuating shutdowns in the Pittsburgh area due to a freight-car shortage caused by hoppers being tied up in strikebound plants and sidings.

"Not Interested In Power"

While both sides appeared to be awaiting some development from Washington, Philip Murray, CIO chief, declared today he did not think the next move was up to him.

He referred to his acceptance of President Truman's proposal of an 18½-cents-an-hour increase, saying:

"I made my move."

Murray, commenting on Mr. Truman's news conference statement of last Thursday to the effect there is too much power on both sides in current labor disputes, said:

"I'm not and neither is my organization struggling for power. The people in this struggle are struggling for bread, butter, medicine, clothing and shelter. We are not interested in power."

Strike Fields Generally Quiet

The steel loss, figured on a production basis of 200,000 tons a day, ran over a million tons today as the paralyzing strike kept workers from their jobs for the sixth day. The strike fields have been generally quiet, except for isolated minor disturbances.

Both the union and management appeared to be waiting it out grimly in the pay dispute, which finds them 3½ cents an hour apart. The union wants the 18½ cents an hour while the United States Steel Corporation, leader in the industry, has offered 15 cents.

Brewers To Talk With AFL On Rejoining

Miami, Fla., Jan. 26 (AP)—President William Green of the AFL today invited officers of the Brewery Workers Union to a conference here next week on possible re-affiliation.

The union officers had requested such a conference in a telegram last Thursday. Green said the executive council, now in midwinter session, "will gladly meet with you and your associates."

Green said the conference, looking toward the return of 50,000 brewery workers who had been suspended by the Federation seven years ago, would be held on Monday or Tuesday.

The request for a conference was sent by William J. Kromelbin, general secretary-treasurer of the brewery workers.

Source Of Request

He said that the officers have been instructed by "our entire general executive board to ask for a conference" with the AFL executive council to discuss the jurisdictional dispute with the Teamsters Union which brought about its suspension from the federation.

Daniel J. Tobin, head of the teamsters and a member of the executive council, said he was hopeful that the jurisdictional dispute could be amicably settled this time. A year ago a similar conference between members of his union and the brewery workers was held in Miami, but, Tobin said, the talks were broken off when the brewerymen obtained a court injunction to restrain the teamsters from picketing at the Hamm Brewery in St. Paul, Minn.

The growing peace movement on the conservative AFL front was seen by leaders here as good for them, but bad for the CIO.

Progressives Object

Not even the vigorous objections of John Marchiando, head of the AFL-affiliated Progressive Miners Union which he claimed has 35,000 members, to Lewis's return cast any deep shadow over the federation picture.

Marchiando held a last-minute conference with AFL President William Green yesterday, then left for Springfield, Ill., to call his executive board together in preparation for a Progressive Miners' convention.

While it cannot be said with certainty what his union's mood will be, it is expected that the Progressives will accept with more or less good grace Green's promise that they may continue within the AFL fold independently of Lewis's UMW.

To Continue Separately

Green said he expected "no conflict" between the Progressives and the UMW and that each union would continue to represent its own members in territories in which they are now functioning.

Marchiando, asked if he might pull his union out of the AFL and join the CIO, was noncommittal but indicated that the matter would be discussed at Springfield.

Lewis's return to the AFL was looked upon by AFL executives as a bright spot in the general labor picture.

TRUMAN PROPOSAL ON FACT FINDING

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26. — (AP) Walter Reuther of the C.I.O. Auto Workers told senators today that President Truman was "not being realistic" when he proposed to settle strikes with fact-finding boards.

"I don't question his intentions," Reuther told the Senate Labor committee. "I question his judgment."

The committee is considering legislation for appointment of labor dispute fact-finding boards with power to subpoena company books. It would forbid strikes during a 30-day period while the boards worked.

Reuther was asked by Senator Ellender (D-La) what he thought of the idea minus the cooling off provision.

Reuther first said there would be "no harm in it," then expressed the opinion that the off-stage presence of a fact-finding procedure might impede preliminary efforts to settle a strike.

"The trouble in the General Motors case and in the steel case is that collective bargaining has not been tried," he said.

Reuther spent the greater part of three hours attacking General Motors for what he called "refusal to bargain" and declaring there is afoot a big-corporation "conspiracy to smash organized labor."

Reuther said the "public is hungry for consumer goods and the corporations thought this a good time" to crack down on labor unions.

He offered this program:

1. "A comprehensive investigation of what appears to be a conspiracy against organized labor, the American people and the policies of this government."

2. A Treasury ruling on whether General Motors can deduct from its taxable income "the costs of this vicious campaign."

3. Legislation forbidding deduction, by companies found responsible for a strike, of the costs incident to the work stoppage.

4. Reconsideration of tax laws to restore excess profits provisions, which he said would make the companies "realize they have to go back to work."

5. Immediate extension of price controls.

6. Strengthening of the Federal Conciliation service to attract the most capable men.

7. Legislation requiring companies to supply figures on wages, costs and profits.

London, Russian Envoys Of U.S. May Resign

Washington, Jan. 26 (AP)—The imminent resignation of the two topmost United States envoys was forecast today by usually well-informed diplomatic officials.

They said that Averill Harriman, Ambassador to Russia, and John Winant, Ambassador to Britain, were ready to quit their posts.

There has been some speculation that Harriman may be succeeded by Fiorello La Guardia, former mayor of New York, now a columnist and radio commentator. La Guardia left Washington by plane this morning for South America to represent President Truman at inauguration of Brazil's new President.

Davies, Dunn Mentioned

One group has advocated appointment of a military man to the Moscow post.

Joseph Davies, former Ambassador to Russia, and James Dunn, assistant Secretary of State, have been mentioned as possible successors to Winant.

Harriman left Moscow by plane Thursday for home. His route will take him through Chungking, Tokyo and Korea with stopovers for conferences with Gen. George C. Marshall in China and Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Winant May Get UNO Post

He has been reported as anxious to return to private business.

Winant's future plans are not known here, the officials said, but he probably will be offered the important post of American representative on the United Nations Social and Economical Council.

Some of his associates in London, however, say the former New Hampshire Governor has an urge to return to politics, perhaps with the Senate as his immediate objective.

In any event, they say he will remain in London until after the United Nations Assembly has adjourned.

Hawaii Facing Big 'Problems'

Washington, Jan. 26 (AP)—The "severe impact" of the war on Hawaii's economy presents rehabilitation problems "calling for real intelligence," Secretary of Interior Ickes reported today.

In his annual report to the President, Ickes said:

"In Hawaii, the problems of housing and public health, which are now extremely critical, will need continued attention for some time.

Better Formula Sought

"There may be a partial reversal of the wartime influx of workers from the mainland; but, in any case, as a result of the severe impact of the war upon Hawaii's economy, the readjustment of industry and agriculture and the rehabilitation of returning service men and local labor, will present problems calling for real intelligence."

All the territorial areas—Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands—are trying "to establish a more workable formula for their political relationship with the continenal United States," Ickes said.

Winant Likely To Resign Post; Harriman, Too

LaGuardia Is Mentioned for Moscow Post if Envoys to Britain and Russia Quit

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26 (AP).—The imminent resignation of the two topmost United States envoys was forecast today by usually well informed diplomatic officials.

They said that Averell Harriman, Ambassador to Russia, and John Winant, Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, were ready to quit their posts.

There has been some speculation that Mr. Harriman may be succeeded by F. H. La Guardia, former Mayor of New York, now a columnist and radio commentator. Mr. La Guardia left Washington by airplane today for South America to represent President Truman at the inauguration of Brazil's new President. Mr. La Guardia called the trip his "first major ambassadorial assignment."

One group has advocated appointment of a military man to the Moscow post.

Joseph G. Davies, former Ambassador to Russia, and James Dunn, Assistant Secretary of State, have been mentioned as possible successors to Mr. Winant.

Mr. Harriman left Moscow by plane Thursday for home. His route will take him through Chungking, Tokyo and Korea, with stopovers for conferences with Generals of the Army George C. Nimitz Sees U.S. First Target In Next War

Washington, Jan. 26 (AP) — Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz declared today that if there is a World War III the aggressor's first move will be a smash at the United States.

"Two world wars have shown beyond dispute that the United States is the real barrier to anyone dreaming of conquest," he told the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense.

"The Kaiser learned it no less thoroughly than Mussolini and Hitler and Tojo. If ever there is a next time, the United States will be first on the list.

"Strength May Block Try"

"If we can be crushed, the current of conquest may well engulf the world. But if we have at hand the strength we need, the attempt will almost certainly not be made."

JAN 27 1946

The Navy's chief of operations asserted that the rush to demobilize is "doing what all our enemies could not do—cutting away the very bone and muscle of our armed forces."

"There Is No Weak Leader"

"There is no such thing as a weak and helpless leader," Nimitz said. "If we are to lead the world toward lasting peace, we must be strong enough to discharge the responsibilities of leadership."

The atomic bomb and other new weapons "may eventually revise the nature of our defense needs," he added, "but nothing could be more dangerous than to throw overboard the facts we have in anticipation of methods or weapons that are untried, untested and even unknown today."

UREY WARNS ON ATOM BOMB

Scientist Says World Faces Choice Between Two Roads

Washington, Jan. 26 (AP)—Dr. Harold C. Urey, famed atomic-bomb scientist, asserted today the weapon has brought the world abruptly to a choice between taking the road toward international government or moving toward domination by some one nation.

In a speech before the 20th Annual Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense, he said the so-called peace-loving nations occupying Germany and Japan are the countries to be feared.

"The difficulties in the future will arise between them," Dr. Urey said. "Particularly, we must fear a division of the world into two groups, a Russian group and an American or Anglo-American group."

Washington Chapter Forum

But he said he did not believe the United States would want to consider occupying Russia, or that Russia would consider occupying this country.

Another atomic scientist, Dr. Arthur H. Comoton, told a forum conducted by the Washington chapter of the American Veterans Commitee:

"We must work toward placing all major war-making power, including in particular the use of atomic weapons, in the hands of a world organization that will serve as police to prevent wars between nations."

Because it will take time to create and make such an organization effective, Compton said, America should continue producing enough atomic weapons "to make it unprofitable for another nation to attack us."

Survival Prescription

A resolution set for a vote by the Veterans' Committee chapter at the close of the forum proposes that the United States immediately stop making atomic bombs except for experimental purposes.

Representative Voorhis (D., Cal.) gave the veterans forum this "minimum prescription for human survival":

Only an international agency must be allowed to possess atomic weapons. It must have the power to over-ride sovereignty of nations in order "to forbid and prevent any nation or agency from possessing atomic weapons anywhere in the world."

More Vital To Outlaw War

Brig. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, who directed the army's atomic bomb production project, agreed with Dr. Urey at the women's conference that it is more vital to outlaw war than the atomic bomb.

Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, chief of the naval operations, declared that regardless of the atomic age the United States must keep a strong fleet if it is to remain a strong nation.

600 Representatives Attend

Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) asserted that America "will never again play the sucker role" by sponsoring a disarmament conference like that held after World War I, "when our battleships, cruisers and destroyers settled to the bottom of the sea."

The convention, attended by some 600 representatives of 32 patrotic and veterans' auxiliary organizations, will close tomorrow with a vote on resolutions on such subjects as the atomic bomb; universiti military training and what to do with Pacific islands we have conquered.

STORY OF DRINKING IS DENIED BY SHORT

Refutes Rumor Officers Were 'Sleeping Off Jag'

When Japs Hit,

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26—(AP) Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short denied today that Army and Navy oficers were "sleeping off a jag" when Japan blasted Pearl Harbor. He blamed the disaster on "100 per cent failure" by Washington to get vital information to Hawaii.

Short named Gen. George C. Marshall, 1941 chief of staff, Lt. Gen. L. T. Gerow, war plans chief, and Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, intelligence head, as the men he had chiefly in mind when he testified the War department tried to make him the "scapegoat" for Pearl Harbor.

Answering a question by Senator Ferguson (R- Mich), the former Army commander in Hawaii identified a scapegoat as:

"Someone they saddled the blame on in order to get it off themselves."

Concludes Testimony

Short finished his testimony to a Senate-House committee investigating the Dec. 7, 1941, attack on the Pacific Base.

Before his dismissal at the end of five days in the witness chair, he also:

Expressed belief that if the Hawaiian military forces had been on an all-out alert the attack might never have been made. It was "quite probable", he said, that the Japanese raiding force might have learned of the state of readiness from spies and turned back for fear of heavy losses.

Declared he would have pleaded innocent on every one of 11 proposed counts had he been brought to trial before a court martial.

There was a ripple of applause from spectators as Short left after thanking the committee for the opportunity to tell his story publicly. He said that as a "loyal soldier" he had been forced to keep silent for four years while bearing "the burden of public censure."

The committee now has questioned all major Army-Navy figures connected with the Pearl Harbor debacle.

Zacharias to Testify

On Monday, it will hear Capt. Ellis M. Zacharias and former Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts. Zacharias, a naval intelligence officer, has been quoted as saying he predicted both the time and place of the Japanese attack in a talk with Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, Pacific fleet commander, in March, 1941.

Roberts headed a presidential commission in 1942 made an investigation of the attack and concluded there was "dereliction of duty" on the part of both Short and Kimmel.

Although Short had complained that the War department failed to supply him with needed anti-aircraft weapons and planes, he testified in reply to questions from Rep. Keefe (R-Wis) that the major factor in the Japanese success was his lack of information.

"Regardless of what you had had this attack would have been a surprise?" Keefe asked.

"On the basis of the information I had," Short replied.

"What we needed was infarmation from Washington giving us time to go on the alert."

"Your position is that intelligence from Washington failed?" Keefe continued.

"100 per cent," the witness replied.

Questioned on Drinking

It was Keefe who brought up the question of whether drinking played any part in the disaster.

He told "the story has gone around the country that you were all drunk out there that Saturday night and were sleeping off a jag that Sunday morning."

"There is absolutely no truth in it," Short said.

While Short was on the stand, committee counsel put into the record a file of War department memoranda concerned with the question whether Short should be court-martialed.

This disclosed that Maj. Gen. Myron C. Cramer, as judge advocate general, said on Jan. 27, 1942, that "it is impossible to predict with certainty" the result of a trial.

In a memorandum to Marshall, Cramer added:

"It will be noted that the offenses charged against General Short are offenses of omission or nonfeasance which require a much stronger showing to justify a trial than those involving misfeasance or malfeasance.

"General Short's nonfeasance or omissions were based on an estimate of the situation which, although proved faulty by subsequent events, was, in so far as I am able to ascertain from the report of the (Roberts) commission, made or concurred in by all those officers in Hawaii best qualified to form a sound military opinion."

The proposed charges were based on the general allegation that Short failed to take proper measures to guard against attack. He had alerted his command only against sabotage and, in the present hearings, has contended that on the basis of the information Washington supplied to him that appeared to be all the situation necessitated.

PRESS FREEDOM URGED AS CLAUSE IN TREATIES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26—(AP) Assistant Secretary of State William Benton tonight advocated provision in future peace treaties for free access to news sources, and freedom to transmit news from one country to another without discrimination.

He appeared with Paul Porter, chairman of the Federal Communications commission, in an NBC radio broadcast sponsored by the State department on the subject: "Freedom of the Press—Worldwide."

Hicswa to Stay in Japan Until Case Is Reviewed

Army Contradicts Senator's Story of G. I.s Return

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26 (AP).—The War Department said today that Private First Class Joseph E. Hicswa, sentenced to death by a court martial at Tokyo on charges of slaying two Japanese civilians, will remain in Japan until his conviction is reviewed.

Senator Albert W. Hawkes, Republican of New Jersey, said at Montclair yesterday that he had been informed Hicswa was en route to the United States.

A War Department announcement today noted that the Army had announced on Jan. 23 that Hicswa's case was under review by his commanding general in Japan and that if the sentence was sustained the "records in the case only" would come to Washington for final review and action.

5-Man Advisory Board Is Created by Benton

To Develop U. S. Communications Plan for U. N. O. Study

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26 (AP).—A five-member advisory board was created today by William Benton, Assistant Secretary of State, to help develop American proposals on communications for consideration by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organziation.

The board will include:

Edward W. Barrett, editorial director of "Newsweek" and former director of the overseas branch, Office of War Information, as chairman.

Thurman L. Barnard, vice-president and director of Compton Advertising, Inc., New York City.

Don Francisco, vice-president and director of the J. Walter Thompson Advertising Agency, New York City, and former assistant co-ordinator in the Office of Inter-American Affairs.

Ferdinand Kuhn jr., former chief of "The New York Times" London bureau and later deputy director of the O. W. I.

John Hay Whitney, former motion-picture chief, Office of Inter-American Affairs, and later a colonel in the Army Air Forces.

'Army Air Forces' Goal Is For Own West Point'

System of Schooling Also Places Accent on Youth

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26 (AP).—The Army Air Forces are setting up a system of high level schooling for the leaders of any future air war, with the accent on youth.

The unofficial "Army and Navy Register" said today the schools for senior and junior air officers are designed to develope ultimately into an A. A. F. University. Lieutenant General Carl A. Spaatz, new Air Forces chief, suggested this week an air school of the same importance as West Point and Annapolis.

Under the new school system, which is headed by Major General Muir S. Fairchild, every officer will complete his specialized education in his first twenty years of service.

"In the past we have devoted our efforts too often to educating for the retired list," the "Register" quoted General Fairchild as saying. "By the time an officer finished the Army War College he had in many cases only two or three more years to serve."

The program includes an air war course, a command and staff course, a tactical course for junior officers, a special staff school and an A. A. F. engineer school.

The engineer school has been assigned to Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, and the others to the Maxwell Field, Alabama, area.

Red Cross Workers To Help War Brides

Washington, Jan. 26 (AP)—The American Red Cross announced today it is assigning recreation and social workers to ships bringing war brides to New York and San Francisco.

Red Cross chapters in the port cities will assist wives and children of service men and veterans on their arrival and others will help out in towns where they have long stopovers.

In towns to which the wives and children are going, the Red Cross said it would make sure the relatives expected and were prepared to receive them. It said the War Department had asked it to discourage plans for husbands and other relatives to meet incoming ships.

The Army has set aside special ships to bring war brides to this country.

Vinson Views Asked On Tax Carrybacks

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26—The Ways and Means Committee today asked Secretary Vinson for his opinion on proposed legislation to deny excess profits tax refunds to businesses closed by strikes.

The 85.5 per cent excess profits levy, imposed during the war, was repealed on Jan. 1, 1946, but Congress provided a system for certain refunds to those corporations failing in 1946 to make net profits equal to their pre-war average earnings.

E. M. Voorhees, chairman of the finance committee of the United States Steel Corporation, declared in a statement yesterday that Philip Murray, CIO president, had "misstated the facts" in asserting that the Government would repay more than $67,000,000 to the corporation if it "breaks even" in 1946.

"The truth is," Mr. Voorhees said, "that if United States Steel breaks even in 1946, it will not be repaid one penny by the Government under the carryback provision of the Federal tax law."

HOUSING POWERS GRANTED WYATT

Washington, Jan. 26 (A. P.).—

JAN 27 1946

JAN 27 1946

President Truman and Reconversion Director Snyder transferred new powers today to Housing Expeditor Wilson W. Wyatt to speed a remedy of the nation-wide housing shortage. By executive order the President authorized Wyatt, selected to be National Housing Administrator as well as Expeditor, to:

1. Formulate plans and programs to provide an increased supply of housing of all kinds, particularly moderate priced homes for sale or rent to veterans.

2. Issue orders to other Federal agencies and to co-ordinate the activities of such agencies regarding housing.

3. Recommend to the President the enactment of legislation.

4. Consult and co-operate with other Federal agencies, State and local governments, industries, labor and other groups regarding housing problems.

The President also directed executive agencies to exercise their emergency powers to aid in the solution of the housing emergency. At the same time, Snyder delegated to Wyatt the powers Snyder exercises to issue orders, regulations, or directives to other executive agencies to alleviate the housing shortage.

Veterans Lose Car Priority

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26 (AP).—The War Assets Corporation will accept no more applications for the purchase of automobiles by veterans after this week. Certification of veterans' preference applications will be discontinued on Monday, the agency said, because the number applying is already far greater than the number of cars expected to be declared surplus.

LA GUARDIA STARTS AIR TRIP TO BRAZIL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26 (AP)—Former Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia left National Airport this morning for Rio de Janeiro on what he termed his "first major Ambassadorial assignment."

He is head of a United States mission representing President Truman in the inauguration of Gen. Eurico Gaspar Dutra, new President of Brazil.

Shortly before his departure on a B-17 Flying Fortress converted for passenger-carrying, Mr. La Guardia said he was glad he had been chosen on this Ambassadorial assignment.

Maj. Gen. Robert L. Walsh, who is accompanying Mr. La Guardia, said that the plane, one of the latest-built Flying Fortresses, was scheduled to make the trip to Brinquen Field in Puerto Rico in about six or seven hours.

Mr. La Guardia is expected to fly from Borinquen Field, which is in the northwestern coast of the island, to San Juan, the capital, and spend the night there.

University Women Ask Approval of British Loan

Letter to Congress Leaders Predict Improved Trade

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26 (AP).—Swift approval of the proposed $3,750,000,000 loan to Great Britain was urged today by the American Association of University Women.

In letters to the majority and minority leaders in the House and Senate, the organization, which claims to represent 80,000 members, indorsed the British loan "as an important step toward the building of a sound system of world econocy."

Noting that the loan is a vital part of the Anglo-American agreements negotiated last December, the association pointed out that these agreements would foster better trade for both countries and avoid breaking up the world in competing economic blocs.

The letters were signed by Dr. Louise Pearse, of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research, chairman of the association's national committee on international relations; Dr. Bessie C. Randolph, president of Hollins College, Hollins, Va., and Dr. Mabel Newcomer, head of the economic department at Vassar College.

He is Robert Ratcliffe, 23, who said he had served 5½ years in the Canadian Navy, was drafted last August while on an automobile tour celebrating his discharge from service, and now is stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Private Ratcliffe said he has written Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King of Canada and has been promised action on his request for release.

Decided To Tour U.S.

Last June after he was discharged from the Canadian navy, Ratcliffe said, he decided on a motor tour of the United States and stopped off at Washington where the Canadian Embassy said he could remain in the country 90 days.

His troubles began in Jacksonville, Fla., where he ran through a red traffic light. A policeman said he had to have a draft card since he had been in the country more than 29 days.

So he registered and at the Jacksonville draft board "they laughed and said that registering was just a formality—they even fixed my ticket with the cop. I thought they were swell."

On his return to Washington last August, he said, he notified the draft board of his change in address and promptly got back a notice to report in Washington for induction.

Loaded Into Truck

"I went up there to explain. Instead I was loaded into a truck and taken to the armory at Baltimore. There I told a lieutenant I didn't want to go in the American Army—and showed him my papers. He said I would have to take the oath or be listed as a conscientious objector."

He refused to take the oath "but it didn't seem to make any difference because when they were through I was ordered with the others to Fort Meade. I stayed there until I was sent here (Fort Belvoir) for training as an engineer."

Ratcliffe said he was engaged to a girl who was "waiting" for him in Toronto.

'Shanghaied' Into Army, Canadian Wants Release

Washington, Jan. 26 (AP)—A Canadian navy veteran who, over his protest, was somehow drafted into the American army while visiting in this country, wants to get out.

USS NAUTILUS RETIRED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26—(AP) Retirement of the 3,000-ton Nautilus, largest United State submarine and first to sink a Japanese aircraft carrier, was announced by the Navy tonight. The 15-year-old Nautilus, with roughly twice the tonnage displacement of modern fleet submarines, was decommissioned at the Philadelphia Navy yard.

Exploits of the Nautilus in its 14 war patrols included taking Carlson's Raiders to Makin island, landing pre-invasion scouts on Attu in the Aleutians, and slipping under the noses of the enemy several times to land supplies for the Philippine guerillas.

MacArthur Is Quoted On Super-Atom Bomb

Has 1,000 Times the Power of First One, Industrialist Says

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 26 (AP).—Charles E. Moore, San Francisco industrialist, said yesterday that General of the Army Douglas MacArthur had told him in Tokyo that America is equipped with atomic bombs equivalent to 20,000,000 tons of TNT, or a thousand times more powerful than the one dropped on Hiroshima.

Mr. Moore, in a talk before the Commonwealth Club, related his conversation with General MacArthur in the general's Tokyo headquarters as follows:

"The general said warfare is no longer warfare—it is a question of civilization. This is what he said with no restrictions as to secrecy:

"'The finest explosive in the world is our TNT. But that bomb dropped on Hiroshima was equal to 20,000 tons of T N T. It is already obsolete. We are now ready with one that is equal to 20,000,000 tons of TNT.'"

Mr. Moore said that when he visited Hiroshima and Nagasaki, where the two atom bombs were dropped, he found all wood, metal and glass had disappeared, but that the concrete works and stone bridges still stood.

U. S. TAX PROGRAM TO BALK INFLATION VISIONED BY RUML

CLEVELAND, Jan. 26—(AP) Federal taxation should block inflation by maintaining the purchasing power of the dollar, Beardsley Ruml, author of the Ruml "pay-as-you-go" income tax plan, today told a joint conference of the American Finance associations.

"By all odds, the most important single purpose to be served by the imposition of federal taxes is the maintenance of a dollar which has stable purchasing power over the years—sometimes this purpose is stated as the 'avoidance of inflation,'" Ruml said.

"However, if federal taxes are too heavy or of the wrong kind, effective purchasing power in the hands of the public will be insufficient to take from the producers of goods and services all the things these producers would like to make. This will mean widespread unemployment.

"Taxes should be high enough to protect the stability of our currency, and no higher—or, putting it another way, as low as they possibly can be without putting the value of our money in danger of inflation," he declared.

The economist appealed for elimination of taxes on consumption "except when these are imposed for regulatory purposes," and abolition of corporation income taxes.

"The (corporation) tax is uncertain in its effect with respect to the stabilization of the dollar, and it is inequitable as part of a progressive levy on individual income," said Ruml. "It tends to raise the prices of goods and services. It tends to keep wages lower than they otherwise might be and it reduces the yield on investment and obstructs the flow of savings into business enterprise."

Ruml urged adoption of a "simple and understandable" tax system accompanied by regulatory measures "so that the corporate form of doing busines will not be used as a device to avoid payment of individual income taxes or as a means of building up unneeded and unused corporate surpluses, or to secure tax advantages over unincorporated business."

Russia Will Rule Iran, Returning American Says

Dr. Millspaugh Was Head of 1943 Financial Mission

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 26 (AP).—Dr. Arthur C. Millspaugh, head of an American mission to Iran, returned today on board the ship John S. Elliott and predicted that Iran either will be dismembered by Russia or will become a puppet of Russia.

He said his mission was sponsored by the State Department, and that he returned when the State Department withdrew its support because of Russian opposition to it.

Dr. Millspaugh said the State Department had followed a pattern of appeasement toward Russian action in Iranian affairs.

Went to Iran in 1943

Dr. Millspaugh went to Iran in January, 1943, at Iran's request, as the head of an American financial mission to assist in the reorganization and administration of the national finances. He went as a private citizen, recommended by the State Department, to be employed and paid by the Iranian government, but as Administrator General of Finance he was invested with considerable authority. On Jan. 11, 1945, the Iranian Parliament passed a bill abolishing the plenipotentiary economic powers of Dr. Millspaugh, confining his work to finances only.

LONDON, JAN. 26--(AP)--THE TEXT OF THE IRANIAN NOTE TO THE UNITED NATIONS ORGANIZATION'S SECURITY COUNCIL TONIGHT FOLLOWS:

JAN 27 1946

"THE IRANIAN DELEGATION TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE UNITED NATIONS HAVE TAKEN NOTE OF THE LETTER OF JANUARY 24, 1946 ADDRESSED TO THE DELEGATION OF THE SOVIET UNION BO THE SECURITY COUNCIL AND DESIRE TO BRING TO THE ATTENTION OF THE SECURITY COUNCIL THE FOLLOWING ACTS:-

(1) THE CONTINUED INTERFERENCE OF SOVIET MILITARY AND CIVIL AUTHORITIES IN THE INTERNAL AFFAIRS OF IRAN CAN BE FULLY PROVED. THE STATEMENT OF THE FACTS SHOWING THIS INTERFERENCE AND CONTAINING THE NECESSARY PROOFS WILL BE SUBMITTED TO THE SECURITY COUNCIL. THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT HAS IN FACT BROUGHT MANY INSTANCES OF SUCH INTERFERENCE TO THE NOTICE OF THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT IN A NUMBER OF NOTES WHICH THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT HAVE EITHER COMPLETELY IGNORED OR FAILED TO DEAL ADEQUATELY WITH THE COMPLAINT.

JAN 27 1946

WHILE IT IS TRUE THAT THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT IN ITS NOTE OF NOVEMBER 26, 1945, CONTRARY TO THE TRUE FACTS, CATEGORICALLY DENIED THE ALLEGATIONS OF INTERFERENCE CONTAINED IN THE NOTE OF THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT OF 17 NOVEMBER, YET IT REMAINS THE FACT THAT IN THEIR NOTE OF 26 NOVEMBER 1945, THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT ADMITTED THAT THEY HAD NOT BEEN WILLING TO ALLOW THE PASSAGE OF IRANIAN REINFORCEMENTS TO SUPPRESS THE REVOLT IN AZERBAIJAN ON THE CLEARLY UNJUSTIFIABLE GROUNDS THAT, ACCORDING TO THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT, THE ARRIVAL OF IRANIAN TROOPS IN PART OF THEIR OWN TERRITORY AND THAT IN THE EVENT OF THE OUTBREAK WOULD CAUSE DISTURBANCE AND BLOODSHED AND THAT IN THE EVENT OF THE OUTBREAK OF DISTURBANCES THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT WOULD, TO MAINTAIN SECURITY IN THE AREAS STATIONED BY HER ARMED FORCES, BE CONSTRAINED TO COMPLEMENT HER ARMED FORCES. LATER, HOWEVER, IN THE SOVIET NOTE TO THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT DATED 29 NOVEMBER 1945, THEY TRIED TO FIND A NEW EXCUSE FOR THEIR ACTION

ALLEGING THAT IT WAS "A MATTER OF ASPIRATIONS WITH RESPECT TO THE ASSURANCES OF THE DEMOCRATIC RIGHTS OF THE AZERBAIJANIAN POPULATION OF NORTHERN IRAN WHICH IS SEEKING NATIONAL AUTONOMY WITHIN THE LIMITS OF THE IRANIAN STATE", WHICH POINT IS NOW REITERATED IN PARAGRAPH 3 OF THE LETTER OF THE DELEGATION OF THE SOVIET UNION TO THE SECURITY COUNCIL.

JAN 27 1946

LATER, HOWEVER, IN THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT NOTE TO THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT, DATED 29 NOVEMBER, 1945, THEY TRIED TO FIND A NEW EXCUSE FOR THEIR ACTION ETC.....

THE ABOVE REASONS GIVEN BY THE SOVIET UNION ARE SO UTTERLY WITHOUT FOUNDATION THAT THE IRANIAN DELEGATION DO NOT FEELED CALLED UPON TO MEMKE ADVANCE REFUTATION. IT IS PERHAPS USEFUL TO REMIND THE SOVIET DELEGATION OF THE SUBSTANCE OF A WELL KNOWN SPEECH DELIVERED BY M. LITVINOFF, ON BEHALF OF THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT AT THE GENERAL COMMISSION OF THE DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE AT GENEVA ON 6 FEBRUARY 1933, IN WHICH A REMARKABLY CLEAR AND PRECISE MANNER HE GAVE A DEFINITION OF AN AGGRESSOR NATION. M. LITVINOFF SAID: —

"NO CONSIDERATIONS WHATSOEVER OF A POLITCAL, STRATEGICALL OR ECONOMIC NATURE, INCLUDINGTHE DESIRE TO EXPLOIT NATU AL RICHES OR TO OBTAIN ANY SORT OF ADVANTAGES OR PRIVILEGES ON THE TERRITORY OF ANOTHER STATE, NO REFERENCES TO CONSID RABLE CAPITAL INVESTMENTS OR OTHER ESPECIAL INTERESTS IN A GIVEN STATE, OR THE ALLEGED ABSENCE OF CERTAIN ATTRIBUTES OR STATE ORGANIZATION IN THE CASE OF A GIVEN COUNTRY, SHALL BE ACCEPTED AS JUSTIFICATION OF AGGRESSION.

"NOR DO THE FOLLOWING SITUATIONS ALLOW ANY NATION TO BECOME AN AGGRESSOR: —

"THE INTERNAL SITUATION IN A GIVEN STATE, AS FOR INSTANCE, POLITICAL ECONOMIC OR CULTURAL BACKWARDNESS OF A GIVEN COUNTRY ALLEGED MAL-ADMINISTRATION, A REVOLUTIONARY OR COUNTER-REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENT, CIVIL WAR, OR DISORDERS OR STRIKES, THE ESTABLISHMENT OR MAINTENANCE IN ANY STATE OF ANY POLITICAL OR SOCIAL ORDER."

JAN 27 1946

30.24—603

JAN 27 1946

THE REFUSAL BY THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT TO ALLOW THE PASSAGE OF IRANIAN TERRITORY IS CLEARLY A BREACH OF THE TRIPARTITE TREATY OF ALLIANCE OF 1942 AND THE DECLARATION OF TEHERAN, BY WHICH THE ALLIED POWERS UNDERTOOK TO RESPECT THE TERRITORIAL INTEGRITY, THE SOVEREIGNTY, AND POLITICAL INDEPENDENCE OF IRAN. IT IS EXPRESSLY STATED IN THE TRIPARTITE TREATY THAT THE "PRESENCE OF ALLIED FORCES ON IRANIAN TERRITORY DOES NOT CONSTITUTE A MILITARY OCCUPATION AND SHOULD DISTURB AS LITTLE AS POSSIBLE THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE SECURITY FORCES OF IRAN, THE ECONOMIC LIFE OF THE COUNTRY, THE NORMAL ASPECTS OF THE POPULATION AND THE APPLICATION OF IRANIAN LAWS AND REGULATIONS.

JAN 27 1946

IT IS TO BE NOTED THAT BOTH THE UNITED STATS GOVERNMENT AND THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT MADE REPRESENTATIONS TO THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT IN A NOTE OF 24 NOVEMBER 1945 AND A LETTER OF 27 NOVEMBER 1945 RESPECTIVELY IN WHICH BOTH THESE POWERS STATED THAT IRAN HAD FULL FREEDOM WITHOUT INTERFERENCE FROM THE ALLIED CIVIL OR MILITARY AUTHORITIES TO MOVE ITS FORCES THROUGH IRAN WHENEVER NECESSARY TO MAINTAIN ORDERIN THEIR OWN TERRITORY. THE THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT EXPRESSED CONFIDENCE THAT INSTRUCTIONS TO THIS EFFECT WOULD BE ISSUED BY THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT TO THESOVIET COMMANDER

IN IRAN WHILST THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT STATED THAT THEY WERE DISTURBED THAT

IRANIAN FORCES HAD BEEN STOPPED BY THE SOVIET AUTHORITIES AND FELT THAT THE ACTION OF THE SOVIET MILITARY AUTHORITIES IN HALTING SUCH FORCES ON THEIR WAY TO AZERBAIJAN MUST BE DUE TO SOME MISUNDERSTANDING OF THE POSITION.

(4) THE IRANIAN NOTE OF DECEMBER 1945, TO WHICH THE SOVIET DELEGATION

REFERS WAS IN ANSWER TO THE SOVIET NOTE OF 26 NOVEMBER 1945, WHICH NOTE

WAS IN TURN A REPLY TO SEVERAL WRITTEN REPRESENTATIONS BY THE IRANIAN GOV-

ERNMENT THAT IRANIAN TROOPS DESTINED FOR AZERBAIJAN HAD BEEN PREVENTED

FROM PROCEEDING BY SOVIET MILITARY AUTHORITIES. THE IRANIAN NOTE OF 1

DECEMBER IS NOT CORRECTLY QUOTED OR TRANSLATED FROM THE PERSIAN IN THE LETTER OF THE PERSIAN DELEGATION.

THE SENSE HAS BEEN ALTERED SO THAT IT IS EXACTLY THE OPPOSITE OF WHAT WAS SAID IN THE NOTE. IT IS NOT TRUE THAT THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT AS ALLEGED IN PARAGRAPH ONE OF THE SOVIET LETTER TO THE SECURITY COUNCIL, EXPRESSED ITS SATISFACTION IN CONNECTION WITH THE "FACT. . . THAT THE INTERFERENCE OF THE SOVIET OFFICIALS. . . IS NOT IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE FACTS". THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT INTIMATED THAT IT UNDERSTOOD FROM THE SOVIET NOTE OF 26 NOVEMBER THAT SUCH INCIDENTS WOULD NOT BE REPEATED, AND IT WAS ON THIS UNDERSTANDING THAT THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT EXPRESSED THEIR SATISFACTION. THE ACTUAL TEXT OF THIS PASSAGE IS AS FOLLOWS:-

IN

"IN ANSWER TO THE COMMUNICATION WHICH YOU REPLY THAT THE CHARGES MADE CONCERNING THE INTERFERENCE OF SOVIET OFFICIALS IN OUR INTERNAL AFFAIRS, I THE NORTHERN PROVINCES, ARE UNFOUNDED, THE MINISTRY FOR FOREIGN AF AIRS DOES NOT WISH TO THROW MORE LIGHT ON THE ANTECEDENTS OF THE CASE. IT TAKES NOTE WITH SATISFACTION OF THE PURPORT OF YOUR STATEMENTS TO THE EFFECT THAT HENCEFORTH SUCH INCIDENTS WILL NOT REPEAT THEMSELVES."

THUS THE TEXT SHOWS THAT THE GOVERNMENT OF IRAN WASEXPRESSING ITS SATISFACTION NOT WITH THE FACT THAT NO INTERFERENCE ON THE PART OF THE SOVIET AUTHORITIES HAD OCCURRED BUT ONLY WITH THE FACT THAT IN THE FUTURE THEY WOULD NOT REPEAT SUCH INTERFERENCE.

JAN 27 1946

AGAIN, THE PASSAGE FROM THE IRANIAN NOTE OF 1 DECEMBER 1945, QUOTED IN THE PENULTIMATE SENTENCE OF PARAGRAPH 1 OF THE LETTER OF THE SOVIET DELEGATION IS NOT CORRECTLY SET OUT. THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT IN THAT PASSAGE EXPRESSED ITS SATISFACTION AT THE ASSURANCE THAT THE SOVIET OFFICIALS RESPECTED THE TRIPARTITE TREATY AND THE TEHERAN DECLARATION BUT THE NOTE DID NOT EXPRESS ANY AGREEMENT WITH THE STATEMENT THAT THE SOVIET OFFICIALS HAD IN FACT RESPECTED THESE OBLIGATIONS. THE TEXT IS AS FOLLOWS:-

"YOUR ASSURANCE THAT THE OFFICIALS OF THE SOVIET UNION FULLY RESPECT THE PROVISIONS OF THE TRIPARTITE TREATY AND OF THE DECLARATION SIGNED IN TEHERAN BY THE THREE GREAT POWERS WHO ARE THE ALLIES OF IRAN, IS ALSO A SOURCE OF GRATIFICATION."

30.24—605

THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT IN ITS ANXIETY TO AVOID ANY DISPUTE WITH THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT WERE WILLING IF THESE INCIDENTS DID NOT OCCUR AGAIN TO AVOID ANY DISCUSSION AS TO THE PAST, BUT NOWHERE IN THE IRANIAN NOTE OF [redacted] 1 IS THERE ANY AGREEMENT ON THE PART OF THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT THAT THE INTERFERENCES BY THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT IN THE INTERNAL AFFAIRS OF IRAN HAD NOT TAKEN PLACE. IN FACT IN TWO PASSAGES BESIDES THE ONE REFERRED TO ABOVE THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT STATED THAT THEY HOPED THAT SUCH ACTIONS ON THE PART OF THE SOVIET MILITARY AUTHORITIES IN THE NORTHERN PROVINCES WOULD NO LONGER TAKE PLACE; THAT THE INTERFERENCES ON THE PART OF THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT IN THE AFFAIRS OF THE NORTHERN PROVINCES WOULD CEASE AND THATTHE SECURITY FORCES OF IRAN WOULD NOT BE STOPPED FROM MOVING FREELY. THESE WERE ALL EXPRESSIONS OF HOPE THAT IN FUTURE WHAT HAD TAKEN PLACE IN THE PAST, NAMELY THE UNWARRANTED ACTIONS OF THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT WOULD NO LONGER OCCUR. A TRANSLATION OF THE WHOLE IRANIAN NOTE OF DEC. 1 IS ATTACHED HERETO TO SHOW THAT THE SOVIET DELEGATION DID NOT CORRECTLY QUOTE ITS TERMS OR DRAW THE CORRECT CONSLUSION FROM ITS LANGUAGE.

JAN 27 1946

AS REGARDS THE STATEMENT IN PARAGRAPH TWO (2) OF THE LETTER FROM THE SOVIET DELEGATION, THAT THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT NEGOTIATED THIS QUESTION WITH THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT, THE IRANIAN DELEGATION REPEATS THAT THE ATTEMPTS ON THE PART OF THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT TO NEGOTIATE WITH THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT WERE UNSUCCESSFUL. THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT IN A NOTE OF NOV. 17, 1945, INFORMED THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT THAT THEY WERE SENDING TROOPS TO AZERBAIJAN TO RESTORE LAW AND ORDER. IN NOTES DATED NOV. 22 AND 23, 1945, THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT NOTIFIED THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT THAT THE TROOPS DESTINED FOR AZERBAIJAN HAD BEEN HALTED BY SOVIET AUTHORITIES AND REQUESTED THAT THESE TROOPS SHOULD BE ALLOWED PASSAGE IMMEDIATELY. THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT IN THE MIDDLE OF DECEMBER, 1945, WENT SO FAR AS TO OFFER THAT THE PRIME MINISTER OF IRAN SHOULD GO WITH THE MINISTER FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS TO MOSCOW TO DISCUSS THESE MATTERS, BUT THE OFFER WAS

JAN 27 1946

AS STATED ABOVE, THE SOVIET NOTE OF NOV. 26 ADMITTED THAT PASSAGE HAD BEEN REFUSED BECAUSE THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT DID NOT CONSIDER THE PRESENCE OF IRANIAN REINFORCEMENTS ADVISABLE. IN THE IRANIAN NOTE OF DEC. 1 REFERRED TO ABOVE THE REQUEST WAS REPEATED THAT ALL OBSTACLES BE REMOVED IN THE WAR OF DETACHMENTS OF IRANIAN GROOPS WHICH HAD BEEN HALTED SINCE NOV. 20 BY THE SOVIET FORCES. SUCH REQUEST HAS NEVER BEEN GRANTED. FINALLY ON DEC. 15, 1945, THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT IN A NOTE ADDRESSED TO THE THREE POWERS ASKED THAT FOREIGN MILITARY FORCES SHOULD ABSTAIN FROM IMPEDING THE FREE MOVEMENT OF IRANIAN FORCES.

JAN 27 1946

AS THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT CLEARLY HAS THE RIGHT, BOTH UNDER INTERNATIONAL LAW AND UNDER THE TRIPARTITE TREATY OF ALLIANCE AND UNDER THE DECLARATION OF TEHRAN TO SEND THESE FORCES TO AZERBAIJAN, THERE CAN BE NO QUESTION OF ANY NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT THAT THE AGREEMENT BY THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT TO THE REQUEST OF THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT THAT THE FORCES SHOULD BE ALLOWED TO PROCEED. THE IRANIAN NOTE OF DEC. 1 REPEATED THE REQUEST ALREADY URGENTLY EXPRESSED TO ALLOW UNINTERRUPTED PASSAGE TO THESE TROOPS; IT CANNOT THEREFORE BE MAINTAINED IN VIEW OF THE

JAN 27 1946

CATEGORICAL REFUSAL CONTAINED IN THE SOVIET NOTE OF NOV. 26 THAT THE QUESTION WAS NEGOTIATED AS INTIMATED IN THE LETTER OF THE SOVIET DELEGATION.

THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT HAS NOT TRIED TO USE THE PRESENCE OF FOREIGN TROOPS IN ORDER TO REPRESENT THIS FACT AS A BREACH OF IRANIAN SOVEREIGNTY BUT HAS MAINTAINED THAT THEIR CONTINUED PRESENCE WITHOUT A RAISON D'ETRE TOGETHER WITH THE CONDUCT OF THOSE TROOPS IN INDULGING IN UNWARRANTED INTERFERENCE IN THE INTERNAL AFFAIRS OF IRAN IN DEFINITE BREACH OF THE SOVIET GOVERNMENTS TREATY UNDERTAKINGS, IS A DIRECT CAUSE OF THE INABILITY OF THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT TO RESTORE LAW AND ORDER IN AZERBAIJAN.

THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT IN ITS LETTER TO THE SECURITY COUNCIL HAS NOT RAISED THE QUESTION OF THE WITHDRAWAL OF THE SOVIET FORCES.

30.24-607

JAN 27 1946

THE DELEGATI N FEELS HOWEVER, THAT IT SHOULD BE STATED THAT THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT ~~HOLDS THE VIEW~~ IN THEIR NOTE TO THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT HOLDS THE VIEW WHICH WAS EXPRESSED BY THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT IN THEIR NOTE TO THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT OF NOV. 24 THAT THE RAISON D'ETRE FOR THE PRESENCE OF FOREIGN TROOPS IN IRAN HAS DISAPPEARED AND THAT IT IS DESIRABEE THAT ALL FOREIGN TROOPS SHOULD LEAVE IRANIAN TERRITORY IMMEDIATELY, THUS FOLLOWING THE EXAMPLE SET BY THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT AS REGARDS THEIR FORCES. THE TREATY PROVIDES THAT FOREIGN TROOPS MAY REMAIN UNTIL SIX MONTHS AFTER THE END OF THE WAR BUT DOES NOT REQUIRE THAT ~~NEX~~ THEY SHALL DO SO. THE TREATY OF 1921 TO WHICH THE SOVIET DELEGATION HAS ALLUDED IS NOT RELEVANT TO THE PRESENCE OF SOVIET TROOPS IN IRAN.

JAN 27 1946

THE PROVISION OF THE TREATY AS TO THE ENTRY OF SOVIET TROOPS ON IRANIAN TERRITORY IS NOT ONLY CONTRARY TO THE SPIRIT OF THE CHARTER OF THE UNITED NATIONS, BUT APART FROM THAT IS ONLY MEANT TO APPLY TO THE CASE WHERE IRAN IS OCCUPIED BY A HOSTILE ~~NEX~~ POWER AND BY REASON OF THIS FACT IRANIAN TERRITORY BECOMES A BASE OF AGGRESSION AGAINST THE

USSR, AND IN THAT EVENT ONLY IF THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT COULD NOT ELIMI-

NATE THIS DANGER BY ITS OWN ACTION, IS RUSSIAN INTERVENTION ALLOWED.

THERE CAN BE NO QUESTION OF THE TREATY BEING INVOKED IN THE PRESENT IN-

STANCE SINCE NO HOSTILE THIRD PARTIES EXIST AND THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT

IS ABLE TO DEAL EFFECTIVELY WITH ANY SITUATION THAT HAS ARISEN IF IT

IS ALLOWED BY THE SOVIET AUTHORITIES TO SEND ITS TROOPS AND OFFICIALS TO

THE DISAFFECTED AREAS. FURTHER, THE TREATY HAD NO BEARING ON THE SOVIET

TROOPS STATIONED AT PRESENT ON IRANIAN TERRITORY SINCE THE TREATY OF ~~1942~~

ALLIANCE OF 1942 EXPRESSLY PROVIDES FOR THEIR WITHDRAWAL WITHOUT ANY REFERENCE BEING POSSIBLE TO THE TREATY OF 1921.

HOWEVER, THE WITHDRAWAL OF THE SOVIET TROOPS IS NOT THE QUESTION

BEFORE THE SECURITY COUNCIL. THE PRESENT DISPUTE WITH THE SOVIET GOVERN-

MENT ARISES OUT OF THE FACT THAT THE IRANIAN AUTHORITIES HAVE NOT BEEN ALLOWED BY THE SOVIET AUTHORITIES TO CARRY OUT THEIR DUTIES OF ADMINISTERING LAW AND ORDER IN THE AREAS IN WHICH SOVIET TROOPS ARE STATIONED. THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT REQUESTS THAT THESE TROOPS AND OFFICIALS SHOULD BE GIVEN FREE PASSAGE AND THAT SOVIET AUTHORITIES SHOULD BE INSTRUCTED TO PLACE NO OBSTACLES IN THEIR WAY.

THE IRANIAN DELEGATION DENIES THAT THERE IS ANY PROPAGANDA HOSTILE TO THE SOVIET UNION IN IRAN OR THAT IT HAS BEEN ENCOURAGED BY THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT. EVEN IN SPITE OF THE VIOLENT PROPAGANDA ON THE PART OF THE MOSCOW PRESS AND RADIO AGAINST THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT THERE HAVE BEEN NO SIMILAR POLEMICS ON THE PART OF THE IRANIAN PRESS. IT IS TRUE THAT THE SOVIET AUTHORITIES IN IRAN HAVE SOMETIMES DISINGENUOUSLY CHARACTERIZED OPPOSITION TO THE INTERFERENCES OF THE SOVIET AUTHORITIES IN IRANIAN INTERNAL AFFAIRS AS ANTI-SOVIET ACTIVITY. ATTACK IS THE BEST FORM OF DEFENCE.

JAN 27 1946

IN ORDER, HOWEVER, THAT THERE SHOULD BE NO POSSIBLE GROUNDS OF DISAGREEMENT ON THIS SCORE BETWEEN THE IRANIAN AND SOVIET GOVERNMENTS THE IRANIAN DELEGATION INVITED THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT TO FURNISH ALL DETAILS OF SUCH PROPAGANDA, WHICH DETAILS HAVE NOT SO FAR BEEN GIVEN; IN ORDER THAT FULL ENQUIRY MAY BE MADE AS TO ANY UNJUSTIFIED PROPAGANDA ACTIVITIES OR ABUSE OF THE RIGHT OF FREE SPEECH.

IN THE CIRCUMSTANCES THE IRANIAN DELEGATION MAINTAIN THAT THE CONDITIONS ENVISAGED BY ARTICLE 25 OF THE CHARTER ARE PRESENT AND THAT THE SECURITY COUNCIL SHOULD, IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE TERMS OF THE CHARTER, INVESTIGATE THIS DISPUTE BETWEEN THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT AND THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT.

YOURS SINCERELY, (SIGNED) S. H. TAQIZADEH, HEAD OF THE IRANIAN DELEGATION.

IRAN'S DELEGATION LODGED THE COMPLAINT WITH THE SECURITY COUNCIL ON THE AZERBAIJAN PROVINCE DISPUTE WHILE HAKIMI WAS PREMIER. HAKIMI RESIGNED LAST SUNDAY, AND HIS SUCCESSOR, MANY DIPLOMATS HERE FELT, MIGHT FAVOR SHELVING THE DISPUTE IN THE INTERESTS OF WHAT RUSSIA HERSELF PROPOSED ONLY YESTERDAY -- DIRECT NEGOTIATION.

IF TEHRAN DECIDES TO DROP THE COMPLAINT, IT WILL BE LOOKED UPON BY MANY HERE AS A TEMPORARY VICTORY FOR RUSSIA. THE SECURITY COUNCIL MEETING MONDAY IS SCHEDULED TO TAKE UP THE IRANIAN, GREEK AND INDONESIAN

NIGHT (Parris) AFTER 13TH GRAF

THERE WAS A POSSIBILITY THAT IF IRAN WITHDREW ITS COMPLAINT, IT MIGHT BE REFILED BY SOME OTHER UNITED NATIONS MEMBER, ON GROUNDS THAT THE DISPUTE ENDANGERS PEACE AND SECURITY. IF THIS HAPPENS, THE IRANIANS COULD ARGUE AGAINST REFILING, POINTING OUT THAT THE CHARTER OF THE UNITED NATIONS PROVIDES FOR SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES BY DIRECT NEGOTIATION.

THE SPOKESMAN, REMARKING THAT GREECE AND ALBANIA ARE STILL OFFICIALLY AT WAR, SAID GREECE FELT THAT ALL NATIONS EVENTUALLY SHOULD JOIN THE UNO BUT THAT ALBANIA WAS NOT YET READY FOR PARTICIPATION.

IRAN AND THE UKRAINE, INVITED ALONG WITH GREECE TO ATTEND THE COUNCIL MEETING AS NATIONS CONCERNED IN THE DISPUTES, ALSO WERE EXPECTED TO BE REPRESENTED MONDAY'S MEETING.

IRAN IS DIRECTLY INVOLVED SINCE SHE FILED CHARGES ALLEGING RED ARMY "INTERFERENCE" IN AZERBAIJAN PROVINCE, WHILE THE UKRAINE ACCUSED BRITAIN OF ENDANGERING THE PEACE BY HER MILITARY ACTIONS IN INDONESIA.

BERLIN, JAN. 26-(AP)-THE DEUTSCHE VOLKSZEITUNG, OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE GERMAN COMMUNIST PARTY, CHARGED TODAY THAT NAZIS AND FRIENDS OF THE JUNKERS HAD SABOTAGED PART OF THE LAND REVISION PROGRAM IN THE RUSSIAN OCCUPATION ZONE OF GERMANY.

THOUSANDS OF JUNKER ESTATES ARE BEING SPLIT UP AMONG PEASANTS, FARMHANDS AND NEW SETTLERS. BUT THE NEWSPAPER SAID THAT IN THE PROVINCE OF SAXONY ALONE 120 OWNERS DISPOSSESSED HAVE ALREADY RETURNED TO THEIR OLD ESTATES.

THE VOLKSZEITUNG CHARGED THAT "NAZI ELEMENTS AND JUNKER FRIENDS" HAD FOILED THE PROGRAM BY GETTING NEW FARMS PARCELLED OUT TO THEIR CHILDREN AND RELATIVES TO TO KEEP ESTATES INTACT.

IT ADDED THAT THESE ELEMENTS, WHICH IT CALLED SABOTEURS, HAD FOULED UP THE ARRANGEMENTS TO SUCH AN EXTENT THAT "IN ONE COUNTY ALONE THERE ARE 14 ESTATES WHICH HAVE NOT YET BEEN REDISTRIBUTED."

STASSEN, ADDRESSING THE WOMEN'S NATIONAL REPUBLICAN CLUB, SAID THAT ONCE THE BASIC POLICY WAS SETTLED "INDIVIDUAL DISPUTES CAN BE RAPIDLY CLEARED UP."

"THE DEPLORABLE STATE OF INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS, WITH OVER 1,600,000 WORKERS ON STRIKE, AN ALL-TIME HIGH, AND THOUSANDS OF ADDITIONAL WORKERS BEING THROWN OUT OF WORK EVERY DAY BY THE STOPPAGE OF SUPPLIES, WITH THE RESULTANT LOSS OF PRODUCTION OF URGENTLY NEEDED GOODS AND GREAT LOSS OF WAGES, PRESENTS AN EXAMPLE IN A BRIEF PERIOD OF MONTHS OF THE FAILURE OF GOVERNMENTAL ADMINISTRATION," THE FORMER MINNESOTA GOVERNOR SAID.

IRAN COMPLAINT TO UNO ON REDS MAY BE SHELVED

Delegates Await Possible Instructions from New Premier.

BRITISH ISSUE SLATED

Council to Act Today on Russian Charges Also.

J. SHAH

LONDON, Jan. 27—(AP) Iranian delegates to the United Nations Assembly, ready to press Iran's complaints against the Soviet Union before the world security council, waited tonight for possible new instructions from a premier known to be friendly with the Russians.

Speculation increased that Iran might ask the council to shelve the charges of Soviet interference in her affairs, pending direct negotiations between Tehran and Moscow.

New Premier Named

The Iranian Shah confirmed today the designation by the Parliament of Ahmed Qavam Es Saltaneh as premier, and Tehran dispatches said Ahmed Qavam went to the foreign office to dispatch new instructions to the UNO representatives. A spokesman for the Iranian delegation here said, however, that no advices had been received, adding that the delegates were proceeding "with some uncertainty."

The Iranian delegation said in a new note to the council last night that Russian interference in Iranian affairs can be "fully proved." A delegation official said the delegation acted "independent of new instructions" in filing this note. The 2,000 word document was in reply to a Russian memorandum opposing council consideration of this dispute.

The council is scheduled to take up tomorrow Albania's application for UNO membership and then the Iranian issue. This will be followed by the Russian complaint against the British involving Greece and the Ukraine complaint against the British involving Indonesia.

Iranian and other UNO sources said it was doubtful that the Iranian case would be withdrawn entirely.

Autonomy Set Up

Moscow dispatches, meanwhile, quoted the Communist newspaper Pravda as saying that friends of democracy received with satisfaction the democratic "transformation" in Iranian Azerbaijan, where an autonomous government has been set up in defiance of authorities at Tehran.

Action of Soviet troops in preventing Iranian forces from entering the Soviet-occupied province to quell disturbances resulted eventually in the filing of the complaint before the security council.

The foreign observer in Pravda described the presentation of the complaint to the council as "the last gesture" of the government of the resigned premier, Ibrahaim Hakimi.

The newspaper declared also that events in Southern Iran "cannot but arouse serious uneasiness," and said Tehran newspapers "are full of statements about armed southern tribes" coming from Iraq territory to attack Iranian settlements.

Pravda Puts Emphasis On Greece And Indonesia

Moscow, Jan. 27 (AP)—The Communist newspaper Pravda declared today that the "Greek and Indonesian problems have become so sharp" that their consideration and settlement by the United Nations Security Council "is a ripe and really important task."

Pravda's foreign observer said that the raising of the Greek and Indonesian questions by the Soviet and Ukraine delegates to the UNO "was warmly supported by the democratic organizations of these two countries."

Shah Confirms Qavam

TEHRAN, Iran, Jan. 27 (AP)—Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi confirmed today the appointment of Ahmad Qavam as Premier of Iran. Qavam was selected yesterday by Parliament to succeed Ibrahim Hakimi.

[A Tehran dispatch received in London said that immediately after the confirmation Qavam went to the Foreign Ministry to dispatch new instructions to Iran's United Nations Organization representatives. A spokesman for the Iranian delegation in London said, however, that no advices had been received, adding that the delegates were proceeding "with some uncertainty."]

Calls Term "Big 3" Too Like Axis

LONDON, Jan. 27 (AP). — The Most Rev. Bernard Griffin, Archbishop of Westminster, told Catholic delegates to the United Nations Assembly today that the term "Big Three or Big Five" is "too reminiscent of the Axis."

The cardinal-designate, at a high mass at Westminster Cathedral, declared that nations "are great only in so far as they work with other nations in a spirit of justice and charity." He called for international good will, which he said can "never exist if nations assembled at a conference are only interested in the aggrandizement of their own nation or pursue a policy of selfishness."

Mrs. Roosevelt Decries Lack Of Women At UNO

London, Jan. 27 (AP)—To Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt "it seems extraordinary" that only two women are delegates to the United Nations General Assembly here.

Speaking over the British radio tonight, she said that "the matter of keeping peace in the world is probably of primary interest to women." MISS E. WILKINSON - DEAN

BRITON ADVOCATES LESS SECRECY ON WORLD RELATIONS

LONDON, Jan. 27—(AP) Prime Minister Attlee's new public relations advisor, Francis Williams, says "less secrecy and more positive information" is needed about international relations as a contribution "to the working of democracy."

Williams, Britain's wartime controller of news and censorship, published a book today in which he advocated "a general international agreement by governments not to subsidize" news services nor to "use them in any way as instruments of propaganda."

Hits Envoy's Reports

The book, "Press, Parliament and People," says the British government has been "sadly misguided" by reports from its ambassadors and predicts that Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin will drastically reorganize the foreign service.

In Britain as elsewhere, Williams writes, "I believe it is of great importance to the working of democracy, nationally and internationally, that there should be less "secrecy and more positive information in the future."

Williams says there were times during the war when the British government "considered they had a right to influence" the Reuters news agency "and to dictate to it the policy it should adopt in handling news of diplomatic importance."

News Service Praised

Reuters "strongly resisted" that view, he says, and "retained throughout its editorial independence."

"I am glad," Williams continues, "that Reuters, along with the American news agencies, has firmly announced its opposition to any postwar subsidizing of international news services.

"Reuters is one of the most important of all the instruments for presenting Britain and the British point of view on international events to the world, the more so because of its independence."

The book advocates an early end to all censorships, declaring that news is "the raw material for ideas and in the world of news and ideas there should be no frontiers.

FREE PRESS PRINCIPLE BACKED BY HUNGARY

LONDON, Jan. 27. — (AP) Istvan Ries, Hungarian minister of justice, said tonight over the Budapest radio that "the Hungarian government stands by the principle of complete freedom for the press."

Ries said he would submit to the Hungarian Parliament next week a bill for the protection of democracy.

"With the right to individual liberty and with it the freedom of the press will expand," he said, adding that the government was working on a new bill concerning the press.

BRITISH REPORTED READY FOR EGYPTIAN PARLEY

LONDON, Jan. 27—(AP) A reliable but unquotable source said tonight that Great Britain had offered to negotiate on Egyptian demands, including full independence and the evacuation of British troops from Egyptian territory. The Egyptian government has agreed not to present their demands to the United Nations Organization.

NIGHT

The source said a British note, replying to an Egyptian request of Dec. 20 for revision of treaty relations, was handed to the Egyptian embassy yesterday.

The note was described as "friendly in tone" and publication of the exchange of messages was said to be "under consideration."

A cabinet crisis over the failure to present Egypt's case to the United Nations Organization was climaxed in Cairo last night by the resignation of three ministers.

Besides evacuation of foreign troops and full independence, Egypt's "national demands" listed by Premier Okrachi Pasha in Parliament on Jan. 7, included a place for Egypt at the peace conference.

EGYPTIAN MINISTERS END CABINET CRISIS

CAIRO, Jan. 28—(AP) Three Egyptian ministers ended the cabinet crisis today by withdrawing their resignations.

Announcement that the three ministers would rejoin the coalition government of Premier Nokrachi Pasha came after a conference with King Farouk. They submitted their resignations Saturday as a protest against the refusal of Egypt's United Nations Organization delegate to place before the UNO the country's demands for removal of foreign troops and for full independence.

The three were Finance Minister Makram Pasha, Supply Minister Sibaie Bey and Minister of National Defense El Said Selim.

The withdrawals of the resignations came simultaneously with a report from a reliable source in London that Britain would negotiate with Egypt on the matter of treaty revision.

3 Trainloads Of Yank Brides And Babies Head For America

CREIGH

London, Jan. 27 (AP)—Three special trains crowded with brides and babies of American soldiers left today for English south coast points in London's greatest "evacuation" since the war ended.

Six hundred and thirty-nine wives and 306 children were in the second contingent to be started toward the United States. They turned huge Waterloo Station into a mammoth nursery. Not since London's children were evacuated from the city early in the war had there been such a parade of perambulators, strollers and cribs.

Coming Over On Queen Mary

Grandparents wept as the trains pulled out, taking the women with children to Bournemouth and the others to Tidworth. Most of the émigrés will leave late in the week on the liner Queen Mary. The S.S. Argentina, with 453 wives and 173 babies, sailed yesterday.

Some of the children viewed the expedition tearfully, but not 7-year-old Patricia West, whose father, William West, has promised her a kitten when she and her mother reach their new home near Holland, Va.

"I've got lots of money, too—15 shillings," Patricia confided. "That will b[illegible]'s see—$3 in American money."

NIGHT

The youngest passenger was the son of Sergt. and Mrs. Max Mazleah, of the Bronx, N.Y., who will be 3 months old on February 6. He slept through the hubbub.

Nobody To Bid Her Good-By

There was no one to wave goodby to Mrs. Samuel Grimsley, who is bound for Chicago with her 13-month-old daughter, Vivian.

"I'm Irish, the baby's father is American and the baby was born in Scotland," she said. "I'm not leaving anyone behind, so I'm not in the least sad."

Mrs. Heffer, whose daughter will join her [illegible]band, George Frederick, Ch[illegible], had only one complaint—"It's too bad I can't go, too."

Mrs. Earling Hansen, who will live in South Ozone Park, Long Island, N.Y., looked sad when a group began singing "Good-by to Piccadilly, farewell Leicester Square."

"There's no place like home," she remarked.

Mrs. Doris Jolly said she had been apart from her husband, Elton, of Lake Providence, La., for eight months.

"I'm looking forward most to seeing him—and after that, buying some clothes," she laughed.

Hearty concurrence came from Mrs. Carl Abel, who is on her way to Providence, R.I. She said her 14-months-old Susan "grew so fast she took all my clothing coupons, and I'll be glad to have some new things for myself."

The wife of Joseph Trudniak, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., had both hands full with blond, curly-haired Michael, 23-months-old, and his baby sister, Rosemary. Mrs. R. B. Williams, bound for Wynnewood, Okla., had twin sons aged 8 months, twice as old as the twin boys of Mrs. Lily Dinaro, who will live in Bellport, Long Island, N.Y.

She Craves A Banana Split

"My husband isn't demobilized yet," said Mrs. Monica Outlaw, wife of Pfc. Glenwood Outlaw, of 1723 Bull street, Columbia, S.C. "But he will be soon. I'm so anxious to go into a drugstore and have a banana split—maybe two."

Like many of the others, Mrs. Donald Perry, en route to Cohoes, N.Y., is eager to meet her husband's family, to whom she has spoken by telephone.

Self-described "luckiest girl on the train" was Mrs. Edmund Dully, whose husband left for his home in Bogota, N.J., only last Sunday.

"We've hardly been separated at all," she said.

Bronx Honeymoon Coming Up

When Mrs. Sema Stein joins her husband, Sam, in the Bronx, she wants "another honeymoon."

"We've had two in England, but I'd like one in the States, too," she explained.

A beautiful baby contest would have found 18-month-old Stephen Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Smith, of Tulsa, Okla., a strongly backed entry. Curly red-haired Stephen's 4-month-old brother, Peter, would have been a competitor, too.

Arrangements for the wives-and-children exodus were handled by Lieut. Harry Haines, of Mount Kisco, N.Y. He said, "there's not a chance of my getting home anyway, so I might as well enjoy helping other people get there."

Seasickness Takes Heavy Toll On GI Bride Ship

Aboard The S.S. Argentina, Jan. 27 (AP)—British brides of American service men agreed that Father Neptune is no gentleman as seasickness kept all but a hardy few in their bunks while the Argentina plowed through heavy swells bound for New York.

Many of the mothers and children in the first major contingent headed for the United States from Great Britain were incapacitated, creating a serious problem for United States Army and ship personnel.

Doctors and nurses worked around the clock. The dispensary was crowded and volunteers were called to tend the children. However, there were no serious mishaps.

Despite the extra work, the Red Cross workers took time to help two mothers celebrate the birthdays of their children. Loudspeakers broadcast "Happy Birthday" for Weldon Guntry's first anniversary and Carol Ann Kingsbury's second. Weldon is en route to Los Angeles with his mother from Warrington, Lancashire, and the Kingsburys are going to New York from London.

American Is A Winner In London Chess Tilt

London, Jan. 27 (AP)—Herman Steiner, chess editor of the Los Angeles Times, defeated J. Stone, of Britain, yesterday, giving the American a total of nine points and first prize in Section A of the international chess tournament.

Arturo Pomar, 14-year-old Spaniard, lost his final match in 32 moves to S. Friedmann, of Czechoslovakia, and finished in a tie for sixth place.

Dr. Ossip Bernstein, of France, finished second in Section A with 8 points, followed by Dr. S. Tartakower, of Poland, 7½ points; Karel Opocensky, of Czechoslovakia, 7 points; H. Holombek, of Britain, 6; L. Prins, of Holland, and Pomar tied for sixth place with 5½ points; W. Fairhurst and Dr. P. M. List, of Britain, 4½; R. J. Broadbent, of Britain, 4; J. S[illegible]e, of Britain, 2½, and Friedmann, who defeated the Spanish boy prodigy yesterday, 2 points.

Results of the final-round matches: Prins beat Golombek in 62 moves, Bernstein drew with List, Tartakower beat Opocensky in 41 moves.

GOUIN HINTS AT HARD NEWS

New President Hopes French People "Will Understand"

Paris, Jan. 27 (AP)—President Felix Gouin held his first meeting with his new economy-minded Cabinet today and afterwards indicated that the French people may have to face hard news when the cabinet decisions are announced to the Constituent Assembly Tuesday.

At the close of a two and a half hour meeting of the Socialist dominated three-party Cabinet Gouin said:

"I shall not tell you the ministerial statement, which I reserve first for the National Assembly. The country shortly will know the decisions we had the courage to make. We hope it will understand."

Counting On Country's Goodwill

"I am convinced we can count on the goodwill of the country which so often has given proof of self-denial and courage."

A brief communiqué said there was "a broad exchange of views" at the meeting and a discussion of food supply, finances and international problems. Gouin, who thanked the ministers for accepting office "in the present grave circumstances," is advocating increased taxes, price fixing and a slash in Government expenditures to combat inflation.

News Blackout In Paris

Parisians, meanwhile, found it difficult to get news of their government, as a strike for higher pay by rotary pressmen on French language newspapers went into its second day.

For the first time the Government's official journal, in a special Sunday issue listing the new Cabinet, was sold on the street. People also snatched up special issue of the Communist paper l'Humanite, printed in handbill form on a flatbed press, as well as the English language newspapers, not affected by the strike.

Army To Drop Newsmen

Paris, Jan. 27 (AP)—American correspondents will be disaccredited by the United States Army in all liberated countries in the European theater February 10, it was announced today. Disaccrediting of correspondents in France was announced last week for the same date.

MIDDLE-ROAD PARTY LEADS GERMAN VOTE

Christian Social Union In Front; Communists Running Third

Frankfurt, Germany, Monday, Jan. 28 (AP)—Rural Germany as represented in the American zone trod a middle-of-the-road political path in Sunday's elections, returns today showed.

The Christian Social Union, a party slightly to the right of center, piled up huge majorities in traditionally conservative Bavaria and early today led almost two-to-one over its nearest rival on the basis of more than 1,000,000 votes counted in the American zone.

For Seats In Rural Councils

The balloting, limited to communities of under 20,000 population, was for seats in rural councils. American Military Government officials estimated that about 84 per cent of those eligible went to the polls.

Both the Left-Wing Communist party and the extremely conservative Liberal Democrats trailed far behind, while the Social Democrats—mildly leftist with a Socialist platform—were second in the unofficial and incomplete compilations by the American-sponsored German news agency Dana.

Hesse For Social Democrats

Bavarian election totals compiled from 3,543 precincts out of 7,191 gave the Christian Social Union 546,131 votes and 9,081 seats in rural councils; the Social Democrats 173,712 votes, 1,607 seats; the Communists 20,427 votes, 127 seats; the Liberal Democrats (the most conservative party on the ticket) 8,767 votes, 74 seats, and nonpartisans 33,536 votes and an undetermined number of seats. The heavy vote for nonpartisans reflected the situation in rural voting where candidates instead of parties are the leading figures.

In Hesse the Social Democrats took the lead, but it was not enough to overcome their losses in Bavaria. Totals here gave the Social Democrats 324,304 votes, the Christian Social Union 240,200, Communists 49,500, Liberal Democrats 16,750 and nonpartisans 80,655.

Burgomeister Arrested

Dana reported the arrest of a German Communist leader in Heilsbronn for giving election officials false information.

In Wiehau, the burgomeister was arrested for marking ballots to give Social Democrats an unfair advantage, Dana said, and at Oberstaufin several persons were taken into custody for distributing illegal pamphlets. Dana gave no indication of the contents of the pamphlets.

The weather held good and in all rural areas German men and women in their Sunday best flocked to the polls. In some villages, particularly in Bavaria and Upper Hessen, they wore picturesque peasant costumes.

GERMAN GENERAL BLAMES HEYDRICH FOR MUNICH BLAST

DE LUCE

NUERNBERG, Jan. 27 — (AP) Reinhard Haydrich, the assassinated "hangman" of Bohemia-Moravia, was accused today by a bitter enemy on the German army general staff of staging the 1939 beer cellar explosion in Munich in order to shatter a peace movement among high army officers.

Heydrich was accused by Gen. Georg Thomas in a statement to American authorities of stage managing the deadly explosion while Hitler was safely absent.

Eight Nazis Killed

A bomb exploded in the Burgerbrau in Munich on Nov. 8, 1939, killing eight obscure Nazi party members, shortly after Hitler and high party leaders left. Hitler had just commemorated the 16th anniversary of the abortive Munich Putsch with a bitter speech against Britain.

The Nazi propaganda ministry of Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels charged that the bombing was the foiled plot of the British secret service to assassinate Hitler. Thomas said Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler cooperated with Goebbels' anti-British propaganda not only by lending the services of his protege Heydrich, but by trapping two British agents on the German-Dutch border as obvious scapegoats.

Heydrich was slain three years later.

Thomas claimed the beer cellar blast was timed by Himmler's men to shatter a fledgling peace movement among high army figures, described by Thomas as distasteful of Hitler's blitzkrieg warfare and resentful of Nazi politicians.

Thomas said the dissident generals, represented by Gen. Ludwig Beck, former chief of staff, asked him to lay before the entire general staff their proposal for "removal of the Hitler cabinet if Hitler should not be ready for an immediate understanding with the western powers.'

Anti-Hitler Plot Fails

These generals, of whom Field Marshal Erwin von Witzleben was the preeminent moving spirit, did not carry out their plans until five years later when the 1944 plot to assassinate Hitler failed, and Witzleben and several other high army officers were executed.

Former Finance Minister Hjalmar Schacht, one of the defendants in the war crimes trial, has requested Thomas as a defense witness. Thomas has named Schacht as one of a handful of prominent German civilians who supported a small clique of the Nazi general staff considering in the late summer of 1939 "how to stop Hitler." Both Schacht and Thomas were imprisoned at Dachau after the 1944 assassination failure, for which Thomas claims no responsibility but about which Schacht hinted he had a behind-the-scenes role.

Nazi Doctors Held in 450 Deaths

BERLIN, Jan. 27 (AP).—Police announced today the arrest of two physicians in connection with the killing of 450 patients, more than 350 of them children, at an asylum at Uchtspringe, Saxony, between 1941 and 1945. Previously, they had arrested three asylum nurses.

British Palestine Policy Assailed

Munich, Germany, Jan. 27 (AP)—David Ben Gurion, president of the executive committee of the Jewish agency, charged before the Congress of Liberated Jews today that "the British Government was sending the Royal Navy, paratroops and the RAF to drown Jews in the sea, or arrest them but not to let them return to their own country."

Criticising British policy in the Holy Land, Ben Gurion said Palestine was "the only place in the world, since the abolishment of the Nuernberg laws, where there still is racial discrimination against the Jews."

Ben Gurion said the Jews would continue to immigrate to Palestine "despite the British Navy because there is something stronger than the British Navy, and that is the Jews' attachment for their homeland."

Ben Gurion came from Palestine to attend the first Jewish Congress in Germany in a dozen years. Delegates from displaced persons camps and Jewish communities met in the Munich City Hall council chamber to discuss emigration and reparations for victims of nazism.

TRANSJORDANIA PLAN PROTESTED BY ZIONISTS

NEW YORK, Jan. 27 — (AP) The New Zionist Organization of America said today it had protested to President Truman against Britain's announced plan to establish Trans-Jordania as an independent state.

The group said it asked President Truman in a letter to "use your good offices to put a stop to this latest British move."

"Trans-Jordania belongs to Jewish Palestine by every moral, historical and legal right," the organization wrote the President. It was placed under supervision of Great Britain on the same conditions which applied to Western Palestine, that is, the establishment of a Jewish national home."

Moscow, Vienna Exchange Aides

VIENNA, Jan. 27 (AP)—E. D. Kiselev, political adviser to Marshal Ivan S. Konev, Russian commander in Austria, has been made the Russian Government's political representative to Austria, it was announced today. Russia accepted Karl Waldbrunner, Socialist member of Parliament, as Austria's political representative in Moscow.

Jerusalem Postoffice Guarded

JERUSALEM, Jan. 27 (AP).—Police increased security measures in streets around the general postoffice here today as rumors persisted of threats to blow up the building. Barbed wire barricades were placed in near-by lanes. No parcels were accepted by the postoffice. Police examined bags of persons entering the building, checked identity papers and watched closely those who mailed letters.

NO NEED SEEN FOR U.S. GROUP

Communist Says Chinese Can Only Afford A Small Army

Chungking, Monday, Jan. 28 (AP). The Democratic League sent its delegates back to China's Unity Conference today after a 24-hour withdrawal in protest against search of some of its members' homes by Chungking police.

A spokesman for the league announced that the Government had sent a satisfactory reply to its protest.

He said the league would take

30.27—621

part in today's subcommittee meetings dealing with two main unsolved problems of the Political Consultation (unity) Conference—Government reorganization and the National Assembly.

Harriman In Chungking

The spokesman declared the Government's delegation replied to the league in orders of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, who promised that the Supreme National Defense Council would reconsider today the wartime labor laws restricting the people's liberties.

The reply also said the Government would investigate charges that police violated the sancity of the homes of some members of the league and would punish those responsible.

The Generalissimo conferred with General Marshall, presidential envoy to China, and Averill Harriman, United States Ambassador to Russia, who arrived yesterday afternoon on his way home from Moscow.

The league, which charts its political course between that of the Government Kuomintang party and the Communists, tossed its bombshell Saturday just as the Political Consulation (unity) Conference was reporting some progress.

Government Concern Shown

The Government showed its concern by sending Gen. Chang Chun, one of its leading delegates and its truce negotiator, to league headquarters. He found nobody in.

Gen. Chou En-lai, head of the Communist delegation, was already en route to his headquarters at Yenan to confer with Mao Tse-tung, the Communist leader on progress made. Chou is due to return today.

With league delegates on the sidelines, two subcommittees still debating plans for reorganizing the Government and Assembly were forced to cancel yesterday's deliberations.

The purpose of Harriman's visit to Chungking was not disclosed. It was reported unofficially that he was here to talk with Marshall and that he would visit Korea and Japan on his way home.

Sergeant Talks For Double Meal

Chungking, Jan. 27 (AP)—A talkative sergeant got a double meal today because General Marshall turned up at the United States Army's headquarters mess for lunch today.

Marshall, accompanied by Col. Lloyd W. Goeppert, of Hollywood, Cal., Chungking station commandant, arrived without warning as most of the GI's were halfway through their meal.

The General and the colonel sat down casually at one of the tables. The soldiers stiffened in awe and answered Marshall's casual remarks in monosyllables. Colonel Goeppert whispered to a mess officer to bring around someone who might not be so tongue-tied.

The mess officer promptly picked Sergt. Robert Cressy, son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Cressy, of Utica, N.Y., and seated him beside Marshall.

Cressy already was nearly finished at his own table, but nonchalantly started all over on a new meal, chatting easily the while. What they talked about was not disclosed, but Marshall, who finished first, sat until Cressy was through eating.

As they rose to go, the General remarked, "This is precedent-making; for once I have not had to sign an autograph."

The words were no sooner out of his mouth than a soldier who had just heard of Marshall's presence rushed up with a short-snorter bill in his hand. Marshall smilingly signed.

Chinese Red Declares U.S. Mission Unneeded

Yenan, Jan. 27 (AP)—Gen. Chu Teh, Chinese Communist army commander in chief, declared today China could afford only a small army for the next five years and that a United States mission was unnecessary.

In the first press conference since China's truce, General Chu said he was optimistic over prospects for a long peace and hence China could do with a small, efficient army equipped with the arms it now has.

Economic Experts Sought

"If the income of Chinese economy during the next five years is employed to support 50 or 100 mechanized divisions, there would be no money for clothes or food," he said.

"Only on the basis of a sound industry can a strong army be built. Consequently, and speaking personally as a military man, I would welcome American advisory groups which would provide China with economic experts, engineers and technicians."

Chu said an American military advisory group, asked by the Chungking Government, therefore would be unnecessary, but "if it would help to reduce Chinese armies to a point at which they can be safely supported by our now weakened economy, then there would be a meaning to it."

Communist Proposal Backed

The General said he stood behind the recent Communist proposal that the Government reduce its armies to 90 divisions totaling 1,900,000 men and the Communists cut their forces to twenty divisions of 400,000 men. For that matter, he thought they could be cut to more than that.

Asked how China could defend herself from outside attack in the next five years, Chu declared that a small army would just have to do because the nation could not afford a larger one.

Given a five-year breathing spell, Chu said he thought China would be able to build an "adequate" army to stand up to any aggressor.

ChinaHasTranquilDay After 18 Years of War

YENAN, China, Jan. 27 (AP).—China had on Friday its first day of complete tranquillity in eighteen years. General Chu Teh, Chinese Communist commander in chief, told correspondents here that all fronts were quiet, with no fighting by either Communist or Nationalist troops.

Later reports were incomplete but they indicated that General Chu Teh was correct in his announcement that at last China had laid down its arms.

CHINESE GROUPS PROPOSE BAN ON FOREIGN VESSELS

SHANGHAI, Jan. 27—(AP) The Shanghai Chamber of Shipping disclosed today that it, the Chinese Chamber of Commerce and several other Chinese shipping organizations had adopted a resolution demanding that the Central Government "debar ships flying foreign flags from the privilege of plying Chinese waters."

Y. L. Lee, secretary general of the shipping chamber, urged the government to "wipe out the humiliation of having to [illegible] foreign ships in Chinese waters."

Lee said the United States had promised to send China ten Liberty Ships to bolster her merchant marine but that the first ten which reached Shanghai had not been given to the Chinese "due to foreign interference."

Lee also charged that "a certain country's selfish reasons" had prevented delivery of important shipping tonnage promised by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. He did not elaborate either complaint or explain what country he meant, but appealed to "China's friends, especially the United States" for assistance in reviving the merchant marine.

Lee warned Chinese against playing into the hands of foreigners who are ready to shed crocodile tears to induce us to give up our rights by sweet promises" while looking for a chance to monopolize China shipping.

The case was viewed by some foreigners here as typical of a growing hostility towards foreign business, which has led some business men to leave China and others to hesitate in resuming prewar operations.

Strike In RAF Spreads

New Delhi, Jan. 27 (AP)—The "we want to go home" strike of RAF personnel gained 1,200 fresh adherents this week end at Calcutta's Dumdum airfield, press reports said today.

This brought to an estimated 2,000 the total number of RAF personnel striking in India in protest to what airmen claimed was a slower rate of demobilization for them than for the British army and navy.

The unrest at Mauripur, it was reported, spread yesterday to an establishment in near-by Karachi itself but was settled during the day. The new Karachi incident was said to involve only ratings below sergeant, which also was the case at Dumdum.

[The British Air Ministry said in London Friday that the strike reportedly involving 2,000 RAF men at the big base at Mauripur had ended].

Appeal To Air Ministry

An undetermined number went on strike at Palam Airfield near New Delhi Friday but resumed work Saturday.

A committee from among 1,000 would-be repatriates waiting passage at the Worli camp near Bombay recently cabled the Air Ministry in London that they had been sitting there for four weeks and the next two boat lists covered only 250 of them.

"We respectfully appeal to your sense of fairness on behalf of the men and their families to make an immediate substantial increase in the allotment of shipping space for tour-expired airmen," the cable said.

Exceptions For Essential Work

Efforts were made at Karachi and elsewhere to explain demobilization and transport difficulties to the men as a reason for the delays in repatriation.

The strikes apparently have been peaceful with the men simply remaining in their quarters in defiance of their duty assignments. However, the men were said to have made exceptions for duty in essential services such as messing and the handling of home-bound personnel.

The men at Worli said some of their number had been overseas nearly four years and added: "We'll go home in anything; tramp steamer or windjammer if you like."

Dispatches from Ceylon said an undetermined number of RAF men at the Katunayake Field there had been on strike since Thursday.

4,000 Strike At Singapore

Singapore, Jan. 27 (AP)—An estimated 4,000 RAF ground crew men striking to go home were idle today at the Seletar airfield on the northeastern end of Singapore Island. There were noticeably few aircraft over Singapore.

Air Marshal Sir Keith Park, air commander in chief of the Southeast Asia Command, called in staff officers to consider the strike. Earlier he met ground crews to answer a barrage of questions.

A spokesman for the strikers said: "We are not going back to work until we get what we want."

700 Out At Palestinian Base

Jerusalem, Jan. 27 (AP)—An estimated 700 RAF men were involved today in a strike at Lydda. Thus far authorities in the Levant have issued no statements. Lydda, the only base affected in Palestine, is a key point on the United Kingdom-Far East route.

Hicswa Case Beyond His Scope, General MacArthur Declares

TOKYO, Monday, Jan. 28—(AP) General MacArthur today notified a Texas woman that the case of Pfc. Joseph Hicswa is not "within the scope of my authority" and "final action is with authorities in Washington."

His statement was made in response to a message signed "Mary Foley Cruse of Beaumont, Tex." It said a petition bearing approximately 75,000 names had been sent to President Truman protesting the "severe sentence" given to the Wallington, N. J., youth who has been condemned to death for killing two Japanese civilians last Nov. 24.

"We earnestly request your mercy and leniency in your review of his sentence," it added.

General Replies

MacArthur replied, "I have read your radio message regarding the case of Pfc. Joseph Hicswa with deepest sympathy. I have nothing to do with the matter, however, as it is not within the scope of my authority."

MacArthur's headquarters announced yesterday that Maj. Gen. Arthur McK. Harper, commander of the 98th Infantry division, has power to approve or commute Hicswa's sentence.

"If he commutes the sentence," said a headquarters press statement, "this closes the case. If he approved the death sentence, the case will be reviewed in the War department and will go to the President for final action. Theater Commander MacArthur does not review the case and has no connection whatsoever with it."

Old Procedure Resumed

The statement explained that during the war, theater commanders had been delegated the duties of final review in court martial death sentences but that now that fighting had ceased, such cases reverted to the usual peacetime procedure of review by the War department and President.

In the case of military commissions, however, it stated that final action remained with the theater commander, since such commissions were designed primarily to try enemy personnel.

General Harper now is reviewing the trial record of Hicswa, who is a member of the 98th's headquarters company.

(The War department announced in Washington that Hicswa would remain in Japan until his case was reviewed there and that if the conviction was sustained, only the records in the case would be sent to the department.)

HIROSHIMA SEEKS U.S. HELP

Survivors Of First Atomic Bomb Rebuilding Homes

Hiroshima, Japan, Monday, Jan. 28 (AP)—A Japanese plea for "outside assistance" in rebuilding atom-bombed Hiroshima was submitted to members of the Far East Commission yesterday. The Governor of Hiroshima prefecture told commission members inspecting the ruins that the city should be reconstructed "as a symbol of the new world order of peace."

The Mayor of Kure told the Americans he was studying plans for converting the former big naval base at Kure into a textile manufacturing center.

The commissioners left early this afternoon for Osaka, and will visit Kyoto, former headquarters of the now deactivated 6th Army, before returning to Tokyo.

City Being Restored

Hiroshima, nearly consumed in the holocaust of the first atomic bomb last August 6, is being restored. C. ROBERTS

JAN 28 1946

Slowly those who escaped that searing blast are beginning to edge back into the ravaged areas of this once bustling city of nearly 400,000.

In the past month each day has seen some family start rebuilding a bamboo, wood and plaster dwelling on the site of its former home.

Gradually Changing

The desolation caused when the atomic bomb destroyed 60 per cent of Hiroshima's 6.9 square miles of built-up area gradually is changing.

Most of the persons burned in the explosion have recovered or died, Col. John R. Hall, Jr., of El Paso, Texas, 10th Corps surgeon, said today. He estimated that 47,000 were killed outright, 15,000 to 17,000 are missing and about 60,000 have died since the bombing from various contributing causes.

The survivors have lost their fear of the demolished region. They dreaded it at first because they didn't understand what had happened to them and their missing relatives.

Survival Is Noted

What formerly were the principal streets have been cleared of debris and over them all day winds a slow procession of street cars, a few automobiles and many handcarts carrying people still living in the hills while they rebuild their shattered homes.

First, a marker is erected on the site, telling others someone in the family is still alive and planning to erect a new dwelling.

Before work begins a garden is started in the front yard. Most appear to be growing well. Weeds and wild grasses are sprouting between heaps of rubble, apparently thriving in the burned and blackened soil.

However, bushes and trees killed by the bomb still stand like grotesque, gnarled fingers bending backward from the epicenter of the burst, and show no signs of life.

Sounds Of Hammering

The return to the city started on the perimeter of the burned area and is creeping inward. Many families have restrung makeshift power lines to their new homes and electric lights burn weakly here and there at night. One group uses an electric hot plate for warmth while eating supper. Music from Japanese records played on an old mechanical phonograph produces a weird effect.

By day the sounds of hammering come from all directions. Workers halt their rebuilding around noon only long enough to eat cold rice gruel.

Two large buildings have been cleared of rubble and are being renovated. The city administration is once more operating from the burned out City Hall with officials using boxes for desks.

Beg For Allied Aid

Mayor Hichiro Kihara said today the city is planning to rebuild with money raised by bond issues and increased taxation. The greatest difficulty, he said, is the lack of materials, which must be imported.

"In spite of hardships we are determined to rebuild a city larger than before," Kihara declared. "We earnestly beg Allied authorities to give necessary aid as much as possible in point of funds and materials."

Officials of the Chungoku News, morning newspaper whose plant was burned beyond recognition but which is publishing on a small, imported press, said residents of the city have great respect for the nation which developed the atomic bomb and hold no animosity toward the Americans despite the fact nearly every survivor lost at least one relative.

Morgan traveled a lot, and in time went back to America. He carried with him a doll in the likeness of Yuki Kato, and in a year he came back to Japan. This time he succeeded in arranging a wedding through the law firm of Kobayashi and Brown.

The wedding in the Oriental Palace hotel in Yokohama was of such splendor that Kato can remember it vividly even now.

The couple went to live in Morgan's mansion near the Miyako hotel, where the U. S. Sixth Army staff resides today.

Later they went to America and still later traveled around the world before settling in France, where Morgan died. The couple was childless.

Mrs. Morgan came back to Japan. Now she lives secluded in a small house with one servant and a brown and white cat.

A devout Roman Catholic, she visits the little gray church which many American soldiers stationed here attend.

Old Barber Recalls Romance Of Jap Dancer and Morgan Kin

KYOTO, Japan, Jan. 27. — (AP) An old man hunched over a charcoal burner to keep off the cold in his barber shop and told his story of the romance of a beautiful dancer and a relative of one of America's wealthiest men.

The interviewer was a reporter for Stars and Stripes, army newspaper. The barber was Barber Kato, now 70, who said the dancer was his sister and the American was George Morgan, whom he identified as a nephew of the elder J. P. Morgan.

(Records show George Denis Morgan, cousin of the late J. P. Morgan, was married in 1904 to Yuki Kato, daughter of a Japanese swordmaker of Kyoto.)

This is Kato's story as told to Stars and Stripes:

Nearly a half century ago Morgan, a jolly, mustachioed American, came to a tea house in Kyoto where Yuki Kato was a dancer. Morgan was so charmed by her beauty he asked her to marry him.

Weddings between the East and West were not easily arranged in those days. The Kato family objected.

U. S. TENTH CORPS DUE TO BE INACTIVATED SOON

F. WHITE

KURE, Jan. 27. — (AP) The 10th Corps, U. S. Army, will be inactivated in Japan Jan. 31.

At present the occupation force for the majority of Southwestern Honshu and the island of Shikoku, the 10th Corps is famed for its combat record which included spearheading the liberation of the Philippines.

The corps was activated May 15, 1942, at Sherman, Tex., with Gen. Courtney H. Hodges as its first commander. After participating in the 1943 Louisiana maneuvers under Maj. J. W. Anderson, the 10th was stationed successively at Camp Maxey, Texas, and Camp Young, California, before departing for New Guinea.

Under command of Maj. Gen. Franklin C. Seibert, troops of the 10th Corps liberated Tacloban soon after landing on Leyte in the Philippines, Oct. 20, 1944.

Maj. Gen. Percy W. Clarkson, formerly commander of the 33rd Infantry division, now commands the corps.

Army's Relief Job In Japan

ROY ROBERTS

Osaka, Japan, Jan. 27 (AP) — A ragged old Japanese man lay dying on the cold cement floor of a crowded alcove at the Osaka railroad station. Near by a dull-eyed orphan boy searched hawklike for scraps of food.

No attention was paid to either by the hundreds who have gathered in the station by night and day for years because it is the only place they can go for a bit of warmth, shelter and companionship in their abject poverty.

AY

It is situations like these that the American military authorities are trying to relieve. The task is apparently unending.

Six Corpses in Station Tunnels

The first day that officials of the 98th (Hiawatha) Division from New York State inspected the Osaka depot they found six bodies in tunnels on three levels below the modern steel and concrete main building.

They curtly ordered Japanese station officials to dispose of the corpses and clear the tunnels of debris and refuse. Returning five days later, they found the tubes clean where they were lighted but still reeking and vile in the shadows.

Station Never Before Cleaned

Again orders were given to the Japanese, and now the underground passageways are free of filth. Apparently the Japanese failed to understand the first order. They said the station had never been cleaned since its construction.

When death overtakes the old man, whose face is turning bluer by the minute, station attendants will send in workmen to carry out his body.

Little can be done for the nameless orphan. The Japanese Government's welfare organization may be able to help when it gets rice. Meanwhile, he will accept chocolate bars from American soldiers and hide them in the depths of his dirty, torn garments to be eaten when he's alone and there's no chance they will be taken from him by someone stronger.

Wretched, Impassive Vagrants

Two older orphans about 13 years old also call the station home. On their knees they picked rice from a handful of dirt where it had fallen, blew dust off the grains and stored them in a small box.

Tonight they will boil and eat the rice in a vast empty lot near the station. Around them will be a couple of thousand wretched but impassive vagrants, cooking rice and scraps grubbed during the day's wandering.

Many will sleep out of doors in the chill air because they can't all get into the tunnels under the station or its many alcoves.

Tomorrow one or another may be too weak to hunt for food so he'll lie down and wait for death.

Japs Told To Increase Coal Cargoes To Korea

Tokyo, Monday, Jan. 28 (AP)— General MacArthur today ordered the Japanese Government to increase immediately coal shipments to Korea for use of United States forces there.

On last September 26 he directed that 70,000 tons be shipped monthly, but thus far in January only 6,564 tons were delivered, and December deliveries totaled 49,056 tons. Mechanical difficulties and labor shortages which hindered loading have now been rectified, today's announcement noted.

Japan to Raise Rail Rates

TOKYO, Jan. 27 (AP)—The Japanese Transportation Ministry announced today a railway rate increase of 150 per cent for passengers and 200 per cent for freight, effective about March 1. The Kyodo News Agency said some quarters feared that the increases would boost the cost of basic materials.

Air Borne Eleven Beats Honolulu All-Stars, 18 to 0

11th Wins Army Pacific Title in Tokyo Stadium Pacco by Malloy's Forwards

TOKYO, Jan. 27 (AP).—The powerful 11th Airborne Division Angels won the Army Pacific Olympics football championship today, defeating the Honolulu All-Stars, 18 to 0, in a drizzing rain.

Mel Malloy, quarterback, 11th Airborne ace from Austin High of Chicago, passed seventeen yards to James Bledsoe, end, Port Arthur, Tex., High, who dodged over from the 1-yard stripe for the first touchdown early in the opening quarter.

Four minutes later Malloy passed fifteen yards to J. Swarthout, right halfback, former Montana University player from Prosser, Wash., who scampered seventeen yards for the second score.

Bledsoe set up the Angels' fourth period score by falling on a blocked Honolulu punt on the All-Stars' 15-yard line. Ed Zednick, end from Cleveland and Ohio University, cut through the Honolulu line to the 3, and Tom Swisley, substitute halfback, once of New Brunswick, N. J., High, went through center for the score on the next play.

The game slowed up as both teams played cautiously in the ooze of Meiji Stadium.

Honolulu outgained the slippery ball on its own 15 two minutes before the end of the game and the 11th had driven to the All-Stars' 5 at the final gun.

The Airbornes outgained the All-Stars seven first downs to 2.

The crowd, almost solidly Army khaki, lacked color, but made up for it in enthusiasm.

Lieutenant E. R. Bruce, of Jamaica, N. Y., formerly of Colby College, coached the Angels, with Tad Wieman, of Princeton, as his adviser.

Jock Sutherland, of the Pittsburgh Steelers, and Bill Hargiss, of Kansas University, coached the All-Stars.

ELECTION GUNPLAY IN PHILIPPINES VIEWED DOUBTFUL

HALSEMA

MANILA, Jan. 27 — (AP) Prospects of gunplay when the Philippines elect their first independent president April 23 were minimized today by Filipino army officers who expressed belief, however, that the Leftist "Peoples' Army" would be allowed to remain armed until after the election.

Brig. Gen. Macario Peralta, Philippines army deputy chief of staff, said the strength of the "Hukbalahap" or "Peoples Army"—recently styled "semi-political, semi-bandit" by the U. S. Army—was exaggerated.

Negotiations Reported

The Hukbalahap Popular Front and the Democratic Alliance, two parties with many of the same leaders and ideas, were reported negotiating with the campaign manager of President Sergio Osmena, possibly to support him against his opponent, Senate President Manuel A. Roxas.

Peralta said Filipino military police recently were armed with 10,000 tommyguns "to show the people in turbulent central Luzon we still have a government and there is still such a thing as law and order."

The officer asserted that the Hukbalahap (Tagalog dialect for "Peoples Army") had no more than 10,000 serviceable guns and little ammunition.

Peralta, whose widespread guerrilla intelligence network under the noses of the Japanese helped General MacArthur's comeback offensive, said the Hukbalahap embodied a wide range of political thought.

One regiment was recognized by the U. S. Army for valiant work against the Japanese, whereas others fought other guerrillas, held American pilots prisoners and robbed and pillaged. Hukbalahap leaders assert this last was the work of bandits who used the organization's name.

"There is no doubt of the genuineness of the peasants' request for agrarian reform," Peralta said, "but they don't know when they go too far."

Some Landlords Skip

He added that rich landlords who oppressed the tenants in Central Luzon, the Philippines rice granary, had been forced to flee to Manila but fair landlords were living on their farms in perfect safety.

The assistant chief of staff declared, however that whoever was elected president would find it necessary to disarm the Hukbalahap to ensure a stable government.

The organization was formed in late March of 1942 in Pampanga Province of West Central Luzon. Its main strength is in that area.

Peralta said there were unsubstantiated reports reaching the Filipino army that some Chinese, Spaniards and Russians were active in the movement and were trying to extend its influence into Southern Luzon.

FIRST JAP WAR CRIMINAL BEGINS HIS SENTENCE

MANILA, Jan. 27 — (AP) Sohie Katsura today became the first Japanese war criminal to begin serving his sentence in the Philippines. General MacArthur's headquarters approved the findings of a military commission in his case.

JAN 28 1946

30.27—623

Katsura, civilian interpreter for the Japanese army, was convicted Dec. 24, 1945 of torturing a Filipino girl and was sentenced to five years at hard labor.

Several other Japanese, notably Lt. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, have been sentenced by military commissions. Their cases have not yet been reviewed.

Manila Nine Wins Far East Series

Manila, Jan. 27 (AP)—The Manila Dodgers today won the Far East baseball world series, trouncing the Marianas nine, 12-7.

Thirteen errors were charged in the weird three-hour contest, which resembled soccer at times as both sides booted the ball with verve and abandon. The Dodgers made seven errors and the Marianas six.

The Dodgers got seventeen hits; the Marianas six.

The Dodgers won the first game of the Army's title series Saturday behind the pitching of Kirby Higbe, who blanked the visitors, 11-0. The Marianas had entered the finals after trouncing Hawaii two out of three in a series at Saipan.

Big Jim Hearn, former St. Louis Cardinal right-hander, started for the Dodgers, but sailed skyhigh like a free balloon when his mates started booting the ball. He was followed by Hank Peterson, Cincinnati Reds chucker, who managed to hold the Dodger lead.

The Marianas starter, Hank Weaver, formerly with the Little Rock, Ark., club, was knocked from the mound quickly and was followed by Corp. Whitey Konick, from Beaumont, in the Texas League.

41st Division Wins Pacific Cage Title

Manila, Jan. 27 (AP)—The 41st Division annexed the Army Pacific Olympics basketball title tonight, taking the second straight game from the Hawaiian All-Stars, 64 to 49.

Accounting for 21 points, Pfc. James Jones, of Tulsa, Okla., formerly of Indiana U, was high scorer for the winners, who represented Japan occupation forces.

MALAYA INQUIRY SOUGHT

Australians' Plea for Public Hearing on Campaign Criticized

SYDNEY, Australia, Jan. 27 (AP)—A public inquiry to clear Australian troops of any disparaging reflections in connection with the fall of Singapore was proposed today, but sources close to Prime Minister Joseph B. Chifley said that it was unlikely that he would order the inquiry.

The inquiry was sought by Lieut. Gen. Henry Gordon Bennett, former Commander of Australian forces in Malaya, and the External Territories Minister, Edward J. Ward. They made the proposal in commenting on the publication of a hitherto secret speech by former Prime Minister Churchill on April 23, 1942, in which he referred to Singapore's fall and said that "Australian accounts reflect upon the Indian troops. Other credible witnesses disparage the Australians."

General Bennett's flight from Singapore was the subject of a special court of inquiry, which reported on Jan. 4 that he had not been justified in leaving Singapore after its fall but that he had acted in good faith and not through any desire to escape danger or hardship.

Mr. Ward said that he would ask the Federal Cabinet to seek a full inquiry into the Malayan campaign, but sources close to Mr. Chifley said that he had studied detailed reports on the campaign and could see no useful purpose in such an inquiry.

BRAZILIAN PRESIDENT EXTENDS BANK HOLIDAY

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 27—(AP) Provisional President Jose Linhares today decreed a three-day extension for the national bank holiday originally established last week because of a strike of bank employes throughout Brazil.

The original three-day holiday expired yesterday and Linhares immediately ordered the extension.

Hope for an end of the strike now rests with Joao Daut Oliveria, president of the Commercial Association, who is mediating the dispute over salary increases.

Thousands of bank workers went on strike Thursday and the walkout spread from the capital to all outlying states.

LaGuardia Flies Southward

San Juan, P.R., Jan. 27 (AP)—Fiorello H. LaGuardia, special presidential envoy to Brazil's presidential inauguration, flew southward today after talking with Gov. Rexford G. Tugwell.

SPOON BEATS BLONDIN IN BOUT AT HONOLULU

HONOLULU, Jan. 27 (AP)—A crowd of 6,000 jammed Hickham Field's Memorial Gymnasium last night as boxers from the four corners of the Pacific swung through the semi-finals of the three-day Army Pacific Olympic boxing championships.

The contestants included senior welterweight, middleweight, light heavy and heavyweight entries. Two of the bouts ended in knockouts.

John Spoon of New York, 154½, representing the Philippines, outpointed Thomas Blondin, 155, of Honolulu, representing Hawaii.

Jesse James Jackson, 154½, Los Angeles (Marianas), knocked out Bob Kelly, 152, Longview, Wash. (Japan-Korea), two rounds.

Ray Dioses, 162¼, Los Angeles (Hawaii), outpointed Jimmy Brooks, 164, Los Angeles (Marianas).

Buddy Brombacher, 162½, Youngstown, Ohio (Philippines), outpointed Ross Brantley, 159½, Texas (Japan-Korea).

Joe Cambra, 170½, Honolulu (Hawaii), outpointed Jerry Mason, 172, Brooklyn (Philippines).

John Gardner, 173, Washington, D. C. (Marianas), knocked out Robert Ash, 178, Cleveland (Japan-Korea), three rounds.

Guy Williams, 190¼, Delaware County, Pa. (Philippines), outpointed Dale Hale, 195¾, Chicago (Japan-Korea).

Sam Williams (Marianas, heavyweight) drew a bye when Pete Louthis, Providence, R. I. (Hawaii), was withdrawn for medical reasons.

Unions Assure Cooperation with Government in Operating Seized Plants.

CHICAGO, Jan. 27 — (AP) Both C.I.O. and A.F.L. Packing House Workers — 248,000 strong — were ready to return to work over the country tomorrow, and spokesmen for the government said they expect to be delivering some meat not later than Wednesday.

On strike since Jan. 16, C.I.O. workers decided late yesterday to return to work twelve hours after the government took possession of strike bound plants. Before the government took over the plants, the A.F.L.-Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen's Union had directed its 55,000 members to return to work.

JAN 28 1946

Cooperation Pledged

Both management and unions have pledged cooperation in operation of the seized properties, Gayle C. Armstrong, government representative of President Truman and Secretary of Agriculture Anderson said.

Spokesmen for the packing houses said operations in the slaughtering plants will depend on the arrival of cattle and hogs. It is expected that slaughtering will begin tomorrow in all plants where supplies are received. However the spokesmen said that carcasses must be "hung" for 24 to 48 hours.

Workers who handle operations after the animal is killed are expected to be back to work not later than Wednesday, and normal output will be accomplished by Friday.

A fact-finding panel which worked here all last week has moved to Washington and will study the testimony taken here Monday and Tuesday. Dr. Edwin E. Witte, chairman, said he believed a conclusion would be reached in the "shortest possible time."

David Dolnick, A.F.L. research director, informed packers that his union would be satisfied with an increase of 15 cents an hour and Ralph Helstein, attorney for C.I.O. said a 17 1-2 cent increase would be satisfactory to his organization.

Final arguments will be heard in Washington Thursday, after the panel meets with the Office of Price Administration Wednesday.

Before leaving here last night Dr. Witte said:

"If the parties involved can adjust this matter before next Thursday, not only the panel, but the entire country will be grateful to you."

Anderson Wire Aided

A telegram from Secretary Anderson to leaders of both the A.F.L. and C.I.O. is credited with having much influence in bringing C.I.O. to the decision of calling off its pickets.

In it Anderson assured the unions that he would immediately apply "for approval," any wage increases the fact-finding panel might recommend.

A statement on the C.I.O. union national wage policy committee action, issued by Lewis J. Clark, president of the C.I.O. union, said the union had received assurances "which we understand to be a commitment on the part of a member of the President's cabinet of the United States that he will use his high office to insure justice and equity to the packing house workers."

Packing House Workers To Resume Jobs Today

STEEL PINCH DUE TO RISE

More Layoffs In Prospect As Result Of Strike

Services Go On

Gary, Ind., Jan. 27 (AP)—Steelmill picket lines parted momentarily today to permit a Catholic priest and a Presbyterian minister to conduct services in a strikebound plant.

The Rev. Thomas Coffey, of the Oblate Mission House, and the Rev. F. W. Backemeyer, of First Presbyterian Church, entered the struck Gary works of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation.

In a plant garage, they led separate services for grimy-faced supervisors clad in overalls and mackinaws.

The men have been in the plant constantly since start of the CIO strike early last Monday.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 27 (AP)—The giant steel strike went into its second week tonight, signaling grave repercussions to business and industry with widespread layoffs in prospect.

Relief at settlement of the Ford and Chrysler disputes was tempered by the fact that no automobiles could be made without steel—and there was virtually no steel production.

United States Steel and the CIO-United Steelworkers continued their wage deadlock that has made 750,000 steelworkers idle in steel and aluminum plants throughout the country.

Fairless Remains Silent

Philip Murray, CIO chief, declared he did not think the next move was up to him.

"I made my move," he said, referring to his acceptance of President Truman's compromise offer of an 18½-cent-an-hour increase.

In New York, United States Steel's President Benjamin F. Fairless, remained silent. Fairless has stood pat on a 15-cent-an-hour raise.

Murray, who came here to direct the strike last Sunday, planned to leave for Washington tonight. He is scheduled to appear Tuesday before the Senate Education and Labor Committee.

Steelmen expected that automobile, construction and other related industries would begin to feel the steel pinch more seriously in the next week or two as stocks on hand dwindled.

Thousands Of Miners Idle

Some industries already were cutting back production schedules to prevent complete shutdowns and avert layoffs. In Syracuse, N.Y., the Manufacturers Association reported industries not directly involved in the strike were shortening the work week to stretch existing stocks.

In Detroit, Frank Rising, general manager of the Automotive and Aviation Parts Manufacturing, Inc., said the steel shortage will cause the closing of many automotive parts plants by the end of the week. He estimated 200,000 workers would be made idle.

A freightcar shortage in the Pittsburgh area, caused by the hoppers being tied up at strikebound plants and sidings, forced thousands of miners into idleness in fluctuating shutdowns.

Strike Fields Generally Quiet

Figured on a production basis of 200,000 tons a day, the steel loss since the start of the strike now runs well over a 1,000,000 tons.

The amount lost in wages, based on November figures of the American Iron and Steel Institute, is computed at more than $23,000,000 for the first week of the strike.

The strike fields were generally quiet with only minor disturbances.

At Homestead, Pa., a Carnegie-Illinois mill superintendent charged he was forced into an automobile by pickets and taken to union headquarters for questioning. The CIO said it was investigating.

Want Steel Price Plans

At the Jones & Laughlin Works, a small group of maintenance men walked off their jobs, claiming they received fourteen hours pay for every 24 hours, instead of time and half for all hours over eight.

The only other action was taken by the Tristate Industrial Association, representing 56 strikebound fabricating firms, which asked that the Government make known the exact amount of the proposed increase in the price of basic steel.

In a telegram to Reconversion Director Snyder, the group said it needed the information immediately because, as the results of its insistence that the steelworker's union negotiate separately with the fabricators, some have received offers from the union to start deliberations.

Early Decision On Steel Price Held Unlikely

No Action on Advance Is Expected Pending Wage Issue Clarification

CLEVELAND, Jan. 27 (AP).—Action on steel price advances is unlikely pending clarification of the wage situation, the magazine "Steel" reported today.

"Talk of an increase has ranged all the way from $2.50 to $7 a ton," the review of the nationally struck industry observed. "Recently $4 a ton increase seemed to be the figure generally expected to be applied. However, with production at a standstill, steel makers declining to accept President Truman's compromise wage suggestion, it was said last week price action would be delayed, the government holding this as a trump card to apply in wage negotiations at the opportune moment."

Although the national steelmaking rate dropped to 5 per cent of capacity last week, lowest in the industry's history, consumption is tapering "much more moderately, as most steel fabricators have not yet been confronted by labor stoppages of their own and have been able to carry on temporarily from stocks on hand," the magazine reported.

To provide steel from available supplies for emergencies, the Civilian Products Administration was said to be issuing AAA ratings where necessary. The C. P. A. had suspended earlier all priorities granted before the strike.

Operations last week were stopped in Buffalo, Cleveland, Youngstown and Birmingham. At Pittsburgh the rate was 2½ per cent of capacity; Chicago, 4½ per cent; eastern Pennsylvania, 4; Detroit, 21; Cincinnati, 44; Wheeling, 59; St. Louis, 14, and New England, 10.

UNION TO DEMAND HIGHER GM RATE

U. A. W. Leader Says Corporation Must Pay More Than Other Companies.

DETROIT, Jan. 27 — (AP) Walter P. Reuther, vice-president of the C.I.O. United Auto Workers, said today that General Motors Corp. "must pay a higher wage increase than Ford or Chrysler" in order to compensate for effects of the 67-day-old strike.

In a prepared statement, Reuther, who heads the union's GM department, did not mention a figure.

Two Disputes End

Chrysler Corp. Saturday settled its wage dispute with the U.A.W. on the basis of an 18 1-2 cent increase. The Ford Motor Co. almost simultaneously agreed to raise production wage rates by 18 cents hourly.

The U.A.W. offered at one time to settle the General Motors strike for the figure proposed by President Truman's fact-finding committee— 19 1-2 cents—but, when the corporation declined reverted to a 30 per cent demand.

General Motors best offer to date has been 18 1-2 cents an hour.

Reuther attributed increases in the Chrysler and Ford settlements to "the determination of GM employes, 175,000 of whom have been on strike since Nov. 21, and to "solidarity of Ford, Chrysler and other workers in carrying out the basic wage strategy of the U.A.W."

He asserted that GM's rejection of the fact-finding proposal for a 19 1-2 cent boost is "prolonging the strike."

"The U.A.W. will continue to fight for higher wages without price increases," he added, "in order to achieve high levels of purchasing power as the basis for a full production, full employment economy."

"In the ultimate settlement of the General Motors case the corporation must pay a higher wage increase than Ford or Chrysler in order to compensate the General Motors workers for the hardship the corporation has forced upon them."

In Washington yesterday, Reuther told reporters: "We will not settle with GM for less than 19 1-2 cents."

Fact Board Asked In Power Dispute

Akron, Ohio, Jan. 27 (AP)—Alfred Yale, president of the Akron local of the CIO-Utility Workers of America, said tonight a strike set for 12.01 A.M. Wednesday against three Ohio power companies would go on unless the companies involved agree to establishment of a fact-finding board at a conference in Washington Tuesday with Lewis B. Schwellenbach, Secretary of Labor.

A Labor Department spokesman in Washington said tonight officials of three Ohio companies and a utility workers' union involved in a wage dispute had been invited to meet here Tuesday with Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach.

[The spokesman quoted Joseph Fisher, president of the CIO-United Utility Workers, as saying the union had agreed to postpone a strike called for Tuesday night pending the outcome of the conference. Approximately 8,000 workers are involved.]

Statement By Union

In a statement Yale declared:

"At a meeting in Akron today of representatives of the seven Ohio locals of the Utility Workers of America, involved in a wage dispute with the Ohio Edison Company, the Ohio Power Company and the Dayton Power and Light Company, it was unanimously agreed that strike action will be deferred pending the outcome of a conference being arranged by the Secretary of Labor.

"The first conference is called for Tuesday at 2 P.M. in Washington and it is hoped that at this conference the companies involved will agree to accept and put into effect a recommendation for a fact-finding board and avoid a shutdown of electric power set for Wednesday at 12.01 A.M.

"The strike will still go on unless the companies agree to a fact-finding board."

No Comment From Companies

Officials of all three companies said they had not received any notification from Schwellenbach concerning the Tuesday conference and declined comment pending receipt of such word.

Some 3,500 members of the union have threatened to walk out unless demands for a 20-cent hourly raise are met. The three concerns serve approximately 2,500,000 users in Ohio, including such large cities as Akron, Youngstown and Dayton.

Union Faces Injunction

Norton, Va., Jan. 27 (AP)—Judge George Morton at his home in Appalachia today issued a temporary injunction directed at Local 450 of the United Construction Workers, its president, W. W. Keith, and 57 others in an effort to prevent a shutdown of power facilities in Lee and Wise counties.

The injunction, requested by Attorney Fred B. Greear in behalf of the Old Dominion Power Company, would restrain the UCW local, Keith and the 57 others named from "interfering in any way with the production, generation and transmission and distribution of electric energy," Greear said.

Bridges Loses Jurisdictional Row in C. I. O.

Top Union Committee Gives Wolchok Unit Sole Right to Organize at Ward's

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (AP).—The Congress of Industrial Organizations jurisdiction committee ruled today that the United Retail Wholesale and Department Store Employees of America should have exclusive jurisdiction in the Montgomery Ward chain and other mail order chains.

At present the Montgomery Ward chain is now partly organized by the C. I. O. retail and wholesale workers, and partly by the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, another C. I. O. affiliate headed by Harry Bridges.

It was the committee's first major decision to resolve a jurisdictional conflict between member unions, the C. I. O. said in a statement.

The committee also ruled that warehouses owned and operated by retailers or wholesalers for their own exclusive use are an integral part of such retail or wholesale business and should be organized by the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employees union.

Committee's Statement

Exclusive jurisdiction in public warehouses which may be C. I. O. organized was given the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union by the jurisdictional committee.

In announcing its decision in the Montgomery Ward case the committee said:

"The union's weakness in the Montgomery Ward situation is because there is not unity or an all-encompassing trade union in the field. Where the warehousing is part of wholesale or retail business and is incidental to the major portion of the firm's business, the emphasis should be placed on the business rather than the skill.

"By that we mean that the emphasis should be placed on the industry and not on the type of work the individual is doing."

Wolchok Lauds Decision

John Green, president of the International Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, chairman of the committee, said in a statement that the committee expects to use all its powers to secure compliance with its decision and that it had ordered all unions affected to set up machinery to bring the decision into full force and effect.

In New York, Samuel Wolchok, president of the retail and wholesale workers, issued the following statement:

"The decision of the jurisdiction committee of the C. I. O. in granting complete and unquestionable juristdiction of mail order houses and specifically over Montgomery Ward to the U. R. W. D. S. E., C. I. O., is both wise and just.

"It is an expression of confidence and praise for the work so far performed in our union's campaign to bring the benefits of organization to the 76,000 employees of the Ward Company.

"We shall continue our campaign and extend ourselves even further than we have toward the successful attainment of our goal."

OFFICIALS CHEERED BY WAGE PACTS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 — (AP) Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach saw the Ford and Chrysler wage settlements yesterday as representing "a highly significant trend."

Optimism over prospects of a "break" in the long labor-management deadlock was equally unqualified in other government offices.

This view was tempered only slightly by the assertions of C.I.O.-United Automobile Workers officials that they would not accept the 18-cent hourly wage increase agreed on in Ford plants as the basis for ending the two-months-old General Motors strike.

Schwellenbach's opinion was expressed in a formal statement:

"The settlement of wage controversies between the Ford Motor company and the Chrysler corporation and the United Auto Workers-C.I.O. represents a highly significant trend."

"The companies and the union are to be commended in these settlements, which were arrived at through genuine collective bargaining between the parties.

"This and the conclusion of the glass strike last Monday and the St. Louis trucking strike last Friday plus a vote to return to work of the two unions in the packing industry pending a fact-finding report is one of the most important occurrences since the close of the war.

"In existing disputes in other major industries the American public will be served best through recognition by both the companies and the unions that speedy reconversion depends upon early settlement of their controversies. Full employment can be achieved only in this manner."

The strike of 750,000 C.I.O. United Steelworkers was virtually neglected in official interest, and the consensus was that seizure of that industry was unlikely in the immediate future in spite of the apparently complete stalemate of wage and price conferences.

Nevertheless it was known that the government was assembling data on company and individual plant operations for use if seizure were ultimately decided on, just as was done days in advance of the seizure of 134 plants in 30 states yesterday.

LEWIS SCHEDULED TO RESUME A. F. L. SEAT ON TUESDAY

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 27 — (AP) Leaders of the American Federation of Labor prepared today for a sort of homecoming.

John L. Lewis was coming back to take his seat formally among them, probably Tuesday morning. The effect was bracing to most of these leaders.

Regardless of Lewis' possible ideas about taking over leadership of the A.F.L. himself, they agreed the federation would be strengthened by his presence — at a time when the rival C.I.O. was waging a crucial struggle in steel, automotive and electrical manufacturing industries.

Labor Picture Clearing

None was willing to credit Lewis' move with the sudden clearing of the labor picture elsewhere, however, referring to the C.I.O.-Auto Workers' agreements with Ford and Chrysler and the decision of the bulk of Railroad Brotherhoods to arbitrate their wage differences.

The United Mine Workers' president was voted into membership on the 15-man executive council and he was motoring to Miami to accept the toga, nearly ten years after he led the revolt which gave birth to the C.I.O. He is expected here late Monday.

Some jurisdictional questions may arise over Lewis' District 50 unions, but he has agreed to give the executive council the final say on these matters. He insisted on a seat on the council before he would return to the federation.

The council has some other critical jurisdictional issues to settle this week before it adjourns. These involved the Hollywood movie industry, caught in a seven-month strike last year over chartering of special movie unions instead o. the old-line crafts, and the seven-year rift between the brewery workers and teamsters.

Brewers Return Pending

Return of the 50,000 brewery and soft drink workers to the federation, from which they were suspended seven years ago after a jurisdictional clash with Daniel J. Tobin's Teamsters, was anticipated if the executive council can straighten out present differences at a specially arranged conference with leaders of the brewery union.

The brewery workers' officers are expected here tomorrow.

Movie "Czar" Eric Johnston also was expected today or tomorrow for a conference with the council on the Hollywood situation. Clarification of the recent decision of an A.F.L. committee, which traced specific jurisdictional lines between the seven unions involved in the Hollywood dispute, has been asked by Johnston and by several of the unions.

CLARIFIED POLICY ASKED ON GERMANY

Clearer U. S. Attitude Seen as Test of Relations with Russia.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—(AP) The Foreign Policy Association today called for clarification of the United States' long-term attitude toward Germany as "one of the most important tests of this country's relations with Russia."

"Only when the United States has clarified its own policy toward Europe," the association said in a statement, "will it be able legitimately to question the policy of Russia and to propose constructive alternatives to the actual or assumed objectives of the Soviet government on the Continent."

The statement was based on a survey by the association's research director, Vera Micheles Dean, who said:

"The United States and Britain can legitimately ask Russia to clarify its policies, and to moderate its demands in various regions of the world where it has asserted its interest. But they must expect in turn that Russia will ask for similar clarification of our policies, and moderation of our claims to intervene in areas of the world where we claim political, strategic or economic interests.

"For example, when the western powers insist that Russia should encourage the establishment of democracy in Romania or Bulgaria, they must not be surprised if Moscow should insist on the establishment of democracy in Burma, or the Dominican Republic, which occupies a position in the United States sphere of influence and security comparable to that occupied by the Balkan countries in Russia's sphere. When the western powers demand that Russia should withdraw its troops from Iran, they should not consider it presumptuous of the Russians to question their intervention in Palestine, Indonesia or China.

"What has been most difficult for the United States and Britain to accept is the idea that Russia has become a world power, and intends to play the role of a world power exactly like its two partners among the Big Three.

"The long-term policy of the United States toward Germany will prove one of the most important tests of this country's relations with Russia. And U. S. plans with respect to Germany must be clarified, for which four measures are urgently needed. First, President Truman should state that the United States will participate in Allied control of Germany so long as it may proye to be necessary.

Special Office Urged

"Second, a special office for the administration of German occupation affairs should be created in Washington, to expedite decisions frequently held up in the past because of the pressure of other business, both foreign and domestic.

"Third, a civilian administration should be established by June 1, 1946, and competent men and women familiar with Germany's problems, capable of speaking German, and prepared to accept long-term service abroad, should be recruited for this purpose without delay. The government should be urged to provide for this specialized civil service salaries comparable to compensation for similar professional services at home.

"Fourth, a definite contingent of regular army forces should be assigned for duty in Germany, preferably on a rotation basis, and with the opportunity to bring their families."

ROBERTS CALLED BEFORE PROBERS

Pearl Harbor Investigation Chief to Testify Today.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—(AP) Former Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts will be called before the Congressional Pearl Harbor Investigating Committee tomorrow to tell about his spot checkup of the Dec. 7, 1941, Japanese attack.

Roberts headed a board of inquiry that went to Hawaii shortly after the raid that plunged this country into the war. The joint congressional committee wants to know, among other things, whether his findings were published in full.

Navy Officers Called

Roberts will be preceded by Capt. M. Zacharias, former naval intelligence officer, who will be asked about his reported prediction, prior to the Pearl Harbor attack, that the Japanese would strike at Hawaii on a Sunday.

As already shown by their questions and remarks, the Republicans and Democrats on the committee are widely divided as to just whom or what to blame.

An informal poll today showed no discernable sentiment now—and the list of witnesses is running out—to place anything like full responsibility on Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short and Rear Adm. Husband E. Kimmel, the army and navy commanders in Hawaii at the time.

Both Criticized

The Board of Inquiry headed by Roberts criticized both commanders but they have contended, in testimony before the congressional committee, that their Washington superiors were at fault.

Whatever the result, Chairman Barkley (D-Ky) told his colleagues as they concluded questioning Short yesterday he believed that the committee had done a service by airing all of the testimony in public hearings.

"The public probably will have made up its own mind about it even before we do," he said.

BRIDGES ATTACKS TRUMAN BUDGET

Senator Terms President's Outline Masterpiece of Deception.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—(AP) Senator Bridges (R-N.H.) today called President Truman's budget "a masterpiece of deception" and said that instead of declining, the public debt will rise $15,100,000,000 in the next 18 months.

Bridges, No. 1 Republican on the Senate Appropriations committee, said in a statement:

"The President made every effort to have taxpayers believe that the Federal government will grow financially stronger during the next 18 months of his administration. It will in fact become dangerously weaker."

Budget Assailed

Calling the budget presentation "a blueprint for continued waste of the taxpayers' and bond buyers' funds," Bridges declared the administration is figuring on reducing its gross debt by dissipating its cash balance. He said that is like drawing on a savings account to meet an overdraft on a checking account.

The President estimated in his budget message a week ago that no increase in the national debt would be necessary in the fiscal year beginning next July 1. He estimated expenditures of $35,800,000,000, net receipts of $31,500,000,000, and said the estimated difference of $4,300,000,000 would be met "by a reduction in the very substantial balance which will be in the treasury during the next fiscal year."

Bridges said the figures show clearly that a cash balance of $26,000,000,000 in the treasury at the end of 1945 will be melted away to $3,200,000,000 by June 30, 1947, with the net debt rising steadily.

Asserting that the budget can and should be balanced, Bridges said a deficit of $4,300,000,000 is "unwarranted and inexcusable."

"No budgetary manipulation can substitute for thrift and efficient management," he said. "Real Federal debt reduction can come only by government living within its means."

Specific Criticisms Made

The Republican Senator had a number of specific criticisms.

"Why is it necessary to increase the civil departments and agencies expenditures to $1,500,000,000 from $1,200,000,000 in 1946?" he asked. "Aren't Federal payrolls and non-essential bureaucratic activities already over-inflated?"

"Why must $1,100,000,000 be spent on public works at a time when industrial activity, if it were freed from Federal oppression, could provide all the jobs and facilities that are needed?"

He said the President had asked $16,000,000,000 for the armed forces when Congress and the army and navy have not determined their requirements; that $1,750,000,000 is up for international finance—depends on congressional action on loan requests, and that if Congress approves all the President's suggestions for social betterment and similar improvements, a $1,500,000,000 item will prove insufficient.

PAPERS PRAISED FOR SUPPORT IN WAR FINANCING

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—(AP) S. George Little, who finishes up a money-raising job at the treasury next Friday, praised American newspapers today for "amazing" support of the "most successful war financing job the world has ever known."

Little's resignation as special newspaper consultant to the war finance division becomes effective Friday. He has been on leave as president of General Features Corp., New York city.

Vast Job Cited

In a letter to newspaper publishers, he cited today the 318,543,000 lines of news and editorial support which newspapers gave during the war and victory loan drives. In addition, he said, they published more than $110,000,000 worth of bond advertising, much of it contributed or sold to sponsors at reduced rates.

"This amazing contribution by newspapers, to help finance and win the toughest war in history," Little said, "should make every newspaperman proud of his profession—proud, too, of the leadership and patriotism of his associates—but most of all, proud of the glorious war record that newspapers made which will go a long way toward furthering the cause of a free press throughout the world.

"There has never been more convincing proof of what a free press can accomplish when its energies are voluntarily marshalled in a common cause for the good of mankind. Newspapers' great war record should stand as a lasting monument—a symbol—representing, forever, to a free people the virtues of free speech and a free press.

"During the war years newspapers had more problems than ever before yet there was never a time when the treasury called upon them for help that they failed to come through."

Thanks Extended

For their "invaluable asistance," Little extended to newspapers, news services, all newspaper organizations and their personnel the thanks of Secretary of the Treasury Vinson; Ted R. Gamble, director of the war finance division; Chairman Frank E. Tripp of the Allied Newspaper Council, and other treasury officials.

Little joined the war finance division Jan. 31, 1944. He handled newspaper advertising, press operations, a war loan news desk, bond program public relations for former Secretary Morgenthau and for the entire war financing program.

War Held Costly To Birds, Whales

Washington, Jan. 27 (AP)—The Interior Department reported today that "thousands of auks, murres, puffins, sea gulls and ducks" perished during the war along with "unknown quantities of whales."

The auks, murres, etc., were victims of oil on the sea "which penetrates the feathers and ruins them as waterproof coverings." (That means they sank.)

The whales were said to "have been killed in the course of submarine warfare." And the whale is, the department reminded, "the most valuable animal in existence."

Part Of Annual Report

The report on wildlife casualties was published in the annual accounting by various agencies in the department headed by Harold L. Ickes.

Other points it touched on included: Continental fish and wildlife may well have benefited by the cutdown on hunting and fishing during the war.

Five Years Needed

De-jungleizing of Pacific islands destroyed many nesting grounds for sea birds "and perhaps even extinguished at least two species, Thelayasan Island rail and Laysan Island finch."

It will take at least five years to determine the extent of war-caused losses of offshore wildlife "and to effectuate measures for recovery wherever the possibilities of recovery appear hopeful."

May Decide on Yamashita

Supreme Court Opinion in Case Is Possible Today

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (AP).—The Supreme Court, after a two-week recess devoted to opinion writing, may be ready tomorrow to announce its decision on the fate of Japanese General Yamashita.

The tribunal has had Yamashita's appeals under consideration since hearing lengthy argument three weeks ago. Tomorrow is a regular opinion day for handing down decisions.

The enemy general was condemned to death on the gallows for condoning atrocities by his troops in the Philippines. He contended the American military commission which tried him in Manila had no authority in his case.

Women Indorse Gen. MacArthur

Washington, Jan. 27 (AP) — The twentieth annual Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense today indorsed General MacArthur's administration over Japan, and condemned "interference by any group or nation seeking to weaken his authority."

The conference did not specify those it regarded as interfering with MacArthur.

Representing 32 women's groups in the nation, the conference also recommended that the United States occupy all its "stepping-stone" bases, conquered on the road to Tokyo, in the name of the United Nations.

Radicals Criticized

The future peace of the world is safe only if the Pacific islands are kept from aggressor nations, the conference resolution added.

Without singling out any organization, the women also recommended an increase in funds for the Congressional Committee an Un-American Activities, to combat "tremendous expansive subversive groups."

These radicals, committee members said, seek "destruction of our Government."

The resolution failed to name any radical organization but committee members said "everyone knows who they are, and what they are trying to do."

Other Resolutions Approved

The conference approved the American Legion plan for universal military training.

Other resolutions, approved at the close of a two-day conference, recommended restrictions on immigration and tightening rather than relaxing of present laws "because of the need of seeing that full employment be given veterans; opposed the merger of the armed forces into a single department of defense until there has been further study and opposed Federal aid to education in the states as long as "there are strings attached to the aid."

The conference included representatives of such groups as the American Legion Auxiliary, the Disabled American Veterans' Auxiliary, the Daughters of American Revolution and the Daughters of the Confederacy.

Legion Charges Veteran Prejudice

Washington, Jan. 27 (AP)—The American Legion today accused the civilian branches of the Army and Navy of "gross evasion and misinterpretation" of the Veterans' Preference Act of 1944.

Ralph H. Lavers, director of the Legion's employment division, said in a statement that he has received more than 200 complaints against civilian personnel administrators in navy yards and permanent war department establishments for "discrimination against veterans of World Wars I and II."

He said he is bringing the matter to the attention of the secretaries of war and navy as well as to Congress.

"Cases are found," he said, "wherein veterans who have been employed by these departments for years and who have carried 'excellent' ratings suddenly find themselves with an unexplained inferior classification.

"Thus, when the number of employés of these Federal staffs are reduced in size, these veterans against whom there has been discrimination are the first to be dismissed from their jobs."

Lavers' statement did not give any reason for the asserted discrimination, and there was no immediate comment by the War or Navy departments.

100,000,000° Heat, 100-Ft. Wave May Hit Atom Bomb Test Fleet

1,000-Mile-an-Hour Wind in Lagoon Is Expected by Scientists Studying Previous Explosions; Surface Blast May Cause Radioactivity

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The atom bomb target fleet may be pummeled by thousand-mile-an-hour winds, hundred-foot waves and steel-fusing temperatures.

Navy and Army experts preparing for the joint tests have available extensive information gleaned from the studies made of the three bombs so far exploded—the initial test in New Mexico and the two attacks on Japan.

Here are some of the factors the naval, military and scientific experts have observed or anticipated:

1. Following in the wake of the initial pressure blast of hundreds of thousands of pounds a square inch at the core of the explosion is a true wind running up from 500 to 1,000 miles an hour—a wind of short duration but great intensity. (Any wind above seventy-five miles an hour is of hurricane force.)

2. In the second test, where the bomb is detonated at the surface of the sea, it is expected a wave measuring as much as 100 feet from trough to crest may race outward.

3. In the very center of the so-called "ball of fire," a hot mass measuring about a third of a mile across, scientists believe heat up to 100,000,000 degrees Fahrenheit may develop. This temperature, of course, drops sharply as heat waves progress outward from the core but still remains highly destructive. At Hiroshima, American scientists have reported, virtually all persons within about one mile of the bomb who were not killed by mechanical causes were burned fatally or seriously.

4. At the instant of explosion there is emitted a huge quantity of radiation. These radium-like waves killed inhabitants of Hiroshima and Nagasaki who were directly under the bomb, affecting the blood-forming tissues and causing the blood to seep out through apparently undamaged skin and to drain into internal cavities. American military officials and scientists say there was virtually no residual effect from these rays in the two Japanese attacks. The bombs were exploded in mid-air and the rays dissipated too much to linger in the earth.

However, some scientists estimate that a bomb used on the surface, as in the second planned test, can deposit an enormous amount of radioactivity, equivalent to tons of radium. That menace has led the test planners to take elaborate precautions against accidents, including the evacuation of islanders in near-by areas who might be reached by radioactive water of clouds drifting out from the Bikini Atoll explosion.

Most scientists are confident that there is not even a remote prospect of a chain reaction from the bomb which would spread outward either through the air or the sea, and affect far-away areas.

Indications are that in the first test, where the bomb will be exploded several hundred feet in the air, the initial effect against the anchored target effect may be a hammer-like blow downward. In the Japanese cities, walls of some buildings directly under the burst were left intact when the pressure blew straight down, but the roofs and floors were crushed into the ground.

Effect on Steel Structures

Some clew as to the effect on steel structures was obtained at Nagasaki. There the steel frame structures of the Mitsubishi torpedo works were collapsed by the pressure wave.

Those in charge of the test decline to give the exact pattern for anchoring the target fleet in the lagoon. They have said, however, that some capital ships will be located in the center, near the bomb burst point.

Because it is desired to make studies of effects ranging all the way from complete destruction to comparatively minor damage, the fleet will be spread out over a wide area, with recording instruments to show what happens.

McMAHON ASKS CHANGE IN ATOM BOMB CONTROL

HARTFORD, Jan. 27—(AP) Senator McMahon (D-Conn) proposed last night that construction of new surface vessels be postponed until after scheduled atomic bomb tests are made in the Marshall Islands.

The chairman of the Senate's Atomic Energy Committee said in an address broadcast over WTIC here that the results of this test "will have a predominant effect upon all of our relations with other nations."

Meanwhile, he urged that Congress take speedy steps to transfer to civilian direction the present military control over atomic energy to quiet world fears.

"We have military control now," he said, "and the world fears it. It will continue to fear it, until we take the development of atomic power out of the sole hands of the War and Navy departments and put it where it belongs, in the hands of the people through their Congress, which is responsible to the people for the policies of the United States."

MARINES TO REVIEW OFFICER APPLICATIONS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 — (AP) General A. A. Vandegrift, Marine commandant, announced tonight a board had been appointed to select and recommend temporary officers for regular commissions and warrants in the Marine corps.

It will begin to review applications early next month, "possibly in advance of enactment of proposed legislation" to fix the Marines peacetime strength at 100,000 men and 8,000 officers, Vandegrift said in a statement.

VETS' AIDE APPOINTED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—(AP) The Veterans Administration today announced the appointment of Dr. Robert C. Cook, 59, as acting deputy medical director of the medicine and surgery department. Dr. Cook, a veteran of two world wars, was formerly deputy administrator in charge of the V.A. Denver office.

UP To Stop News For U.S. Program

New York, Jan. 27 (AP)—The United Press said today it would discontinue its wartime news services to the State Department, the Office of War Information and the Office of Inter-American Affairs on February 16.

In an announcement made by its president, Hugh Baillie, the United Press said it was the UP program to terminate all arrangements for use of its news which may have been made as a matter of wartime co-operation with any government, if upon scrutiny they are found to be serving government propaganda purposes.

On January 16 the UP announced its intention to discontinue the wartime news services, but action was supended at the request of William Benton, Assistant Secretary of State, to allow time for further discussion.

"Propaganda Program" Cited

"We desire to be completely disassociated from the State Department's propaganda program," Baille said. "The great strength of the American press associations always has been that they were not identified, even indirectly, with Government propaganda. Thus the American press associations have developed into vital national assets.

"If the State Department wants to open an official American agency to distribute news abroad, that will be the concern of the Congress and the American people. But our participation in any such program would be an historic step — backward."

Baillie said the UP would continue providing service to the State Department for the private information of United States diplomats here and abroad, but that this service was started six years before Pearl Harbor.

In Washington, Benton said that "Mr. Baillie's decision to cancel the service is highly regrettable and comes as a natural result of the action and statement of the AP's board of directors."

ALLIES JOIN SEARCH FOR 20,000 MISSING

Mead Says U. S. Will Use All Possible Means to Account for All Lost Service Men

BUFFALO, Jan. 27 (AP)—Senator Mead of New York, chairman of the Senate War Investigating Committee, said tonight that "the military forces of all Allied governments have joined teams of the United States Army in combing the war areas of Europe and the Pacific for the 20,000 Ground Force and Air Force men listed as missing."

Declaring in a statement that the War and Navy Departments "must exhaust all possible means to eliminate the word 'missing' from every case history." Senator Mead said he had demanded that the search be continued "well beyond the departure of our military forces from both Europe and the Far East."

"We will not have finished our mission until an accounting has been made of each individual missing service man," Mr. Mead said.

He said he had been informed by Col. George F. Herbert, Chief of the War Department's Casualty Branch, that "practically all" personnel found in Japanese prison camps had been returned to their military units, adding:

"Colonel Herbert explained that some names are being received of individuals who have been found in territory formerly occupied by the Japanese."

Senator Mead said Colonel Her-

U. S.-LOCAL PLAN URGED ON HOUSING

CHICAGO, Jan. 27—(AP) A joint Federal-local program to break housing bottlenecks and provide accommodations for veterans as promptly as possible was outlined today by the American Municipal Association.

Under a plan drawn up by association executives who met last week with national housing officials in Washington, every mayor in the country has been asked to appoint an emergency housing committee to expedite construction at the local level.

The committees are to represent financial, business, labor, contractor, welfare, educational and other interests.

The group recommended at the Washington meeting that Congress enact legislation immediately to provide direct Federal aid to municipalities for conversion. Other action suggested included:

"Passage of legislation to meet the housing emergency and all phases of the long-term problem, including slum clearance."

Release for employment of skilled construction workers in the army and navy "as soon as possible."

Intensification of efforts to speed production of building materials, and channeling by the Civilian Production Administration of the materials into housing construction.

Liberalizing of rent ceilings "to encourage private construction of small dwellings for rent."

"Strong efforts to halt inflation and black marketing in housing and building materials."

RUSSIA REQUESTS SHELVING OF IRAN APPEAL TO UNO

Security Council Adjourns Without Reaching Decision on Issue.

NEGOTIATION PROPOSED

Soviet Official Asks Dispute Be Solved by Two Nations.

(PARIS)

LONDON, Jan. 28—(AP)—Russi asked the United Nations Security Council tonight to shelve Iran's appeal to the United Nations Organization and let the two nations solve their dispute by negotiation after Iran's chief delegate had charged the Soviet Union with interference in the internal affairs of his country.

Without reaching a decision, the 11-nation council adjourned a three-hour debate on its first major issue until 3 p. m. (10:00 a. m. EST) Wednesday.

The Soviet vice commissar of foreign affairs, Andrei Y. Vishinsky, declared that Iran charges had been "raised by a government no longer in power, and the claims have not sufficient grounds for action by the council."

Sidetracking Urged

Just before Vishinsky spoke, the Iranian chief delegate, S. H. Taqizadeh, charged that "there have been a number of interventions in Iranian affairs by Soviet authorities."

Greece Next on Agenda.

In effect, he asked the council, which is empowered by the UNO to settle disputes by peaceful or military means, to prevent further "intervention."

In Teheran, Iran, Premier Ahmed Qavam es Saltaneh announced he had instructed the Iran UNO delegation to discuss the Persian complaint against Russia with Vishinsky.

Meanwhile, the Greek Ambassador to Britain, T. Aghnides, filed with the Security Council a statement by the Greek foreign affairs committee defending the presence of British troops in Greece. Russia has asked the Security Council to investigate the Greek situation on grounds that it is a threat to peace and security.

Greece. Russia has asked the Security council to investigate the Greek situation on the grounds that it is a threat to peace and security. The dispute is on the council's agenda.

Greek Delegate Leaves

The statement was filed shortly before Greek Foreign Minister John Sophianopoulis left by plane for Athens to discuss the Albanian UNO membership application which Greece opposes. It said the Greek government had acquiesced to "the pressure of British forces solely because they clearly understand that no threat whatever could result from friendly collaboration with those forces."

The foreign minister suggested that Britain and Russia held direct talks to iron out Russia's protest on the presence of British troops in Greece.

The Greek situation is scheduled to come before the council after the Iran affair has been handled. The Soviet Ukraine's complaint regarding the British military actions in Indonesia will come up after discussion of the Greek case.

Iran Requests Made

In presenting the Iranian case, Taqizadeh made four specific requests to the Security council:

That it recommended adherence to the terms of Iran's 1942 treaty with Russia, providing for withdrawal of troops from Iran.

That Soviet authorities take no action in Iran contrary to the Tehran declaration, made by Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin, guaranteeing the independence of Iran.

That Soviet authorities in no way interfere with Iranian forces.

That the Soviets withdraw alleged "moral and material" support from the insurgent movement in the province of Azerbaijan.

Meanwhile, after the United States supported a British proposal that the important and urgent problem of refugees "be referred to the economic and social council," Yugoslavia introduced another resolution stating flatly that there was no refugee problem.

The only refugees who should be helped by an international organization, the Yugoslavs contended were the Spanish Republicans.

No action was taken on either the British or Yugoslav proposals

IRAN'S CHARGES ARGUED BEFORE WORLD COUNCIL

Delegate in Dramatic Plea Accuses Soviet of Many Acts of Intervention.

VISHINSKY REPLIES PROMPTLY

Challenges Validity of Complaint Raised by a Government No Longer in Power.

(4TGOTOWER)

London, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—A. H. Taqizadeh, Iranian delegate to the United Nations Organization, today declared in the course of a dramatic personal appeal before the Security Council that "there have been a number of interventions in Iranian affairs by the Soviet authorities" and that he was bringing Iran's dispute with Russia before the council because, if left unsettled, it might lead to international friction.

Russia promptly challenged the validity of the appeal. Andrei Y. Vishinsky, the Soviet Vice-Commissar for Foreign Affairs, told the council, holding its first major hearing on a political issue between sovereign nations, that the Iranian charges were raised by a Government no longer in power and that the claims themselves do not offer sufficient grounds for action by the council.

A new Iranian Premier, Ahmed Qavam es Saltaneh, took office in Tehran over the week end. He is known to be friendly to Russia.

Iranian's Appeal.

Taqizadeh appeared at the council table at the invitation of all the eleven members, after Vishinsky had made it clear that he had agreed at this time only to a discussion of whether the council should formally take jurisdiction in the case. He reserved the right to press his request, previously filed, that the dispute be left to direct negotiations between Teheran and Moscow.

Taqizadeh told the council that in Russian-occupied Azerbaijan, northern province of Iran, the Iranian Government has been prevented from exercising any power whatsoever. The Russians set up internal barriers at the frontier of their so-called zone he continued, and Iran had tolerated this during the war but now "an end should be made in these interferences in Iranian sovereignty." His argument in general followed the line of previous Iranian complaints to the council. He made no reference to Iran's recent change of Government, or to the possibility that the new Premier, Ahmed Qavam, may favor direct negotiations with Moscow.

[In Tehran today Ahmed Qavam announced that he had instructed the Iranian delegation to the UNO to discuss Iran's complaint with Vishinsky. He added that he had cabled these instructions to Ali Sodeily, who was the Iranian Premier at the time of the Big Three Conference at Tehran, and who speaks Russian well and is a friend of Vishinsky's.]

Makes Four Demands.

Taqizadeh told the council that Iran allowed herself to be used as a transportation route for Soviet war supplies and contributed supplies of her own to Russia, to the detriment of the Iranian people's welfare. He demanded (1) that the Security Council recommend strict adherence to Russia's 1942 treaty with Iran, providing for the withdrawal of troops; (2) that the council insist that the Soviet authorities observe the Tehran Declaration made by Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin, guaranteeing the independence of Iran; (3) that the Soviet authorities in no way interfere with the Iranian forces; and (4) that Russia withdraw all moral and material support from the insurgent movement in the Province of Azerbaijan.

Taqizadeh said that direct negotiations with Moscow had produced no results and that the attitude of the Soviet Government is directly contrary to the 1942 treaty of alliance.

"I am confident," he said, "that in the spirit of justice which animates the new world organization, the Security Council will grant Iran's request that, pending the withdrawal of forces, Iran should have full freedom of action in her own territory."

Vishinsky Replies.

In reply, Vishinsky asked specifically that the council "leave the matter aside and open for Big Three conference at Tehran Sodeily, a friend of Vishinsky speaks Russian well.

Sodeily said today he had not received the premier's cable but pointed out that an order to talk with Vishinsky would not necessarily be an order to drop Iran's case before the security council.

Another Iran delegate, Nasrullah Entezam, told newsmen after Taqizadeh's speech that instructions were received last night from the new government to proceed with the case as originally planned.

Earlier today the Council debated for an hour whether to take up an Albanian request for membership, deciding in the end to delay action. Meanwhile, the Greek Ambassador to Great Britain, A. Aghnides, filed with the Council a statement by the Greek Foreign Affairs Committee supporting the presence of British troops in Greece.

solution" by direct negotiation.

"This would be more just and fair and would be in the spirit of good neighbors," he declared.

Russia, he continued, wants cordial relations with all nations, has never refused to negotiate with Tehran, and under the UNO charter the method of direct negotiation is the one which should first be applied to a dispute.

"It is much too early to say that the parties to the dispute cannot come to terms between themselves," he concluded. "The refusal to continue negotiations came from the Iranian side and not the Soviet side. We were and are prepared to continue these negotiations."

Instructions Cabled

In Tehran, Iran, Premier Ahmed Qavam es Saltaneh announced he had instructed the Iran UNO delegation to discuss the Persian complaint against Russia with Vishinsky. Qavam said the instructions were cabled to Ali Sodeily, who was Iranian premier at the time of the U.S. May Get Involved

London, Jan. 28 (AP)—As the United Nations Security Council prepared to go into session today, informed sources said the United States might find itself involved in the Iranian dispute, as well as in the discussion of charges brought by Russia and the Ukraine that Britain is interfering in Greece and Indonesia.

The United States's views on Iran were cited Saturday night in a note filed by the Iranian delegation, which said that charges of Russian interference in Iranian affairs could be "fully proved." The note pointed out that the United States had favored the withdrawal weeks ago of both British and Russian troops from the oil-rich little country. The last American troops already have left Iran.

May Claim U.S. Support

Diplomats speculated that Britain might claim American support of her policies in Greece and Indonesia.

British officials, in private talks recently, have laid considerable emphasis on United States commitments to observe the forthcoming elections in Greece and to use United States Army personnel in observation teams.

It also was pointed out that the British have stated officially that their troops are in Indonesia by order of the British-American chiefs of staff and under the command of General MacArthur.

Greek Wants Direct Talks

[Greek Foreign Minister John Sophianopoulis suggested today that Great Britain and Russia hold direct talks to settle the Soviet protest to the United Nations that the presence of British troops in Greece is endangering world security.

[In a statement issued just before returning to Greece, the Foreign Minister said British forces "are collaborating with the Greek authorities with a view to the gradual restoration of order and the securing of a free expression of the people's will."]

Iranians Use Strong Language

The language used by the Iranian delegates in their note Saturday was as strong as any used at this session of the General Assembly. Russian sources said the note was the swan song of the Government of resigned Premier Ibrahim Hakimi.

To Russia's flat denial that she had intervened in Iranian affairs, the note declared that Russia's refusal to allow Iran's troops to move freely in their own country was "clearly a breech of the Tripartite Alliance of 1942 and the declaration of Tehran, by which the Allied cause undertook to respect the territorial integrity, sovereignty and political independence of Iran."

Meanwhile, the United Nations trusteeship committee decided today to name a subcommittee to take up the flood of suggestions on machinery for making agreements on trust territories.

Dulles States Views

Some delegates have contended that only geographical neighbors were directly concerned.

John Foster Dulles, the American delegate, said after the session that the United States held firmly to its view that no precise definition should be made in advance. A country which felt, after a trusteeship accord had been made in a particular case, that it should have been represented could present its view to the General Assembly, he said, and if one third of the Assembly agreed the accord would have to be renegotiated. The objecting country then would be included in the new talks, Dulles said.

Iran Delegates Will Talk To Vishinsky

Tehran, Jan. 28 (AP)—Premier Ahmed Oavam es Saltaneh announced today he had instructed the Iranian United Nations delegation to discuss Iran's complaint against Russia with Soviet Vice Commissar Andrei Vishinsky, head of the Russian UNO delegation.

The Premier said the instructions had been cabled to Ali Sodeily, who was Iranian Premier at the time of the "Big Three" conference at Tehran.

Sodeily is a friend of Vishinsky and speaks Russian well.

U.N.O. Committee Acts To Bar Franco Treaties

Agrees to Limit Registration to Anti-Fascist States

LONDON, Jan. 28 (AP).—Demetrio Porras, Panamanian delegate, today won approval in the United Nations legal committee for his proposal that only "peace-loving and anti-Fascist" governments be invited to send international treaties to the U. N. O. Secretariat.

Porras said he desired to know whether Generalissimo Francisco Franco of Spain would be invited to "send in his dishonest international treaties," thus "violating" the Potsdam agreement and the U. N. O. charter.

Robert Jimenez, head of the Panamanian delegation, who was acting as chairman of the legal committee, agreed to have the secretary redraft a resolution which originally said the government of any non-member state should be asked to register agreements. The secretary was directed to make the text read, "To invite the governments of peace-loving and anti-Fascist states not members of the United Nations" to send treaties for registration.

ITALIAN BORDER TALKS STARTED

Claims of France, Austria and Yugoslavia Heard.

(LEWIS)

London, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Deputy Foreign Ministers of the victorious nations sat down today to discuss defeated Italy's boundaries with France, Austria and Yugoslavia in the first down-to-earth meeting of the Italian peace treaty. The deputies have been meeting for about a week, but up to now they have been merely reviewing decisions reached by the Foreign Ministers' Council last September.

It was learned authoritatively that Austria has sent in a written brief detailing her claims to part of the South Tyrol, which is inhabited by about 250,000 German-speaking persons and was awarded to Italy after the first world war.

France has minor border changes to press and officials at the conference said they thought France would win her claim to a mountainous strip in the Aosta valley in northwestern Italy.

No action is expected on the political issue of the Yugoslav frontier until a committee representing France, the United States, Great Britain and Russia visits the disputed Venezia Giulia area of northeastern Italy and makes its report.

Peace Conference May 1.

Authoritative informants said they thought a proposed treaty with Austria would be negotiated through diplomatic channels, because the Foreign Ministers' representatives must complete treaties with Italy, Bulgaria, Romania, Hungary and Finland by May 1 for submisson to the twenty-one-nation peace conference in Paris. Preliminary negotiations for the treaty with Austria, it was said, already are under way in Moscow and Washington.

United States representatives were optimistic that an early agreement would be reached relative to Italy's new frontiers, but said there was no sign of an agreement relative to the future of Italian colonies. The United States has proposed a United Nations Organization trusteeship over the colonies for ten years, with independence at the end of that time, but Russia has asked sole trusteeship over Tripolitania.

British Negotiation With Egypt Reported

London, Jan. 28 (AP)—The British Government was reported today to have offered to negotiate with Egypt for settlement of her demands for full independence and the evacuation of British troops from Egyptian territory.

A reliable source said a British note, replying to an Egyptian request of December 20 for revision of treaty relations, had been handed to the Egyptian Embassy over the week end.

Disclosure of the British action followed an announcement that Egypt would not carry her demands before the United Nations. The announcement caused three members of the Egyptian Cabinet to resign Saturday by way of protest, precipitating a Cabinet crisis that was resolved last night when they withdrew their resignations after a conference with King Farouk.

PALESTINE INQUIRY GETS ZIONIST PLEA

London, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Rabbi Kopul Rosen, spokesman for the Federation of Synagogues in Great Britain, pleaded with the Anglo-American Committee on Palestine: "In the name of God, don't play politics with the remnants of the Jewish people. . . . There will be no peace in the world unless you have an indivisibility of justice.

"So long as we have no guaranty that what happened in Europe during the last six years will not happen again, then any United Nations Organization must be a hollow sham and a mockery," he continued. "The problem of the Jewish people can only be solved by their return to Israel."

Nathan Jackson, secretary of the Jewish Socialist Labor party of Great Britain, asked the committee for the immediate designation of Palestine as a Jewish State, asserting: "A further dispersal of the Jews would be wrong. We are entitled to ask the world to allow us to concentrate our people in one place, where we cannot only alleviate the plight of the individual, but give out people a new status in the world."

BRITONS TO WATCH ATOM BOMB TESTS

London, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Attlee told Commons today that British military observers would watch the United States atom-bomb tests of warships in the Pacific in May.

He said United States authorities were being consulted about the British observers. He brushed aside as "a different question altogether" the query of a Conservative member who wanted to know "whether Britain has any rights in the atomic bomb at all now."

Kiev Court Dooms 10 Nazis

London, Jan. 28 (AP)—The Moscow radio said tonight that a Kiev military tribunal sentenced twelve German officers to death by hanging after their conviction as war criminals for mass killings and property destruction in the Ukrainian Republic. Three others received fifteen to twenty year prison terms.

ATTLEE BARS CUT IN BRITISH RATIONS

London, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Attlee today refused to support cuts in the English food ration to help feed Europe better.

"Any further increase in food supplies for the relief of Europe must come from the food exporting countries," he said in reply to a memorial urging that general rations in this country should not be raised as long as there is famine in Europe.

Attlee said there was little prospect of substantially more food for England, but that the Government might find it necessary to provide some variation of the present monotonous and unexciting diet in order to secure increased production at home.

BOURNEMOUTH, England, Jan. 28 (AP)—British-American babies, on the first leg of their journey to the United States, slept or squalled tonight, depending upon their mood, in a luxury seafront hotel that once was one of Britain's most popular American Red Cross leave centers.

The swank Carlton Hotel now contains 127 of the more than 20,000 American soldiers' children who, with their British mothers, are awaiting trans-Atlantic ships.

All those now being processed are to be among the 2,400 mothers and babies who will depart Feb. 3 on the Queen Mary. Three months is the minimum age for babies, and many now at the Carlton just made it.

FRENCH CABINET ACTS TO EASE FOOD PROBLEM

PARIS, Jan. 28—(AP) President Felix Gouin's new cabinet took its first step towards alleviating the food problem tonight by designating Leon Blum, veteran Socialist statesman, as "ambassador extraordinary" to negotiate agreements with the United States with a view to increasing imports.

A government spokesman said the second cabinet session was devoted primarily to discussion of a proposed financial retrenchment program.

PARIS POST WILL QUIT

Decision to Cease Publication Follows Pressmen's Strike

PARIS, Jan. 28 (AP)—The Paris Post, affiliate of The New York Post, will cease publication almost immediately, General Manager Robert Pell said today.

The newspaper, the only English-language afternoon daily in Paris, has been unable to publish since Friday because of a strike of rotary pressmen which has affected most newspapers in the city.

In New York, T. O. Thackrey, editor of The New York Post, issued this statement:

"In the changing conditions created on one hand by the rapid departure of our American soldier public from Europe and on the other by the probability that there will be few American civilians traveling in Europe for at least another year, we prefer to suspend publication rather than lower the quality of the newspaper."

BABY MURDER LAID TO NAZIS

Children Tossed Alive Into Furnaces, Court Is Told

Nuernberg, Germany, Jan. 28 (AP). A blond French widow who spent days and nights of terror at the Oswiecim extermination camp today told the international military tribunal that children were tossed alive into cremation furnaces because the Nazis "ran out of gas" for the camp's execution chambers.

Mme. Marie Claude Vaillant-Couturier, 33, Communist member of the French Constituent Assembly who spent two and one half years in concentration camps gazed coldly at the ranking Nazis in the prisoners' dock when she took the witness stand and began telling a story of horror that kept even the prisoners spellbound.

Mass Murder On Vast Scale

"One night," she testified, "we were awakened by horrible cries. The next morning we learned from men working in the gas chamber that they had run out of gas and had hurled children alive into the furnaces."

She told of mass murder on so vast a scale that the German guards were unable to count the thousands marched to the gas chambers after being sorted out on railroad platforms.

"When a convoy of Jewish women arrived, older women, mothers and those who were weak or sick were sorted out and taken immediately to be gassed," the witness said. "Women 20 to 30 years old were sent to experimental blocks."

She explained that Nazi doctors in these blocks worked on experiments intended to devise a swift, sure means of sterilization.

A Hanging Set To Music

Additional concentration camp horrors were described by other witnesses as the French continued their case against the Nazis.

Francois Boix, veteran of the Spanish civil war on the Loyalist side who worked in the identity section of the prison under SS photographers, told of the hanging of an Austrian Jew at Mauthausen while the camp's inmates watched and an orchestra played a popular tune. Boix submitted photos of the hanging.

Boix said the prisoner had been recaptured after a break from Mauthausen murder house. He was brought back to camp in a cart usually reserved for outgoing corpses and on its side in German was the legend:

"All birds come home to roost."

The captured fugitive then was paraded before the assembled inmates while the orchestra played a popular French song.

Boix said the Austrian then was pulled up on the gallows. The orchestra switched to an American tune as the prisoners gazed at the execution.

Civilians Knew, Witnesses Say

Mme. Vaillant-Couturier and two other French witnesses, Lieut. Jean Vieth and Dr. Victor Dupont, insisted that the German population was fully cognizant of the horrifying conditions within the extermination centers.

The three said the German civilians could see convoys of prisoners entering the inclosures and many German workers had contact with prisoner labor gangs whose members told what was happening inside.

TELLS OF NAZI ABUSE TO JEWS

Witness Says They Didn't Even Count Victims.

Nuernberg, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Jews marked for extermination at the Oswiecim (Auschwitz) Concentration Camp arrived in such numbers that German guards did not even trouble to count the thousands whom they sorted out on the railroad platforms and marched directly to the gas chambers, the International Military Tribunal was told today.

Mme. Marie Claude Vaillant-Couturier, slender 33-year-old French widow, Communist member of France's Constituent Assembly, told the war crimes court in graphic detail of her two and a half years in Nazi concentration camps, an account which held even the defendants spellbound.

"One night," she testified, "we were awakened by horrible cries. The next morning we learned from men working in the gas chamber that they had run out of gas and had hurled children alive into the furnaces."

She Watched Trains Arrive.

From the cell block where she was housed, she said, she could watch the trains arriving at Auschwitz station.

"When a convoy of Jewish women arrived, older women, mothers and those who were weak or sick were sorted out and taken immediately to be gassed," she testified. "Women 20 to 30 years old were sent to experimental blocks," she continued, explaining that in those buildings Nazi doctors worked on experiments intended to devise a swift, sure means of sterilization.

On some occasions a neatly attired women's orchestra would play gay selections from "The Merry Widow" or "The Barcarole" on the railway platform as the trains arrived, the witness said.

All Dead In a Month.

"Out of one group of 1,200 Jewish women who arrived, only 125 were brought into the camp," she went on. "The others were sent to be gassed at once. At the end of a month none of the 125 was still alive. At first the victims were told they were going to take showers and even given towels before entering the chambers, but that pretense was dropped later when big convoys started coming and there was no time for it."

None of the damning descriptions of Nazi atrocities submitted to the court in the past produced the atmosphere of strained attention pervading the room as the woman, her hands tightly clasped, told her story of Oswiecim, where the daily death rate allegedly averaged from 250 to 350 daily.

"There was roll call every morning," she said. "We were awakened at 3.30 every morning by guards' blows and forced to stand in the open until the sun rose, when the women guards called the roll. They beat us with sticks. One woman had her skull crushed beside me by such a blow.

Babies Drowned

"Some pregnant women were subjected to abortions. A German midwife who had been convicted of performing criminal abortions was assigned to drown babies in a bucket of water."

On one occasion, she said, a group of Russian mothers accused of "making too much noise" was compelled to stand naked at roll call and throughout the day with their babies in their arms.

"The SS women were just as savage as the men," she testified.

Meanwhile a German General Staff officer has informed American authorities that he believes the 1939 beer cellar bomb blast in Munich was staged by the late Reinhard Heydrich of the Gestapo to break up a peace drive among high German Army officers, Gen. Georg Thomas accused the assassinated "hangman" of Bohemia-Moravia of directing the bombing in which eight obscure Nazis were slain on November 8, 1939, a few moments after Adolf Hitler had left the beer hall.

Thomas said Heydrich's timing of the blast shattered a fledgling peace movement among dissident generals represented by Gen. Ludwig Beck. Nazi propaganda blamed the explosion on the British secret service and two British agents trapped on the Dutch border were held up as scapegoats.

Streicher In Court

Nuernberg, Jan. 28 (AP)—Julius Streicher, No. 1 Nazi persecutor of Jews, returned to his place in the prisoners' box before the International Military Tribunal today munching an army cracker and apparently recovered from a heart attack for which he has been under treatment since January 23.

Authorities said an electrocardiograph made yesterday showed the illness was not the result of an organic condition.

SOCIAL UNION LEADS RURAL GERMAN POLL

FRANKFURT, Germany, Jan. 29 —(AP) The slightly Right-of-Center Christian Social Union emerged from Sunday's elections throughout the American occupation zone as the dominant force in rural German politics, but observers here doubted tonight that the party would be able to maintain its dominance when city elections take place in the spring.

One high-placed American observer noted that although the Communist turnout in rural areas was relatively small, it indicated on the whole that "the party may have considerable strength in the cities." The slightly Left Social Democratic party also draws much of its strength from the cities.

Largely Catholic Rural Bavaria, however, tipped the scales yesterday away from the Social Democrats and in favor of the Christian Social Union, a recently organized amalgamation of Protestant and Catholic interests. It includes Conservatives, Liberals and Middle-of-the-Road groups.

Conservatives Win U.S. Zone Vote

Frankfurt, Jan. 29 (AP)—The slightly right-of-center Christian Social Union emerged today as the dominant party in rural areas of the United States occupation zone of Germany on the basis of returns from yesterday's zone-wide election.

More than 3,000,000 Germans went to the polls in the elections, limited to communities of less than 20,000 persons, for rural council seats.

First Free Vote In 13 Years

The slightly left-wing Social Democrats, who led in similar elections a week ago Sunday in Greater Hesse in communities of less than 5,000 persons, were runners-up yesterday.

The two elections constituted the first free voting in Germany in thirteen years.

Results Are Listed

Results from 9,600 of 10,000 local communities in yesterday's balloting showed, according to United States Military Government tabulations:

Social Union, 1,200,000 votes and 20,071 seats; Social Democrats, 723,180 and 7,453; Communists, 109,968 and 506; Liberal Democrats, 51,968 and 556; Independent and other candidates, 748,373 and 23,403.

Largely Catholic Bavaria swung the balance in favor of the Social Union, which is an amalgamation of Protestant and Catholic interests and middle-of-the-road farmers.

Treason Trial In Austria

Vienna, Jan. 28 (AP)—Rudolf Neumayer, who accepted the post of Finance Minister in the Austrian Cabinet formed by Arthur Seyss-Inquart in March, 1938, for the purpose of handing the country over to Germany, went on trial today on charges of treason.

Neumayer, a 58-year-old career official, declared he had nothing to do with political preparation for the Anschluss and testified he was promised by Seyss-Inquart Austria would remain independent despite the influx of [illegible] and functionaries.

Russia To Get Balts Being Held By Swedes

Stockholm, Jan. 28 (AP)—Premier Per Albin Hansson told Parliament the Swedish Government would turn over to Russia the 167 Baltic military internees who resisted deportation to Russia last November by staging a two-week hunger strike.

Russia had requested that the Balts, all Lithuanians, Latvians and Estonians who were accused by Russia of being deserters from the German army, be returned to the Soviet. The internees now are recovering from the effects of the hunger strike and are expected to be extradited soon.

The newspaper Aftonbladet said Dr. Elmar Eichfuss-Atvars, leader of the internees, had smuggled an appeal to King Gustaf from a hospital, asking that the case be referred to the United Nations Assembly.

Swedes Demanding Pulp Price Increase

Stockholm, Jan. 28 (AP)—Einar Flygt, vice president of the Swedish Cellulose Company, today said Swedish wood pulp exports to the United States would be reduced drastically unless the OPA allowed a better price.

Commenting on a Commerce Department official's statement that America would buy all the pulp Sweden could export, Flygt, who was in the United States last winter negotiating pulp prices, said Sweden "hopes to export up to 700,000 tons of pulp to the United States if prices are increased to a reasonable level."

Otherwise, Flygt continued, exports to the United States "will run around 50,000 tons."

Blast Frees 10 Greek Traitors

ATHENS, Jan. 28 (AP)—Ten persons accused of collaborators escaped today after dynamiters wrecked a section of the Calithea prison wall near here, the Greek Ministry of Public Order said.

Soviet Organ Cites Catholic Moves

Moscow, Jan. 28 (AP)—Izvestia, organ of the Soviet Government, declared in an article published yesterday that Archbishop Francis J. Spellman, cardinal-designate, was waging active Vatican politics in America.

The article, written by D. Petrov, discussing the appointment of 32 new cardinals by Pope Pius XII, said the Vatican's naming of four new cardinals for the United States, and one each for England, Canada and Australia indicated the Catholic Church was trying to strengthen its influence in "the Anglo-Saxon countries."

Singles Out Spellman

Singling out Archbishop Spellman and Bernard Griffin, Archbishop of Westminster, England, the article said Spellman "by all means defended the Vatican when the Vatican, one year after the treacherous attack of Japan on Pearl Harbor and despite the many criminal acts of Japanese Imperialism, favorably received the Japanese Ambassador."

Spellman, the article added, was trying to "arouse the American people to accept Franco (Generalissimo Franco of Spain)."

Slanderous Speeches Alleged

"Griffin gained notoriety," the article continued, "through his acts of participating in slanderous speeches against the U.S.S.R., even during the moment of the heaviest struggle of the English and Soviet peoples against Hitlerite Germany."

It accused the Archbishop of Westminster of opposing the Yalta decisions regarding Poland and sympathizing with "Polish traitors."

R. A. F. Strikes Subside At All but One Air Base

6,000 Still Out at Cawnpore, India's Biggest Center

LONDON, Jan. 28 (AP)—The wave of Royal Air Force demobilization strikes which swept British air bases in the Middle and Far East last week subsided today, and demonstrators returned to duty in all but one field. In the House of Commons, Prime Minister Attlee said he would make a statement on the strikes tomorrow.

Only at Cawnpore, the R. A. F.'s biggest maintenance center in India, were operations still at a halt. Strikers there offered to return to work if their protests were given "full publicity" in Britain. Six thousand R. A. F. personnel, including 2,000 Indians, halted work at the base to dramatize their "we want to go home" demands.

The Cawnpore strikers demanded that the repatriation shipping allocations be treble, that more naval shipping be used and that greater information be given on sailing dates.

R. A. F. MEN IN EAST CALL OFF STRIKES

Singapore, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Royal Air Force personnel at Seletar air base called off the demobilization protest strike today after Air Marshal Sir Keith Park, air commander in chief, urged the Air Ministry in London to speed discharges and improve conditions at the Singapore field. The striking ground crew men were informed that no action would be taken against them because of their demobilization protests.

Calcutta, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Group Capt. C. E. Slee, commanding officer of an R. A. F. station at Dumdum, said today that 1,200 Air Force personnel who struck Friday at midnight in protest against a slowdown in demobilization had agreed to return to work tonight. Slee said the men struck because they wanted to bring their grievances to the attention of "the people back home."

New Delhi, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Approximately 6,000 Royal Air Force personnel, including about 1,000 Indians, were reported today to have halted work at two air stations in Cawnpore, biggest R. A. F. maintenance center in India, to emphasize "we want to go home" demands.

The strike began Saturday, but representatives of the strikers met yesterday and offered to resume work for ten days if they were satisfied that full publicity had been given in the United Kingdom to demands formulated earlier at Mauripur, near Karachi.

Congress Party Favorable

NEW DELHI, Jan. 28 (AP)—Lord Wavell's determination to call a constitutional convention was favorably received by Hindu leaders of the Congress Party.

Asaf Ali, member of the Congress party's Working Committee, said the Viceroy's statement was a "welcome note" but called for "positive acts" by Britain in giving India early independence.

Ten Indonesians Killed By British (In Java)

Batavia, Java, Jan. 28 (AP)—British troops clashed today with Indonesian Nationalists at Bendoeng in a brief encounter, while in eastern Java desultory fighting continued in the Semarang and Soerabaja areas.

Ten Indonesians were killed and British Indian troops sustained three casualties in the Bandoeng fighting, said Dutch sources which quoted official advices.

The encounter took place, these sources said, when a Gurkha patrol spotted a band of 50 well-armed members of an Indonesian youth organization just south of Bandoeng. Tanks and artillery opened fire, after which Indonesian strong points in the Bandoeng area were assaulted.

British troops reported that Indonesians, armed with swords and spears, were concentrating in the Bandoeng area and were erecting barricades.

In eastern Java an artillery duel was reported near Semarang, and at Soerabaja, British Indian troops engaged Indonesians who were armed with mortars.

JAVA COMMANDER CHANGED BY ALLIES

Batavia, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Lieut. Gen. Sir Philip Christison will be replaced by Lieut.-Gen. Sir Montagu G. N. Stopford as Allied Commander in Chief in Java, it was announced officially today.

Commenting on the change in command, Premier Sutan Sjahrir of the unrecognized Indonesian Republic said in an interview that "most complications here were not Gen. Christison's fault but the result of the ambiguous unclear British position."

Hadji Salem, Indonesian Foreign Office spokesman, said, "This means there is a change coming here, and it could only be for the better."

Meanwhile clashes between British and Indonesian troops continued in eastern Java, with artillery fuels reported near Semarang and Soerabaja. British troops at Bandoeng reported that Indonesians armed with swords and sticks had assembled there and were erecting barricades.

SINGAPORE LABOR UNITS VOTE GENERAL STRIKE

SINGAPORE, Jan. 28 — (AP) Representatives of 40 labor organizations voted today to call a general strike tomorrow in Singapore and Johore over the reported arrest of a number of labor union leaders.

Meeting at the Singapore office of the Malayan Communist party, the representatives said the strike was aimed principally against imprisonment of Soon Kwong, general secretary of the Malayan Peoples Anti-Japanese army in Kuala Lumpar. Other labor leaders have been arrested in Johore and Perak, it was reported.

French Pushing Annam Drive

Saigon, Jan. 28 (AP)—Reports from southern Annam today indicated that French military authorities were stepping up operations in that area in an effort to crush the remaining strongholds of Annamite resistance below the sixteenth parallel.

A communiqué from Maj. Gen. Jacques LeClerc's headquarters disclosed that the Mekong River town of Ta Chan had been captured by French troops disembarked from the corvette Gazelle.

Sharp Battle Reported

Advices from the north reported a sharp battle between Tan Cupen and Tan Thanhkia in which the French said they had inflicted heavy casualties on Annamite forces reinforced by Japanese deserters.

The French high commissioner for Indo-China announced that France, in a further step toward granting full autonomy to the Kingdom of Cambodia, had agreed to withdraw the French resident in Cambodia.

All French employés of the Government of Cambodia revert to a purely advisory capacity, with the exception of those in postal and other Federal services.

FACTIONS REJECT NEW GOVERNMENT PLAN FOR CHINA

CHUNGKING, Jan. 28 — (AP) Representatives of the Chinese Communist party and the Democratic league disagreed today with a new proposal made by the National government in an attempt to break a stalemate in the Unity Conference sub-committee dealing with reorganization of the government.

The sub-committee considering the make-up of the National Assembly made practically no progress and further extension of the conference, which had been scheduled to close tomorrow, appeared inevitable.

At a meeting of the sub-committee on government reorganization today, Chiang Kai-shek's representatives proposed creation of ministries without portfolio in the Executive Yuan (Cabinet) and offered other parties and non-partisans seven or eight such posts in all.

(The Executive Yuan now is composed of 12 ministries and three commissions.)

Disagreement Rises

Representatives of the Communist party and the Democratic league dissented. They proposed that other parties and non-partisans should get leadership of half the present ministries, and insisted that the new ministries without portfolio should be distributed among all parties, including the Kuomintang (Government) party.

The Democratic league today protested again to the government over what it said were recent violations of the sanctity of the homes of some of its members.

The government's promised investigation, the League said, was unsatisfactory. The League also protested the government's failure to implement its program of releasing political prisoners, a League spokesman declared. He said there were rumors that some of such prisoners were being "disposed of."

Representatives of the League also said that Chiang Kai-shek should be urged to issue a general order to all military, political and Kuomintang Party departments to halt immediately any actions likely to hinder operations of other parties.

pating—after a 24-hour walkout—were delegates of the Democratic League.

The league sent its delegation out in protest yesterday after Chungking police had searched some of their homes. A spokesman today said the National Government had made a satisfactory reply to their protest, promising to investigate and reconsider China's wartime restrictions on individual liberty.

Chou Returning

Due to return to the unity sessions today was Gen. Chou En-lai, top Communist delegate who made a flying visit to his party's headquarters at Yenan, North China, to report on progress.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, Gen. George Marshall, United States presidential envoy to China, and Averill Harriman, United States Ambassador to Moscow, conferred here yesterday, but the topics were not disclosed.

Harriman is en route to the States, but reportedly plans stops in Korea and Japan.

Voting Pact Reported

The unity subcommittee dealing with government reorganization, meanwhile reportedly agreed to empower a reorganized state council to override any presidential veto by a three fifths vote, with the national party prohibited from holding more than half of the council's 40 seats. Communists approved, one spokesman said.

In Shanghai, Chinese commercial groups demanded by resolution that the Government bar "ships flying foreign flags from the privilege of plying Chinese waters."

The Shanghai Chamber of Shipping said that Chinese Chamber of Commerce and several shipping organizations joined it in forwarding the demand.

"Selfish Country" Assailed

Y. L. Lee, secretary-general of the shipping chamber, charged that "a certain country's selfish reasons" had prevented delivery to China of ships promised by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. He appealed to "China's friends, especially the United States," for help in reviving China's merchant marine.

In Yenan, Gen. Chu Teh, Chinese Communist commander in chief, said that China could afford only a small army for the next five years. A United States military mission was unneeded, he said; but he would welcome American economic experts and engineers.

Harriman Trip Delayed.

Chungking, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—W. Averill Harriman, United States Ambassador to Russia, delayed his departure from Chungking today after a long conference with Gen. Marshall, Ambassador to China, and a banquet at Chiang Kai-shek's villa.

Harriman, who arrived from Moscow en route to the United States yesterday—a day ahead of schedule—had expected to leave for Shanghai Tuesday.

Sirens As Reminder To Chinese

Chungking, Jan. 28 (AP)—The Government today ordered air raid sirens to be blown at 9 A.M. each Sunday throughout China, starting February 2, as a reminder to the people of their hard-won war and the great task of reconstruction ahead.

Unity Sessions Aim To Patch China Split

(MOOSA)

Chungking, Jan. 28 (AP)—Subcommittees of China's unity conference attacked anew today the politically-split republic's two major unsolved problems: Government reorganization and makeup of the National Assembly. Partici-

4-State Area In China Found Free of Strife

North Provinces Quiet But CommunistsBar Gear for Truce Team at Chihfeng

PEIPING, Jan. 28 (AP).—The Chinese Armistice Commission announced today that fighting had ceased in a broad area embracing ports of four northern provinces, but a representative was sent to investigate reports that Communist forces had refused permission for American airmen to deliver supplies to a truce-inspection team at Chihfeng.

The announcement said the team at Tatung, key railway point in northern Shansi Province, had reported full local agreement between Communist and National Government commanders which ended all fighting in northern Shansi, southeastern Suiyuan, westernmost Hopeh and southwestern Chahar.

Call Tolun Area Peaceful

The Communist membership of the commission still objected to plans to send a truce team to Tolun, in western Chahar, contending it was unnecessary because the zone was peaceful. The commission proceeded with plans to organize twenty-three new truce teams, however, and ordered a Communist representative to investigate the difficulty at Chihfeng.

The reports from Chihfeng said the Communist-led forces which took over when the Russians withdrew five days ago had refused to let an American plane unload a generator for the truce team and had refused to let the crew or correspondents enter the city.

Chihfeng is 150 miles east of Tolun and is an important rail center in Jehol Province. The cease-fire orders, effective Jan. 13, froze the regular Communist forces northwest, west and southwest of the city, and a National Government force ten miles southeast.

CHINESE REDS BAR U.S. PLANE

And Prevent Reporters From Entering Chihfeng.

(DAVIS)

Peiping, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—The Chinese Armistice Commission received word today that the Chinese Communist forces at Chihfeng, in Jehol Province, refused permission for an American plane to unload and prevented the crew and correspondents from traveling the seven miles to Chihfeng from the airport. The commission ordered a Communist representative to Chihfeng to determine the difficulty. The plane carried a generator for a truce-inspection team.

Local "pacification troops," formed by the Communists during the Japanese occupation and still under Communist leadership, took over Chihfeng after the scheduled withdrawal of the Russians on January 23. Regular Communist Eighth Route Army forces are concentrated southwest, west and northwest of that strategic railway city, while National (Government) Thirteenth Army units are some ten miles to the southeast where they were halted by the truce.

The Communists also have objected to plans to send a truce team to Tolun, on the railroad 150 miles west of Chihfeng. They contend that no fighting is in progress there and a truce team is unnecessary.

CHINESE LEADER CHARGES UNRRA FAVORS EUROPE

SHANGHAI, Jan. 28—(AP) The first shipment of UNRRA supplies assigned to Communist China was loaded on an American LST here today as an official of the Chinese National Relief and Rehabilitation Administration charged the UNRRA with partiality toward European countries.

Dr. Cheng Pai-Nan, Washington director of the CNRRA, told a press conference that the $675,000,000 UNRRA allocation to China "doesn't nearly meet our needs."

He said the per capita grant of $1.25 to China was the lowest of all recipient countries, and compared it with UNRRA's grant of $9.32 per capita to "ex-enemy Italy."

Partiality Charged

Urging re-assessment of China's needs, Cheng declared that "the over-preponderance of assistance to European countries reflects the European background of UNRRA.

(In Washington last Thursday top UNRRA executives said that the $675,000,000 allocated to China was the largest single relief budget for any country; that the greatest individual UNRRA effort now was centered in China and that the aid allotted was the utmost the country could absorb during the coming year.

(Washington said that since no additional funds were available and it was impossible to curtail efforts elsewhere, Chinese efforts to obtain more were unlikely to succeed.

The first cargo of UNRRA supplies for Communist China—800 tons of flour, 100 tons of clothing, 45 trucks, 100 tons of canned foodstuffs, 100 tons of oil and gasoline and 20 tons of medical supplies—is scheduled to leave tomorrow for Tsingtao and Chefoo.

It will be unloaded there for distribution in Shantung Province, which is 90 per cent Communist-held, in line with UNRRA's basic policy of extending aid to war victims regardless of race, creed or political beliefs.

Jews In Shanghai Beat Former Jap Oppressor

Shanghai, Jan. 28 (AP)—A Jewish crowd today severely beat a Japanese known only as Goya, who was chief of police in the Shanghai ghetto during the Japanese occupation.

The crowd demanded to know why he was allowed to walk the streets and was not held as a war criminal.

Goya, who used to boast that he was "King of the Jews," is so slight of stature that his victims said he had to stand on a chair to slap their faces.

China Reports Reds Have Quit Chihfeng

Yenan, Jan. 28 (AP—Delayed)—The new China daily news agency reported tonight that Soviet Russia troops had withdrawn from Chihfeng, Jehol province, on January 23 and that the city had been taken over by "local troops."

The Communist news agency said the occupying force was neither Naticnalist nor Red, but did not identify it more exactly. The townspeople elected their own government and established a preservation corps to maintain orden when the Russians withdrew, the agency said.

Reports from Chihfeng on January 20 set the number of Russian troops at about 4,000. They held an American plane crew which landed without notification for several days.

Release Of Yang Sought

Yenan, Jan. 26 (AP—Delayed)—The Peoples' Political Council in Chungking has been asked to secure the release of Yang Hu-cheng, who with the young marshal, Chang Hsueh-liang, kidnapped Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek at Sian in 1936.

The New China news agency reported that fourteen former high officials of the Northwestern Army Corps signed the cable to the council, which was addressed to Chou En-lai, Communist delegate in Chungking.

The release of Yang was asked in accordance with Chiang's promise to liberate all political prisoners. The signers included Hu Shanting, commander of the New Shansi army, and Hsin Shao-ting, vice chairman of the Shansi-Hopei-Shantung-Honan border region's People's Congress.

Premier Turns Down Jap Reds In Demand for New Cabinet

TOKYO, Jan. 28—(AP) The demand of a Japanese Communist delegation for resignation of Premier Shidehara's entire cabinet on the ground it had brought hunger and poverty to the people was refused by the premier, the newspaper Mainichi said today.

Mainichi reported Shidehara had received the delegation at his official residence and told the leaders of the 2[illegible] delegates he could not immediately consent to their demand because he was "working hard to cope with the situation in earnest and with sincerity."

Arrests Protested

The delegation also protested arrests of leaders of a crowd which took food from a cache at Itabashi Arsenal and distributed it without authorization. Shidehara reportedly said that he must rely on judicial authorities for handling such cases.

The resignation demand had been adopted by a Communist mass meeting Saturday.

Japan's financially hard-pressed government was advised today to bolster its cash reserves by selling the army's and navy's real estate and auctioning off government tobacco and telephone monopolies.

Kyodo News Agency said the finance ministry committee which proposed the sales also looked into the matter of selling the government railway system, but was dubious of its advisability. The committee said it questioned whether railway service would be improved by transfer of the lines to private ownership.

Kyodo also reported the government would triple its buying prices for gold and silver, effective Feb. 20, "to encourage gold and silver production." It said the new prices would be $1.13 a gram for gold and $20.66 a kilogram for silver.

In the agricultural industry there was the announcement that the government was working on plans for an extensive rural electrification program designed to improve the living standard of the farmer. Kyodo said 10 model electrified villages would be established as a start toward elimination of outmoded and feudalistic farm methods.

With the approval of Allied headquarters, an advisory committee of 17 representative Japanese was appointed likewise today to draft a plan for reorganizing the Broadcasting corporation of Japan as an "organ of democracy."

Japs Get U. S. Ships

Rear Adm. C. B. Momsen, commander of Japanese merchant shipping under the Supreme Allied Command, said the American policy of lending comparatively slow Liberty ships to the Japanese for repatriation and local trade was much better than permitting them to build new fast ships in their own yards.

He said the United States had turned over to the Japanese 21 Liberty ships to date and eventually would provide them with 100. The program also calls for delivery ultimately of 100 LST's and nine C-1 transports. The ships operate under a green-and-red house flag and are operated by Japanese crews.

tered thousands at Singapore, Hong Kong and the islands near Australia.

Japan lost five sixths of her cargo shipping during the war and all of her passenger ships, Momsen said.

Jap Prices, Living Allowances Rising

Tokyo, Jan. 28 (AP)—Prices of food, clothing and virtually everything else are spiraling upward in Japan—both on legitimate and black markets—and, to keep pace, workers are demanding and receiving boosts in living allowances.

Latest wage settlement in Tokyo and the vicinity is the fivefold increase granted to employés of the Kanto Electric Supply Company after an eleven-day strike.

Additional Allowances

Under the Japanese system, total income, not basic salary, is the important factor. That is so because workers get family allowances for wives and children, dependents' allowances for parents, sisters and brothers; price allowances to cope with inflated retail charges, an allowance for nonabsence from work, and finally an annual bonus.

The only way in which the basic salary affects these extras is in calculating the bonus. Employés all get the same family or dependency allowance, according to the number involved, regardless of salary scales. There is also food ration served by some companies during working hours.

Rail Fares Rise

Newest action that will hit the workers' pocketbooks is the announcement by the Japanese Transportation Ministry that railway fares will go up approximately 150 per cent March 1. This will particularly affect Tokyo employés, since the city was so badly burned out that thousands of people are packed like cattle in third-class cars traveling daily from outlying suburbs to their jobs.

Freight rates will rise around 200 per cent at the same time passenger fares increase.

ultra-nationalists.

This was decided at a liaison meeting between the Government and the House of Peers, the news agency added.

The 69 included some war-crimes suspects such as Prince Morimasa Nashimoto, only member of the royal family in custody thus far; Shigenori Togo, Foreign Minister at the time of the Pearl Harbor attack; Matsutaro Shoriki, president of the newspaper Yomiuri Hochi, and Hiroshi Shomomura, former president of the Board of Information.

ards of the rural classes, Kyodo news agency reported today.

The agency said ten model electrified villages would be established, with electrified farms and homes as a means of leading the way to freedom from the feudalistic farm methods of the past.

Policy Of Lending Slow Ships To Japs Backed

Tokyo, Jan. 28 (AP)—The American policy of lending comparatively slow Liberty ships to the Japanese is much better, Rear Admiral C. B. Momsen thinks, than permitting the Japanese to rehabilitate their shipyards.

Momsen, commander of Japanese merchant shipping under Allied headquarters, sees real danger in the development of new fast ships by the Japanese in their own yards.

Under the present plan, he explained, "they won't be able to compete with other nations in world trade. Huge shipyards would just increase their war-making potentiality."

Already Turned Over

The United States has turned over to the Japanese so far 21 Liberty ships, 29 LST's and 2 smaller C-1 transports. The program calls for ultimate use of 100 Liberties, 100 LST's and 9 C-1's. They all sail under a special green and red house flag, manned by Japanese crews.

Momsen estimates that there are still 5,500,000 Japanese to be repatriated—1,700,000 in Manchuria, 1,500,000 in China, 800,000 in Russian areas, including the Sakhalein Peninsula; 50,000 in the Philippines, 450,000 in Formosa, and scat-

Japs Will Reorganize Radio Corporation

Tokyo, Jan. 28 (AP)—An advisory committee of seventeen Japanese was appointed with Allied headquarters approval today to make recommendations for reorganizing the broadcasting corporation of Japan as an organ of democracy.

On the committee are representatives of business, agriculture science, engineering, finance, publishing, theater, arts, professions labor and women's organizations.

"The radio should be the mirror of all opinions on all controversial subjects," the committee was told by Brig. Gen. Ken R. Dyke, chief of headquarters civil information and education section.

Jap Gold, Silver Buying Prices Tripled

Tokyo, Jan. 28 (AP)—To encourage gold and silver production, the Government will triple its buying prices for the metals, the Kyodo news agency reported today.

Hicswa's Case Sent To U.S. For Review

Tokyo, Tuesday, Jan. 29 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Arthur McK. Harper, commanding the 98th Division, has forwarded to Washington his recommendation in the case of pfc Joseph Hicswa, of Wallington, N. J., condemned to death by a court-martial in the killing of two Japanese civilians.

General MacArthur's press relations office announced that Harper's recommendations had gone to the judge advocate general's office. There was no indication what he had recommended.

Any announcement must be made by the War Department, the press office said.

MACARTHUR WON'T SEE HICSWA APPEAL

Tokyo, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Major-Gen. Arthur McK. Harper, commander of the Ninety-eighth Infantry Diivsion, has the power to approve or commute the sentence of death imposed on Pfc. Joseph E. Hicswa of Wallington, N. J., for the killing of two Japanese civilians on November 24, last, Gen. MacArthur's office announced today, adding: "If he commutes the sentence, this closes the case. If he approves the death sentence, the case will be reviewed in the War Department and will go to the President for final action. Theater Commander MacArthur does not review the case and has no connection whatsoever with it."

Harper is now reviewing Hicswa's trial record, it was also stated. The accused G. I. was a member of the Ninety-eighth's Headquarters Company.

MacArthur also notified a Texas woman—who wrote him that a petition bearing 75,000 signatures had been sent to President Truman protesting against the sentence—that the case is not "within the scope of my authority," and that "final action is with the authorities in Washington."

Army Hero Re-Enlists

Tokyo, Jan. 28 (AP)—Staff Sergeant Domingo Adversario, who won the Silver Star and a Purple Heart for a wound suffered while protecting General MacArthur during a bombing raid on Corregidor, has signed up for another three-year hitch in the Army.

Adversario, who has been a soldier for fifteen years, is receptionist at supreme headquarters.

The sergeant and MacArthur were caught in a bombing raid outside the tunnels at Corregidor and the sergeant was wounded in the arm while holding a protecting steel helmet over the General.

PW's Worked In Mud In Jap Mine, Court Told

Yokohama, Jan. 28 (AP)—Allied prisoners at times worked in a mixture of mud and coal dust in the Joban Company's mines near Sendai prison camp, the engineering supervisor admitted under crossexamination today at the war-crimes trial of Capt. Hiroji Honda, camp commandant.

The supervisor was Hisashi Terada. Honda is charged with responsibility for mistreatment of Allied prisoners.

The United States Military Commission conducting the trials said the arrival of court reporters from the United States would expedite proceedings against other defendants.

8,000 Yanks Due To Leave Yokohama

Yokohama, Jan. 28 (AP)—The S.S. Brandon Victory, carrying 1,350 enlisted men and 150 officers, will sail January 29 for Seattle.

The Admiral Capps, carrying 4,399 men and 296 officers, and the Sea Star, with 1,910 men and 206 officers, both will depart January 30.

Jap Tells Of Status

Omi Hachiman, Japan, Jan. 28 (AP)—An American who renounced his citizenship and became a Japanese subject in 1937 sometimes went hungry during the war and was watched by authorities, but he said he suffered no physical violence.

"I suffered no more, and often less, than the average Japanese by birth," said William Merrill Vories, 65, graduate of Colorado College, Colorado Springs.

"My naturalization was respected by most people I came into contact with," he said.

Opposed To War

"I feel pretty sure that officials, as well as people in general, knew I had always been opposed to the war, and probably some feared I would have a troublesome influence upon potential soldiers."

Vories was referring to the Omi Brotherhood in Omi Hachiman, a missionary movement that he described as a demonstration of Christian democracy and which he founded in 1907. The brotherhood engages in philanthropic, religious, industrial and architectural activities, operates its own schools, hospital, workshop and chapel.

Vories has resided in Japan since 1915. He married Maki Hitotsuyanagi, only daughter of a Japanese nobleman, in 1919. They have no children.

Status Of Christians

Vories said, "Neither the imperial family nor the imperial Government as a whole is opposed to Christianity or has been so within the half century previous to the present military defeat."

"The only opposition—and it has been intense—has been from the military clique and its henchmen among petty officials," he said.

Vories said Prince Takamatsu, second brother of Emperor Hirohito, and Prince Mikasa personally encouraged him during the war to continue the Omi Brotherhood. He said Mikasa told him: "The defeat of our country is the best thing that could have happened and provides the nation with a grand opportunity for liberation from the military clique and Zaibatsu (family industrial monopolies)."

Feel "Liberated"

Vories estimated that "90 per cent of the Japanese people feel that America liberated rather than conquered Japan."

The missionary said few Americans understand why he gave up his American citizenship.

"I can only say that I found it necessary to do so to make the democratic experiment a success," he explained.

Homma Told To Be Harsh By Superiors, Aide Says

Manila, Jan. 28 (AP)—A defense witness for Lieut. Gen. Masaharu Homma testified today that Gen. Jonathan Wainwright's surrender negotiations in 1942 were received coldly by the Japanese because "the American commander tried to deny he could order troops in the southern Philippines to capitulate."

Lieut. Gen. Takaji Wachi, Homma's chief of staff during the battles from Bataan and Corregidor, told the United States military commission trying Homma that he advised the Japanese commander to "postpone" the surrender negotiations "until Wainwright made up his mind."

"Stern Steps Ordered"

The witness testified that high ranking officers from imperial headquarters were frequent visitors to Homma's headquarters and advised Homma to "take stern measures against anti-Japanese elements in the Philippines." Homma is charged with responsibility for atrocities in the Philippines.

Wachi said a Colonel Tsuji, Tokyo staff officer, advised Homma not to release Filipino prisoners "but deal harshly with them lest they become heroes."

During Wachi's testimony, Homma twisted his hands incessantly.

Termed Humane

Wachi was the first defense witness put on the stand after Major John H. Skeen, Jr., of Baltimore, chief of defense counsel, had opened his case.

Wachi testified that Homma had instructed Japanese troops to treat prisoners in a "friendly spirit" and not to mistreat them. He also attempted to show that Homma had sought to preserve the lives of Filipino political leaders.

Admits Ouster

The witness admitted he had been removed as Homma's chief of staff because he gave too much time to political activities and not enough to operations.

Major Skeen said the defense would follow the same contention as the defense of Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, that Homma was a member of a small army group opposed to general headquarters.

Skeen said Homma believed in humane treatment of prisoners, but could not enforce his views on all officers of smaller units.

GI Protest Group In Manila Disbanded

Manila, Jan. 28 (AP)—After an action-packed three weeks of life, the soldier committee formed to protest the Army's demobilization slow-down will be disbanded, "because it has carried out its objectives."

Technical Sergeant Lawrence N. Spitz, of Woonsocket, R.I., chairman of the committee, pointed out in announcing the dissolution that the commitee had obtained hearings with Secretary of War Patterson and the Mead congressional committee and, in conjunction with similar groups in the Pacific theaters, had brought about the formation of a special subcommittee to investigate demobilization.

The announcement added that "the GI committee earnestly hopes that United States troops will not be used for armed intervention in the internal affairs of the Philippines."

14 Former Crewmen Of Graf Spee Escape

Buenos Aires, Jan. 28 (AP)—Santa Fe police said today that fourteen former crewmen of the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee escaped from a camp at Villa de Guadalupe, where they were interned with 66 others.

Several other interned Graf Spee crewmen escaped two years ago from a camp in Mendoza province and still are at liberty.

The crewmen have been interned since the Graf Spee was sunk at the mouth of the Plata River in December, 1939, following a running fight with three British cruisers.

MOVE INDICATED IN STALEMATE BY MIDDLE OF WEEK

Possibility Discussed of New Conferences with Management Leaders.

EARLY SEIZURE DOUBTED

Fairless Goes to Capital for Parleys on Prices.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 — (AP) New Federal action within the next few days toward settlement of the week-old steel strike was strongly hinted tonight but its nature was not revealed.

Officials still were unanimous, however, in discounting any idea that early seizure of the industry was in the cards.

The most commonly discussed possibility was new conferences with steel management leaders, though highly placed persons said the White House had nothing of that sort actually on foot.

One high official, who could not be quoted, indicated that the White House would move in on the dispute again around the middle of the week unless it were on the way to settlement by that time.

Seizure Query

John D. Small, chief of the Civilian Production administration, was asked at a news conference whether the government would seize the steel mills if the strike continued a long time.

"I hope it doesn't have to come to that," he replied.

Pressed for an estimate on how long seizure could be delayed, Small said:

"I think we could stand it (the steel strike) a few more days."

A reporter asked what would happen then.

"Haven't you any faith in things working out?" Small inquired.

Small held his news conference in connection with the release of CPA's monthly report on civilian production. The report itself went into an issue under discussion in connection with the steel strike, recommending "realistic and flexible" price controls to speed reconversion.

"There has been a growing feeling throughout the country," Small told reporters, "that price increases would be about the worst thing that could happen. To my mind lack of production is the worst thing."

Steel prices have been generally talked of as an important factor in settlement of the dispute of the industry with its 750,000 members of the C.I.O.-United Steelworkers.

Before the walkout U. S. Steel contended that it could not discuss wage increases without assurance of compensating price increases. It was generally reported that top officials had settled on an increase of about $4 a ton at the time, week before last, when wage talks collapsed. U. S. Steel at that time had gone up to an offer of 15 cents more per hour and the union had come down to a demand of 18 1-2 cents.

Fairless at Capital

President Benjamin F. Fairless of U. S. Steel arrived in Washington today for what a company spokesman said were "conferences with government officials" on wages and prices. The company official said no White House visit was planned by Fairless.

The impression prevailed in the Office of Reconversion Director John W. Snyder and Stabilization Administrator John C. Collet that any new conversations would center on the price matter.

It was said by officials, however, that the final decision on steel prices would not be made until about Feb. 1. There was no tendency to expect final OPA figures on steel costs and earnings to cause any great shift from the tentative figure of about $4 more per ton.

Also in Washington was Philip Murray, president of the Steel Workers union and of the C.I.O.

He and Fairless entered the Carlton hotel, where Murray lives when he is in Washington, only a few minutes apart this afternoon. Murray, however, said he did not know Fairless was there and told reporters later that he had not talked to the "big steel" president.

"I wouldn't care to comment," Murray said when he was asked about prospects for settling the steel walkout.

Asked if he were advocating a general loosening of government price policy, Small said he believes there is some leeway in the current policy for price increases.

In response to a question as to how much a more flexible policy might increase consumer prices, Small said not more than five to 10 per cent.

The CPA boss said he had discussed his views with OPA Administrator Chester Bowles. He said that while Bowles is convinced the price line should be held firmly, he also is worried about lack of production.

Questions Parried

Small parried questions on how much steel prices should be increased as a basis for settlement of the strike. But he added:

"It is my understanding the steel industry is entitled to price adjustments on the basis of the facts, regardless of the wage issue."

He said that to his knowledge the government had make no official offer as to a steel price increase in connection with the wage dispute.

Small said the steel strike is delaying reconversion "incalculably," but he predicted that once this and other labor disputes are settled business will boom to "unprecedented proportions."

He made this statement in reporting that December shipments of such consummer goods as refrigerators, radios and washing machines were from 10 to 30 per cent above the November level.

Small added, however, that because of strikes, "dissatisfaction about OPA price ceilings" and other factors, output of consumer products still is far below earlier expectations.

UNEMPLOYED OUTLOOK DARK

1,700,000 Idle Seen If Steel Strike Continues

Pittsburgh, Jan. 28 (AP)—Business men predicted today unemployment will skyrocket if the big steel strike continued a few more weeks.

There are approximately 750,000 members of the CIO-United Steelworkers on strike, and forecasts from four large industrial areas today indicated that number of idle would more than double—to exceed 1,700,000—if the stoppage in steel production continues a month.

Specific forecasts came from Michigan, 500,000; Missouri, 150,000; Ohio, 100,000, and Connecticut, 200,000.

Dark Outlook For Car Plants

A survey showed many companies were curtailing operations and, although definite unemployment forecasts were not given from other areas, the United States Employment Service said that 1,000 plants in the Philadelphia area alone would "close, or greatly curtail" operations should the strike continue past February 20.

A spokesman for the steelworkers' union commented:

"All this could have been avoided if the steel industry had accepted the proposal of President Truman for an 18½-cents-an-hour pay increase."

A prediction of 500,000 idle "within a month" in Michigan, the automobile state, came from John L. Lovett, general manager of the Michigan Manufacturers Association. He expected 2,000 Michigan manufacturers would be affected by the steel strike.

Supply Of Wire Running Out

Ford plants in Detroit have laid off 15,000 workers and expect to furlough another 25,000 soon. Frank Rising, general manager of Automotive and Aviation Parts Manufacturers, Inc., said 200,000 workers would be idle in automotive parts plants alone by the end of this week.

Oscar A. Ehrhardt, secretary of the CIO Industrial Council at St. Louis, predicted 150,000 St. Louis workers would be idle by lack of materials if strikes at four near-by plants in Illinois continue another week.

The Cleveland Chamber of Commerce said nearly 100,000 metal and rubber workers in northern Ohio would be laid off within two weeks. Officials of the Goodyear, Goodrich, Firestone, General and Seiberling rubber plants at Akron reported their supply of wire for tire beads was running out. As a result, they said, half of their total of 50,000 employés would be idled in two weeks.

In the first week of the strike, freight shipments in the Greater Cleveland area dropped about twenty per cent, or 84,000 net tons, from the average handling of 420,000 tons. Railroad spokesmen predicted a 40 per cent drop in shipments if strike continues another two weeks.

Railroads Losing Revenue

At Milwaukee, the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company said its situation was "critical" and shutdowns "may be forced momentarily" affecting 27,000 workers at the company's plants in Milwaukee, Pittsburgh, Boston, La Crosse, Wis.; Springfield, Ill.; Laporte, Ind., and Norwood, Ohio, and Oxnard, Cal.

The Connecticut Manufacturers Association said Connecticut metal fabricating plants employing more than 200,000 would be shut down in two to three weeks.

Three railroads estimated at Pittsburgh the steel strike would cost them a total of $3,100,000 in revenue through January 31.

Seven More Foremen Routed

The 37,000 already idle in allied industries include 5,500 railroad workers in the Pittsburgh and Memphis areas; 7,200 coal miners in Pennsylvania and Alabama; 9,000 workers in the Cleveland, Akron and Lorain (Ohio) region; 15,000 Ford employés at Detroit, and 1,000 employés of the Bundy Tubing Company, Detroit.

In the steel strike itself, there were no developments today in the wage dispute between the United Steelworkers and major steel companies.

At Pittsburgh, police reported seven more foremen of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation were routed from a struck plant. In a more serious disturbance yesterday Samuel S. Gatts, 30, one of eleven foremen ordered to leave a mill, was beaten on the head with a piece of pipe.

Picketing Injunction Sought

The Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation petitioned the Allegheny County Common Pleas Court at Pittsburgh for an injunction to restrain mass picketing at its Homestead works.

A petition asked the court to ban "threats, or acts of violence, force or other means of intimidation or coercion." It asserted shoulder-to-shoulder picketing was denying entrance to all supervisory employés below department superintendents, thus imperiling furnaces, power lines and fire protection.

At Joliet, Ill., Carnegie-Illinois asked for an injunction against the steelworkers on grounds the union wasn't providing enough men to help with the "cooling off" process at coke ovens. A court hearing will be held on the petition tomorrow.

Other Reports On Strike Effects

Other reports of steel strike effects, either expected or already felt, included:

Milwaukee—Harnischfeger Corporation employing 2,300 slowed production from 53 to 40 hours a week. A. O. Smith Corporation announced 1,000 employés would be laid off this week and entire plant employing more than 6,000 would be "buttoned up by the end of February."

New Britain, Conn.—Stanley Steel Works employing 2,000 cut work week from 5½ to 5 days. North and Judd Manufacturing Company, New Britain, employing 800, reduced weekly hours from 45 to 40, and granted a ten per cent pay increase.

Terryville, Conn.—Eagle Lock Company, 600 employés, cut to 40 hours a week that had varied from 30.24—635

48 to 55.

Barberton, Ohio—The Babcock & Wilcox Company, employing 3,400 in the manufacture of boilers, expected to be "seriously affected" in one or two weeks.

Columbus, Ohio—Marble Cliffs Quarries, producing lime used in processing ore, laid off 200.

San Francisco—2,000 to 3,000 California workers laid off, aside from steel strikers. Additional layoffs expected in a couple weeks.

Olean, N. Y.—Clark Brothers Company, Inc., makers of compressors and engines, today cut working hours from 50 to 32 a week in some departments. The plant employs 1,000.

PACKING HOUSES PILING UP MEAT

Normal Supplies Due Soon from Government Seized Plants.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28 — (AP) Fresh cuts of meat started piling up in the packing houses today with prospects that most American housewives would find normal supplies in their butcher shops in a few days.

Gayle Armstrong, directing operations in government-seized packing plants, said livestock receipts were "substantial" today and that operations were "proceeding smoothly."

He said "apparently all" the 248,000 striking C.I.O. and A.F.L. meat workers were back on the job. Some 55,000 members of the A.F.L. Amalgamated Meat Cutters Union returned to work when the plants were seized Saturday and 193,000 C.I.O. packinghouse workers came back today.

Although slaughtering started today, carcasses must be "hung" 24 to 48 hours before they are sent to retail outlets. However, supplies on hand were shipped out immediately in some cases, to ease the tight retail situation.

Delay's Forecast

Government spokesmen predicted deliveries of meat to retail outlets beginning not later than Wednesday. However, in some sections longer delays were expected before assurances from Secretary of Agriculture Anderson that he would apply at once for authority to put into effect any wage increase recommended by the meat fact-finding board. The A.F.L. union described its return to work as a "temporary truce" pending developments on the wage issue.

The C.I.O. has lowered its hourly wage increase demands from 25 cents to 17 1-2 cents and the A.F.L. raised its request back to 20 cents, after once lowering it to 15 cents.

Union and packing company representatives are to appear in Washington Thursday for final arguments before a presidential fact-finding panel which completed the Chicago end of its investigation Saturday.

SPECIAL MEDIATOR APPOINTED TO ACT IN G-M AUTO STRIKE

Joint Parley to Follow Separate Talks with Union, Company.

DETROIT, Jan. 28. — (AP) Special Federal Mediator James Dewey, arriving tonight in Detroit, summoned General Motors Corp. and the C.I.O. United Auto Workers to a joint meeting Tuesday and predicted settlement of the 69-day-old strike within the week.

Dewey, whose appointment was announced by the Labor department in Washington, said here:

"I have no instructions from the Labor secretary (Schwellenbach) other than to ride this strike to the finish. I am hoping for success and will stay here until this matter is ironed out."

Ready to Mediate

Both GM and the U.A.W.-C.I.O. indicated they are ready to accept mediation.

Dewey said he will meet first with the corporation and then with the union.

"I would like to have a joint conference Tuesday afternoon," he added.

Dewey is a former member of the department's Conciliation service with a reputation for settlement of wage disputes.

General Motors has offered the C.I.O. United Auto Workers a wage increase of 13 1-2 cents, but the union has demanded "more than" the 18 1-2 cent increase granted Chrysler Corp. employes Saturday.

Ford Gives New Raise

The Ford Motor Co., which has granted the C.I.O. United Auto Workers an 18 cent hourly wage increase, today announced a 15 per cent wage boost for 19,000 salaried and hourly employes who are not covered by the union's contract.

The announcement from President Henry Ford II came as the U.A.W.-C.I.O. squared off with General Motors Corp. In a fight over that firm's bargaining "faith" and simultaneously launched another wage increase drive in the auto industry.

The Ford raise will be retroactive to Jan. 1 and will include 4,335 foremen of the company who will be transferred from an hourly to a salary basis in negotiations with "other labor organizations," the company announcement read.

Ford failed to present an estimate of what the percentage raise to salaried employes will be in dollars and cents, explaining that there is a wide variance in the range of salaries paid within the company.

The union disclosed its new wage drive in the auto industry as the National Labor Relations board opened its hearing to determine whether General Motors has refused to bargain in good faith over the UAW-CIO's wage demands.

On its own behalf General Motors charged it was the union which failed to bargain in good faith.

Chief GM Counsel Henry M. Hogan, in a brief opening argument, said the union, in insisting on "unreasonable" demands, had "destroyed and frustrated the mutuality necessary for collective bargaining."

Clashes Flare

The NLRB hearing was marked by brief tussles between red-haired Walter P. Reuther of the U.A.W.-C.I.O. and red-haired Harry Benjamin of General Motors counsel, who frequently objected to Reuther's method of answering questions under direct examination.

Under questioning by Harold A. Cranfield, NLRB regional attorney, Reuther said General Motors had "refused to take us seriously" in negotiations and had treated union representatives with "absolute contempt."

At both remarks Benjamin leaped to his feet to protest, declaring the witness had no authority to voice "conclusions" and demanding that Reuther restrain himself to actual statements made in meetings of union and company men. Trial Examiner Gerard D. Reilly instructed Reuther to testify only to concrete facts."

The period referred to in Reuther's testimony was between Aug. 18, 1945, when the union first told General Motors it wanted 30 per cent more pay, and Oct. 3. The strike against GM, now in its 69th day, began Nov. 21.

The hearing was adjourned until tomorrow with Reuther still on the stand relating that during the Aug. 18-Oct. 3 period the company-union discussions concerned only such matters as job transfers, seniority, employment prospects and local grievances. Reuther was the only witness today.

The union asked the NLRB to direct General Motors to award back pay to the 175,000 strikers "for the time lost by them while engaged in the strike" or at least from the start of the strike until the "cessation" of GM's unfair practices.

Electric-Accord Hope Lifted By R.C.A. Pact

New York, Jan. 28 (AP)—A possible basis for settlement of the two-week-old strike of 200,000 CIO electrical workers was projected today by announcement that the Radio Corporation of America and the union had agreed on a 17½-cent-an-hour wage increase for 8,000 Camden (N.J.) workers.

The agreement, announced here yesterday by R.C.A. President David Sarnoff and James J. Matles, director of organization of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, was reached without a strike and without Government intervention. Negotiations had been in progress three months.

Nation-Wide Basis Seen

Some labor circles suggested the R.C.A. Camden contract might provide a basis for settling the nation-wide dispute.

There was, however, no direct word from other strikebound major electrical industries as to any change in position concerning union demands.

The Camden workers, employed by the Victor division of RCA, were to meet at union headquarters there today to ratify the settlement, which includes pay increases retroactive to October 7, 1945, and six paid holidays a year. The new contract, effective until October 7, 1946, carries a no-strike provision.

Union employes at the Camden plant originally sought a pay boost of 25 cents an hour—the same amount demanded by other CIO members who struck January 15 at plants of General Electric, Westinghouse and the electrical division of General Motors.

Companies' Offers

General Electric offered increases of 10 to 15 cents an hour, General Motors proposed 13½ cents, and Westinghouse said it would be agreeable to increasing the work week from 40 to 45 hours, with time-and-a-half pay for the last five hours.

Negotiations have been at a standstill since the walkout, which generally halted the production of appliances for home and industrial use. Last week, Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach chose William H. Davis, former War Labor Board chairman, and Arthur S. Meyer, chairman of the New York State Mediation Board, to attempt to bring about a settlement.

The Camden plant manufactures radios, television sets, radar apparatus, phonograph and electronic equipment.

WARNS SENATE AGAINST ACTION TO 'BAIT' LABOR

Educator Testifies Severe Law Could Bring U. S. Close to Civil War.

Washington, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Harold C. Havighurst, a professor of labor law, advised Senators today against enacting any "labor-baiting legislation" at this time, saying it could "bring us to the verge of a civil war."

On the House side, as the Northwestern University teacher talked to the Senate Labor Committee, the Rules Committee faced a showdown vote on strike legislation. The Rules Committee fixes procedure to govern consideration of legislation by the House itself.

Havighurst urged the Senate committee to support President Truman's request for "fact-finding legislation," saying opposition to it comes from the "stronger employers and the stronger unions." The administration proposal would set up fact-finding boards with subpoena power and would prohibit strikes for thirty days while the board sit. The bill before the House committee does not provide for either subpoena power or a cooling-off period.

Calls Disputes 'Natural.'

Under fact-finding boards, the witness said the "side that is the weaker in the economic struggle is given the advantage" of a public hearing. He said this would strengthen collective bargaining.

Asserting that the existing postwar industrial disputes are "natural," Havighurst said the "situation calls not for a plague, but for understanding. The task of Congress, as I see it, is not to determine which part it wants to hang, but to aid in developing a healthy system of collective bargaining."

He favored the substitute labor disputes bill introduced by Senators Ball (R.-Minn.) and Hatch (D.-N. M.) providing for a "cooling-off" period before strikes, but minus the subpoena provision.

"The Ball-Hatch bill is not exactly the answer to a corporation president's prayer," he said. "It does not undermine labor's strength."

Would Redefine Unfairness.

He also urged that "unfair labor practices" be redefined to place responsibility on unions as well as employers, including court action for "breaches of collective agreements" by either party.

Havighurst also proposed amendment of the anti-trust laws so that unions would be subject to them if they attempted to "use the strike and the boycott . . . to drive the employer out of business."

Chairman Murray (D.-Mont.) informed the committee that President C. E. Wilson of the General Electric Corporation was unable to appear today as scheduled because he is involved in negotiations in an attempt to end the strike of electrical workers against his firm.

In a two-hour session, the Rules Committee failed to reach an agreement and Chairman Sabath (D.-Ill.) called another session for tomorrow. Then the committee is expected to decide whether a modified fact-finding bill written by the Labor Committee shall become a vehicle for general labor legislation.

Steel Industry criticized.

On the House floor, Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D.-Cal.) said that the steel industry is "inviting widespread proposals not only for Government operation of Government-owned steel-making facilities, but for nationalization of the steel industry."

"No industry so strategically placed can expect to use its enormous power carelessly or arbitrarily and not reap the consequences," she told the House.

Representative La Follette (R.-Ind.) suggested that the administration "show its good intent" by requesting a congressional investigation to determine whether management has conspired to injure union labor. In a House speech he said that "the facts give credence" to a contention of Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, that such a conspiracy exists.

LEWIS IN MIAMI, SILENT ON RETURN TO A.F.L. RANKS

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 28 — (AP) John L. Lewis returned to the American Federation of Labor tonight, arriving in his big, black limousine to take his place in the A.F.L. council.

The bushy-browed executive ended a 10-year schism when he stepped out of his chauffeur-driven car and entered the hotel where President William Green and 14 vice-presidents of the A.F.L. were meeting.

Lewis split away from the A.F.L. at Atlantic City a decade ago to form his committee for industrial organization, and then left that movement to head his independent United Mine Workers.

Last week he was voted back on the A.F.L. executive council, and will take his seat at tomorrow's session.

Green was relaxed in a barber's chair when Lewis arrived and did not know of the arrival immediately. Other labor leaders had scattered after the day's meeting was over.

Lewis Taciturn

Lewis, observing what he described as "habitual taciturnity, declined to discuss his return to the federation with the more than million United Mine Workers. He has paid dues for 600,000 miners.

Followed by reporters and photographers, he was ushered into a suite fronting the blue-gray Biscayne Bay. There, with his hat on, he chatted gaily with newsmen and photographers, but would say nothing for the record about the future role he and his miners would play in the federation.

He interrogated newsmen more than they questioned him, trying to learn what the council's business would be when he formally takes his seat tomorrow.

During the day, A.F.L. General Counsel Joseph A. Padway described as "well-reasoned" and "momentous" the ruling of an Illinois federal judge which denied that veterans are entitled to "superseniority" in getting jobs.

The A.F.L. had become a party to the case in order to test the ruling of Major General Lewis B. Hershey, head of the Selective Service, who contended the draft act provided that returning veterans could replace other workers, regardless of seniority in the plant.

A.F.L. View Upheld

Judge Charles G. Briggle at Springfield, Ill., held with the A.F.L. in a decision handed down last Thursday Padway reported to the A.F.L. executive council.

The jurist ruled that veterans could displace only those with less seniority, counting his time in the armed service.

The problem involved is a "momentous" one, carrying thousands of employers, labor unions and veterans" organizations because of uncertainty over how to interpret the Selective Service Act —despite Hershey's ruling—Padway said.

The A.F.L. executive council renewed its appeals to Congress today for "enactment of liberal legislation to protect human needs during periods of economic stress." A statement was dispatched to members of Congress.

Lewis Reciprocates, Puts Green Back Into UMW

By The Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 28—William Green of Coshocton, Ohio, returned tonight to the United Mine Workers of America.

John L. Lewis, head of the miners' union and guest of honor at an AFL homecoming dinner for him, pulled a crisp, new card from his pocket and handed it to the AFL president.

Mr. Lewis said he had kept Mr. Green's membership in the United Mine Workers in good standing since 1938, when relations between the two men were not so good.

Mr. Green had been expelled from the miners' union in the struggle which followed Mr. Lewis' creation of the CIO from among members of the AFL.

Mr. Lewis was returned to the AFL, with membership on the executive council, last week. He will take his now post tomorrow

ROBERTS CLASHES WITH PROBE GROUP

Ex-Justice Says Commission Felt Hawaii Commanders Amply Warned.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 — (AP) Former Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts testified today that his Pearl Harbor investigating commission knew the Hawaii army and navy commanders did not get intercepted Japanese code messages but felt they were amply warned.

Roberts said the presidentially appointed group which he headed did not itself see the "magic" messages by means of which top Washington officials got advance knowledge of many Tokyo moves.

Frequent Clashes Occur

Amid frequent clashes with Republican members of the Senate-House committee currently inquiring into the Dec. 7, 1941 disaster the Roberts commissions full report without any omissions.

2. The commission never located any "winds" messages, or pre-Pearl Harbor Tokyo broadcast in the "winds" code to indicate a break with the United States. Tokyo had arranged to make such a broadcast in event communications with agents abroad were disrupted.

Before hearing Roberts, the committee heard Capt. Ellis M. Zacharias of the navy testify he predicted to Kimmel that the Japanese, if they decided to fight, would open with just such an air attack on the fleet as that delivered on Dec. 7.

Zacharias said that in a conversation with Kimmel in March, 1941, he also predicted the attack, if it came, would be on a Sunday.

"Brush-off" Received

He said he got the "brush-off" when he attempted two months before the attack to give the same warning to the Pacific Fleet war plans officer, Capt. H. H. McMorris.

Kimmel has testified he recalls no such conversation.

Roberts' testimony covered the three main questions raised before the Senate-House committee with respect to the commission's earlier inquiry.

Both Kimmel and Short have testified the commission apparently believed they had access to the "magic" messages, as the Japanese intercepts were called, and hence had far more information than they did have.

Roberts took that stand after Senator Ferguson (R-Mich) had suggested the war and navy departments could have sent more information to Kimmel and Short.

It appeared to him, Roberts declared, that the main question was whether the army and navy commanders in Hawaii got proper warning.

"The commission found from the messages sent them that they had ample warning," he said. "They could have been sent more information of course. They could have been sent a message every two hours."

Ferguson wanted to know how the commission could have reached this or that finding without examining the magic messages.

That brought on the first of a series of sharp exchanges.

"Now Senator, is this an investigation of the Roberts commission?" The former justice demanded.

When Ferguson replied that he was only trying to learn how the commission arrived at its conclusions, Roberts commented that "I think that is criticism."

Ferguson Seeks Data

But Roberts told Ferguson to "go ahead, I'll meet it."

Ferguson wanted to know how the commission, without examining "magic," could conclude that Former Secretary of State Hull had kept the war and navy departments fully informed of the diplomatic developments in relations with Japan.

Roberts said he had personally gone over Hull's memoranda of what he had told the military and when. Furthermore, he said, Gen. George C. Marshall, then army chief of staff, and Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, had said they were kept informed.

As for Hull's policy, Roberts said the commission did not go into that.

"You didn't go into the policy of the Secretary of State or of the President of the United States?" Ferguson asked.

There was another clash when Ferguson wanted to know just what the late President Roosevelt said when he read the commission's report. Roberts had testified he delivered it personally at 11 a. m. on Jan. 24, 1942, and sat with the President while the latter read it.

Roberts called the question "improper" and, when Ferguson asked what was "wrong" with it, retorted:

"Now, Senator, we are not going to inquire why Senator Ferguson is wrong. We've inquired why I am wrong. Don't let's get clear off."

Comments Related

He then related some of the President's comments, recalling among others that the President shook his head three or four times and murmured, 'tch, tch.'

Roberts said he had sent the text, as released by the White House, and it was "obviously complete" although he had not checked it line by line.

The former justice crossed words with Senator Brewster (R-Maine) a little later. The Senator said General Marshall had testified he understood part of the commission's report was suppressed for reasons of military security.

Roberts replied that he did not think he should be called on to comment on Marshall's testimony but since he was he would say that Marshall was "teetotally wrong."

Brewster's face grew red. In sharp tones, he declared it was perfectly proper to call the attention of witnesses to conflicting testimony from other witnesses.

be added that he "wouldn't have bothered" to read the messages if they had been made available.

The former justice led his investigators to Pearl Harbor shortly after the attack. The commission accused both Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, the army commander, and Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, Pacific Fleet chief, of "dereliction of duty."

Roberts also told the committee today:

1. The White House made public

Witness Says He Forecast Raid To Kimmel

Washington, Jan. 28 (AP)—Capt Ellis M. Zacharias testified today he had predicted to Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel in March, 1941, that if the Japanese decided to fight the United States they would begin the war with an attack against the fleet on a Sunday morning.

The veteran naval officer, appearing before the joint Pearl Harbor investigating committee, said he made this prediction in a conference with Kimmel, the Pacific Fleet commander at the time, and Vive Admiral (then captain) W. W. Smith.

Kimmel told the committee previously that he remembered no such conversation with Zacharias, but the later said he had discussed the incident with Smith since the Pearl Harbor attack and Smith recalled the details.

Sure That Smith Remembers

"I realize that Admiral Kimmel was a very busy man and that I was only one of hundreds to whom he talked," Zacharias said. "He might not remember the details of the conversation, but I am sure that Admiral Smith remembers."

Zacharias, who headed a psychological campaign during the war in an effort to induce the Japanese to surrender, said the conversation took place between March 26 and 31, 1941, at Kimmel's headquarters in Pearl Harbor.

He told the Admiral, the witness said, that if the Japanese made such an attack, it would come from the north from carriers which would steam away immediately after launching their planes. The December 7 attack was made in this manner.

Didn't Try Fix The Date

Zacharias said he did not attempt to fix the date of the predicted attack in his talk with Kimmel and had suggested another method by which the Japanese might strike by air.

He said it was possible, but less likely, for the Japanese to smuggle seaplanes into the Hawaiian area on merchant ships.

Zacharias will be followed on the stand by former Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts.

The committee called Justice Roberts for testimony on the question of whether the full report made by the investigating commission he headed shortly after the attack ever was published.

Possible Deletions

Roberts has written the committee that it was, but some members said they wanted to inquire about details of possible deletions by the Army and Navy.

When Zacharias and Roberts complete their testimony, Seth Richardson, committee counsel, said he will call army and navy officials who may know something about the "winds" code. They also will be asked, Richardson said, about the delivery to high officials on December 7, 1941, of the intercepted message in which Tokyo told its Ambassadors in Washington to deliver at 1 P.M., Washington time, Japan's final diplomatic reply breaking relations.

The committee thus far has heard only scattered testimony about the "winds" code, a device Tokyo set up to notify its diplomatic officials of a break with the United States, Great Britain or Russia.

Broadcast Arranged

The Japanese arranged to broadcast on their noon news program from Tokyo the words "east wind rain" to indicate a break with the United States.

Whether these words ever were uttered before Pearl Harbor was hit has been in dispute in previous hearings. William D. Mitchell, former counsel for the Senate-House committee, told members his investigation had convinced him the implementing message never was sent.

TYDINGS SEEKING WORLD SESSIONS ON DISARMAMENT

Maryland Senator Asks President to Issue Call for Conference.

PRAISED BY M'MAHON

'I'm Not Interested in Sovereignty—I Want to Survive' Says Senator.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—(AP) Senator Tydings (D-Md.) called on President Truman today to issue an immediate call for a world disarmament conference.

"In this state of a world armed to the teeth," he told the Senate, "we cannot further rely on the United Nations Organization for our own protection."

The tall Marylander, breaking into the Senate filibuster on the Fair Employment Practices bill, precipitated a general exchange on the floor in which he won near-complete endorsement of his idea from Senator Taft (R-Ohio).

Supported By Taft

"I agree with nearly everything the Senator has said," declared Taft. He mentioned that he had tried to amend the UNO bill last December to require immediate attention to disarmament.

"It is as plain as the nose on one's face," Tydings said, "that the great armed forces of our own country are being maintained principally for possible use against Russia, Britain, France or China, since Germany and Japan are to be kept disarmed.

"Is it not plain, too, that Russia is maintaining her armed forces for possible use against Britain or the United States or France or China?"

Tydings said the UNO's treatment of the atomic bomb situation is feeble, fumbling and ineffectual." He added that it helped convince him that the world organization is not "equipped to initiate successfully" a task of the magnitude of disarmament.

Wants Atomic Bomb Barred

"Strangely enough," he said, "the UNO seems content to have nations agree only for the control of the atomic bomb. It does not seem bent upon prohibiting its future use.

"We seem to have forgotten the possibilities of the rocket, the V-1 and V-2 and other flying bombs which can wing their way near the stars on flights of hundreds of miles on their evil missions of destruction."

Tydings also brought in the proposed loan to Great Britain and said other countries surely want the same. He said that in the past foreign loans had been used directly or indirectly for rearme-

ment-

When Senator Smith (R-N.J.) said he hoped that Tydings wasn't trying to "undermine" the authority of the United Nations Organizations, the Marylander said the proof of UNO's effectiveness lies in the ability to bring about disarmament.

"The proof of the pudding is in the 10,000,000 men in the Russian army, the big navy we have and the possession of the atomic bomb," Tydings said, adding:

"If there is not going to be any disarmament, then UNO isn't worth the paper it is written on."

Praised by McMahon

Senator McMahon (D-Conn.) congratulated Tydings on his proposal.

"This is the kind of thing that little people can understand," declared McMahon, head of the Special Senate committee on atomic energy.

Tydings told his colleagues that testimony of scientists before the special atomic committee indicates that 40,000,000 Americans might be wiped out by simultaneous atomic bomb attacks in 50 localities.

"We might not even know who was attacking us, if it came from 40 different directions," he said.

"It is my opinion," the Maryland Senator continued, "that one improved bomb, dropped on New York City, would kill every man, woman and child within the confines of that city."

Senator Hatch (D-N.M.) interrupted to observe that nations in the future would not be likely to declare war before they strike.

"It is my opinion that the nation that didn't hit first without a declaration of war would be giving hostages to fortune," Tydings said.

Senator Fulbright (D-Ark.) said that the type of international inspection that Tydings proposes, which Fulbright said he supports, would "breach the traditional concept of sovereignty."

"I'm not so much interested in the theories of sovereignty—I want to survive," Tydings said.

Tydings told the Senate the UNO charter merely provides that the organization "may take up the question of disarmament."

Senator Willis (R-Ind) commented that this "very feeble reference" appeared to "make it necessary to take it up now." Willis called Tydings' argument "very able."

Tydings said that when the League of Nations tried to talk disarmaments at Geneva, Switzerland, only Russia came to the point and other representatives "immediately began looking for their hats and asking when the next train left."

"I don't want to share any of the secrets of the atomic bomb with England, Canada, Holland, Belgium or any other nation until this is settled," Tydings said.

"I want to serve notice now that I will oppose any loan to any nation until I am certain that none of it will be used directly or indirectly for armaments."

TRUMAN PLANS TO PRESS FOR BRITISH LOAN

Tells Leaders That He Will Send Message on It to Congress.

WOULD SET NEW RECORDS

If Foreign Nations Get All They Want, Total Will Exceed Everything in Past.

Washington, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—President Truman told congressional leaders today that he will send a message to Congress this week asking ratification of the $4,400,000,000 British loan and credit agreement.

Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, told reporters at the White House that the message will go to the Capitol about the middle of the week, although he did not know the exact time.

"We also expect to get started soon on legislation extending the (economic) stabilization act and the authority of the OPA," Barkley said.

The President has urged extension of the Office of Price Administration a year beyond June 30, its present expiration date.

Barkley said that the regular weekly congressional conference with Mr. Truman was concerned largely with the British loan. It calls for a $3,750,000,000 loan, plus any additional credits relating to settlement of lend lease.

Barkley said that legislation extending the stabilization act would be drawn up shortly. He did not know whether it would be considered first in the Senate or House.

Record Breaking Loans.

If foreign countries get what they want, American loans abroad this year will surpass all records.

The proposed loan of $3,750,000,000 to Great Britain alone, if it is approved by Congress, will exceed the total of $2,458,000,000 loaned to eleven nations during 1945. And in addition, six other countries now are lined up at the Export-Import Bank seeking smaller multi-million dollar assistance.

Exactly how much the United States will be called upon to lend, however, hinges upon two other countries—Russia and France—neither of which has yet submitted formal applications.

France, which was granted a total of $850,000,000 during 1945, is known to be seeking at least $2,000,000,000 needed to modernize her industry. How much, if any, of this she will get may depend to a large extent on the fate the British loan meets in Congress.

The only estimate American Government officials have of Russia's possible wants is the statement Premier Stalin made to an American Congressman in Moscow last year, when he said that Russia could use about $6,000,000,000 in American financial help.

Nations whose applications now are being considered by the Export-Import Bank's new board of directors include: Italy, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Yugoslavia, Finland and China.

An unofficial estimate as to the size of their requirements shows:

China—About $2,000,000,000.

Italy—At least $1,000,000,000.

Poland—About $500,000,000 but with a smaller initial loan with which she can buy American locomotives and freight cars.

Finland—About $100,000,000 with prospects she will get only about $25,000,000 as a starter.

Consideration of the Czech and Yugoslav requests has not yet reached the stage where it is possible to estimate how much each is seeking.

However, Government officials said it was a safe guess that the two countries combined were seeking at least $500,000,000 with only slight prospects of getting a fraction of this until late in 1946 because of the unsettled conditions in the Balkans.

The only country to receive an American loan in the new year—Greece—was granted $25,000,000 and simultaneously handed a note by the State Department urging her to get her economic house in order if she expected further American financial help.

35 Countries To Open World Bank and Fund

First Meeting March 8 in Georgia; 10 Non-Members May Send Observers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP).—The United States has invited thirty-four countries to send representatives to the first meetings of the board of governors of the World Bank and Stabilization Fund at Wilmington Island, near Savannah, Ga., March 8.

This long-expected announcement was made today by the State Department, which disclosed that ten additional nations which have not yet officially become members of the two multi-billion dollar monetary organizations had been invited to send observers to the meetings.

The $9,100,000,000 World Bank and $8,800,000,000 International Stabilization Fund, projected at an international conference at Bretton Woods, N. H., in 1944, formally came into existence Dec. 28, when participating nations signed the articles of agreement at the State Department.

Actually, however, the two institutions will be established at the March meetings on Wilmington Island.

Russia, the only one of the major allies which has refrained from joining the bank and fund to date, was one of the ten nations invited to send observers to the Georgia sessions.

The nine others are Australia, New Zealand, Venezuela, Panama, Nicaragua, El Salvador, Denmark, Haiti and Liberia.

Member nations invited to attend are Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Cost Rica, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Ethiopia, France, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, Iceland, India, Iran, Iraq, Luzemburg, Mexico, Netherlands, Norway, Paraguay, Peru, the Philippines, Poland, the Union of South Africa, Britain, Uruguay, Yugoslavia and the United States.

President Truman has appointed Secretary of the Treasury Fred M. Vinson to be United States governor of both the fund and the bank for a five-year term. Assistant Secretary of State William L. Clayton will be United States alternate governor of both institutions, also for a five-year term.

BRITISH TO HONOR 341 U. S. OFFICERS

Washington, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—The British Embassy announced yesterday that six New Jersey officers were among 341 United States Army and Navy officers who will receive awards in the Order of the British Empire.

The awards were made to officers serving in the United States "in recognition of the distinguished service performed by them in co-operating with British armed forces during the war."

The announcement said arrangements are being made for recipients to receive the decorations personally from the British ambassador, the Earl of Halifax, in Washington.

Those made honorary members and officers of the order will be decorated February 12. The date of award to those made honorary knights and commanders will be announced later.

The New Jersey men were:

Capt. Louis Augustine, Navy (Reserve), Barnegat Pines, Forked River, member of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire, honorary.

Col. Clarence Peyton Kane, formerly brigadier-general, Atlantic Overseas Air Technical Service Command, Newark, commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire, honorary.

Lieut.-Col. Albert Edward Brundage, 65 Hawthorne Terrace, Leonia; Lieut.-Col. John Albert Grammar, 213 Kingsland Terrace, South Orange; Lieut.-Col. David Macaksy, 259 Broad street, Englewood; Major Gerald Bernard Russell, Red Bank High School, Red Bank; all officers of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire, honorary.

'APPEASING RUSSIA' DENIED

State Department Contradicts Head of Mission in Iran

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—The State Department denied today the statement of Dr. A. C. Millspaugh that American Government support had been withdrawn from his financial mission to Iran because of opposition from Russia.

A department spokesman said that Dr. Millspaugh's assertion was without any foundation. Dr Millspaugh told a reporter in Philadelphia on Saturday that he had returned to the United States after the State Department had withdrawn support of his mission because of Russian opposition. He said that the State Department had followed a pattern of appeasing Russia in Iranian affairs.

Dr. Millspaugh, formerly with the Brookings Institution in Washington, went to Iran in January, 1943, and subsequently became Administrator General of Finance for that country. On Jan. 11, 1945, the Iranian Parliament abolished some of his powers.

The State Department's spokesman said that Dr. Millspaugh and about fifty members of his mission had been employed solely by the Iranian Government and had had no official connection with this Government. Dr. Milispaugh's contract with the Government of Iran was terminated early in 1945 by mutual consent, after the Parliament's cancellation of his economic authority, the spokesman said.

U. S. DEPARTMENT BUYS PUERTO RICAN SUGAR

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—(AP) The Agriculture Department announced today that it has purchased 61,000 tons of Puerto Rican sugar heretofore unavailable to it for use in helping meet shortages in Eastern states.

The sugar was obtained from the Eastern Sugar Associates, of Baltimore, Md., operator of four mills in Puerto Rico.

Officials said this concern had heretofore refused to sell the sugar to the government. The bulk of it is from sugar processed in 1944.

The sugar must be shipped to this country, it is expected to be available for distribution within a "few days," officials said. It will be released for retail sale in Eastern seaboard areas where sugar has been unavailable to meet ration coupons.

The department said the owners of this sugar will get the same prices which they would have received had they sold the sugar when it was processed.

ASK YEAR'S EXTENSION OF SUGAR AGREEMENT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—A proposed treaty extending the international sugar agreement for one year from Aug. 31, 1945, was made public in the Senate today.

The agreement to extend the terms of the 1937 treaty was signed in London by representatives of the United States and seventeen other countries.

Under its terms, the export quotas remain suspended and the signatories declare that a revision of the original agreement "is necessary and should be undertaken as soon as the time appears opportune."

Countries participating are the United States, the Union of South Africa, Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, the Dominican Republic, the United Kingdom, Haiti, the Netherlands, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Russia, the Philippines, Yugoslavia and France.

No Decision on Yamashita

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—The Supreme Court again deferred action today on an appeals by Japanese General Yamashita, under death sentence for condoning atrocities in the Philippines. The court heard arguments on the appeals on Jan. 7 and 8. General Yamashita contested the authority of the American military commission which tried him. Pending the Supreme Court's decision on his appeal the enemy general is held in a Manila prison.

DENIES BRADEN IS QUITTING

State Department Calls Rumor Argentine 'Wishful Thinking'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—The State Department today quelled a rumor that Assistant Secretary of State Spruille Braden was resigning. Its spokesman said:

"It sounds like wishful thinking on the part of certain elements in Argentina."

Luis Luti, Argentine Chargé d'Affaires, would not comment but said his Foreign Office might have something to say.

Mr. Braden was at home recuperating from a cold.

erating from an attack of sciatica and was expected at his office probably tomorrow.

TOYS ON WAY TO EUROPE

They Will Go to Orphans in Italy, Germany and Austria

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—The first load of toys for displaced children and orphans in Europe was dispatched today under supervision of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

Donated by the Childhood Education Association's 459 branches throughout the country, the toys will be distributed to children in Germany, Austria and Italy.

UNRRA, which does not include toys in its relief program, houses 90,000 children in assembly centers in Germany alone.

Patterson on Demobilization

Draft Vital to Men Overseas, Patterson Reports After Tour

War Secretary Finds Soldiers in Service Over Two Years Are Eager to Return Home but Carry Out Duties Faithfully.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—(AP) Secretary of War Patterson said today that continuation of the draft is "of vital concern to men overseas."

It ends May 15 unless Congress acts. President Truman has recommended it be renewed if enlistments do not meet the needs of the services.

Reporting to a news conference on his four-week world tour, Patterson said he found that most soldiers with two years' service or more are eager to get home but 'there are very few who are not willing to do their duties as soldiers."

Patterson also said:

1. Announcement will be made in a few days on the addition of Australian and other British Empire troops to General Douglas MacArthur's forces in Japan.

2. Only 200 volunteers have enlisted for the proposed 50,000-man Philippine Scout force. Patterson attributed this to low pay and said he had recommended the pay be increased from $9 to $25 a month for privates.

3. The War department is considering asking Congress to provide for the continued service of WACS.

4. He found no evidence of destruction of useful material.

5. The U. S. force in Italy is to be cut from 51,000 to 28,000 by June 30 but if a peace treaty is signed earlier all troops except some in the air forces could be removed before June 30.

Patterson also said he thought all except a few hundred air force men could be removed from the India-Burma theater and the Middle East, including Egypt and north Africa, before June 30.

The department reported that the Army returned 185,000 soldiers to civil life during the week ending January 25, swelling the January total to 790,000. Army demobilization since V-E Day totals 5,536,000 and since V-J day 4,939,000.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP).—The War Department released the following text of Robert P. Patterson, Secretary of War, remarks at a news conference:

A total of 10,600,000 men and women have served in the Army since Pearl Harbor. Of that number 8,300,000 were in service on V-E Day last May. Between V-E Day and June 30 of this year 7,750,000 men will have been returned to civil life. I am willing to match that against the discharge rate of any armed force in the world.

In the last four weeks I visited the principal fields of Army activities overseas—Hawaii, Guam, Japan, Korea China, Philippines, India, Egypt, Italy and Germany. The longest stop, eight days, was in Japan. I have made a preliminary report of this trip to the President.

Japan. I give you these leading impressions of conditions in Japan: First, the vast damage done there by our air forces. Sixty per cent of the largest cities have been completely destroyed—burned out by incendiary bombs and the two atomic bombs. Second, the relatively small forces we have there in occupation of a populous and formerly powerful nation. We have 300,000 soldiers in control of 80,000,000 people. You can walk many miles in a Japanese city without seeing a single American soldier. Third, the striking progress made by General MacArthur's forces in five months. The Japanese military forces in the home islands, numbering 2,700,000, have been disarmed and demobilized; the Japanese stores of munitions and the plants that produced them are in process of destruction or removal; hundreds of thousands of Koreans, Formosans and Chinese are being sent to their home countries and millions of Japanese are being removed from office and a sound beginning toward democratic processes and re-education of the Japanese people has been made. But a great deal remains to be done in destroying Japan's war-making potential and in turning her people from the ways of war toward the ways of peace.

Pacific Reductions

In the entire Pacific theater we had 865,000 men on Jan. 1. By June 30 the requirements of that theater, as estimated by General MacArthur, will be 375,000 men. In this connection there are still 3,000,000 Japanese soldiers not yet returned to Japan, and 500,000 of them have not yet been disarmed.

Korea and China. Our soldiers in Korea are a liberating force. It is important to have an independent, stable government established in Korea as soon as possible, as a safeguard against Japan again exploiting the country for waging war.

In China we are reducing our forces as rapidly as we can. The principal activity there is to assist the Chinese in getting over 1,800,000 Japanese, military and civilian, sent back to Japan. Army personnel there numbers 9,000, and the June 30 estimate is 6,000.

Philippines. In the Philippines we have the great stocks of equipment that were built up for the invasion of Japan, 3,500,000 tons. The disposal of these stocks, along with keeping custody of them in the mean time, is a major problem. The troops there also provide protection from lawlessness and brigandage, the Philippine constabulary being no longer in existence, and they also serve as support for our forces in Japan. Last August we had nearly 900,000 troops in the Philippines. On Jan. 1 we had 279,000 soldiers. By June 30 we will have 79,000.

The War Department has under way a project for raising a force of 50,000 Philippine Scouts. I found when I was there that we had been able to enlist only 200. The trouble is that the pay is only 18 pesos a month for privates. I am requesting that funds be made available to have the rate raised to 50 pesos a month—peso for dollar on the pay of American soldiers. I was informed that if this were done there would be good prospects of recruiting the force of 50,000. This will reduce the number of American soldiers to serve in the Orient.

Middle East and India

India - Burma, Middle East. Army troops are being brought home from these two theaters as rapidly as possible. In both of them the principal activity is the collection and care of surplus property pending its disposal. The situation is now being reviewed, and a deadline will soon be set for the closing out of India-Burma and the Middle East within a few months, except for a few hundred Air Transport personnel to maintain necessary weather, refueling and maintenance stations.

Italy. In Italy we still have an infantry division in the Venezia-Guilia district, and we have some air groups in the Foggia area. We also have substantial stocks of surplus property. Good progress is being made in disposof the surplus, and the troops' strength, which was 51,000 on Jan. 1, will be reduced to 28,000 by June 30. In case a treaty of peace is made with Italy prior to that time, we will evacuate our troops from Italy altogether, except for the air units which may remain as part of the forces operating in respect to Germany.

Germany. In Germany we have continuing responsibilities that require relatively strong forces. We must continue in occupation, ready to put down any resistance. We must destroy or remove the munitions industries under the terms of the Berlin agreement. We have the guarding of 500,000 prisoners of war. We have the supply and protection of 600,000 displaced persons. We have the care and custody of $7,000,000,000 worth of equipment and supplies in Europe until they can be disposed of. We had 622,000 troops in the European theater on the first of the year. We will have 307,000 on June 30, a great part of them to be replacements not yet in the theater. Our forces in Germany are much smaller than the occupation forces maintained there by the British or by the Russia .

Military Government Cited

We are also carrying on military government in Germany, in conjunction with Russia, Britain and France. This is a task of great complexity, but the work is being done with ability and vigor. This winter is the crucial period of occupation. Famine and pestilence that many predicted this winter must not be allowed to take place.

Everywhere I went, the troops had reasonably comfortable quarters, good rations, good clothing. The sick rate is exceptionally low. Provision is made for welfare and recreation. But the fact remains that the soldiers are far from home, they are not under the urgency of war, and they should have the continued support of the American people. U. S. O. shows and letters from home are greatly appreciated.

On the personal side the highlight of the whole trip was when I was met in Sendai, Japan, by a platoon of the company I commanded in the last war—F Company, 306th Infantry, 77th Division.

Effectiveness. It is unquestionably true that the effectiveness of our forces has been diminished. It could not be otherwise, with the departure of more than five million seasoned veterans since V-E Day. The Air Forces are hard hit. The lack of trained ground crews is so severe that many planes cannot be kept in condition to fly. This condition prevails in all theaters.

Spirit of Troops. I talked with many of the soldiers in the overseas areas. The fighting phase being over, the job is monotonous. Most of those who have seen service of two years or more are anxious to return home, some feeling that they are surplus anyway, others believing that while their mission is necessary, it is only fair that new replacements with shorter service should be sent to take their place. But though they believe that they should be brought home, there are very few who are not willing to do their duty as soldiers.

Will Speed Return

Theater commanders have been directed to relieve without delay soldiers who are truly surplus. I will see to it that these directions are carried out. Also, everything possible will be done to see that men who have seen long service are relieved by new replacements. It is of the greatest importance that replacements be made available.

The demobilization directive of Jan. 15, for enlisted men with 45 points or 2½ years service on April 30 and for enlisted men with 40 points or two years service on June 30, provided the soldiers with a definite plan and removed uncertainties.

Cutting Down Activities. We will expedite closing out the less active theaters — India-Burma, Middle East, Italy—So that we may concentrate or resources on the occupation of Japan and the occupation of Germany.

There is also the continuing need to cut down activities as they become unnecessary to our reduced military requirements. Every effort is being made to discontinue services to other governmental agencies that have nothing to do with the support of our occupational duties.

Strength of Army. We face the man-power problem for our Army in this critical period of transition from war to peace, the period while we are inforcing the surrenders and disarming our enemies and making sure that they stay disarmed We are reducing the war-time Army of 8,300,000 down to 1,500,000 officers and enlisted men on June 30, that figure being the required strength as recommended by General Eisenhower and approved by me after the most careful estimates. By April 30 all enlisted men with forty-five points or two-and-one-half years service will be discharged or on the way home, and by June 30 the same will be true of all enlisted men with forty points or two years service. That schedule will be fulfilled unconditionally.

G. Is Want Draft Kept

I learned on this trip that the continuation of selective service is a matter of vital concern to the men overseas. They feel that it must be continued if they are to get the relief they have earned. We will get as many as we possibly can from voluntary recruiting. It is of the most urgent importance for the future peace of the world that the additional men be obtained. The burden is not a heavy one for a nation of 140,000,000.

The problem will be a continuing one. It will not be solved merely by getting the force needed on June 30. Estimates are now being analyzed as to the strength needed to do the tasks assigned to the Army for the year following June 30. There should be a gradual reduction in strength as our taks become less extensive, the amount of the reduction being dependent on further stabilization in critical areas, on disposition of prisoners of war, on reduction in the number of displaced persons, and on the diminution of the surplus equipment to be cared for. On the other hand, those who have served over two years will expect to be relieved, and some of the one-year enlistments in the regular army will expire. It will be necessary to get steady increments of new men, by further volunteering if possible. This matter is being thoroughly reviewed, and when completed, estimates and plans will be announced.

The importance of meeting this problem squarely cannot be overstated. The responsibility for making sure that there is no recurrence of war from the defeated nations is one that we must not evade. The failure to assume such a responsibility after the first world war aided in bringing on the second world war. We must not repeat the mistake. The effort will cost something, but nothing comparable to what a future war would cost.

Peace Not Yet Secure

No soldier has a prouder record than the American. He has been brave in battle and patient in hardship. He has forced the enemy to quit. The fighting is over, but peace is still to be made secure. We dare not become impotent. Too quick a demobilization would leave us unable to maintain our hope of world peace—our plan of preventing another world war.

30,247-639

The War Department is pledged to return the soldiers to civil life as quickly as possible, but there are still pressing duties imposed upon the armed forces. Chief among them is the imperative need to maintain the prestige and safety of the country.

Today no less than last year—no les sthan any time since Dec. 7, 1941—the soldier remains the protector and benefactor of his country.

Celler Urges India Exodus

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP).—Representative Emanuel Celler, Democrat, of New York, today called on Secretary of War Patterson to return all American troops in the India-Burma Theater before becoming "embroiled in British-India politics."

Asserting that widespread disorders in India would result if the British refused to permit Indian self-government, Representative Celler said the American troops might have to fight in self-defense and that the repercussions from such a situation "will be tragic."

In a letter to Mr. Patterson, Representative Celler said it was his information that as of Jan. 1 American troops in India had been reduced to 55,000 and that the number would be further reduced by 4,000 to July 1. All, he said, are being used to guard surplus property.

"Frankly," he said, "the excuse of the protection of surplus property is no longer valid for the keeping of a single American soldier in India."

Social Security Credits Urged For Vets

Washington, Jan. 28 (AP)—Expansion of the social security program to provide veterans with insurance credits for time spent in uniform was recommended by the Federal Security Agency today.

This was urged as part of a broaded "national system of social insurance" outlined in the Social Security Board's tenth annual report to Congress.

Eight Recommendations

In addition to old age and survivors insurance credits for veterans for time spent in service, the board recommended:

1. Federal insurance against medical care costs, including payments to doctors and hospitals.

2. Establishment of a single national program of unemployment insurance to replace existing federal-state programs.

3. Extension of jobless benefit rights to all employés in industries currently covered, and to as many noncovered groups "as is administratively feasible."

4. Maximum weekly unemployment benefits of at least $25, payable for up to 26 weeks.

Would Expand Insurance Plan

5. Expansion of the old-age and survivors insurance program to cover "all gainful workers," including agricultural, domestic and public service employes, as well as those in business for themselves.

6. Liberaliation of these benefits, particularly for low-paid workers.

7. Benefit payments for both permanent and temporary disabilities.

8. Expansion of Federal-state programs of general public assistance to cover "all needy persons . . . and so that payments may be more adequate."

Urge Removal Of Inequities

In urging a more comprehensive national social security program, the board said:

"It would be designed to close existing gaps in the coverage of both persons and risks, and to remove present inequities in the protection of workers and the financial burdens of employers. . . .

"It would greatly strengthen protection against want and dependency at a minimum cost."

Under the old-age insurance program the board urged that the qualifying age for all women be set at 60 rather than 65.

It also called for an increase from $3,000 to $3,600 a year in the amount of earnings subject to contribution and counted in the calculation of benefits.

GI's Letters Tell Of Destruction Of Surplus

Washington, Jan. 28 (AP)—Representative Latham (R., N.Y.) today cited what he termed "additional confirmation of wanton destruction of enormous quantities" of surplus military supplies in overseas Pacific bases.

Quoting from letters he said he has received from returned service men, Latham, in a House speech, called on Congress for immediate action "to decide what is to be done about it."

"250 Boats Burned"

Latham said one of the letters, written from New Caledonia, contained this description:

"'On Isle Nou over 350 boats of all kinds were burned, most of them in fair or good condition. . . . Every day for the past month a large crane on a barge sinks material into the sea, especially absolutely new electrical epuipment. . . .

"'In Plum Bay about 1,000 vehicles, especially G.M.C. trucks, have been dumped into the sea . . . together with thousands of tires.

Sedans Smashed

"'. . . At the motor pool at Anse Vata, Chevrolet sedans in perfect condition, were smashed. . . . At Nickel Docks, hundreds of cars were dumped and covered with earth from the adjoining hill. The area thus covered is from eight to ten acres.'"

Another letter, from a service man Latham said had recently returned from New Guinea, related that the writer had witnessed copper and steel pipe, all "brand new," thrown into the bay at Hollandia. "Hundreds of new marine motors, all new, were thrown into the bay. Millions of feet of lumber were burned."

Cites War Bond Pleas

Latham said the letter continued, with this comment:

"It is disgusting how men of our country could waste so much material and still have the nerve to tell the people to buy war bonds."

Latham has introduced legislation asking an investigation.

There was no immediate comment from the War or Navy departments.

SPEEDY ACTION AIMED ON PRICE, RENT CONTROLS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—(AP) Emerging from a conference with President Truman, Congressional Democratic leaders announced today they will press for speedy action on legislation to prolong price and rent controls for a year beyond June 30, 1946, expiration date.

Chairman Spence (D-Ky) immediately set House Banking Committee public hearings on the OPA extension bill to begin Tuesday of next week.

Early Action Needed

House Democratic Leader McCormack, of Massachusetts, said "the President feels that early action on extension of price control legislation as soon as possible is a matter of paramount importance to the country."

Mr. Truman told Congress in his State of the Union message last week that businessmen were entitled "to a clear statement of the policy of the government on the subject. Tenants and housewives, farmers and workers—consumers in general—have an equal right."

Rep. Wolcott of Michigan, senior Republican on the banking committee, said large numbers of Republicans would support a continuation of price control "where needed" but they want amendments for more precise definitions of OPA's powers.

Spence voiced the belief the bill would go through "without much trouble," and commented: "you know everybody is for self preservation. And that is just about what OPA amounts to in our economy today."

However, the extension measure is bound to meet some vigorous opposition. Some members just don't like anything about OPA.

Bowles Angers Southerners

Moreover, Southern Senators and representatives are irate over talk by Chester Bowles, OPA administrator, about putting price ceilings on raw cotton, and have threatened to fight against continuation of price controls unless they get assurances no ceiling will be put on cotton prices.

On the House floor, Rep. Slaughter (D-Mo) said today OPA extension would be "an empty gesture" if the administration pursued a policy of "buying a little industrial peace" by granting price increases to offset wage increases.

This, he said, would lead inevitably to inflation.

Consumer Goods Report Is Made

Washington, Jan. 28 (AP)—J. D. Small, Civilian Production Administrator, today issued a report giving this review and forecast on production of consumer products:

Automobiles—Total output in 1945 was only 83,702. This was one fifth of production forecast by manufacturers shortly after production controls were lifted following the end of the war.

Refrigerators—December shipments up 30 per cent over November to an estimated level of 150,000—about half the prewar rate. At this rate, CPA said, prewar production could be reached by June.

Washing Machines

Washing Machines and Ironers—December shipments totaled about 65,000 units, an increase of nine per cent over November, and about 40 per cent of 1941 monthly shipments.

Radios—About 100,000 sets were produced during November, only eight per cent of the prewar figure of 1,100,000 sets a month, and "only a fraction of earlier forecasts by the industry."

Electric Irons—December shipments were about 92 per cent of the prewar rate. CPA predicted that prewar production of 380,000 monthly would be reached speedily after solution of the labor-management problem in the electrical industry.

Cleaners And Stoves

Vacuum Cleaners—About 90,000 shipped in December, ten per cent more than in November and 58 per cent of the prewar rate, which CPA said could be attained by May.

Electric Stoves—December shipments were about two thirds of the 1941 average monthly rate of 47,000 units.

Alarm Clocks—Shipment last month of 900,000 was 90 per cent of prewar rate, which CPA said would be reached by March.

Sewing Machines—About 5,000 were shipped in December. This is only about eleven per cent of the prewar rate. Output may match the 1941 rate of 48,000 monthly by June.

Democratic Leaders See White House Change Plan

Truman Displays Sketch of Proposed Addition

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP).—President Truman showed Congressional leaders today an architect's sketch of the proposed $1,650,000 addition to White House executive offices which the House voted down last week.

Senate Democratic leader Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, later told reporters there was no detailed discussion of the plan. Mr. Truman told his last news conference the controversy over the construction was a tempest in a teapot. He said it would not alter the appearance of the White House in so far as the public view was concerned.

In addition to Senator Barkley the group included Speaker Sam Rayburn, Democrat, of Texas; Senator Kenneth McKellar, Democrat, of Tennessee, and Representative John W. McCormack, Democrat, of Massachusetts.

Gets Army Engineers Post

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP).—President Truman nominated Brigadier General Roscoe Campbell Crawford today to be Assistant to the Chief of Engineers for a four-year term. He succeeds Brigadier General Thomas Matthews Robins, retired.

Favored for Maritime Post

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP).—A Senate commerce subcommittee today approved the nomination of Richard Parkhurst, of Boston, as a member of the Maritime Commission. The subcommittee deferred action on the nomination of Clarence M. Young, of California, as a member of the Civil Aeronautics Board to permit Senator William P. Knowland, Republican, of California, now on a trip to Japan, to express his views. Mr. Parkhurst formerly was chairman of the Boston Port Authority. He was nominated by President Truman to fill the unexpired term of Vice-Admiral Howard L. Vickery.

Atomic-Energy Control By Military Opposed

Washington, Jan. 28 (AP)—Dr. Harison Davies, of the Federation of Atomic Scientists, said today that development of atomic energy "must certainly be freed from every vestige of military control."

Davies, a native of Winchester, Va., is now located at Oak Ridge, Tenn., site of an atomic bomb plant. He said he spoke for more than 1,500 scientists and engineers connected with work on the new source of power.

He said in testimony prepared for the special Senate Committee on Atomic Energy that "we wish to go on record most strongly as favoring complete exclusion of the military from any policy-making function on the commission" proposed for handling the problem.

Liaison Not Included

Davies added, "We do not mean to exclude efficient liaison between the commission and the armed forces." He said the atomic scientists would not oppose making such liaison mandatory.

"However," he said, "it is in the best tradition of American Government that policy be made by civilians. A subject fraught with such tremendous signficance to our foreign policy as the development of atomic energy in this country must certainly be freed from every vestige of military control."

Other Stressed Points

Other points Davies made in indorsing the bill by Senator McMahon (D., Conn.) to create a commission to handle the atomic program included:

1. "As citizens, we fear unwise laws on atomic energy for the same reason other citizens fear them; we, too, value our lives."

2. "Any domestic legislation must . . . encourage the international control of atomic energy."

3. "Vigorous research and development in nuclear science must be maintained. The use of the fission phenomenon and its byproducts in physical, chemical, biological, medical and industrial research, as well as in power development, should greatly enrich our country and indeed all mankind."

4. "The bill . . . attempts to provide the freest possible exchange of scientific information. We strongly approve."

Espionage Act's Value Noted

5. "We feel the Espionage Act will provide as much national security as can be found in a policy of secrecy."

6. "The policy of postponing large-scale industrial application is, in our opinion, a wise policy. Premature development of special interests in this field may prejudice the possibility of international control."

7. "There can be no solution of the problem of security short of an effective international control of atomic and other weapons of offense, and of the elimination of war as a method for settling international disputes."

Would Require Atom Test O.K.

Washington, Jan. 28 (AP).—Legislation requiring the Navy to obtain consent of the Senate and House Naval committees before using United States warships for atomic bomb targets was introduced in the House today.

The author was Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House committee. The bill would authorize the Secretary of the Navy to select warships for the tests with the approval of the President but both congressional committees would have to agree to the selections, too.

Soil From Bomb Test Still Has Radioactivity

HAMILTON, N. Y., Jan. 28 (AP).—Two small pieces of fused earth taken from the atom-bomb crater in New Mexico are still radioactive after a lapse of six months, the Colgate University physics department reported today after making tests on the samples.

Dr. Clement L. Henshaw, acting head of the physics department, said radioactivity of the samples was indicated by placing them over night on a plate-holder containing unexposed film. Developed the next day without being exposed to light, the film showed it had been affected by Gamma rays of varying intensity, Dr. Henshaw explained.

time predecessor of its type. It has a range in excess of 1,500 miles and can carry a three-ton load of bombs, torpedoes and mines. Also it has a battery of five-inch rockets and 20 mm. machine guns in the wings.

The Navy has ordered $50,000,000, worth of these ships from Douglas to re-arm its post-war carrier fleet. Somewhat similar in appearance and characteristics to the Douglas SBD, the BT2D-1 is looked upon by the Navy as a successor to the Dauntless dive-bomber which turned the tide of battle at Midway and during the first two years of Pacific warfare played so important a part in the Navy's air offensive.

The BT2D-1 is said to have exceptional maneuverability and rate of climb. In vertical dives from service ceiling it has reached true speeds greater than 500 miles an hour. It is equipped with vertical dive brakes, described as the first production application of the principle. These brakes in addition to having important aerodynamical advantages afford the equivalent retarding effect of conventional trailing edge wing flaps with less than 80 per cent of the brake area previously required.

The new plane has a wing span of a little more than fifty feet, a length of thirty-nine feet and a weight of 10,470 minus useful load. With a wing fold of twenty-four feet, the BT2D-1 can be operated from any carrier. It is powered by a single Wright R-3350 radial engine, capable of delivering 2,500 horsepower at a take-off of 2,900 revolutions per minute. The Aeroproducts propeller has four blades measuring thirteen and a half feet in diameter.

BIDS U. S. STOP AS SUGAR DADDY

Landon Asks End of New Deal Spending Policy.

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Alf M. Landon, 1936 Republican presidential nominee and former Kansas Governor, called today for an end to the "siren song that Government is a sugar daddy, able to shell out money endlessly."

"Stop the New Deal policy of borrowing and borrowing—spending and spending—giving and giving," Landon urged in a speech before the annual meeting of the Kansas Day Women's Republican Club.

"Our national Government cannot possibly carry the financial burden of the world on its shoulders—and continue to give a living to those unwilling to do an honest day's work. All issues in the end relate to a balanced budget and to economy and efficiency in government."

Mismanagement of its international relations, he declared, brought the United States to the place where it is "vitally essential to America to keep the British Empire a going concern—strong in a world concord of nations."

Must Keep Britain Strong.

"Not to keep Great Britain strong would be to abandon the continent of Europe to Russia," he said. "If that happens, the weight of Russia falls across Asia as well as Europe."

Landon said that he had less fear or Russia or Russian purposes than had many others.

"We are dealing there with a strong people who have long been repressed in many directions by the outside world," he said, "and who now, feeling themselves strong, are asserting themselves in unreasonable ways.

"I think we should be patient and fair with Russia—but firm," Landon asserted. "Much more firm than we have been in standing for those principles and those international ideologies which—as far as we are concerned—were definitely involved in both world wars. It is obvious as negotiations go on, adjustments be made. Adjustments on details, but not on principles."

Wainwright Sees Apathy

DETROIT, Jan. 28 (AP).—General Jonathan M. Wainwright, who commanded the American forces at Bataan and Corregidor, warned today he is "beginning to see those symptoms of apathy and disinterest which have appeared at the end of every war we have fought."

"When those symptoms appear, disintegration of the armed forces invariably follows," the general told members of the Detroit Economic Club.

"From the beginning of the republic, men rich in wisdom and experience have warned that military impotency breeds international disrespect, encourages aggression and finally sets the stage for another war," he said.

General Wainwright made a plea for universal military training and said the only alternative would be maintenance of a large standing army which would be costly and repugnant to the American people.

He said he had gained thirty-five pounds since his release from a Japanese prison camp and is now almost at normal weight.

UNO Group Visits Hyde Park Again

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—Members of the United Nations site inspection committee planned another look today at Hyde Park and Kingston, N.Y., as possibilities for "the capital of the world."

The reexamination of these areas was prompted by what Dr. Stoyan Gavrilovic, the committee chairman, said was a new offer of fifteen acres on the Kingston side of the Hudson River and 25 on the Hyde Park side to supplement the late President Roosevelt's estate.

Will Leave Sunday

Committee members also were to confer with New York City representatives regarding the possibility of establishing temporary headquarters here.

The committee expects to return to London next Sunday.

Dr. Gavrilovic said his group was preparing a detailed report on possible UNO headquarters sites with great care because "we are building not for five years but from 50 to 1,500 years."

40 Square Miles Needed

Saying the committee felt at least 40 square miles would be needed for the permanent seat, the chairman explained: "It will be the capital of the world, and 40 square miles is not too much."

He said the committee had not recommended any single site, but described as "favorable, more favorable or less favorable" the places listed in a report cabled to London.

UNO SITE COMMITTEE TO WORK ON REPORT

NEW YORK, Jan. 28. — (AP) The sub-committee named to hunt a world headquarters site for the United Nations Organization somewhere in the Northeastern section of the United States announced tonight it would begin drafting its final recommendations tomorrow.

Just what the committee would recommend, they declined to indicate but the chairman, Dr. Stoyan Gavrilovic of Yugoslavia, remarked that the sub-committee had before it engineering reports on proposed sites in four states—New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Other states, including Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Vermont, also have offered sites.

ADD FRANKFURT ELECTIONS NIGHT

AMERICAN MILITARY GOVERNMENT SPOKESMEN EXPRESSED SATISFACTION WITH "THIS FIRST BIG AMERICAN EXPERIMENT IN BRINGING DEMOCRACY TO GERMANY." MORE THAN 3,000,000 GERMANS VOTED SUNDAY AND THE WEEK BEFORE IN THE FIRST LARGE-SCALE FREE ELECTIONS SINCE HITLER'S RISE TO POWER, AND 83.6 PERCENT OF THE ELIGIBLE VOTERS CAST THEIR BALLOTS. THE SOCIAL DEMOCRATS, WITH A MILDLY SOCIALISTIC PLATFORM, RECEIVED PREFERENCE THEN IN SOME OF THE TOWNS IN GREATER HESSE.

ON THE BASIS OF NEARLY COMPLETE RESULTS INDEPENDENTS AND NON-PARTISANS HAVE WON 26,553 COUNCIL SEATS, COMPARED WITH THE CHRISTIAN SOCIAL UNION'S 21,929 SEATS. THE SOCIAL DEMOCRATS HAVE WON 9,677 SEATS ON RURAL COUNCILS; THE COMMUNISTS 569, AND THE LIBERAL DEMOCRATS, REPRESENTING THE EXTREME RIGHT, 606.

THE HIGH NUMBER OF INDEPENDENT SEATS INDICATED STRONGLY THE ELECTION WAS BASICALLY ONE OF PERSONALITIES RATHER THAN PARTIES.

INCOMPLETE RETURNS FROM THE 11,000 TOWNS OF LESS THAN 20,000 POPULATION WHICH VOTED YESTERDAY AND THE SUNDAY BEFORE GAVE THIS OVERALL PICTURE FOR THE AMERICAN ZONE:

CHRISTIAN SOCIAL UNION, ALSO KNOWN AS CHRISTIAN DEMOCRATIC PARTY, 1,316,194 VOTES; SOCIAL DEMOCRATS, 872,412; COMMUNISTS, 126,927; LIBERAL DEMOCRATS, 57,043; INDEPENDENTS AND NON-PARTISANS, 862,789.

SAYING HE BELIEVED MORE MONEY WAS WASTED IN EARLY EFFORTS TO SET UP PRIORITIES AND TO HARNESS THE NATION'S INDUSTRIAL MACHINE TO WAR "THAN WAS EVER WASTED IN DUPLICATING OR COMPETITIVE PROCUREMENT BETWEEN THE SERVICES," THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY ADDED:
"I BELIEVE THAT THE GAP BETWEEN BOTH ARMED SERVICES AND THE STATE DEPARTMENT, ABETTED BY MISTAKES OF INDIVIDUALS INSIDE THE SERVICES, WAS MORE RESPONSIBLE FOR PEARL HARBOR THAN ANY LACK OF COOPERATION BETWEEN THE SERVICES."

(CX) A SPECIAL GOVERNMENT MEDIATOR APPOINTED BY SECRETARY OF LABOR SCHWELLENBACH LAST (MONDAY) NIGHT FLEW TO DETROIT AND PROMPTLY SUMMONED GENERAL MOTORS CORPORATION AND UNITED AUTO WORKERS (CIO) OFFICIALS TO A JOINT MEETING TO TAKE PLACE TODAY (TUESDAY).

JAMES DEWEY, THE MEDIATOR, A FORMER MEMBER OF THE LABOR DEPARTMENT'S CONCILIATION SERVICE, PREDICTED THE 69-DAY-OLD STRIKE WOULD BE SETTLED WITHIN THIS WEEK.

OTHER MAJOR DEVELOPMENTS IN THE NATION'S INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES WERE:

(CX) HENRY FORD II ANNOUNCED YESTERDAY (MONDAY) HIS COMPANY HAD BOOSTED WAGES FOR 19,000 SALARIED AND HOURLY EMPLOYES 15 PER CENT, FOLLOWING UP AN 18-CENT HOURLY INCREASE NEGOTIATED WITH THE UNITED AUTO WORKERS (CIO) LAST WEEK FOR PRODUCTION WORKERS.

THE NEW GROUP WAS NOT COVERED IN THE UAW CONTRACT, FORD NOTED, ADDING THE RAISE WILL BE RETROACTIVE TO JAN. 1 AND WILL INCLUDE 4,335 FOREMEN OF THE COMPANY TRANSFERRED FROM AN HOURLY TO A SALARY BASIS.

FORD'S ACTION WAS THE LATEST IN A DAY DURING WHICH MEAT INDUSTRY WORKERS BEGAN SENDING OUT SUPPLIES TO FILL EMPTY BUTCHER SHOP SHELVES, THE CIO-UAW ANNOUNCED IT PLANNED TO PRESS WAGE DEMANDS AGAINST HUDSON, PACKARD, CONTINENTAL MOTORS, AND BRIGGS MANUFACTURING COMPANIES COMPARABLE TO THE FORD AND CHRYSLER INCREASES NEGOTIATED LAST WEEK.

IN ADDITION, THE NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD OPENED HEARINGS TO DETERMINE IF GENERAL MOTORS CORPORATION--WHOSE 205,000 EMPLOYES HAVE BEEN IDLE SINCE NOV. 21--REFUSED TO BARGAIN IN GOOD FAITH OVER THE UAW'S WAGE DEMANDS.

AND THOUGH NO SPECIFIC ACTION WAS APPARENT IN THE STEEL STRIKE, WHICH SENT 750,000 UNITED STEELWORKERS OF AMERICA (CIO) MEMBERS OFF THEIR JOBS AND HAS NOW MADE SOME 40,000 MORE IDLE FOR LACK OF STEEL SUPPLIES, AT LEAST ONE WASHINGTON SOURCE INDICATED THE STRIKE MIGHT END SOON.

ANOTHER CIO UNION ANNOUNCED YESTERDAY ITS MEMBERS WOULD STRIKE AT 2 P.M. TODAY AT THE CATERPILLAR TRACTOR COMPANY, PEORIA, ILL., OVER WAGE AND OTHER DEMANDS. GRANT W.OAKES, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED FARM EQUIPMENT AND METAL WORKERS UNION (CIO), SAID THE PLANT HAD BETWEEN 16,000 AND 18,000 EMPLOYES COVERED IN A CONTRACT WHICH WILL EXPIRE FEB. 22.

OAKES SAID THE UNION WAS SEEKING A 30 PER CENT WAGE INCREASE, SETTLEMENT OF 66 SEPARATE GRIEVANCES, AND WHAT HE CALLED "WAGE INEQUALITIES." THE SAME UNION CALLED A STRIKE A WEEK AGO AT 11 INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY PLANTS, COVERING 30,000 EMPLOYES IN FOUR STATES, OVER 30 PER CENT WAGE INCREASE DEMANDS.

ALTHOUGH NO DATES WERE SET, A SPOKESMAN FOR THE UAW, WHICH REACHED WAGE AGREEMENTS WITH FORD AND CHRYSLER SATURDAY, SAID WAGE NEGOTIATIONS WOULD BE STARTED WITH OTHER CAR COMPANIES, SUPPLIERS AND EQUIPMENT MANUFACTURERS.

UNION SPOKESMEN INDICATED THE FORD AND CHRYSLER WAGE AGREEMENTS WOULD SERVE AS PATTERNS FOR THE REST OF THE INDUSTRY.

HOWEVER, STEEL INDUSTRY SPOKESMEN CAUTIONED THAT THE AUTO INDUSTRY--STEEL'S BIGGEST CUSOMER--WOULD BE HARD HIT BY A STEEL FAMINE IN A MATTER OF DAYS. ONE ESTIMATE WAS THAT NEARLY A QUARTER MILLION WORKMEN MIGHT BE IDLE BY THE END OF THE WEEK IN THE AUTO AND AUTO PARTS INDUSTRIES.

HOWEVER, AN AIR OF OPTIMISM PERSISTED GENERALLY OVER INDUSTRIAL AFFAIRS AND ONE HIGH OFFICIAL IN WASHINGTON PREDICTED THE STEEL STRIKE WOULD END "WITHIN A WEEK OR SO."

REVERBERATIONS OF THE STEEL STRIKE WERE HEARD IN CONGRESS AGAIN WHEN REP.HELEN GAHAGAN DOUGLAS (D-CALIF) SAID THE STEEL INDUSTRY WAS "INVITING WIDESPREAD PROPOSALS NOT ONLY FOR GOVERNMENT OPERATION OF GOVERNMENT-OWNED STEEL MAKING FACILITIES, BUT FOR NATIONALIZATION OF THE STEEL INDUSTRY."

MEAT SUPPLIES WERE INCREASING CLOWLY THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY WITH STRIKING CIO AND AFL MEAT WORKERS BACK ON THE JOB UNDER FEDERAL OPERATION OF PACKING PLANTS. MEANWHILE THE UNION ESTIMATED 3,000 TOOL AND DIE MAKERS IN 65 SMALL SHOPS IN THE DETROIT AREA HALTED GENERAL MOTORS WORK AS SCHEDULED, IN TIGHTENING THE 69 DAY STRIKE AGAINST THE CORPORATION.

FACT-FINDING HEARINGS WERE RESUMED IN WASHINGTON IN THE PENNSYLVANIA BUS WAGE DISPUTE WHICH RESULTED IN A TWO-MONTH STRIKE RECENTLY IN 18 NORTHEASTERN STATES AND THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA. THE DRIVERS ARE DEMANDING HIGHER MILEAGE RATES.

A TRUCE WHICH TERMINATED A STRIKE OF CIO MAINTENANCE WORKERS IN FLINT, MICH., SCHOOLS WAS EXTENDED INDEFINITELY. THE STRIKE CLOSED 43 OF THE CITY'S 44 SCHOOLS TWO WEEKS AGO. THE BOARD OF EDUCATION IS CONSIDERING A COMPROMISE PROPOSAL GRANTING THEM $40 BONUSES AT THE END OF THE FISCAL YEAR.

SOME 1,000 PICKETS WERE THROWN AROUND THE WESTERN UNION BUILDING AT 60 HUDSON STREET IN NEW YORK CITY, WHERE THE CIO AMERICAN COMMUNICATIONS ASSOCIATION IS ON STRIKE.

CONTINUING LABOR DISPUTES KEPT MORE THAN 2,390,000 IDLE THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY.

LIE IS NOMINATED AS UNO SECRETARY

Norwegian Foreign Minister Favored For $40,000 Post

JAN 30 1946

London, Jan. 29 (AP)—The United Nations Security Council by secret ballot tonight nominated Trygve Lie, 50-year-old lawyer-diplomat and Norway's Foreign Minister, for the post of secretary general of the United Nations Organization.

The Security Council met secretly, but American officials who attended the gathering of the eleven-nation body said Lie's name was placed before the council by Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., American member of the council.

The council was in session only 30 minutes and the selection was said to be unanimous.

The General Assembly now must act upon the nomination, but Lie's election is regarded as a formality.

$40,000-A-Year Post

Thus the Foreign Minister will step into a $40,000-a-year post with the power to call to the attention of the Security Council any situation in the world that threatens peace and security.

His name is pronounced Trig-va Lee. The accent is on the first syllable of the first name.

The secretary general will be paid $20,000 in salary and $20,000 for expenses annually.

The nomination of Lie left only one major organization problem to be decided by the United Nations Assembly—selection of a site in the United States for the permanent home of the world peace agency.

The major powers of the council were said to have agreed last night at a conference in Stettinius's hotel room that Lie would have their unanimous support.

Two-Week Disagreement

Here is the story of last night's meeting as given by one fully informed authority:

The five-power session was called by Stettinius after he received word from the Russian delegates that they again were ready to take up the question of naming a secretary general.

The powers had been in disagreement for about two weeks.

Stettinius opened the informal meeting by asking whether there were any proposals.

The Russian Vice Commissar of Foreign Affairs, Andrei Vishinsky, promptly announced that the Soviet Union was willing to withdraw its heretofore firm support for either Stanjoe Simitch, Yugoslav Ambassador to the United States, or Foreign Minister Wincenty Rzymowski of Poland.

On the other hand, Vishinsky said, the Soviet Union could not accept the United States candidate, Lester Pearson, Canadian Ambassador to Washington, primarily because he is a North American and the site of the organization is to be in North America.

Stettinius then suggested Lie would be a suitable compromise candidate.

Chinese Indorses Lie

Dr. Wellington Koo, of China, immediately indorsed Lie. Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain and Joseph Paul-Boncour, French delegate, said they believed he would be acceptable but that they would have to consult their governments.

Today both reported their Cabinets had approved Lie, thus clearing the way for the meeting of the Security Council tonight.

The United Nations charter provides that the five powers must be unanimous on a secretary general and that he must be nominated by a secret ballot in secret session.

The council now reports to the General Assembly.

After tonight's meeting the council said its president, N. J. O. Makin of Australia, was "communicating urgently with Mr. Lie in order to discover whether he would be prepared to accept this nomination."

5 Commissions Approved

Meanwhile, the General Assembly, meeting in plenary session, approved committee recommendations for establishing immediately five commissions under the Economic and Social Council—a commission on human rights, an economic and employment commission, a statistical commission, a temporary social commission, and a commission on narcotic drugs.

The Assembly also approved a recommendation to establish if possible at this session three other commissions under the Economic and Social Council—a demographic commission to study population problems, a temporary transport and communications commission and a fiscal commission.

Norwegian Seen As Secretary Of UNO (HIGHTOWER)

London, Jan. 29 (AP)—Top officials predicted today that the Security Council shortly would nominate Norwegian Foreign Minister Trygve Lie as a compromise candidate for the $20,000-a-year post as secretary-general of the United Nations Organization.

In the tense dispute between Russia and Iran, representatives of the two countries were expected to meet today to seek a solution of that controversy.

Obstacles to the agreement on a secretary-general mostly were worked out at a five-power meeting last night in the hotel room of Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., chief United States delegate.

Stettinius Proposes Lie

Authoritative information was that the United States suddenly gave up its advocacy of Lester Pearson, Canadian Ambassador to Washington, and Stettinius formally proposed Lie as a compromise who might be acceptable to the United States, Britain and Russia.

The 50-year-old Norwegian lawyer-diplomat was Moscow's candidate for president of the UNO, but lost to Paul-Henri Spaak, Foreign Minister of Belgium, in later balloting.

Act To Help UNRRA

A United States proposal ot set up an eleven-member committee to seek further contributions to UNRRA from United Nations members was adopted unanimously by the Assembly's Social and Humanitarian Committee after a table-pounding speech by Representative Sol Bloom (D., N.Y.).

Bloom won over the votes of several Latin-American countries which previously had announced they were not able to promise any further financial help to UNRRA.

"Help, any kind of help," Bloom said, "is needed now, not sometime in the future. There is starvation facing millions upon millions of people in the world. We have a duty to them."

Not Binding On Nations

He said the resolution did not commit any government to definite help and admitted there were nations which could not be expected to contribute much.

Iran's new Premier, Ahmed Qavam es Saltaneh, disclosed in Tehran that he had instructed Ali Soheily, Iranian UNO delegate, to confer with Soviet Vice Foreign Commissar Andrei Vishinsky in a new effort to settle their dispute by direct talks.

United Nations sources said they had high hopes that the conference would "ease the tension."

Iran May Drop Protest

Delegates speculated that the new Iranian Government, known to have a more friendly attitude toward Russia, might agree to Vishinsky's suggestion that the Security Council "leave aside" the controversy pending direct Moscow-Tehran negotiations.

Vishinsky made that proposal yesterday in a speech before the eleven-nation Council after S. H. Taqizadeh, chief Iranian delegate, had repeated Iranian charges of Russian "intervention" in Soviet-occupied Azerbaijan province.

Soheily, a former Premier of Iran, speaks Russian fluently and has been a friend of Vishinsky's for many years.

While the delegates expectantly awaited their meeting, the Iranian-Russian question remained on the Security Council's agenda for further debate when the Council convenes again tomorrow.

Lie, 50, Is Good At Negotiating, Politics, Sports

Nominee for Secretary of U.N.O., Foreign Minister Since 1941, Is a Lawyer

JAN 30 1946

LONDON, Jan. 29 (AP).—Trygve Lie, who was nominated as secretary-general of the United Nations Organization tonight, is a stocky, fifty-year-old Norwegian labor lawyer with a recognized talent for negotiating.

The son of a carpenter, he had no background in international diplomacy when he became Norwegian Foreign Minister in 1941, but throughout his career he had shown what he calls an "impassioned" interest in Norwegian politics and labor law. Norway knows him as a good hand in bringing disputing parties to agreement.

His name is pronounced "Trigva Lee" with the accent in the first name on the first syllable.

Florid and intensely energetic, Lie devotes many leisure hours to skiing and playing tennis. He enjoys good food, good wine, good conversation and a good joke. His curly hair still is coal black.

Lie works hard, but his friends say he never seems to tire or to lose his knack of inspiring colleagues.

He was born in Oslo, and in 1914 entered the University of Oslo. He completed his legal training in 1919, and that same year got his first job as secretary general of the Norwegian Labor party. He kept the office until 1922, when he was appointed legal adviser to the Norwegian Trade Unions Federation. In 1939 he became Minister of Trade, Shipping and Industry.

Lie was one of the last of the Norwegian ministers to leave Oslo before the Germans entered in 1940. He then was in charge of supplies for the Norwegian Army and civil population. Escaping northward through Norway, Lie conferred with a small staff of experts in a remote country hotel and made the decision to requisition the whole Norwegian merchant fleet, 4,000,000 tons, and place it at the disposal of the Allies.

After flying to England, he worked with the exiled Norwegian government and took over from Halvdan Koht in 1941 as Foreign Minister, a post he held in the coalition government formed after Norway's liberation and in the labor government formed after the general elections last October.

Lie married in 1921. He has three daughters, one of whom married a Norwegian pilot officer who was killed in the battle of France.

A sports enthusiast, Lie until 1940 was president of the Norwegian Labor Sports Association. Like most Norwegians, he says, he was "practically born with skis on." He likes hunting, and even today his tennis is amazingly good.

IRAN PREMIER ASSURES BRITAIN OF COOPERATION

LONDON, Jan. 29. — (AP) The new Iranian Premier Ahmed Qavam Es Sultaneh tonight assured Prime Minister Attlee that he would "use all of my efforts towards a close cooperation" with Britain and asked British aid toward "helping the Iranian people to achieve its just and legitimate ambitions."

Ahmed Qavam in his message to the prime minister did not say what he meant by "just and legitimate ambitions."

Under Premier Hamimi, who Ahmed Qavam succeeded last week, Iran complained to the United Nations Security Council against what Iran termed "interference" in the Northern Iranian province of Azerbaijan.

Debate on the Iranian complaint was adjourned Monday at a security council meeting until tomorrow. Soviet charges against the British for military activities in Greece and Indonesia also are on the council's agenda.

The Soviet Vice Foreign Commissar, Andrei Vishinsky, chief Russian delegate to the UPNO, has taken the position that the Russian dispute with Iran is one which does not come within the council's scope.

AFL Excluded, WFTU Is Backed

LONDON, Jan. 29 (AP)—The General Committee of the United Nations Organization recommended tonight that the World Federation of Trade Unions be linked to the Economic and Social Council in an advisory capacity. Proposals that would bring the WFTU and the American Federation of Labor into the General Assembly in consultative capacities were defeated.

Senator Tom Connally of the United States delegation, who offered the proposal that the AFL be made an adjunct of the UNO, said its defeat was a "glaring discrimination against the AFL."

"This committee has practically slapped us in the face," Mr. Connally asserted. "Well, we can and will do a little slapping ourselves in the General Assembly."

Stettinius Gets Oxford Degree

Oxford, England, Jan. 29 (AP)—Oxford University today conferred the honorary degree of doctor of civil law on Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., head of the American delegation to the UNO.

New Malayan States Union Plan Of Britain

London, Jan. 29 (AP)—George Hall, Colonial Secretary, told Commons today that Malcolm MacDonald, high commissioner to Canada, had been selected tentatively as governor general of Malaya and Singapore under a new administrative setup.

MacDonald is the 45-year-old son of the late Ramsay MacDonald, first Laborite to become prime minister.

Hall said MacDonald's appointment awaited only parliamentary approval of the new plan of setting up a Malayan States Union with Singapore as a separate colony to replace the old system by which the area was administered partly as a colony of the Straits Settlement and partly as nine separate states.

SEES U. S. GRABBING ALL WORLD TRADE

Birmingham, England, Jan. 2 (A. P.).—Leopold S. Amery, Conservative ex-Secretary of State for India, declared in a speech here today: "American industry in all its phases is obsessed with the idea of conquering every market in the world. They are out to capture aviation, sea transport and finance, the fields of invisible as well visible exports."

He opposed both the proposed American loan to Great Britain and the Bretton Woods monetary plan which he called an attempt by the United States to restore the gold standard. "The way down which America is trying to drive us is the way to ruin and repudiation," he said.

HE'S GETTING EXPERIENCE

Officer Learns as He Hands Out Food for 222 GI Babies

BOURNEMOUTH, England, Jan. 29 (AP)—GI babies—222 of them—are providing plenty of experience for their mess officer, First Lieut. Marin S. Friedberg of Chicago, who is handing out the baby food until the infants and their mothers sail for the United States Monday on the Queen Mary.

"But, brother, will I know how to feed that one kid of mine!" Lieutenant Friedberg exclaimed while inventorying a list headed: "Organization: GI Babies."

The babies and their mothers, housed in a hotel overlooking the English Channel, now are being given special service by the Army and the American Red Cross—every comfort from a diaper service to a plush dining room.

MORE BRIDES TO SAIL

Bournemouth, England, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—American authorities today started processing the first contingent of 2,400 G. I. brides and babies who will sail for the United States February 3 on the Queen Mary.

The 222 British-American babies, together with their mothers, arrived here by special train yesterday from London after being assembled from the Midlands and the north of England.

They are quartered at the Carlton Hotel, once one of Britain's most popular American Red Cross leave centers.

FRENCH RECEIVE DRASTIC PROGRAM

PARIS, Jan. 29.—(AP) Interim President Felix Gouin laid before the people of France today a bleak domestic picture of impoverished soil, dwindling food resources and public debt, and in foreign affairs urged a "broad tripartite agreement among Russia, Great Britain, and France."

In his inaugural address to the Constituent Assembly, Gouin called for energetic remedial measures to prevent an inflationary spiral which he said could drive small-income people to the wall and "make all economic reconstruction and moral recovery of the land impossible."

Gouin outlined a drastic program of reductions in civil and military expenditures, further nationalization of industry and commerce, salary freezing, price control measures and general overhauling of production.

The assembly immediately discussed the program and then gave Gouin and his government a vote of confidence by 514 ballots to 51.

GOUIN FOR PACT WITH BRITISH AND RUSSIANS

Inaugural Address Calls for Grand Tripartite Agreement.

FAVORS NATIONALIZATION

New French President Also Declares for Closer Relations With U.S.

Paris, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—President Felix Gouin told the Constituent Assembly today that his foreign policy envisaged "a grand tripartite accord between Russia, England and France."

In his inaugural address to the Legislature, the new President also outlined a more extensive program of natoinalization, taking in business banks, part of the merchant navy, mines, insurance companies, electricity and gas.

Gouin declared for closer relations with the United States.

"We will pursue our co-operation with all the Allied nations and friends; with Czecho-Slovakia, Belgium, Norway, Holland, Luxembourg, Italy, the states of central Europe and the east, and South America, without forgetting the new China who was our associate in the war just finished," the successor to President de Gaulle said.

Echoing the words of De Gaulle, Gouin said he hoped one day to see Spain in the United Nations, but that first "Spain must rediscover the road to democracy."

To Shelter Republicans.

Gouin said France would continue to give protection and asylum to refugee Spanish Republicans and follow up the international conversations in which France has asked the United States and Great Britain to discuss jointly the state of their relations with Spain. He said this would be done "in the interest of making prevail the resolution recently adopted by the Constituent Assembly" in which the Legislature urged that France act alone, if necessary, in breaking relations with the Franco Government.

The President bluntly told the French people that until the next harvest it would be necessary to maintain the present bread ration. He said the wine ration must be reduced immediately, that the meat supply could not be expected to increase soon and that there was no relief in sight for the potato shortage.

He said France's financial situation is "serious." Gouin said Government expenses in 1945 were 532,000,000,000 francs, of which only 1,968,400,000 was covered by normal resources. He said note circulation increased until in December it reached 580,000,000,000 francs. Gouin said the Treasury faced a 1946 deficit of at least 500,000,000,0 francs, which is "more difficult to cover than last year."

President Gouin's Address to the French Assembly

PARIS, Jan. 29 (AP).—The complete text of President Felix Gouin's address today to the Constituent Assembly:

The government of Republican Action over which I have the honor to preside could not fail at the moment of its presentation to the National Constituent Assembly to salute, as befits, the great Frenchman who was assuming the heavy burden of power only yesterday.

Indeed our government does not at all forget, any more than does the country itself, the immense place occupied in it by Monsieur le General de Gaulle since the memorable day when once again was affirmed the eternal miracle of France, which always finds in her, at the fateful hours of her history, the men necessary for her destiny.

To render homage to the one who was our guide so long and will not cease to be our pride is not only to admire his role and praise the worth of his acts, but also to nurse the design of continuing his task. Then again it is to set for oneself the goal of carrying it out to the end, devoting to it as he did the fierce energy which constantly animated him while he fought for the independence and liberty of the country.

From his great example our government will draw the strength of heart it needs at the moment, so heavy with perils, when it takes its turn at the helm.

In this regard a first duty is imposed on us: That of telling the French the truth, the whole truth, hard as it may be, on the extent and continousness of the efforts demanded of them by the situation we have found before us on the verge of power.

We believe France has enough reason and energy, enough courage and will, to face the difficult straits entered by the nation, which we call on as a whole to join the struggle for its existence and its future.

The Harsh Realities

And here, gentlemen, are the harsh realities we must face.

During the five terrible years of the war our soil, once so fertile, gradually has become impoverished for lack of labor, fertilizer and agricultural machinery. Nature unhappily has aggravated that terrifying anemia this very year.

Less wheat, less meat, less wine, less potatoes—all these places a first vital problem before each Frenchman which it devolves on the government to solve without delay.

Now I tell the country seriously, while weighing my words, our will in this respect will not, alas, be able to perform miracles, and thus it is that our only possibility as regards bread will doubtless be to keep the present amount of rations until the harvest—on condition, besides, of a faster and greater rate of deliveries and imports.

For, with the same difficulties, we say without ambiguity that we will have to reduce the allotment given rationed consumers, although it is insufficient. The step will be taken without delay, for any procrastination might deprive France of wine altogether within two months. Only on that condition will the government be able to maintain the present ration exclusively for manual workers.

The situation is just as slim for meat, although in this field we have a large emergency stock, both in frozen meat of excellent quality and in preserved meat. This stock will see us through to the moment when we can find fresh meat. Until then the government would not be able to distribute a ration other than that given at present if it did not hope to see the producers' deliveries increase.

The shortage of potatoes, so cruelly felt, is the work of a seriously short yield, with the harvesting of it made inefficient to boot by vacillating instructions. The government will seek the means of parrying this regrettable situation without a truce, but it must say clearly that there is no prospect of perceptible improvement in view for the moment.

Such, gentlemen, is the correct picture of the food situation, which it is important for France to know in order to be able to judge fairly later the decisions we shall be called on to take, under the double slogan of speed and energy.

Another great problem is the state of our finances, which governs that of our money. There again it is a duty to inform the country clearly—for only when it learns its true situation will be able to face it with its habitual courage.

In this respect, from the fact ment it was constituted the government found itself faced with a situation of a serious character which none can fail to recognize. In 1945 expenditures reached 532,000,000,000 (francs), covered by normal resources to the extent of only 37 per cent. Note circulation rose gradually in the course of the last weeks, reaching the figure of 580,000,000,000 francs in December.

For 1946 the forecast remains just as severe: many of the budget estimates now are being passed to such an extent that a deficit of at least 309,000,000,000 must be expected for the fiscal year—harder to cover than last year, for we do not have certain exceptional resources which supplied our budget year.

In addition it must be foreseen that in the course of economic recovery the sale of short-term (government) bonds will become harried and harder because of the trend of savings toward private investments.

An Inflationist Rush

If we allowed this dangerous cycle to continue without remedying it, France thereby would risk finding herself driven into an inflationist rush which would reduce the working class, civil servants, pensioners and small investors to poverty, would discourage savings, would, in short, make all economic reconstruction and moral recovery of the land impossible.

That is why it is the imperious duty of the government to draw the country's attention to the financial difficulties and the energetic measures which are demanded in all urgency to remedy them.

As soon as possible the government will place plans before you on this subject for massive reduction of civil and military expenditures as well as its new plans for a fiscal effort demanded by the situation. Very heavy sacrifices will be demanded of all the French while seeing to it that they should be shared as fairly as possible.

The freezing of wages and salaries which we plan must, therefore, be part of a general policy stopping the rise of agricultural produce as well as of things of every kind needed for the daily life of the toiling classes.

In our view, these reinforced economic and fiscal measures must be the indispensable prelude to the country's recovery. To this end, the government this very day is defining with precision the fields in which it intends to apply its nationalization program and those that will remain in the domain of free enterprise which can and should be the field for private investments.

In the domain of public enterprise, to put an end to the uncertainties checking the resumption of business, the maximum speed will be undertaken in voting the bill on electricity and gas, the nationalization of certain big investment bonks, of certain insurance companies and mining companies, the partial nationalization of the merchant marine, of river transport, of freightage via inland navigation, and the transformation of former national corporations into the new forms.

Unified Bookkeeping

Immediate nationalization will be undertaken in the nationalized fields with the enterprises regrouped. A unified bookkeeping plan will be introduced so as to proceed easily with comparative analysis of their cost prices.

In the domain of private enterprise a distinction will be made between fields of production which may appear to be resuming sufficiently to diminish their controls and direct them progressively toward free operation, and those in which shortages will demand maintaining price controls.

Here regulation, on the contrary, will be reinforced and made effective by exemplary penalties against the black market. The Trade Offices (wartime government offices controlling each field of business) will be dissolved rapidly. Wherever their services must be maintained, these will be placed under the direction of the competent ministries assisted by equal representation commissions in which all the interested classes of producers and wage earners will be represented.

In a general fashion, distribution will be made in a manner that will lead the country to mass production of standard articles at low cost prices, permitting an increase on consumption by the masses.

Our luxury industries will be encouraged for their part, but exclusively aimed toward export so as to obtain for the country the indispensable capital for its economic re-equipment.

Finally, reorganization of distribution will be undertaken with the idea of reducing the number of middlemen for each class of produots and of simplifying the present system of profit margins, both in the method of calculating them and in the amounts.

Must Have Support

We do not hide the fact that such a policy can succeed only if it includes the thought out aherence of the French nation as a while and, from the start, of those who are its authorized representatives.

It is to them we address ourselves solemnly on this day, and we firmly believe they will hear us because we have faith, as they do, in the republic and in the normal play of democratic institutions. That is to say we will resort in no case to decree-laws but to the confident and every-day collaboration of the nation's representatives.

It is with their aid and with the enthusiastic adherence of the peasant and working-lass masses of the whole of our nation, joining in the recovery of the fatherland, that we intend to prove to certain superficial minds that the republic can save itself and can give proof of its qualities of efficiency and organization.

War and its destructions, treason and its moral after-effects, certainly have improverished and enfeebled the country, but the latter has enough material resources and enough creative intelligence within itself to look to the future with confident serenity in spite of the disquiet of the present moment.

The government's duty, in this field of ideas, will be to give an impetus and an ever faster rhythm to all branches of French activity.

Work, produce, organize—those, then, are the essential aims to which the government will assign itself, and the comforting credit sheet we soon will present to the country will bear witness eloquently to its capacity for action, the signs of which are multiplying in agriculture as well as in commerce, industry, reconstruction, coal production and transportation.

Continental France knows, besides, that for her recovery she can count not only on herself but also all of her children distributed over the different points of the globe who will live in the shadow of her flag.

Spirit of Fraternity

After having called on them to sit in the national constituent assembly, thereby showing its (the assembly's) desire to satisfy their aspirations and their wishes, it pertains to you, my dear colleagues, in the constitution you are drawing up, to mark a definite milestone in the orientation of French policy toward the teritories overseas. The spirit of fraternity of Republican France, one of the powers triumphant over racism, will permit her to translate her principles of liberty and equality into deeds.

We in no wise conceal the difficulties of our task, but the years through which we have just lived, the ideal for which we have struggled with the aid of our brothers of all races, all colors and all creeds, have hastened developments up to tne point where a revolutionary move must be accomplished.

Certainly there still are cruel hours to be feared, since in distant Indo-China we have to assure the protection of our nationals and of our loyal friends and to safeguard a great work accomplished in the interests of the native populations themselves, many of whom show us a touching attachment in this trial.

But we say very loudly that this work has only one goal: to assure the order needed there so that everybody can declare himself on the future political regime of those lands in full liberty and to re-establish the conditions for trusting and confident collaboration among France and the nations and the peoples with whom she intends to walk the paths of democracy and freedom.

After having brought out all these domestic problems, each of which is interdependent on the others, is it necessary to say that France in no wise forgets that interdependence also is the rule on international matters?

Just as after the first world war of 1914, and in spite of the disappointments that followed it, a great hope once more fills the hearts of men.

This hope is that which is placed in the maintenance, development and strengthening of the magnificent work initiated at San Francisco by the United Nations. It represents the terms of a solid peace which at last will make the forces of reason (right) prevail over the right of force.

France's Natural Place

France found her natural place there, for she was ever in the front rank of peoples concerned over international guaranties and collective security. She, therefore, will continue to affirm her faith, her spirit of soldiarity, her desire for hearty and confident collaboration with the peoples who were at her side in the test as they have not ceased to be since our liberation.

In that field of idea, and after having happily renewed the policy of alliance with the U. S. S. R. which has been a tradition of the republic for so many years, we intend to work together with England for mutually harmonious relations — prelude to a new, highly-desirable alliance which could some day become part of a broad tripartite agreen among Russia, Great Britain and France.

We intend also to tighten more than ever our community o principles, interests and goals with the great American republic to which we are united by so many fraternal and tested bonds.

Fnally, we will continue our co-operation with all Allied and friendly nations: with Czechoslovakia, Belgium, Norway, Holland, Luxemburfg, Italy, the states of central and eastern Europe, and South America, without forgetting the new China which was our associate in the war just ended.

It is thus under the aegis of confident and reasoned international collaboration that France will make an effort to make her legitimate concerns of security prevail as concerns Germany.

To internationalize the Ruhr, the arsenal of Pan-Germanism, to prevent the reconstitution of a centralized and therefore dangerous Germany for her offenstive re-establishment of her warlike power. That is what the French nation wants, not only for its own security but for world security; for security, like peace, is indivisible.

Bid to Spain

Among the countries that France wishes to see join the United Nations Organization one day, the provisional government of therepublic is not forgetting its Spanish neighbor or that, as has been said, Spain again must find the road of democracy. The gvoernment remains faithful to the declaration of the great powers on liberated nations, which undertakes to destroy, by joint aid to the democratic nations, the last vestiges of Nazism and Fascism and to permit these nations to establish the institution of their choice.

The government of the republic is decided for its part to continue without cease to protect Spanish Republican refugees, to maintain and extend the hospitality that it has not ceased to accord them, and to continue the international conversations in which it took the initiative in the interest of preserving—on that problem as on all others—the entente of the great powers, with the hope of making the Constituent Assembly's recently adopted resolution prevail.

Such, gntlemen, is the policy Guiding the government that presents itself before you and for which it asks your confidence and, still more than that, your daily assistance, because such assistance alone will be effective.

It is composed, certainly, of men who, belonging to different parties, sometimes were divided in daily action at a time when the later bloomed in a climate of relative financial well being which is no longer conceivable today.

In such circumstances France always has reacted with the marvelous equilibrium which is hers alone and which is made of moderation, of reason and also of profound political wisdom.

That is why, ladies and gentlemen, three great parties have just become associates, have joined together, not in lip service but from the bottom of their hearts, and together have taken oath to save France's development and the republic's hopes by their necessary unity.

The vote of confidence we ask you to give thus will be an act of faith in the destiny of the fatherland. Everything could be lost if we should come to give up.

Let us then show the people from whom we come that the democracy has the will to live and by that very act France will be saved.

PAPERS SHOW ALLIES KNEW OF PLOT TO KILL HITLER

Secret Documents Reveal Conspirators Sought Churchill Pledge.

OSS TIPPED OFF ROOSEVELT

Canaris, Master Mind of Scheme, Said Even to Have Divulged Plan to Vatican.

Nuernberg, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Secret documents, hitherto unpublished, say that the late President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and high Vatican officials had foreknowledge of the bomb plot against Adolf Hitler months before it happened in 1944, it was revealed here today.

Field Marshal Baron Mannerheim of Finland, Marshal Pierto Badoglio of Italy, Gen. Andorka of Hungary and two De Gaullists who operated out of Budapest in the guise of Vichy government officers were among the others named in these documents as being familiar with "Plan Valkyrie," the code name for the July 20 assassination attempt.

A sworn statement by Dr. Immanuel Schaeffer, a propaganda expert under Goebbels, said that Churchill was informed by a Swedish industrialist who operated as liaison between anti-Hitler forces and the British Government.

Allied Authority.

An authoritative Allied informant has stated that President Roosevelt received progress reports of the plot from operatives of the Office of Strategic Services in Switzerland, who maintained contact with the conspirators through an anti-Nazi member of the German diplomatic mission in Berne.

The Vatican was informed indirectly by Admiral Wilhelm Canaris, eccentric chief of the German counter-intelligence, through papal offices in Vienna, a German general has stated.

Mannerheim, Badoglio, Andorka and the two French officers were named in another statement as members of a secret world-wide anti-Hitler organization of which Canaris was the master-mind. Mannerheim, the documents asserted, worked secretly with Canaris during the war in obtaining the release of the sons of Poles who had formerly served as Czarist officers.

Churchill Promised Nothing.

The documents said that Churchill, although notified well in advance that an attempt was to be made on Hitler's life, had indicated to the Germans that they would receive no concessions from western Allies whether the plot succeeded or failed.

Schaeffer told Allied officers that two major plans for Der Fuehrer's assassination had been abandoned in favor of a third "total solution." This had four basic objectives—the elimination of Hitler, the withdrawal of all German forces on all fronts to the Reich's frontiers, creation of a new government and the opening of negotiations with Britain, the United States and Russia via Sweden.

"Representatives of the Foreign Office who were in a position to get permission to travel abroad 'on duty' had the task of taking up the negotiations with foreign powers," Schaeffer's statement said.

Canaris Died by Torture.

"A Swedish industrialist, an acquaintance of Churchill, was to act as liaison to the British Premier," the statement continued. "By order of (Dr. Carl Friedrich) Goerdler, the Swedish industrialist flew to London to approach the British Government about its attitude toward a German Cabinet under Goerdler's chairmanship. Churchill, however, who distrusted the whole affair, evaded a direct answer and Legation Counselor von Solz had to return to Berlin with negative results."

Goerdler, former Mayor of Leipzig, was later executed for participation in the plot.

The actual attempt on Hitler's life backfired into the execution of hundreds of German officers by revenge-maddened Nazis. Canaris himself died in the dungeon of a torture camp, strangled by piano wire.

PRISONERS USED FOR EXPERIMENTS BY NAZI DOCTORS

NUERNBERG, Jan. 29. — (AP) Nazis SS doctors sacrificed hundreds of prisoners as human guinea pigs in concentration camp experiments, 45-year-old laboratory secretary said today at the trial of 22 ranking Nazis for war crimes.

Alfred Balachowsky, one-time secretary in the Pasteur Institute, Paris, told the International Military Tribunal that he saw and handled case histories of numerous "patients" in the notorious Buchenwald camp.

The prisoners were used in experiments on typhus and on phosophorous burns, he said. Experiments also were conducted on sexual hormones.

Fatal Innoculations Charged

From 1942 to 1945 at least 600 persons, mostly Russians, were fatally inoculated with typhus by the Germans in order to maintain 12 strains of the disease among the inmates, he said.

"We know that intravenous typhus injections nearly always are fatal," the witness declared. "These men were murdered to keep those strains alive."

He also said that many prisoners were deliberately subjected to phosophorus burns to test various remedies which Nazi doctors hoped to use among German civilians in the wake of Allied bombings.

Another witness, Hans Cappelen, Oslo attorney, described a ride to death across Germany from the Gross Rosen camp in Silesia to Dachau in which he said, the bodies of 1,447 concentration camp captives were kicked off open railway cars at the last station.

"We had five days without food or water on open cars in sub-zero weather," he said. "About half the train load was dead by the last day."

'Ride Of Death' Pictured By Norwegian

Nuernberg, Jan. 29 (AP)—A Norwegian survivor told the international military tribunal today about a ride of death across Germany in which bodies of 1,447 concentration-camp captives were kicked off open railway cars at the last station.

Hans Cappelen, witness against the 22 ranking Nazis on trial for war crimes, testified:

"The SS guards acted like drunks as they hurried us from the Gross Rosen camp in Silesia to a train for Dachau because of the approach of the Red Army in February of last year. Four or five persons too feeble to walk fast had their heads bashed in with guns.

"We had five days without food or water on open cars in subzero weather. The man beside me died. About half the train load was dead by the last day."

German People Knew

The thin, sensitive face of the blond Oslo attorney hardened as he answered a question by the French prosecutor, Charles Dubost, as to whether the German people had known of the concentration camp horrors. He said:

"In Munich, 100 of us prisoners from Dachau, all looking like dead persons, were marched through the streets to dig in bomb ruins. The people could see us. There was no sympathy."

He said Gestapo agents in Norway burned his feet with a lamp but "it didn't hurt so much because I was so feeble I didn't care." He was confined and tortured in Oslo for 25 months before he finally was sent to a concentration camp. He said he owed his life to Swedish Count Bernadotte, who arranged with Heinrich Himmler last spring to rescue Scandinavian nationals.

Physical Torture

Cappelen said he was beaten so severely he was partly paralyzed for many months. Hair was torn from his head during his first two interrogations, he said.

"The Germans were absolutely mad," he testified. They roared at me like animals, asking questions I could not answer. They put a screw device on my leg and tore flesh from my bones. I fainted. They brought me to my senses and put the screw on my neck, tearing my flesh."

Later, he said, pins were jabbed under his fingernails.

Youthful Francois Boix, Loyalist veteran of the Spanish civil war and a Frenchman, testified that only 30 of the first 2,000 Russian prisoners sent to the Mauthausen concentration camp in 1941 survived three months of Nazi concentration methods.

Fattened, Slaughtered

On one occasion, he testified under questioning of Russian Prosecutor Lieut. Gen. R. A. Rudenko, the Germans gave Russian prisoners "special treatment" — good clothing, plenty of food and cigarettes until they were fat enough to take a good picture. After the pictures were taken they were sent to the gas chamber and executed, Boix said.

Earlier, Biox pointed out Albert Speer, Nazi Production Minister, as "a distinguished visitor" at the Mauthausen camp in 1943.

"Speer was visiting the Couzin concentration camp near Mauthausen with a group of Nazi leaders," Boix testified. "I had to develop pictures afterward and write the names and date on 36 photographs taken by an SS photographer because many SS men wanted prints.

"Some pictures were taken in the camp and others in the Mauthausen quarry," he continued. "Speer was wearing a light suit and always looked pleased. In one photo he was shaking hands to congratulate the camp commander."

Allied Policies Criticized By Germans, U. S. General Says

BERLIN, Jan. 29. — (AP) Germans throughout the United States zone of occupation are becoming more openly critical of Allied policies, but a "continued absence of public unrest doubtless results at least in part from the ability of the authorities to maintain basic food rations at an adequate minimum level," Gen. Joseph T. McNarney reported today.

The American Military Governor, in a monthly report for December, traced most of the criticism by Germans to "a general feeling of self-pity on the part of the Germans, who irrationally expected that the Allies must take care of them."

Imports Needed

The winter has been a mild one and authorities have been able to check epidemics, McNarney said. But in order to maintain the normal consumer ration at 1,550 calories per person daily until the end of the present crop year in September, it will be necessary to import into the American zone 1,100,000 tons of food, of which 980,000 tons will be bread grains alone, he added.

McNarney said that the first stage of denazification, in the broad field of state and local governments, had been completed, and the Germans were making slow progress toward grasping the ideals of democracy. His report said that more than 900,000 persons in the government field were investigated, and about 20 per cent of them, including thousands of former civil servants, were classed as "unfit to hold positions of importance and responsibility."

McNarney said the Americans had met difficulty in finding true anti-Nazis to replace those ousted from public office, for "less than one per cent of the Germans investigated in the American zone" showed definite evidence of having engaged in anti-Nazi activity before the Allied victory.

The report said that at the end of 1945 more than 4,000 industrial plants were operating in the American zone, 53 per cent of them in the consumer goods category.

Transportation, particularly with regard to fuel distribution; the staggering German internal debt of 390,000,000,000 reichsmarks, and the supply of inflationary money remain outstanding problems of the occupation authorities, the report said.

German Grumbling Seen On Rise

Berlin, Jan. 29 (AP)—The Germans are becoming more outspoken in their criticism of Allied occupation policies, General Joseph T. McNarney, United States commander in Germany, declared today, but their behavior thus far has been better than expected, perhaps because of an exceptionally mild winter.

The problem of displaced persons has become so acute, however, that McNarney, in his monthly report for December, urged immediate intergovernmental action to take off American hands more than 250,000 persons who are stateless or otherwise unable to return to their homes.

Feeling Of Self-Pity

Most German criticism, the American military governor said, could be traced to a "general feeling of self-pity on the part of the Germans, who irrationally expected the Allies must take care of them."

While the mild winter has enabled Allied authorities to hold epidemics in check, the General said, "the continued absence of public unrest doubtless results a least in part from ability of the authorities to maintain basic food rations at an adequate minimum level."

The report conceded that the Americans were having difficulty in finding true anti-Nazis to replace ousted Nazis, saying "less than one per cent of the Germans investigated in the United States zone showed definite evidence of anti-Nazi activity."

McNarney said, however, that the first phase of denazification had been completed.

3027-655

Plants In Operation

More than 4,000 industrial plants were operating in the zone at the end of the year, the commander reported, but their output was only about 10 to 12 per cent of current capacity. Fifty-three per cent of the plants were in the consumer-goods class.

Transportation is still the main bottleneck, especially in the distribution of coal, the report showed. Production of hard coal in Germany approximated 4,800,000 tons a month during the last quarter. This was only 42 per cent of the 1938 average.

Since the Allied occupation 4,375,000 tons of solid fuels have been exported to six western European countries, a third of it to France, a fourth to Belgium and the remainder to Holland, Luxembourg, Denmark and Norway.

Debt A Problem

The report warned that the staggering internal debt—390,000,000,000 reichmarks, involving annual interest payments of 11,000,000,000 reichmarks—and inflationary money supplies were still dangerous elements in the field of finance. [The reichmark is equivalent to about 10 cents at the present military rate of exchange.]

The number of displaced persons in the American zone increased by 16 per cent during December, or 71,000 persons, the report said, while repatriation hit a new low—11,000 for the month.

At the end of the year the American zone was providing care for 511,000 displaced persons and altogether in the American, British and French zones there are still about 900,000 displaced persons, of whom about 600,000 are Polish.

Stateless Persons

Referring to the problem of 250,000 stateless and nonrepatriable persons now on American hands, McNarney said that during December none of these was resettled in Germany and added:

"An early solution of this problem by an intergovernmental committee on refugees or by other intergovernmental action is urgent. In this group are some who palpably cannot be resettled in Germany and must therefore await intergovernmental decisions. . . .

"As prescribed at present, immigration laws are insufficient. Furthermore, in order to qualify as an immigrant, a person must be able to establish his nationality."

The report pointed out that the problem was becoming aggravated by increased infiltrations into the American zone—including Jews coming from Poland and from other zones in Germany.

From Oil To Baking Powder

Berlin, Jan. 29 (AP)—The great Leuna synthetic oil plant at Halle, once one of the chief cogs in the Nazi war industry, is now producing baking powder, Soviet authorities disclosed today.

Communists Win In Berlin Voting

Berlin, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Although voting was not by party labels, Communists have scored a victory in the first large-scale labor union elections held in Germany since 1932 by winning 312 out of 559 seats for the greater Berlin union convention.

The Social Democrats finished with 226 delegates and non-partisans elected 17. The others were scattered.

FRANKFURT, Germany, Jan. 29—(AP) Remnants of eight battalions were among the 3,756 American soldiers who sailed today from Bremen and Le Havre for the United States.

Battalions cleared out of the European theater in the sailings were the 893rd Tank Destroyer battalion; the 975th and 553rd Field Artillery battalions; the 285th, 286th, 289th and 1277th Engineer Combat battalions; and the 135th Antiaircraft Artillery battalion.

Army Says Zionists Organized Entries of Jews to U. S. Zone

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH

BAD TOELZ, Germany, Jan. 29.—(AP) A U. S. Third Army intelligence report on the infiltration of Polish Jews into the U. S. occupation zone in Germany says Zionist groups within Poland financed and organized such movements westward over firmly established routes.

The report, which I have seen, said it had been found that the Jews were organized in Poland by "Kibutzes" — groups established there to prepare the Jews for life in Palestine.

"All the Zionist 'committees' have this much in common: They all render assistance to the prospective infiltrees by giving them advice on what routes to follow, where to go, how to cross the border and whom to see along the routes for further [illegible]," said the report, which has not yet been made public officially. "Where necessary they provide material aid in the form of money and clothing."

The report said the majority of the Jews making such trips were bent on reaching Palestine, but those infiltrating into the American zone firmly believed that "if Palestine is inaccessible to them, a Jewish state will be established in Bavaria."

In Frankfurt, Judge Simon W. Rifkind, adviser on Jewish affairs to Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, commented:

"It is not to say these people want to settle in Bavaria. Except for perhaps a handful of German Jews of advanced years who may wish to return to their homes, the Jews do not want to live in Germany or any part of it."

The Third Army report said "the infiltrees arriving in this area at the worst, are adequately clothed and seem to have been eating well enough to be in no danger at all of malnutrition."

(On Jan. 2, Lt. Gen. Sir Frederick E. Morgan, UNRRA chief in Germany, said thousands of Jews were entering the U.S. Zone from the east with plenty of money and a "well organized, positive plan to get out of Europe," and that a secret Jewish organization was behind the plan. The statement brought protests from the World Jewish Congress, the World Zionist Organization, the American World Jewish Congress and the American Zionist Emergency Council.

The Third Army report said there were two principal routes for the movement—one through Lodz in Poland to Prague, Czechoslovakia, and across the border, where tickets could be bought for Munich; the other by Red Army truck to Berlin and then by rail to Munich. Communications along these routes were "in some cases better than those of the army," the report said.

The intelligence report also said many infiltrees would leave Poland upon hearing that shipping space would be available in the Adriatic port of Trieste, and that it was the determination of the majority to reach the Eastern Mediterranean "whether it be through legal or illegal means."

[A delayed dispatch from Warsaw quoted Pawel Zelecki, general secretary of the Central Committee of Polish Jews, as saying 20,000 Jews had left Poland within the last year and that only 80,000 Jews were left in the country.

[He said "Fascist gangsters" were waging a terror campaign against the Jews in Poland, so that "among part of the Jewish population panic has broken out and a tendency to mass emigration has been observed." The Polish Government is punishing severely any persons found guilty of anti-Semitic activities, he said.]

3d Army Report Tells Of Jewish Underground

By Michael Goldsmith

Bad Toelz, Germany, Jan. 29 (AP). A United States 3d Army intelligence report on the infiltration of Polish Jews into the American occupation zone of Germany said today that the movement was financed and organized by Zionist groups within Poland.

The report, which I have seen but which has not been made public officially, said the majority of Polish Jews were determined to reach Palestine, but that the Jews infiltrating into the United States zone had a firm belief that "if Palestine is inaccessible to them, a Jewish state will be established in Bavaria."

Morga Satement

[Lieut. Gen. Sir Frederick E. Morgan, UNRRA chief of Germany, said on January 2 that thousands of Jews with plenty of money were entering the United States zone from the East with a "well organized, positive plan to get out of Europe." He said a secret Jewish organization was behind the movement.

[The World Jewish Congress, the World Zionist Organization, the American World Jewish Congress and the American Zionist Emergency Council immediately voiced protests, calling Sir Frederick's report false.

[UNRRA headquarters in Washington called for the British general's resignation, which he refused to tender. Sir Frederick is now in the United States conferring with Herbert Lehman, head of the relief agency, who suspended the request for the resignation pending the conference.]

Rifkind Comment

In Frankfurt, Judge Simon H. Rifkind, adviser on Jewish affairs to Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, made this comment on the 3d Army report:

"It is not true to say these people want to settle i nBavaria. Except for perhaps a handful of German Jews of advanced years who may wish to return to their homes, the Jews do not want to live in Germany or any part of it."

The 3d Army intelligence report said it had been revealed that the Jews were organized in Poland by Kibutzes—groups established in that country to prepare the Jews for life in Palestine.

Aid Described

"All the Zionist 'committees' have this much in common: they all render assistance to prospective infiltrees by giving them advice on what routes to follow, where to go, how to cross the border, and who to see along the routes for further help. Where necessary, they provide material aid in the form of money and clothing."

The 3d Army report said parties of Jews were sent westward along firmly established routes. One of two major routes was said to be through Lodz in Poland to Prague in Czechoslovakia and over the German border, where the Jews bought railroad tickets to Munich. The secnod major route was by Red Army truck to Berlin and then by rail to Munich.

Communication Setup

The report said communications along these underground routes were "in some cases better than those of the army."

The report said many Jews would leave Poland on hearing that shipping space would be available in the Adriatic port of Trieste, and that ti was the determination of the majority to reach the eastern Mediterranean, "whether it be through legal or illegal means."

"The infiltrees arriving in this area at the worst are adequately clothed and seem to have been eating well enough to be in no danger at all of malnutrition," he report said.

GENERAL MORGAN RESTORED TO DUTY BY UNRRA CHIEF

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29. — (AP) Herbert H. Lehman, director general of UNRRA, announced today that he had decided to restore Lt. Gen. Sir Frederick Morgan to duty as chief of UNRRA operations in Germany.

The relief agency had called for Morgan's resignation after he expressed belief at a news conference Jan. 2 that a secret Jewish organization was promoting an exodus of thousands of Jews from Poland to the U. S. zone in Germany. The request for the resignation later was suspended.

Several Conferences

Lehman announced his decision after several days of conferences with Morgan here and in New York.

"In view of all circumstances, I have concluded that I am justified in continuing to place confidence in him," Lehman said in a statement.

Morgan's statemen s stirred up strong protests from several Jewish organizations. UNRRA requested his resignation, contending that "issues outside the scope" of the agency had been raised. He refused, however, to quit.

Lehman said that he believed that Morgan "did not intend to impute sinister motives to individuals or organizations seeking to improve the sorry plight" of displaced persons and that "he does not hold religious prejudices x x x".

In a letter to Lehman, dated yesterday, the British general said he could only reiterate his "deepest regret" that he "should have been guilty of uttering such words."

Morgan Utters Denial

However, he added:

"I reject utterly any suggestion that I am anti-Semitic in outlook. That I had or have any intention whatever of imputing to any individual or group any form of sinister motive I most stoutly deny.

"My sympathies are x x x entirely with our displaced persons irrespective of race or religious convictions x x x."

Lehman said that Morgan would return to his post in Germany "as promptly as possible."

He added that he was confident that when Morgan was restored to duty he would treat all groups of displaced persons fairly and in accordance both with their needs and with the principles of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

The UNRRA chief said Morgan's services with UNRRA, prior to the Jan. 2 press conference "had been effective and satisfactory".

SAYS 20,000 JEWS HAVE LEFT POLAND

Warsaw, Jan. 27 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Pawel Zelecki, general secretary of the Central Committee of Polish Jews, told a press conference today that "Fascist gangsters" have killed 352 Jews in Poland since the country's liberation. He estimated 20,000 Jews had left Poland within the last year and that only 80,000 Jews were left in the country.

"Among part of the Jewish population panic has broken out and a tendency to mass emigration has been observed," Zelecki said. "Criminal activities of Polish reactionaries have largely contributed to the anxiety and nervousness of the Jewish population."

The Government is severely punishing persons guilty of anti-Semitic activities, he said, declaring the enemies of the Jews likewise are those attacking the Polish Government. He said his committee "didn't get one cent" from the Jews of America and other countries in the last year and clothing aid was insignificant.

Palestine Civil War Held Certain Under Zionist Goal

London, Jan. 29 (AP)—Two outspoken opponents of Zionism told the Anglo-American Committee on Palestine today that creation of a Jewish national state there would lead inevitably to civil war.

Appearing after representatives of nine British Jewish organizations had been heard, Maj. Gen. Sir Edward Louis Spears, first British Minister to Syria and the Lebanon, declared the Zionist movement was not a religious one and that it contained "many of the undesirable features of Nazism in Germany."

Dr. Agnes Maude Royden, British author of "The Problem of Palestine," recalling experiences in Palestine in 1938, said, "I could not find any case for Zionism at all."

'Worst Offense' Cited

"I consider that the worst offense of Zionism is that its leaders are leading Jewry into a land where they are deeply hated and will need a standing army to prevent massacres and pogroms as dreadful as the horrors already inflicted on them," Dr. Royden said.

"No benefits said to be reaped by the Arabs from the presence of Zionist Jews can compensate for the horrors of civil war. . . ."

"If Jews have rights in Palestine because it is their Holy Land, so have the Christians. It is their Holy Land also."

"Source Of Insecurity"

Spears spoke on the basis of information he said he had gathered while serving in the Middle East from June, 1941, to December, 1944.

"I believe that if it (the Zionist policy were to succeed in its objective of a Jewish state in Palestine, it would be a source, not of peace, but of insecurity in the Middle East," he told the committee in a prepared statement, "and that its fanatical elements would continue to be, as they are today, violently anti-British."

A Jewish state in Palestine, he continued, "would be a permanent cause of unrest and a major obstacle to the development of Arab unity, which I believe to be essential to the progress and stability of this vital area."

Offering his solution, Spears urged that all the United Nations, including the Arab states, "share the burden among them, each according to his means."

U.S. Contribution Urged

He added that the United States and Britain, in view of their resources, should make a large contribution, "both in living space and wealth."

"I believe the Arabs would accept the continuance of the Jewish national home," Spears continued, "provided that the Zionists abandoned their political aims and ceased to endeavor by violence, illegal immigration and pressure to achieve their objective of a Jewish majority in Palestine."

Free Jewish State Demanded

MUNICH, Germany, Jan. 29 (AP)—The Congress of Liberated Jews passed a resolution today demanding "immediate proclamation of Palestine as a free Jewish state by the United Nations."

The resolution also thanked the United States and President Truman for "sympathy shown to the Jewish cause."

Two hundred delegates from Jewish displaced camps and communities in the American zone adopted other resolutions asking an end of the "colonial regime of terror against Jews in Palestine," and U. N. O. help in the evacuation of all Jews wishing to leave Europe.

Vatican Replies To Izvestia

Vatican City, Jan. 29 (AP)—The accusation in Izvestia that the appointment of seven new English-speaking cardinals had the political purpose of "strengthening the influence (of the Catholic church) in Anglo-Saxon countries" drew a retort from the Vatican City newspaper L'Osservatore Romano yesterday that similar observations might be made of the appointment of 25 other cardinals.

"The Vatican must have taken other 'iniquitous' decisions," L'Osservatore Romano said, to increase its influence in the Latin world, "where the increase in cardinals was still more notable . . . and also down in China."

Spellman Action Cited

Replying to the Soviet Government newspaper's criticism of Archbishop Francis J. Spellman of New York, a cardinal-designate, on grounds that he defended the Vatican for receiving the Japanese Ambassador, L'Osservatore Romano pointed out that Spellman also had defended the Vatican against a charge of promoting a crusade against Russia.

As to the charge that Archbishop Bernard Griffin, of Westminster, England, had showed himself hostile to Russia in a speech delivered in the most critical moments of the war, the Vatican City newspaper said the Englishman had attacked atheistic Nazism as well and asserted many anti-Fascist prelates had been elevated to the purple.

Tenfold Pay Raise Is Slated In Greece

Athens, Jan. 29 (AP)—Finance Minister Alexander Mylonas announced today that effective February 1, all salaries, wages and pensions in Greece will be increased ten times above their level of last June.

The increase, Mylonas said in a radio address, corresponds to the rise in living prices.

ALBANIA REPORTS A PLOT

Several Leaders of Anti-Hoxha Move Arrested, Dispatches Say

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Jan. 29 (AP)—Dispatches from Tirana today said a "fascist" plot to overthrow the regime of Premier Enver Hoxha had been discovered in Albania and that several leaders of the movement were arrested.

The dispatches quoted General Hoxha as saying:

"The organs of state security for quite a considerable time have been watching the movements of well-known Fascists who have been trying lately to reorganize with the task of overthrowing the people's regime and of assassinating leading members of the Government. They succeeded in forming several groups, consisting chiefly of rich merchants, speculators, former King Zog officers and so-called Democrats and intellectuals."

British Track Palestine Raiders

Band Is Admitted to Have Stolen 600 Guns— Many New Death Penalties Set Up.

Jerusalem, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Armed with sweeping new powers to apply the death penalty for many offenses in Palestine's spreading disorder, the British authorities today pushed a search for a band of armed men who last night raided a Government arsenal in southern Palestine and carried off 600 machine guns and other stores.

An official communique said that a number of Jewish laborers employed at the Aquir Airdrome were being held for investigation. The raiders, said to be wearing British uniforms, overpowered the guards and forced Arab laborers to work for forty minutes loading guns and ammunition and then escaped in a truck, the announcement continued. The truck, however, was later on recovered along with the loot.

Drastic New Laws.

The police also today reported the arrest of thirteen persons at Nathanya, a Jewish town midway between Tel Aviv and Haifa, after breaking up a demonstration in which a policeman was attacked. Large parts of Jerusalem were under curfew regulations where police searchers for forbidden arms continued.

Under the drastic new regulations numerous offenses are made capital crimes.

Offenses punishable by death include the firing or carrying of firearms or explosives, the damaging or obstructing of property, interference with property, vehicles, communications, plant installations or supply services of the Government and armed forces, or being in the neighborhood of such property for the purpose of committing an offense. The British also outlawed unauthorized possession of radio transmission equipment and banned the staging of military exercises.

In addition, the British ordered a drastic change in the country's trial machinery. The British military commander has been authorized to appoint individual officers to act as summary military courts with authority to impose sentences not exceeding twelve months and fines up to £100 ($400).

Air Crash Kills Two Yanks

Calcutta, Jan. 29 (AP)—Two American officers were killed and another seriously injured at the Barrackpoe Airfield today when a C-47 transport on a special flight to New Delhi crashed in an emergency landing shortly after the takeoff. Names of the officers were withheld by the Army.

Singapore Strike Ties Up Transportation

Singapore, Jan. 29 (AP)—A general strike, called by the Malayan Communist party to protest the alleged arrest of a number of labor union leaders, paralyzed civilian transportation facilities in this British crown colony today.

Many shops in the city closed their doors and rickshaw coolies who attempted to carry passengers were stopped by strike sympathizers.

The strike was voted yesterday at a meeting of Communist party leaders, who charged that labor leaders had been unjustly arrested in Kuala Lumpur, Johore and Perak.

Program of Partnership

BATAVIA, Jan. 29 (AP)—Dr. van Mook told the people of the Netherlands East Indies today that the Dutch Government had agreed upon a program of partnership with the Indonesians in a "European-Asiatic community," and urged that violence be stopped.

Appealing to the people by radio to "think and act with a constructive spirit," Dr. van Mook, recently returned from conferences in the Netherlands, said his home Government had rejected completely the idea of a "colonial atmosphere" for the Indies, and was ready to put into effect a "complete partnership" there.

He urged the Indonesians to put an end to "terrorism and bloodshed which are presently pushing these regions farther down the slope toward savagery and pauperization, out of which it might be well night impossible to rise again."

Attack Broken Up

Meanwhile the Allied command said that British artillery had broken up a three-pronged attack by Indonesians against a British company southwest of Surabaya.

Three other British companies in East Java underwent a night-long siege by Indonesians armed with machine-guns, rifles and grenade dischargers, but there were no casualties, while in Western Java, near Bandung, 200 Indonesians armed with sticks, machine-guns and rifles were dispersed by the Indonesian Peace Preservation Corps, the statement added.

Premier Sjahrir, commenting on Dr. van Mook's address, said that whether he attended the projected Dutch-Indonesian negotiations depended upon "how I am approached about it." He added that he might even ask Mr. Soekarno, "President" of the republic, and Mohamed Hatta, his "Vice President," to assist him at the sessions

French Smash South Annam Resistance

Saigon, Jan. 29 (AP)—French forces have broken the back of Annamite resistance in southern Annam and have captured the important city of Dalat, 150 miles northeast of Saigon and 50 miles inland from the China Sea, a French communiqué announced today.

Carrying out the greatest offensive operation they have thus far undertaken against the Annamite forces, the French employed airborne troops to capture Dalat. Elements of the crack French 2d Division and the 9th Colonial Infantry then drove on beyond Dalat to the shores of the China Sea.

Forces Junction

Veterans of the European campaign fought across boggy rice fields and severe mountain terrain during the operations, which began last Saturday when the 9th Colonial Regiment jumped off from Bienhoa, 20 miles north of Saigon. The 9th linked up with the airborne forces at Djiring, 25 miles southeast of Dalat.

After reaching Dalat the Colonial Infantry split into two columns, one of which swept eastward to the China Sea port of Phan Rang, while the other stabbed 70 miles northeast and linked up with the French 2d Armored Division at Ban Methout.

Drive To Other Port

A motorized column of the 2d Armored, which participated in the liberation of Paris and the fall of Strasbourg, drove 75 miles eastward from Ban Methout to Nha Trang, another seaport 50 miles north of Phang Rang, which had been seized earlier in an amphibious operation.

Maj. Gen. Jacques Leclerc, commander of the French forces, kept the operations under a security blackout until the French columns had reached the sea.

CHINA CONFEREES HAVE ONE MAJOR ISSUE TO SOLVE

CHUNGKING, Jan. 29 — (AP) China's Unity Conference—with the destiny of the nation in its hands—moved toward conclusion today in an atmosphere of rising optimism and with but one major issue remaining unsolved.

A sub-committee working on the National Assembly continued deadlocked and called a second meeting for tomorrow. The assembly will meet May 5 to adopt a new constitution for China.

The government refused to accede to a Communist demand that the Kuomintang (National) party be limited to no more than half the assembly seats, the Communists one-fourth, and other parties one-fourth.

Factions Reject Proposal

A government counter-proposal, it was reported reliably, in effect would leave the Kuomintang with a sizeable majority—but both the Communists and the Democratic league rejected it.

(Associated Press Correspondent John Roderick, in a delayed dispatch from Yenan, said Chairman Mao Tse-Tung and other Communist leaders had approved the proposed new constitution setting up a bill of rights and a legislative system similar to that of the United States.)

Both foreign and Chinese observers were perplexed by the concessions made by the Kuomintang Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist par ty, toward making the Political Consultation (Unity) conference a success.

One of the letest came this afternoon, when the supreme national defense council adopted a resolution for the repeal of all laws and decrees "restricting the fundamental freedoms of the people."

The Democratic league withdrew its delegates from the conference last weekend and demanded this step after Chungking police searched the homes of some of its delegates. The resolution was submitted by Chiang himself.

Concessions Made

All restrictive laws, under terms of the resolution, will be sent to the Legislative Yuan (Council) for appropriate action.

Lo Lung-Chi, spokesman for the Democratic league who made the charges and withdrew the delegates, declared there was a good chance the National Assembly question would be settled.

At this morning's session, both the Communists and the League demanded that the draft of the constitution—to be revised by a 35-man all-party commission—be adopted without change.

The Communists and the League both have made concessions by dropping their demands for a new election of delegates to the assembly, government sources said.

Lo Lung-Chi said that with the problem settled, the work of the conference would be over save for formal approval by the full session of all decisions of sub-committees.

Unity Problem In China Is Solved (HOOSA)

Chungking, Jan. 29 (AP)—Government concessions today solved a major problem in the Political Consultation (unity) Conference but a subcommittee on government reorganization concluded its work without settling another major question.

The concessions increased the authority of a projected reorganized state council. It previously had been decided that the Kuomintang (national) party should have twenty council seats and other parties and nonpartisans twenty.

Distribution of seats in the executive Yuan (Cabinet) was the unsolved major problem. It was left for settlement by negotiation among different parties after conclusion of the conference.

Meeting Tonight

A subcommittee, deadlocked on the question of distribution of National Assembly seats, scheduled a meeting tonight to attempt a solution.

At this morning's meeting both the Communist party and the Democratic League demanded a guarantee that the draft of the constitution, which is to be revised by a 35-man commission representing all parties and nonpartisans, be adopted without change by the Assembly.

The Communists also demanded that they should have half the number of Asembly seats held by the Kuomintang, which now dominates that body.

Lo Lung-Chi, Democratic League spokesman, predicted that there is a good chance of agreement tonight.

Task Then Remaining

He said that if a settlement is reached, the conference virtually would be ended. The only remaining task would be for a steering committee to compile in proper form all decisions reached for formal passage by a full session of the conference, which will be held as soon as Chou En-lai, No. 2 Communist, returns from Yenan. A plane was to fly there today to fetch him.

Simultaneously, it was announced that the National Defense Council had passed a resolution for repeal or amendment of all laws and decrees "restricting the fundamental freedoms of the people."

An official announcement said the resolution was submitted by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in implementation of a policy he repeatedly had announced.

Yuan Action Provided

Under the resolution, all laws and decrees involved shall be forwarded to the legislative Yuan for action.

Decisions on the State Council, as agreed upon by a Unity Conference subcommittee this morning and reported by Government sources, were:

1. The power of appointment will be transferred to the council from the central executive subcommittee of the Kuomintang.

2. Emergency powers of the President of the Republic must be approved by the council before they are exercised.

3. The President's veto may be overridden by the council by a three-fifths majority.

All three decisions represented concessions by the Government.

Communist and Democratic League sub-committee members rejected the proposition, and offered a counter-proposal that other parties and nonpartisans should head half the present ministries. They demand that the new ministries without portfolio be shared among all parties, including the Kuomintang (National) party.

A second sub-committee dealing with composition of the National Assembly made little progress. Lo Lung-chi, Democratic League representative, told the committeemen his group would not object if delegates chosen before the war retained their seats in the Assembly—if they were openly labeled as Kuomintang delegates.

Both the Communists and Democratic League have charged previously the present Assembly is packed with Kuomintang members. No decision was reached on Lo Lung-chi's suggestion.

Communist Leaders Approve

YENAN, Jan. 28 (Delayed) (AP).—Chairman Mao Tse-tung and other Communist leaders approved today a proposed new constitution to be drafted at Chungking providing for a new birth of freedom in China. (BAD RODERICK)

The revolutionary proposals, on which agreement is expected to be reached soon at Chungking, were presented to the party's central committee at an all-night meeting by Chou En-lai, the No. 2 Communist, and Lu Ting-yi, who brought them from Chungking.

12 MISSING AFTER LEAP FROM PLANE IN CHINA

SHANGHAI, Wednesday, Jan. 30—(AP)—Four crewmen and eight passengers parachuted from a U.S. Army C-46 transport plane which was unable to find Shanghai's Kiangwan airfield in thick weather last night, but none had been found by 10:30 a. m. today (9:30 p. m. Tuesday, E.S.T.).

Officers feared they may have landed in the wide Yangtze river.

The plane, enroute from Tsinan, was the third transport plane lost by the 513th Troop Carrier Group within a week.

C-47 Crash Kills 4 Yanks In China

Shanghai, Jan. 29 (AP)—Four crew members of a C-47 United States Army transport were killed near Nanking on Saturday when their plane struck a mountain in a bad-weather landing attempt and burned.

The plane had landed 22 passengers at Nanking just before crashing.

Lieut. Col. W.R. Stanley, deputy commander of the 513th Troop Carrier Group, based at Kiangwan Field, near here, said the transport had been recalled by radio to pick up ferrying crews just after its Nanking takeoff.

Swiss Send Troops To Italian Border

Berne, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—The Swiss Federal Council decided today to send troops to the Swiss-Italian border to combat smuggling and banditry. The number of troops was not announced. Skirmishes between customs guards and smuggling suspects have been reported recently.

U. S. GENERAL WARNS KOREA

Calls On People to Beware of False Leaders.

(R. MYERS)

Seoul, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Gen. John R. Hodge, the American commander, warned the Korean people today that certain political leaders were disturbing them on false issues in order to gain personal power and advantage. He called upon them to re-examine these leaders, their policies and their recent activities, but declined to identify the leaders.

It is no secret, however, that the American authorities in southern Korea attribute the riots of January 18 and 19 to the anti-trusteeship propaganda inspired by the Kim Koo provisional government group from Chungking. On the other hand official opinion is that no faction's skirts are completely clean in pressing for political advantage.

Hodge's lengthy statement pleaded for the people's support of the Moscow trusteeship decision and demanded the abolition of politically backed armed forces which apparently are not opposed to settling their differences with violence.

The joint Soviet-American conference on Korea's rehabilitation was reported to have arrived at some agreements concerning economic matters, but no details were available.

Meanwhile, efforts were being made to form a new advisory council to bring together the major parties. The Communist party protested, expressing fear that this move was supported by Rightists headed by Kim Koo and Dr. Syngman Rhee, the self-proclaimed President of Korea. The Communists declared in a statement that the first advisory council appointed by the Americans last fall was composed of nine members of the rightist Democratic party, that the tenth member sympathized with it and the eleventh, Lyuh Woon Heung, of the leftist People's party, resigned quickly, saying that he was out-voted ten to one on every issue. The council was later quietly abandoned by the American Military Government.

JAPAN'S ELECTION SLATED MARCH 31

TOKYO, Jan. 28. — (AP) Japan's first postwar general election was set by the cabinet today for March 31. It will be conducted under the scrutiny of General MacArthur, who postponed it once before and ordered a political purge of militarists.

It will be the first election in the empire's history in which women will vote and the first wholly free election since the early 1930's when the militarists took over.

The Supreme Allied Commander had left no doubt in the minds of Japanese officials that he wanted new blood in the government which must undertake the rebirth of a peaceful Japan.

After the surrender, the Japanese planned to hold an election late this month and set about organizing new parties before MacArthur stepped in.

On Jan. 13, after the purge had time to take effect, MacArthur announced that the Japanese could hold their election any time after March 15.

Home minister Chuzo Mitsuchi called on Emperor Hirohito today and reported the cabinet's decision on the election date. The Diet will be summoned about April 20, according to present plans.

The home office will pass on the eligibility of candidates. The minimum voting age also has been lowered from 25 to 20.

JAP ELECTION TO BE MARCH 1

Government Must Certify All Candidates.

Tokyo, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—The Japanese Cabinet today set Japan's first general election under scrutiny of occupation forces for March 31. It will be the first time men under 25 and women have permitted to vote. The elections, originally scheduled for January, were postponed after Gen. MacArthur's January 4 political purge directive which forced the resignations of scores of ultra-nationalistic Government officials.

Candidates' eligibility must be certified by the Home Ministry, which tomorrow will publish qualifications established by the Government.

On the economic front, MacArthur ordered the Government to halt smuggling of food and other merchandise into Japan from Korea. Headquarters officials said they had received reports that considerable rice was being smuggled into Kyushu and western Honshu. They ordered confiscation of all smuggled goods.

MacArthur also warned the Japanese that production of "some important items" of medical supplies, particularly vaccines, "is far below existing capacity" and ordered a speed-up in manufacture.

Approves Bond Issues.

Allied Headquarters approved additional local government bond issues of 684,340,000 yen ($45,622,666) after investigation showed that the governments had effected "all practicable economies" for the fiscal year ending March 31.

Headquarters also approvad a Japanese program to produce more than 3,000,000 radio receivers in a move to place receivers in 50 per cent of all homes.

Preceding the Cabinet's election call, the newspaper Mainichi reported that Premier Shidehara rejected a Communist delegation's demand for resignation of his entire Cabinet because he was "working hard to cope with the situation in earnest and with sincerity." Mainichi said the 200 delegates told Shidehara his Cabinet had brought hunger and poverty to the people. The group also protested arrests of leaders of a crowd which recently seized and distributed food at the Itabashi arsenal.

Mainichi also said that the drastic constitutional reform being drawn by the Shidehara Cabinet would bar members of the Imperial family or the peerage from the House of Peers, which would be known as the Sangiyin, or State Council. The present Privy Council would be retained to insure a "middle of the road" course for the executive branch of the government. Final draft of the revised constitution is expected to be finished Saturday.

Gen. MacArthur Answers Appeal Of Mrs. Hicswa

Condemned G. I.'s Mother Told All Facts Affecting Clemency Will Be Studied

TOKYO, Jan. 30 (Wednesday) (AP).—A message from the mother of condemned Private First Class Joseph E. Hicswa, pleading for clemency, drew General Douglas MacArthur's assurance that "all of the circumstances which your mother's love instinctively raises in defense of your son will receive thoughtful consideration." . . .

Allied Headquarters made public today the exchange of letters. Hicswa was condemned to death by court martial for the fatal stabbing of two Japanese civilians. MacArthur reiterated today that he has no power to review the case, which has gone to the War Department for consideration.

Mrs. Anne Hicswa, Wallington, N. J., wrote the supreme commander that her son was "torn away from his home to serve his country at the age of eighteen, taught to kill, had heard of many of his friends being killed, and was under the emotional strain of a delayed homecoming—all factors to which might be attributed, to some extent, the cause for such abnormal conduct as is reportedly alleged in his case.

"Certainly they should be considered before an American soldier receives a death sentence."

MacArthur replied that while "final action no longer is wthin my prerogatives," the circumstances which "a mother's love raises in defense of your son will receive the thoughtful consideration of those who sit in final judgment of this case."

Mrs. Hicswa's letter, dated Jan. 16, said, "I mplore you to act immediately to request a review of the United States Army court-martial proceedings under which my soldier son, Private First Class Joseph E. Hicswa, was sentenced to death in Japan for the alleged fatal stabbing of two Japanese."

MacArthur's reply, Jan. 28, said that her letter "moved me deeply, as I am fully conscious of the distress occasioned you by this great tragedy. There is no manner in which I can intercede in this matter, as the record of the trial will go direct from the division commander to the War Department for review, the right of final action on cases involving the death penalty being no longer withn my prerogatives.

Hicswa Case Sent To Washington

Tokyo, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—The press relations office of Major-Gen. Arthur McK. Harper, commander of the Ninety-eighth Division, announced that Harper's recommendation in the case of Pfc. Joseph E. Hicswa of Wallington, N. J., condemned to death for the slaying of two Japanese civilians, has been forwarded to the Judge Advocate-General's office in Washington.

There was no indication of what he had recommended because any announcement must be made by the War Department, the press office said.

Gift by MacArthur—Half-price Fish

Signs in Market Not Entirely True, but Details Don't Worry Bargain-happy Japs.

Tokyo, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Tokyo markets today displayed signs reading: "A Gift from Gen. MacArthur and His Headquarters—Fish at Half Price."

The statement was not entirely true, but it jammed stalls with tens of thousands of jostling Japanese housewives for their biggest bargain since the surrender.

Yesterday six sardines sold for 10 yen (67 cents). Today buyers got fourteen for the same price. When the "gift" fish were gone black market fish were selling for 10 yen.

The gift idea started from Japanese merchants' anxiety to explain why they cut the price of fish more than half overnight and their lack of faith in the ability of customers to understand the complicated story behind the "gift."

Three weeks ago, MacArthur made available to Japanese fishermen a supply of fuel oil, paid for by the Japanese Government. It was issued only to fishermen bringing in fish and they paid for the fuel with fish, not yen. Relieved of the necessity of buying black market fuel, fishermen were able to release their catches at a much lower figure. Also, fish which paid for the fuel were released directly into metropolitan markets.

Housewives, pleased with their bargain, all went home happily chattering "Gift from Gen. MacArthur."

Yank Deaths Laid To Jap 'Ferret'

Yokohama, Jan. 29 (AP)—Capt. Isao Fukuhara pleaded innocent today as prosecutors told the United States Military Trial Commission at his war-crimes trial that his actions as a commandant of Omuta prison "will prove one of the blackest pictures this court will hear."

Fukuhara, known to Allied prisoners as "the Ferret," was charged in an affidavit with responsibility for the death of Corporal Walter Ray Johnson of McPherson, Kan.

"He was beaten to death by the Japanese," testified Lieut. Col. John R. Mammeson, of Boise, Idaho, in an affidavit. "Prisoners were told not to talk to Korean civilians in the mines, but Johnson disobeyed and was put in the guardhouse by Fukuhara.

Beaten Three Days

"He was beaten that same evening on the orders of Fukuhara, who participated in the beatings. A bamboo pole was placed under Johnson's knees and guards would jump on his thighs, severely straining the knee joints. This continued about three days. I protested, but to no avail. About 2.30 A.M. on April 11, 1945, cries were heard coming from the guardhouse. I was told (afterward) that Johnson was dead."

Also testifying by deposition, Major Thomas H. Hewiett, of New Albany, Ind., said Johnson had studied the Japanese language and engaged the miner in a casual conversation in April, 1945.

Denied Food

Hewlett said that, in addition to the beatings, Johnson was denied food and medical attention. He added that deaths in the prison were "executions."

Hewlett testified that another prisoner, Private William N. Knight, of Warsaw, N.Y., was beaten and subjected to "all forms of torture" until he died in May, 1945.

More Jap Silver Seized

Yokohama, Jan. 29 (AP)—Counter intelligence officers today seized 109,758 pounds of silver in a Sendai railroad warehouse, one of the largest such hauls of the occupation. The silver, belonging to the Sendai Railroad Company, was stacked in open view amid barbed wire, rusty bolts and nails.

Sea Fiddler Will Sail

Yokohama, Jan. 29 (AP)—The Sea Fiddler is scheduled to sail for Seattle Friday with 2,119 officers and enlisted men.

Homma Aide Saw 'No Atrocities'

Manila, Jan. 29 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Takeji Wachi, testifying at the war-crime trial of Lieut. Gen. Masaharu Homma, said today "there were no cases of willful atrocities" against Allied prisoners in the Philippines.

Wachi, chief of staff for the Japanese commander in the archipelago, stated that he conducted an investigation of the treatment of prisoners of war in 1943 after receiving a protest from the United States through the Swiss Government.

"Although there were a few cases of misunderstanding due to language difficulties, there were no cases of willful atrocities," Wachi testified. "The United States protest did not mention any executions and I did not think there were any. I found none."

He Saw No Bodies

Wachi denied that Homma motored along the death-march route from Bataan peninsula and watched prisoners bayoneted, as testified by prosecution witnesses previously. Wachi said he did not see any bodies of American or Filipino prisoners along the route. Prosecution witnesses testified to seeing hundreds.

Under crossexamination by Lieut. Col. Frank Meek, chief prosecutor, Wachi said "I don't remember" when asked about conditions at Camp O'Donnell and at Santo Tomas, where Americans and Filipinos were interned.

Wachi denied a prosecution contention that Homma had ordered that ten prisoners be executed for every one that escaped and that Homma ever had ordered escapees executed. He said he heard of only one execution during Homma's command and that news of that reached headquarters after the General had left the Philippines.

Story Of Surrender

Discussing surrender negotiations, Wachi testified that General Wainwright did not offer to surrender troops on four islands in Manila Bay, including Corregidor, after he refused Homma's demand that he surrender the entire Philippine force. The witness said Homma directed that assault landings on Corregidor go ahead as planned when negotiations failed.

Wachi said Homma's headquarters were less than 3,000 feet from the Bataan death-march route. Questioned by Maj. Gen. Leo Donovan, president of the military commission, Wachi conceded that Homma would have had to go to the road if he left headquarters "but he did not leave because there was so much to do."

Manila Asks For Cats

Manila, Jan. 29 (AP)—Cats are in demand in Manila.

Army health authorities say there are five times as many rats in Manila as residents, and blame it all on the Japanese.

During the occupation, they explain, the people got so hungry that most of the city's cat population turned up in the form of "rabbit" stew.

They asked citizens throughout the islands not to drown unwanted kittens but to give them to the city.

Seed Rice Lacking For Luzon Fields

Manila, Jan. 29 (AP)—Rice terraces in the northern Luzon mountains, 200 miles from here, are reported brown and weed-covered because no seed rice is available for planting.

Tribesmen have complained to authorities that Lieut. Gen. Yamashita's divisions stole their entire crop last year and since V-J day Japanese still holed up in the hills have "turned into rats" and are continuing their thefts of rice.

Order For Jap Movies

Tokyo, Jan. 29 (AP)—Allied headquarters announced today that Japanese movie films must carry a censorship identification number before being shown to public or private audiences.

Woman In Manila Claims Wermuth Wed Her, Too

Manila, Jan. 29 (AP)—A Bataan civilian nurse today asked annulment of a marriage she said she had contracted December 7, 1941, with Major Arthur Wermuth, famed "one-man army," in ignorance of the fact he had previously married in the United States.

[In Traverse City, Mich., Wermuth said the alleged marriage in Manila "is news to me. I don't know a thing about it. I want to flatly deny it, right now."]

The annulment petition, filed in the Manila courts, was signed Mrs. Olivia Josephine Oswald Wermuth.

[Wermuth, who recently announced he would probably seek a United States Senate seat when he leaves the Army, said he didn't even know her. Wermuth married Jean Wilkens, of Chicago on June 1, 1935.]

A Whirlwind Courtship

Miss Oswald, who has been using her maiden name since she learned of Wermuth's marriage, said in her petition that she married him after a whirlwind courtship, on the roof garden of the Great Eastern Hotel in a twilight ceremony the day before the Japanese bombed Manila.

An army chaplain whom she named as H. Stainback, performed the ceremony, she said, and her honeymoon was spent in the tragic setting of Bataan, where Wermuth earned world renown as the slayer of at least 116 Japanese before his capture.

Wermuth had been ordered back to his regiment within 24 hours after her wedding, her petition continued, and the tall, attractive brunette, now 25, joined him on Bataan, acting as civilian nurse. After the surrender, she followed the death marchers to Camp O'Donnell—hoping to aid him.

Pictures In The Paper

She told interviewers today that she first learned Wermuth had a wife in the United States when she saw pictures of the hero's return home in Manila papers late in October. At least two included pictures of Wermuth's American wife.

When the major was liberated last September, the annulment petition asserted, he came to Manila and lived with Miss Oswald until his repatriation. She expected him to return to Manila after a visit with relatives in America.

She said she was astounded and unbelieving when she first saw the pictures of Wermuth's American wife, but that after she had confirmed that marriage, she decided to file for annulment action, to make a clean break and start a new life.

Her Own Picture

Manila newspapers had carried her own picture September 11, after she was informed of Wermuth's liberation, and quoted her as saying she had been "praying and hoping" for his safe return.

Filipino veterans of Bataan confirmed her presence there, saying they recalled her work among the wounded.

While being interviewed, Miss Oswald jumped from her chair in a downtown office to hail a passing Philippine army major who wore Bataan campaign ribbons. After their happy fifteen-minute reunion, she said it was the first time she had seen him since the Battan surrender, and that each had believed the other dead.

Miss Oswald currently is employed by the United States Army here, working as a receptionist.

Denies Knowing Petitioner.

Traverse City, Mich., Jan. 29 (A. P.). — Major Arthur Wermuth, the "One-man Army of Bataan," said last night that a wartime marriage in Manila, alleged in an annulment petition filed there, is "news to me."

"I don't know a thing about it," he said, "I want to flatly deny it, right now."

Asked if he knew the petitioner, who gave her name as Mrs. Olivia Josephine Oswald Wermuth, he said, "No." Wermuth recently announced that he would enter politics as a Democrat when he leaves the Army, probably seeking a Senate seat.

G-M, Union Leaders Will Reopen Wage Negotiations Today

FEDERAL MEDIATOR ACTS QUICKLY TO END AUTO STRIKE

Arranges Session After Talks with Company, C.I.O. Chief.

OFFICE WORKERS AIDED

Reuther Asks G-M to Grant Increase to Salaried Office Workers.

DETROIT, Jan. 29—(AP) General Motors Corp. and the C.I.O.-United Automobile Workers will renew negotiations—probably tomorrow afternoon—in the wage dispute that has kept 175,000 production workers idle since last Nov. 21.

This was announced late today by James F. Dewey, specially assigned Federal labor conciliator, after a series of conferences with GM President Charles E. Wilson and top officers of the U.A.W.-C.I.O.

Dewey, who helped end the 42-day GM sit-down strike in 1937, met first with Wilson, then with R. J. Thomas and Walter P. Reuther, president and vice-president of the union, and again with both parties before disclosing he had succeeded in arranging a resumption of the negotiations.

Union Agreeable

Both Wilson and Thomas will attend the first session, Dewey said.

His objective, Dewey said, was to get the two parties together "and keep them together."

After the meeting with Dewey, Reuther said "The union is agreeable to meet again with GM."

There was no statement from General Motors following the Wilson-Dewey meeting, but Dewey said his talk with the GM president was "very satisfactory."

The corporation has said on several occasions that it was ready to meet with the union "at any time on any pertinent issues."

Wilson May Attend

The fact that Dewey went directly to Wilson in beginning his mediation efforts led to speculation that the General Motors president might take part in the renewed negotiating sessions for the first time since the discussions began. GM's negotiating group has been headed by Harry W. Anderson, vice-president in charge of industrial relations, while Reuther has led the union negotiators.

There have been no meetings between GM and the union since late last month when the management rejected the proposal of a Presidential fact finding board that the union's 30 per cent demand be settled at 17.5 per cent, or 18 1-2 cents an hour. The union accepted the proposal but withdrew its acceptance when GM announced it would stand on its offer of an increase of approximately 12 per cent or 13 1-2 cents.

Reuther in a letter to General Motors today asked that any wage increase granted in settlement of the present strike be extended to include salaried office workers. The proposal follows close upon the action of the Ford Motor Co. yesterday in announcing that its salaried workers not represented by the U.A.W.-C.I.O. will receive 15 per cent increases retroactive to Jan. 1. The U.A.W.-C.I.O. hourly-rated employes at the Ford plants were granted an 18-cent hourly increase last Saturday. There was no company estimate of what the 15 per cent increase for office workers would amount to in dollars and cents because of the numerous classifications involved.

Reuther in his letter to General Motors asserted that the corporation's office workers at present receive less than the factory sweepers in the GM plants. "Thousands of GM salaried office workers," he asserted, "have contacted the union asking that we represent them in obtaining the increase."

NLRB Hearing Adjourns

The National Labor Relations board hearing of charges that General Motors had not bargained in good faith was adjourned this afternoon to Feb. 11 as Reuther completed his testimony. He had been unable to attend this morning because of the Dewey talks.

Under questioning by NLRB Regional Attorney Harold A. Cranefield, Reuther said GM had used the argument of inability to pay in 1942 and previous wage negotiations, but now holds ability to pay is not a proper subject for bargaining.

GM attorneys waived cross examination of Reuther.

Steel Directors to Decide Whether to Make New Offer to C.I.O.

HINT NEW PROPOSAL

Need Larger Price Increase Than $4 a Ton to Boost Pay, Board Head Says.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29. — (AP) Benjamin F. Fairless, president of United States Steel corporation, was reported heading for New York tonight with the fruits of two days' conversations with government officials on the nation-wide steel strike.

It was reported by persons in the steel industry, who said they did not know whether Fairless was taking with him any new proposals which might clear the way for settlement.

To Report to Directors

It was assumed by these persons, who cannot be precisely identified, that Fairless would report shortly to the board of directors of U. S. Steel. They further assumed that the board would decide whether any new offer should be made to the C.I.O. United Steel Workers, whose 750,000 members completed their ninth day of idleness.

The board chairman, Irving S. Olds, said in New York today that the company would need a "very much larger" steel price increase than $4.00 a ton in order to grant even the 15-cents-an-hour increase which it had offered.

President Truman has urged that the company settle for 18 1-2 cents, and the union is holding out for that amount.

There was no sign that the government had altered its position that steel prices could be increased $4.00 a ton, but in the complete official silence surrounding Fairless's visit the possibility remained that some other solution for the deadlock had been discussed.

Snyder Hopeful

Reconversion Director John W. Snyder voiced high optimism tonight over prospects for settlement of the major strikes impeding reconversion, including the steel and General Motors walkouts.

Snyder, it was said on high authority, has conferred by telephone with Fairless.

However, the reconversion director emphasized that his hopes were based on the recent trend toward settlement "by free collective bargaining," and not on any conversations with Fairless. He declined, in fact, to discuss the telephone talks at all.

"There are rumblings that a lot of things are shaping up," Snyder told an interviewer who asked whether the reconversion program might soon hurdle the obstacles presented by the steel shutdown and the 10-week-old General Motors strike.

"When you see the customers of steel—Ford and Chrysler, for instance—getting ready to do business, that's a hopeful sign," Snyder commented.

The Ford and Chrysler companies settled their wage disputes with the C.I.O. United Automobile Workers Saturday, Snyder recalled, "without any government pressure of any sort," while GM and the union have accepted the services of James F. Dewey as a federal mediator in an attempt to solve the GM tieup.

A high labor department official said Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach had delayed appointment of a GM mediator until "the government felt that mediation could be successful."

Wants Bigger Increase

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—(AP) The strike-bound U. S. Steel corporation declared today a price increase of much more than $4 a ton would be necessary even to approximate its workers' wage demands, and then raised the question whether such an increase would be "wise and in the public interest."

The statement generally was interpreted here as intended to put the next move in the strike impasse squarely up to the government.

Irving S. Olds, chairman of "big steel," told newsmen, after a board meeting where it was disclosed the corporation failed to earn its $4 common stock dividend requirements in 1945, that there had been no new proposals that altered the strike picture.

The corporation has offered a wage increase of 15 cents an hour. The CIO steelworkers union is demanding 18 1-2 cents.

Either wage increase, Olds said in a formal statement, "will require a very much larger steel price increase than the $4 a ton" previously mentioned. He added:

"The fundamental question arises as to whether it is wise and in the public interest artificially to force up price levels for a basic product such as steel for the purpose of paying a wage increase to steel workers beyond the point for which there is a sound justification."

He estimated a 15-cent hourly wage increase would cost U. S. Steel $80,000,000 a year, and that for an 18 1-2-cent increase the costs would be $100,000,000 a year.

FAIRLESS HEADS FOR NEW YORK TO REPORT TO BOARD

THE STEEL STRIKE AND ITS EFFECT

Pittsburgh, Jan. 29 (A. P.). —The nine-day-old nationwide steel strike in brief:

On strike—750,000 members of the C. I. O.-United Steel Workers who seek to enforce an 18½ cents an hour pay boost.

Settlement efforts — Benjamin F. Fairless, president of United States Steel Corporation, in Washington for new conferences with Government officials.

Effect—41,500 workers idle in allied industries, mostly mining, railroading and steel fabricating. Business and union leaders predict 1,000,000 in related trades will be idle if strike continues another month.

Hope—A high official of the United States Labor Department says he believes the strike will be settled within a week.

FORD LAYOFFS DUE TO STEEL SHORTAGE

DETROIT, Jan. 29.—(AP) The Ford Motor Co. announced today that final assembly of passenger cars and trucks will be halted at its Rouge plant near here Thursday night because of shortages caused by the steel strike. Twelve other final assembly plants around the country will be closed by the end of next week.

With 15,000 workers laid off last weekend the additional closings will increase the number of Ford employes made idle to 40,000.

Other shutdowns and workers affected will be at Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 4, 1,000; Somerville, Mass., Feb. 5, 930; and Richmond, Va., Feb. 8, 1,550.

International Harvester Gives Union New Offer

Chicago, Jan. 29 (AP)—A Federal fact-finding panel inquiring into the nine-day strike at the International Harvester Company adjourned today until 2 P.M. (C.S.T.) tomorrow after the CIO union involved announced it had received a new company offer on wages and other clauses.

Gerald Fielde, international secretary of the United Farm Equipment and Metal Workers Union, announced the new offer but declined to discuss its terms. The adjournment was by joint stipulation with Forrest Siefkin, vice president and general counsel of Harvester.

The chief union demand in the strike which has tied up production in ten plants in three states is for a 30 per cent general wage increase. The company has offered ten per cent. Agreement has been reached on some undisclosed items, but there remain the question of union security together with six other issues to which fact-finding is restricted.

MEAT TRUCK STRIKE END IN NEW YORK

JAN 30 1946

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—(AP)—Striking truck drivers of Wilson and Company will go back to work tomorrow morning, it was announced tonight in a joint statement by company representatives and officials of Local 816, International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Helpers (A.F.L.).

The union called a strike last Saturday against local packing plants of the Wilson, Armour and Swift meat packing companies in a dispute concerning overtime pay. The action followed decision of striking meat plant workers to return to their jobs through the nation after the government seized the business.

Tonight's announcement was made after a conference at the office of Federal Conciliator Joseph C. Schuld. Earlier, Schuld had conferred with officials of the other two struck firms and had said he would confer with them again tomorrow.

G-E Again Accused Of Withholding Goods

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—(AP)—Rep. Lane (D-Mass) asserted today the General Electric company "must shoulder the blame" for shortages of civilian goods.

He told the House that the company in advertisements in Lynn, Mass., unjustly blames labor for the shortages.

"Since V-J Day," he said in a speech, "no refrigerators, radios, electric clocks or washing machines have reached the market for sale even though the plant was humming with production.

"These goods," he said, "were manufactured in quantity but stored in warehouses or used only for display purposes. The company had made handsome profits during the war. Now it was deliberately withholding its new production of civilian goods from the market until 1946, when the repeal of the excess profits tax would bring it a maximum profit. With a strike on, the company is still withholding these items from the public in a subtle maneuver to prejudice workers in the eyes of all Americans."

Lane said the Lynn workers' strike is based on just demands and "in common with strikes throughout the nation, is part of the struggle to bring our economy into balance and to raise the standard of living in the United States."

In New York a spokesman for General Electric said:

"Congressman Lane is completely misinformed in every detail. Every one of his charges were factually met more than a month ago, and he has simply failed to pay attention to the answers. About four days before Christmas, when we still were producing appliances, less than three percent of such items remained unshipped from the factories. The percentage is probably even less now."

W. U. BUILDING USERS PROTECTED BY COURT

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—(AP) Police were directed today by Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy to see that persons having legitimate business in the strike-bound Western Union main building were allowed to enter and leave without "molestation" from pickets.

"Private property is still the law of the land," Levy said, "and it is imperative that these rights be observed."

Levy postponed until Thursday a hearing on a motion by the company to restrain mass picketing of the building by members of the C.I.O. American Communications Association. The union struck Jan. 7 in protest to a War Labor Board award increasing wages 12 1-2 cents an hour.

A Western Union spokesman said the company was handling more than one third of its normal business. A union spokesman, however, said the company was doing only seven per cent of normal volume.

Efforts by a Federal conciliator to settle the strike broke down early today following a four hour conference last night between union and company representatives.

Union Claims Support Of 21 in Congress

NEW YORK, Jan. 29. — (AP) The C.I.O. United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America said tonight that 21 U. S. senators and representatives were supporting the strike of 200,000 of its members against General Electric, Westinghouse and the electrical division of General Motors.

In a statement the union said that the congressmen had declared the strikers "deserve full support in their grim struggle for a substantial wage increase to compensate for the reduction in take-home pay and for a decent American standard of living."

The U.E.-C.I.O. listed as signers: Senators Harley M. Kilgore, W. Va.; Francis J. Myers, Pa., Hugh B. Mitchell, Wash., Robert M. La Follette, Jr., Wisc., James M. Mead, N. Y., Joseph F. Guffey, Pa.; also Representatives Matthew M. Neely, W. Va., William T. Granahan, Pa., William A. Rowan, Ill., George E. Outland, Calif., Herman P. Kopplemann, Conn., Emanuel Celler, N. Y., Adolph J. Sabath, Ill., Augustine B. Kelley, Pa., William J. Green, Jr., Pa., Thomas J. Lane, Mass., Herman P. Eberharter, Pa., Ellis E. Patterson, Calif., Helen Gahagan Douglas, Calif., John J. Rooney, N. Y., and James P. Geelan, Conn.

The union struck Jan. 15 against the three firms to enforce demands for a $2-a-day wage increase.

NEW YORK HARBOR FACES THREAT OF TUGBOAT STRIKE

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—(AP) New York harbor, the world's busiest, was threatened today with its second paralyzing labor strike in six months.

This time more than 3,500 tugboat workers received a call to walk off their jobs next Monday to enforce wage-hour demands.

Union leaders said the strike would "stop everything transported by boat" here except vessels operated by "a very few small companies." Troopships also would be affected, it was stated.

Capt. William Bradley, president of Local 333, A.F.L. International Longshoremen Association's United Marine Division, said the strike would affect 52 companies operating 150 tugboats, 50 oil tankers and 50 oil barges.

James P. McAllister, spokesman for the employers, however, said 400 harbor craft would be affected, including about 325 tugs and 75 tankers and barges, including most of the barges which bring coal into New York City.

Negotiations Fail

Bradley said the strike was called after negotiations between the union and the New York Tugboat Exchange were broken off. He said the union would make no exceptions in the case of troopships because the Army and Navy could use their own tugs.

The harbor was tied up nearly three weeks last August after thousands of ILA longshoremen went on strike over wages and working conditions.

The union demands in the current dispute includes the same pay for a 40-hour, five-day week as now received for a 48-hour, six-day week, plus "numerous other benefits" on which neither side would give details today. Spokesmen declined to estimate the average pay now received by the tugboat pilots, mates and deckhands involved. Each side said "it varies widely."

TIME FOR LABOR TO CLEAN HOUSE, LEWIS DECLARES

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 29. — (AP) John L. Lewis asserted today it was time for labor to "place its internal house in order" and marked the return of his miners to the A.F.L. as "the turning point."

Lewis, claiming 600,000 miners in the United Mine Workers, reaffiliated with the American Federation of Labor—boosting its rolls to 6,800,000 paid-up unionists—and sat for the first time in ten years as a member of the policy-making executive council.

He had broken with the A.F.L. when he founded the C.I.O. a decade ago. Later he quit the C.I.O over political and personal differences with its leaders.

Return Explained

Lewis did not mention the C.I.O. by name at a press conference held jointly with the A.F.L. President William Green, but said he would "leave to the imagination" of reporters how the merger would affect the C.I.O.

He said the return of the miners to the A.F.L. was in the interest of all labor and "a stabilized economy," and would provide "added protection to our system of free enterprise."

"The A.F.L. and the United Mine Workers have been on the record for years for the protection of the liberties of the people and the virtuous institutions of the country," Lewis said. "We stand for the perpetuation of those institutions, both against internal and external foes."

"Obviously," he said, "the re-affiliation make the A.F.L., beyond cavil and beyond peradventure the most representative and the dominant organization of labor in America. I think the people of the country will recognize that increasingly."

Lewis did not elaborate on that, but said the "strength and resources of the U.M.W. will be a decided asset to the A.F.L. and certainly affiliation with the A.F.L. will be a decided advantage in both a moral and economic sense to the United Mine Workers."

Lewis said unity was "labor's obligation." He said the merger would be "approved by the workers of the nation as a whole, and I think sustained by every thoughtful citizen."

It is an obligation of labor to "place its internal house in order," to eliminate as much as possible its differences of opinions and to "speak with one voice" in industry and in the councils of the nation.

"This re-affiliation has great portent for the future," said Lewis.

"Indirectly, it is a definite turning point in the history of labor in this country."

Referring to labor's growing numerical strength, Lewis said "the weal or woe of the U.S.A. as a republic is dependent to a large degree on the future policy and the future action of those millions who work for a living."

Union Is Worker's Voice

"Their articulate voice is their union—their organization. Only through that instrumentality can they express themselves, and labor will play an increasingly important part in our national economy and national plans."

Lewis said there were no immediate problems involving his District 50, made up of miscellaneous unions in conflict with both the A.F.L. and C.I.O.

The mine leader sat in at his first session today as a member of the A.F.L. executive council, to which he was elected last Friday with the re-admission of the U.M.W. Lewis paid dues for 600,000 members.

Green said that while Lewis was returning to the A.F.L., he was back in the United Mine Workers. Unknown to Green, Lewis said, the A.F.L. president's card in the U.M.W. had been kept active for the past ten years.

NEW BILL DRAFTED TO CURB STRIKES

House Measure Carries Backing of Bi-Partisan Congressmen.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 — (AP) A new strike control bill with strong bi-partisan support emerged today as a possible House substitute for fact-finding legislation asked by President Truman.

The new measure was introduced by Rep. Case (R.-S. D.). It carries the backing of a powerful group of Republicans and Southern Democrats. Congressmen friendly to labor told newsmen privately that "this looks like the stringent legislation we have expected."

The Case Bill would set up a labor-management mediation board of six or more members to help settle industrial disputes which affect the public interest.

Notice Required

Employers and employes would be required to give the board five-day notice of a planned strike or lockout. Once the board assumed jurisdiction, strikes or lockouts would be banned for a 30-day "cooling off" period.

The measure carries several far-reaching sections, some of which would:

1. Require mutual observance of contracts by employes and employers, with civil liability for violators.

2. Outlaw unions of supervisory employes, such as foremen.

3. Take away collective bargaining status and reemployment rights for individuals or unions resorting to forceful picketing or organized boycotts to force management to come to terms.

Backers of the Case bill asked the House Rules committee this afternoon to clear the way for its consideration by the House starting Thursday as a substitute for the modified fact-finding bill approved by the Labor committee.

The Rules committee meets tomorrow morning to vote on the request. Reps. Howard Smith (D-Va) and Cox (D-Ga), both key committee members, predicted the Case plan would be adopted.

No outright announcement was made of the bi-partisan support behind Case's bill but several influential Republicans and Southern Democrats told newsmen privately that "an agreement had been reached."

Case would say only that the measure was drafted "in consultation with other members" and that he believes it will "attract strong backing."

Rep. Marcantonio (AL-NY) said in an interview the move was a Republican filibuster against labor and the bill was written in Republican national headquarters."

HOUSE UNIT URGES CURB ON PETRILLO

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 — (AP) The House Commerce Committee said today that unless Congress soon curbs the powers of James C. Petrillo's Musicians Union the broadcasting industry may have to "pay tribute probably in excess of $20,000,000 a year."

The committee filed a report urging the House to adopt a bill by Chairman Lea (D-Calif) who said it is designed to restrict the union's activities. The committee had voted approval of the measure last week.

"In most cases," the committee report said, "demands made of the character dealt with by this proposed legislation have been made on behalf of the American Federation of Musicians (A.F.L.) by James C. Petrillo, its president."

The legislation would prohibit a union from forcing the broadcasting industry or any radio station to hire employes it does not need, to pay "tribute" for using recordings, or to prevent broadcasts originating abroad.

"The offenses committed in the name of the American Federation of Musicians are a great disservice to legitimate labor organizations as well as the public," the report declared.

Truman and Nimitz Hail O.P.A.'s 4th Anniversary

Tributes Cite Price Control as Brake on Inflation

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 (AP).—President Truman and Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz today paid tribute to the Office of Price Administration's Price Control Boards on their fourth anniversary. Mr. Truman, in a letter released by the O. P. A., told board members:

"Our price control and stabilization program has been one of the most remarkable achievements of the war period. In other countries, runaway inflation has sown the seeds of tyranny and disorder. In this country, we have kept inflation under control.

"In large measure, our success in rationing during the war and in keeping prices down in spite of strong inflationary pressures has been due to the unstinting devotion of hundreds of thousands of volunteer workers in more than five thousand price and rationing boards throughout the country. These volunteers have worked faithfully for long hours doing difficult jobs.

"On the occasion of the fourth anniversary of their efforts, I, on behalf of the people of the United States, wish to express sincere appreciation for what they have done.

"I know that they can be counted on to continue their splendid fight to keep inflation from America in the months ahead."

30.24-661

Admiral Nimitz, in his letter, cited the necessity for protecting "service men's families and others living on limited income."

The Chief of Naval Operations said that with continued help of the boards and "the wholehearted support of a grateful nation we can lick this post-war fight against rising prices and economic chaos."

time stabilization acts, which otherwise would expire this June 30.

These developments on Capitol Hill overshadowed the sudden flareup downtown of a long-smouldering row between OPA and other Federal agencies on whether prices are being held down so firmly as to hamper reconversion and contribute to industrial strife.

Controversy Flares

Broader Home Price Controls Urged to Meet Vets' Needs

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—(AP) Broad expansion of housing price controls was advocated today by Wilson Wyatt, national housing expediter, to bring living space within the range of veterans' pocketbooks.

Wyatt told the House Banking committee that the price of houses must be brought into line with the ability of veterans to buy or rent them. He related that a survey indicated that 84 per cent of veterans can pay no more than $50 a month on purchase price or rent, while only 17.5 percent of recent applications for building priorities indicated the construction of houses in that price range.

Crisis Peak Forecast

The expediter said he expects the housing crisis will reach its peak next summer, and that by the end of this year there will be 2,500,000 more families than dwelling units available.

terdepartmental controversy into the open when he told a news conference "the maintenance of a firm price line means little if goods are not available for purchase at that level." He pleaded for a "realistic and flexible" price policy.

OPA Administrator Chester Bowles, he said, feels the price line should be held.

Spence announced that public hearings on price control extension will begin before the Banking committee next Tuesday.

Wyatt told the committee he is working on a broad two-year program of Federal action in the housing field, but said he has not yet completed the details for submission to President Truman.

Arguing that the emergency cannot be met on "a business as usual basis," he endorsed a proposal in a bill by Rep. Patman (D-Tex.) that price ceilings be put on old houses. This measure stipulates that after a certain date the first sale of a dwelling shall be the ceiling price thereafter.

Wyatt suggested Congress might also authorize ceilings on city building lots. He said the price of the lot is often the biggest single item of cost in a home. Controls on building sites, however, he said, should not extend to rural property.

Meanwhile, Chairman Spence (D-Ky.) of the banking group introduced in the House a bill, strongly urged by President Truman, to prolong to June 30, 1947 the life of the price control law and the war-

Bill Would Extend Control of Prices

Washington, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Legislation to extend the price control and wartime stabilization laws for a year beyond June 30 was introduced today by Representative Spence (D.-Ky.), chairman of the House Banking Committee.

Public hearings on the bill, vigorously urged by President Truman, will begin on February 5 before the committee, Spence announced.

He predicted congressional approval of the extensions, including authority for use of subsidies in stabilizing prices.

"The people," he said, "believe in self-preservation, and that is what this amounts to in our present economy."

White House Drops Museum, Cafeteria

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—The Commission of Fine Arts said today that President Truman had approved elimination of a proposed museum and a cafeteria in architectural changes planned for the White House.

H. P. Caemmerer, secretary of the commission, which is a Federal agency, told White House reporters of the changes.

The commission endorsed the proposed west wing extension, including an auditorium for large meetings and news conferences, because it felt there was a need for more space for executive offices.

Under the plans the museum would have been in the east wing and the cafeteria was a part of the 150-foot addition to the west wing.

The House, in a Republican-sponsored move, has cut off funds for the extensions, estimated to cost about $1,650,000, but the measure now is before a Senate committee, which may restore them.

St. Lawrence Seaway Hearing Is Scheduled

Washington, Jan. 29 (AP) — A Senate Foreign Relation subcommittee decided tentatively today to begin public hearings February 18 on legislation authorizing construction of the St. Lawrence seaway and power development.

Chairman Hatch (D., N.M.), said about sixteen days would be needed to hear opponents and advocates.

The measure would authorize an agreement between this country and Canada to construct the controversial project. The subcommittee, however, has the right to rule that the matter should be handled through a treaty rather than by an agreement.

Backs Symington for War Post

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 (AP)—The Senate Military Affairs Committee today recommended Senate confirmation for W. Stuart Symington, of Missouri, as Assistant Secretary of War. Mr. Symington, now Surplus Property Administrator, has been mentioned as a possible successor to Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, should the latter leave the Cabinet.

PITTSBURGH MAN HEADS U. S. HOME LOAN BANKS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—(AP) R. H. Richards of Pittsburgh was sworn in today as acting governor of the Federal Home Loan Bank system.

President of the Pittsburgh Home Loan bank since 1937, Richards succeeds former governor James Tuohy of San Francisco, who resigned Jan. 18 to enter private business.

Present at the ceremony were Attorney General Tom Clark, John H. Fahey, Federal Home Loan Bank Administration commissioner, and ten presidents of the regional Home Loan banks.

An Ohioan, Richards is a graduate of Ohio State university and a former member of its faculty.

Admiral Discounts Warning Story About Pearl Harbor

Washington, Jan. 29 (AP)—Vice Admiral William W. Smith today described Capt. Ellis M. Zacharias' story of predicting the Pearl Harbor attack as mere "clairvoyance operating in reverse."

Smith told the Senate-House committee investigating the December 7, 1941, attack that he remembered very well a talk Zacharias had had with Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, then Pacific Fleet commander, early in 1941.

And he was "absolutely positive," Smith declared, that nothing was said about a possible attack on Pearl Harbor, about its coming on a Sunday, or about seaplanes.

15-Minute Talk

In fact, Smith said, the talk lasted "more likely about 15 minutes" rather than the hour and a half Zacharias had testified to and Kimmel did practically all the talking.

After that blast at Zacharias's story, Smith turned to the Washington naval command.

He said there was "entirely too much secrecy" in the Navy and in all branches of national defense before Pearl Harbor, with the result that progress of American arms was hampered in the early days of the war.

Declaring Washington should have sent Kimmel copies of intercepted and decoded Japanese messages, he commented:

"I can see no use in breaking a cipher unless you use it."

Torpedoes Called Fault

As another example of "too much secrecy," Smith said American magnetic torpedoes proved faulty when tried in the war. They ran too deep, passed under ships, and "broke the hearts of submarine captains," he said. They would have been perfected, he declared, ha dthe Navy not placed so much secrecy around them.

Smith, then a captain, was chief of staff for Kimmel at the time of the Japanese attack.

A heavy-set, balding figure, he puffed furiously on a pipe when he ran into heavy seas under questioning from the committee members.

In response to inquiries from Representative Murphy (D., Pa.), Smith acknowledged he never had conferred prior to the attack with Col. Walter C. Phillips, who early in November, 1941, became chief of staff to Lieut. Gen. Walter C. Short, army commander in Hawaii.

No Conferences

Nor did he confer during "the critical period" with the chief of staff to Admiral C. C. Bloch, commandant of the 14th (Hawaiian) Naval District.

Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) asked whether a Navy Department message on November 27 beginning with the words that it was a "war warning" meant much to Smith.

"Frankly, not much more than the others had, no," the witness replied.

Smith said Zacharias, who had reported to Pearl Harbor only a short time before, came to him and he took him to Kimmel. Zacharias was a student of Japanese language and psychology and Smith said Kimmel questioned him about the characteristics of certain Japanese naval leaders.

Mentions Surprise Attack

Zacharias has testified he told Kimmel that if the Japanese decided to fight they would open with a surprise air attack on the fleet, probably on a Sunday, would most likely use carriers, approaching from the north of Hawaii, but might use seaplanes smuggled into Hawaiian waters.

Smith said Zacharias's testimony that Kimmel then asked him how the attack could be prevented "doesn't sound like Kimmel."

He went on to Zacharias' statement that Kimmel said he did not have the planes and pilots for patrol searches and that he (Zacharias) replied:

"Well, Admiral, you had better get them because that is what is coming."

No 'Wind' Note Record

Had any officer of any rank offered such advice to the Fleet Commander, Smith sair, it would have so impressed him that he certainly would remember it.

The committee wa sadvise dthat no record could be found in Tokyo, London or Canberra of the reported "winds" broadcast signifiying a break between the Japanese and the United States.

The Tokyo advice came from Gen. Douglas MacArthur. The British and Australian governments gave similar reports through the State Department.

Search For "East Wind, Rain"

Whether there was such a broadcast is one of the questions the committee has been trying to run down since its investigation began last November.

It is known that on November 19, 1941, Tokyo advised its agents abroad it would insert the words "East wind, rain" in its news broadcasts if diplomatic relations with the United States were to be severed.

Previous army and navy inquiries brought conflicting testimony as to whether United States monitors of the Tokyo radio ever picked up an "East wind, rain" broadcast and thus knew before the attack that Japan had decided on a break.

Jap Records Destroyed

Counsel for the congressional committee asked the Tokyo, London and Canberra checks after failing to locate such a message in Washington files.

MacArthur's headquarters advised that the Japanese destroyed their records August 14, 1945, when the Emperor decided on surrender. It added that no Japanese could be found who would testify that the broadcast was made before the attack.

2 Are Recalled To Testify At War Probe

1946

Washington, Jan. 29 (AP) — The Pearl Harbor committee struck out anew today on its hunt for what some members contend is a lost "winds" message in Japanese code.

The committee recalled Capt. Ellis M. Zacharias, former naval intelligence officer, for brief questioning today. It also summoned Vice Admiral William W. Smith for further testimony on Zacharias's story that he predicted a Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Broadcast Is in Dispute

With that out of the way, Seth Richardson, committee counsel, said the group would hear Capt. A. H. McCollum, formerly of the Office of Naval Intelligence, about the "winds" code.

It was an arrangement Tokyo set up to warn its consular officers of a break with the United States by including the Japanese words for "east wind rain" in its noon news broadcast.

Whether the words ever were broadcast remains in dispute. There was conflicting testimony in previous hearings about reports that the implementing message was intercepted and copies of it made, shown to officers and put in the files.

Roberts Explains

Capt. L. F. Safford, former naval communications chief, testified in one hearing that he had bundled up the message along with others and sent it to the Roberts commission. He suggested it might still be among the commission's papers.

Former Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts yesterday told the committee he had never seen any such message. Roberts added that original messages were copied by the committee, the originals returned to the Army and Navy and the copies later burned.

McCollum was one of the officers in a position to have seen the "winds" message, if it ever arrived. Safford will probably follow him to the stand.

Admiral Smith was to be questioned about a statement Zacharias said he made to Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, then Pacific Fleet commander, in March, 1941, that if the Japanese decided to go to war they would begin hostilities by an aerial attack on the American fleet, probably on a Sunday.

Didn't Remember, Kimmel Said

Kimmel told the committee previously that he didn't remember that Zacharias made any such prediction. But Zacharias said yesterday he felt sure that Smith, present at the time, would remember it because he had discussed it with him after the Japanese attack on Sunday, December 7, 1941.

The one-hour-and-45-minute appearance of Justice Roberts on the stand produced sharp words when the former Supreme Court member objected to what he described as a tendency to "investigate the (Roberts) commission."

At one point the witness said he thought Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) was voicing criticism of the commission's finding, adding:

"But, go ahead, I'll meet it."

Didn't Read Intercepts

Roberts said the commission didn't read any of the intercepted Japanese messages before making its findings. He said the commission was fully aware that the texts of the messages were not being furnished to Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, the 1941 Hawaiian army commander, and Admiral Kimmel.

But he added that "the commission found from the messages sent them that they had ample warning."

U. S. SUPPORTED RUSSIAN CLAIMS TO KURILE ISLES

Byrnes Reveals New Detail of Secret Agreement Reached at Yalta.

HE LEARNED ABOUT IT LATER

Says Our Military Leaders Had Full Knowledge—Denies Report About Guns for Spain.

Washington, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Secretary of State Byrnes said today that a secret agreement at Yalta for United States support of Russia's claims to Japan's Kuriles Island was reached with the full knowledge of this country's military leaders.

In response to a question at his news conference as to whether that agreement had been entered "into with full knowledge of the military chiefs of staff," he replied yes, but added that he himself had no knowledge of the agreement until a few days after the Japanese surrender.

He explained this by saying that the agreement for British-American support of the Soviet claim was reached on the last day of the Yalta conference after he had departed. The conference, which brought together President Roosevelt, Premier Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill, was held in February, 1945. Byrnes, who was in attendance part of the time, was War Mobilization director at the time. Russia, at that date, had not yet declared war on Japan.

Asked what were the reasons why the Kuriles document had not been published in detail as yet, Byrnes said that he saw no reason why it should not be published now. He added that the agreement was regarded by former President Roosevelt as a top military secret.

Thinks Reason Is Good.

Byrnes added that he believed there was a very good reason that it should have been so classed. He said that at the time of the conference, it was agreed that Russia would eventually enter the Pacific war, but the Russians said that it would take much time to move troops from the western to the eastern front.

Publication of the agreement, the Secretary asserted, would have provided a tip-off to Japan.

Under the agreement Russia would receive Southern Sakhalin and the Kuriles, a chain of islands stretching across the entrance of the Okhotsk Sea, which laps Russia's eastern shores. It was from the Kuriles that the Japanese launched their assault against the Aleutians early in the war.

Byrnes said that he understood that the agreement also covered the post-war status of Port Arthur and Darien, which already has been formalized in a treaty between Russia and China. The cession of any territory such as permanent Russian possession of both Southern Sakhalin and the Kuriles will have to be formalized too in a treaty.

Denies Rumor on Spain.

On another topic Secretary Byrnes said that American ships had never transported to Spain machine guns and other weapons discarded in Europe by the Army. In response to questions he said he had investigated a report that two large United States ships recently carried arms from Italy to Barcelona. Then he stated flatly:

1. No sale of arms to the Franco government has been authorized.

2. No transportation to take arms to Spain has been authorized.

3. No United States ship has carried shipments of arms to Spain from Rome or anywhere else.

The Secretary riterated a previous department assertion that the only weapons sent to Franco Spain since 1939 was a rifle with 200 cartridges, which went to a private individual.

He did not mention the statement of the department last Thursday that approval had been granted for the sale of nineteen transport planes—sixteen of them Army surplus aircraft—to Spain.

He did say, however, that no departmental decision had been reached on the request of a Spanish Government purchasing commission in Paris for allocation of three additional planes.

Arms Sale to Franco Is Denied by Byrnes

No U. S. Ship Authorized to Carry Weapons, He Says

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 (AP).—Secretary of State James F. Byrnes said today that American ships had never transported to Spain machine guns and other weapons discarded in Europe by the Army.

The subject was brought up at a news conference in response to questions. Mr. Byrnes said he had investigated a report that two large United States ships recently carried arms from Italy to Barcelona. Then he stated flatly:

1. No sale of arms to the Franco government has been authorized;

2. No transportation to take arms to Spain has been authorized;

3. No United States ship has carried shipments of arms to Spain from Rome or anywhere else.

The Secretary reiterated a previous department assertion that the only weapons sent to Franco Spain since 1939 was a rifle with 200 cartridges, which went to a private individual.

He did not mention the statement of the department last Thursday that approval had been granted for the sale of nineteen transport planes—sixteen of them Army surplus aircraft—to Spain.

BYRNES CLEARS MIXUP OVER RULE IN U.S. ZONE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—(AP)—Secretary of State Byrnes made it plain today that the army, which had hoped to get out by June 1, would continue to administer the American zone in Germany indefinitely.

This means, Byrnes told his news conference, that the State Department will continue in its policy-making role and will not venture into the administrative field where it has had no experience.

Byrnes' statements went far toward clearing up confusion on the administration in Germany which had existed since Oct. 30.

HOUSE MEMBERS DEMAND SECRECY ON ATOMIC TESTS

Congressmen Want Details Guarded if Foreign Observers Attend.

UNO BID PLANNED

Byrnes Says State Department Proposes to Invite Commission.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29. — (AP) This government may let foreign observers watch the forthcoming atomic bomb naval tests, but may bar them from learning any technical facts obtained.

This prospect rose today in separate actions in Congress and the State Department.

Secretary of State Byrnes told a news conference that President Truman has approved the State Department's plan for inviting the newly - created United Nations Atomic Energy Commission to the first test in May off Bikini Atoll in the Marshalls.

Byrnes emphasized this decision is not final nor binding but he made clear he hoped it would be.

Secrecy Stressed

In Congress, the House Naval Committee insisted—during a hearing attended by Vice Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, the man in charge of the tests—on enactment of a law requiring the United States to keep the test results secret from other nations.

Blandy told Chairman Vinson (D-Ga), one of the House committee members who said they too want to be on hand to see the explosions, that observers will be stationed a safe distance from tiny Bikini.

Presumably the UNO atomic commission members or their delegates would be many miles away. Blandy said the target fleet of American and captured German and Japanese warships would fan out five miles or so from the Pacific isle.

When Blandy said the armed forces plan to disclose only bare results of the tests and keep secret technical details, Rep. Robert A. Grant (R.-Ind.) asked for a statutory secrecy rule.

Other committeemen rallied behind Grant's idea with Rep. Hebert (D.-La.) contending this nation had been "far too negligent in the past" in safeguarding new weapons. Rep. Drewry (D.-Va.) said he favored prohibiting the tests unless secrecy on technical data was imposed by law.

Legislation Asked

Chairman Vinson asked Blandy for legislation tomorrow to include the secrecy provision in a bill to give formal congressional approval of the tests.

Only Rep. De Lacy (D.-Wash.), among committee members, questioned the wisdom of the ban. He said Byrnes should be consulted before the committee acts. Vinson brushed this suggestion aside with the comment the naval committee has "no jurisdiction over the State department."

At the State department, Byrnes said the question of having the UNO commission or its agents on hand still is being considered by the Army and Navy but he knew of no difference of opinion between departments on the matter.

If the UNO commission is invited, observers from Russia, Britain, France, China, Australia, Poland, Mexico, Yugoslavia, Brazil, the Netherlands, Egypt and Canada could be on hand.

Blandy disclosed that some of the submarines and destroyers of the nearly 100-vessel target fleet would be of latest design so the Navy could determine results of the explosion pressure, rays and resulting giant ocean waves on their hulls.

Bomb-Test Cost Data Sought

Washington, Jan. 29 (AP)—The House Naval Committee today hired a former member as its special investigator, then set out to determine the full cost of the forthcoming atomic bomb tests at sea.

The new committee agent is Melvin J. Mass, of St. Paul, veteran of nine terms in Congress and one-time ranking Republican on the committee. More recently Maas has been a Marine Corps colonel.

In disclosing the appointment, Chairman Vinson (D., Ga.) said Maas will play an active role in a number of investigations the committee is planning. Vinson withheld details.

Cost Estimates Sought

Meanwhile, the committee summoned Vice Admiral W. H. P. Blandy for a full report on the atomic tests he will supervise beginning in May with particular emphasis, Vinson said, on the cost angle.

The cost of the target ships alone has been estimated at several hundred million dollars.

Blandy listed the names of most of the ships for the Senate Atomic Energy Committee last week, but Vinson insisted his and the Senate Naval Committee should be asked for permission before any American vessels are destroyed in the test. He introduced legislation to that effect yesterday.

Washington, Jan. 29 (AP)—Secretary of State Byrnes said today President Truman has approved his proposal to invite the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission to witness the tests of the atom bomb against naval ships.

Byrnes emphasized that even with the President's approval, however, his proposal should not yet be construed as the final Government policy on the subject.

Atom Unit Urged

Washington, Jan. 29 (AP)—A single atomic energy commissioner aided by an unpaid advisory committee was recommended to the Senate Atomic Energy Committee today by Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of Harvard Observatory.

The committee is considering a bill by Chairman McMahon (D., Conn.) which provides for administration of atomic control by a five-member civilian commission.

Shapley said the system he himself proposed is indorsed by J. B. Conant, president of Harvard University.

Uranium In Rock Senators Learn

Washington, Jan. 29 (AP)—Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of Harvard Observatory, pulled a small rock out of his pocket in a Senate hearing today and announced it contained 10,000 trillion atoms of uranium 235, a component of atomic bombs.

Shapley said he picked up the rock on his way to the hearing which the Senate atomic energy committee was conducting on control legislation.

He also volunteered that there are ten tons of U-235 within 5 miles of the committee room—or with 5 miles of any place in the United States.

Shapley advised the committee to change a paragraph in the proposed control law which bars private ownership of any fissionable material. He said the clause would turn many an innocent land owner into a lawbreaker.

Uranium, he declared, is present even in the dust on a floor.

TYDINGS'S VIEW ON ATOM HAILED

Senator Awaits White House Reaction to Proposal.

Washington, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Senator Tydings (D.-Md.) looked to the White House today for reaction to his proposal that President Truman call a disarmament conference at once to head off an atomic war.

While Tydings declined to say whether he plans a personal appeal to the Chief Executive, friends of the Maryland Senator told a reporter they expect to take up the matter with Mr. Truman at his first opportunity.

There was no immediate comment from the White House to Tydings's Senate speech yesterday which drew varying expressions from his colleagues.

Senator Tobey (R.-N. H.) called it "a very constructive suggestion—an acid test of the protestations we've been hearing that 'we don't want war.'" But, he added, "I don't know how far we would get."

Senator Austin (R.-Vt.) agreed with Tydings that "the only effective way of obtaining security from the destructive use of atomic energy is to outlaw war." He went on, "Of course he recognizes it will take time to work this out."

Senator Downey (D.-Cal.) said Tydings's suggestion should receive the closest of attention.

Senator Smith (R.-N. J.) said he hoped that Tydings was not trying to undermine the UNO, now taking its first major steps toward functioning as a peace-keeping agency.

Senator McMahon (D.-Conn.), chairman of the special Senate atomic committee, which is now holding hearings on a domestic program for atomic energy, said of Tydings's disarmament idea: "This is the kind of thing the little people can understand."

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D.-Col.) said:

"People talk about segregating the atomic bomb, but you just can't do it, to my way of thinking. In any world war, any long war, it would certainly be used. There won't be any nice, polite little war."

Science Visions an Atomic Fleet

Bowen Says Plans Are Being Drafted for Radically Different Navy.

Washington, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Ten years of revamping along atomic era lines may produce a Navy radically different—even in appearance—from that of today. So says Rear Admiral Harold G. Bowen, head of the Navy's recently established office of research and inventions.

Discussing the work of his group representing the naval service, industrial laboratories and the nation's universities, the admiral told a reporter:

"We have officers and civilians proceeding with the drafting of plans that may mean, ten years from now, a Navy bearing very little resemblance to that of today."

The research office has set out to inquire into everything that relates through science and industry to the Navy's striking arms on the sea, above it and under it. Through its own experts, civilian scientists and navy-sponsored research in colleges and universities, the research program is probing into such subjects as electronics, nuclear physics, chemistry, mathematics, guided missiles and flight.

A technical information office to encourage the free exchange of research information among scientists has been set up here with branches at London, Boston, New York and San Francisco.

Had Role in Atomic Work.

Deputy director of the office of research and inventions is Rear Admiral Luis de Florez, like Bowen active in research since world war I days. Bowen played a prominent part in the atomic bomb project and in radar development.

The research office will have a vital interest in the forthcoming Navy-Army test of the atomic bomb on warships. Results of that test, the Navy has announced, "will be their translation into the terms of United States sea power."

Bowen noted that virtually all the new weapons and equipment which appeared in the late war had research history dating before the war. But, he added, "the stockpile of research" has been depleted.

In the field of pure research, ranging up to applied science, here are some of the subjects Bowen says must be explored:

1. The use of atomic energy for ship propulsion. "Perhaps we'll have an atomic firebox instead of a boiler. That would save valuable space for other equipment, give unheard of cruising radius and more speed—and if surface ships are going to last we'll have to hike up the speed like hell."

Seeks Atomic Defense.

2. Explore the prospects of a countermeasure for the atomic bomb.

3. Join in the worldwide effort to find a cheaper and better way to produce the raw material for atomic power.

4. Probe into the abstract science phases of guided V-weapons, supersonic speeds for aircraft.

"The Navy recognizes that a Navy can't be run without intimate contact with science," the Admiral said. "It is for that purpose this office has been organized."

In its contracts with the colleges, universities and with industrial organizations, the Navy says it is "offering the scientist complete freedom" to initiate, teach and publish fundamental research.

To date, it has made contracts with or is negotiating with more than two score schools or industrial research organizations.

Army Rocket Rises 50 Miles

Radio-guided Missile Presages Weapons That Will Reach Any Point in World.

Washington, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—The Army has developed a radio-controlled rocket which has streaked vertically fifty miles.

Lieut. Gen. Levin H. Campbell, reporting this today, said it was not beyond the realm of possibility that rocket weapons could reach any point in the world.

The retiring ordnance chief told reporters he understood that the German V-weapons had reached an altitude of thirty miles, but others have credited them with a maximum of sixty miles. German scientists, who helped develop the V-weapons, have been assisting the Army in rocket research, but Campbell did not say whether they had worked on the fifty-mile guided missile.

Campbell said he believed that the time was coming "when the gun as we know it will be no longer."

"Maybe there will be a combination of conventional artillery and the rocket, with a gun giving the initial impetus to the rocket," he said. "Further, if we can hit the moon with radar, certainly we can guide a "space ship."

Radar Research Expanded.

The War Department announced in the meantime that the Army Signal Corps, following up its feat of flashing radar beams to the moon, has embarked on long-range research. Major-Gen. George L. Van Dusen, chief of the Signal Corps Engineering and Technical Service, said the Evans Signal Laboratory in New Jersey would try to increase both the power and sensitivity of radar.

A new antenna base will be built to permit the radar to "scan" the skies vertically as well as horizontally. By this means, combined with standard astronomical observations of the moon, it is hoped to learn exactly what effects the ionosphere has on radio waves.

House Group Asks Army For Rapido War Report

Washington, Jan. 29 (AP)—The House Military Committee asked the War Department today for a full report on the Rapido River battle in Italy which cost the 36th (Texas) Division, 2,900 casualties.

The request was embodied in a resolution offered by Representative Thomason (D., Texas), seconded by Representative Kilday (D., Texas) and unanimously adopted by the committee.

Chairman May (D., Ky.) said that as soon as the War Department report is received his group will study it closely to determine whether an official investigation should be held in the matter, as requested by the 36th Division Association at a recent reunion in Brownwood, Texas.

WAR DAMAGES EARS OF 40,000 VETERANS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 (AP)—The noise of war damaged the ears of about 40,000 service men, and within twenty years there will be around 300,000 more veterans hard of hearing.

The Veterans Administration made these estimates today as it started a special rehabilitation plan based on the Army's successful program.

Thirteen thousand veterans have been treated by Army and Navy doctors for deafness. About 27,000 others have been deafened but have not reported it, the administration believes.

In looking for about 300,000 more within twenty years, officials say part of these may be service-connected cases, but most will not be. In either case the Veterans Administration expects to be called on to treat the men.

Col. Norton Canfield has been appointed senior consultant in audiology and will shape the Veteran Administration's program. On leave from Yale University, Colonel Canfield now is assigned to the Army Surgeon General's office where the success of his program has attracted considerable attention.

Army patients are tested scientifically to learn how much of their deafness is psychological and how much is physical damage.

Some patients merely have to be "taught to hear," overcoming psychological troubles. Some will receive hearing aids and will be trained in their use. Others will be taught lip reading and the knack of making the eyes help the ears.

ARMY COURT SYSTEM TO BE OVERHAULED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 — (AP) The army took steps today to overhaul its system of courts martial, just as was done following the first world war.

Undersecretary of War Kenneth Royall announced that Willis Smith, president of the American Bar Association, had agreed to name a committee of disinterested civilians to survey and advise the war department on trial procedures. Royall recalled that as a result of a similar examination after the First World War the articles of war were revised.

Jap Surrender Films Stolen from Battleship

NEW YORK, Jan. 29 — (AP) The navy asked police in 11 states today to help locate 26 film negatives of the Japanese surrender ceremonies stolen from the battleship Missouri the night of Jan. 13 at Bayonne, N. J.

The negatives—presented to the ship as a gift by the navy department—and two cameras were removed from the Missouri's photographic laboratory.

A navy public information officer said the laboratory was locked about 10 p. m. that night by an enlisted photographer. Later, another photographer entered and slept on his cot in the laboratory without noticing anything amiss, the officer said. The theft was discovered in the morning.

UNABLE TO BREAK A DEADLOCK, THE SUBCOMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT REORGANIZATION MEANWHILE DECIDED TO LEAVE FOR SETTLEMENT BY NEGOTIATION AFTER THE CONFERENCE ENDS THE QUESTION OF DISTRIBUTION OF SEATS IN THE EXECUTIVE YUAN, OR CABINET.

THE SUBCOMMITTEE EARLIER CLEARED A MAJOR HURDLE WITH AGREEMENT ON THE POWERS OF THE PROJECTED REORGANIZED STATE COUNCIL, NOW COMPOSED ENTIRELY OF THE KUOMINTANG BUT TO BE ENLARGED TO 40 MEMBERS, HALF OF WHOM WILL COME FROM OTHER PARTIES AND NON-PARTISANS.

GOVERNMENT SOURCES SAID THE KUOMINTANG HAD MADE A CONCESSION BY AGREEING TO TRANSFER THE POWERS OF APPOINTMENT TO THE COUNCIL FROM THEKUOMINTANG'S CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

THE SAME SOURCES WHO ANNOUNCED THE CONCESSIONS PREDICTED THAT A STALEMATE IN THE SUBCOMMITTEE DEALING WITH THE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY WOULD BE BROKEN. THEY SAID THE COMMUNISTS, WHO HAD DEMANDED THE ELECTION, WERE ASKING INSTEAD THAT ONE-THIRD OF THE ASSEMBLY SEATS BE DISTRIBUTED AMONG OTHER PARTIES AND NONPARTISANS. THE ASSEMBLY WAS ELECTED EIGHT YEARS AGO AND IS COMPRISED LARGELY OF KUOMINTANG MEMBERS.

SUBCOMMITTEE DELIBERATIONS WERE STALEMATED YESTERDAY WHEN COMMUNIST AND DEMOCRATIC LEAGUE REPRESENTATIVES BALKED AT A GOVERNMENT PROPOSAL TO CREATE MINISTRIES WITHOUT PORTFOLIO IN THE EXECUTIVE YUAN (CABINET) AND TO GIVE SEVEN OR EIGHT SUCH POSTS TO OTHER PARTIES AND NONPARTISANS. WERMUTH, ACCOMPANIED BY HIS WIFE, JEAN, WHOM HE MARRIED IN 1935, LEFT HIS HOME HERE AND DECLINED TO GIVE ANY INKLING AS TO THE DESTINATION OR HIS PROBABLE DATE OF RETURN.

CLOSE FRIENDS SAID HE HAD CANCELLED A SCHEDULED RADIO ADDRESS AND SEVERAL SPEAKING ENGAGEMENTS.

WERMUTH, WHO WON FAME BY SLAYING 116 JAPANESE BEFORE HE WAS CAPTURED, RECENTLY WAS LIBERATED FROM A JAP PRISON CAMP.

HE DENIED KNOWLEDGE OF THE BATAAN NURSE, WHO FILED AN ANNULMENT PETITION IN MANILA ON MONDAY, SIGNING IT MRS. OLIVIA JOSEPHINE OSWALD WERMUTH.

MANILA, JAN. 29-(AP)-SEVENTY-TWO JAPANESE HOLDOUT SOLDIERS WERE KILLED THREE DAYS AGO IN THE SOUTHERN LUZON PROVINCE, CAMARINES NORTE, IN COMBAT WITH A FILIPINO BATTALION WHICH HAD TRIED FOR SIX WEEKS TO PERSUADE THEM TO SURRENDER.

THERE WERE NO FILIPINO CASUALTIES, WESTERN PACIFIC ARMY HEADQUARTERS SAID IN REPORTING THE ACTION TODAY.

INTELLIGENCE OFFICERS OF THE 86TH DIVISION, CHARGED WITH POLICING THE AREA, ESTIMATED 48 JAPANESE ESCAPED INTO RUGGED HILLS 150 MILES SOUTH OF MANILA.

CIVILIAN COMPLAINTS THAT THE JAPANESE WERE RAIDING, KILLING AND ABDUCTING IN THE VICINITY OF LABO CAUSED THE DIVISION TO DISPATCH THE FILIPINO "FIRST BATTALION ANDERSONS," COMMANDED BY LT.COL. BERNARD L. ANDERSON, A SURVIVOR OF BATAAN, TO INVESTIGATE.

GOING BY BOAT FROM THE EAST COAST OF LUZON AS THE BEST APPROACH TO THE RUGGED, ROADLESS PROVINCE, THE ANDERSONIANS ARRIVED IN MID-DECEMBER. THEY DROPPED 200,000 SURRENDER LEAFLETS AND SENT CIVILIAN

AND JAPANESE PRISONER EMISSARIES BUT FAILED TO WIN CAPITULATION OF THE HOLDOUT NIPPONESE.

FINALLY, ON SATURDAY, THE ANDERSONIANS BEGAN A PHYSICAL ROUNDUP. A "SHORT AND DECISIVE" FIGHT FOLLOWED, SAID THE ARMY, ADDING "THE JAPANESE LEFT 72 DEAD ON THE FIELD WHILE THE REST, ALL POORLY EQUIPPED, SCRAMBLED SOUTHWARD, WHERE THEY STILL ARE THE OBJECT OF A RECONNAISSANCE SEARCH."

THE JAPANESE ABANDONED A LIGHT MACHINEGUN, A SUB-MACHINEGUN, SIX AMERICAN RIFLES, 15 JAPANESE CARBINES, 20 JAPANESE RIFLES AND TWO JAPANESE PISTOLS."

WASHINGTON, JAN.29-(AP)-THE WAR DEPARTMENT REEMPHASIZED TODAY THAT ITS TRANSPORTATION OF ABOUT 65,000 FOREIGN "WAR BRIDES" AND CHILDREN OF AMERICAN SOLDIERS TO THIS COUNTRY WILL NOT INTERFERE WITH THE RETURN OF SERVICEMEN ELIGIBLE TO COME HOME.

THE ARMY TRANSPORTATION CORPS, WHICH HAS THE RESPONSIBILITY OF GETTING TROOPS BACK, SAID MORE THAN 125 TROOP-CARRYING SHIPS HAVE BEEN DECLARED SURPLUS. THUS NO GI BOUND FOR HOME WILL BE "BUMPED OFF" BY A BRIDE OR A BABY, OFFICIALS TOLD A REPORTER.

WAR DEPARTMENT SPOKESMEN SAID THEY DID NOT HAVE AN OVERALL FIGURE ON THE COST OF BRINGING THE WOMEN AND CHILDREN TO THE UNITED STATES, BUT THE EXPENSE IS BEING BORNE BY THE ARMY.

CRITICISM BY SOME AMERICAN WOMEN HAS BROUGHT REPLIES THAT THE WAR DEPARTMENT'S ATTITUDE IS THAT IF THE GI FOUGHT FOR HIS COUNTRY HE HAS A RIGHT TO BE REUNITED WITH HIS WIFE AND CHILD, EVEN IF THEY ARE FOREIGN BORN, IF HE HAD OBTAINED APPROVAL FOR HIS MARRIAGE.

SPECIAL SHIPBOARD ARRANGEMENTS ARE BEING MADE TO INSURE THE COMFORTS OF MOTHERS AND CHILDREN. THE SHIPS' MEDICAL STAFFS HAVE BEEN INCREASED AND THERE IS ONE TRAINED NURSE FOR EACH 200 WIVES AND CHILDREN. THE AMERICAN RED CROSS HAS SUPPLIED TOYS AND FITTED UP RECREATION ROOMS.

SOME WACS ARE BEING PERMITTED TO VOLUNTEER TO HELP BRING THE WOMEN AND CHILDREN FROM OVERSEAS, BUT TO FORESTALL ANY POSSIBLE CRITICISM THAT WOMEN SOLDIERS ARE BEING HELD IN THE ARMY TO "ACT AS NURSEMAIDS", THE WAR DEPARTMENT STRESSED THAT THEY ARE VOLUNTEERS AND THEIR JOBS WILL BE IN CONNECTION WITH THE ORIENTATION COURSES AND CLERICAL WORK.

THE ARGENTINA IS DUE THIS WEEKEND FROM ENGLAND WITH 625 WOMEN AND CHILDREN AND THE QUEEN MARY WITH 2,400 WILL BE NEXT. ABOUT 14,000 ARE EXPECTED FROM ENGLAND AND AUSTRALIA IN FEBRUARY.

EFFORTS WILL BE MADE TO SPEED THE ARRIVALS TO THEIR NEW HOMES. TROOP TRAINS WILL BE MADE UP FOR CHICAGO AND OTHER CENTRAL POINTS. THE SAME PROVISIONS FOR TRAIN ACCOMMODATIONS WILL PREVAIL FOR WOMEN AND CHILDREN AS FOR TROOPS. IF THE JOURNEY IS TO BE LONGER THAN 48 HOURS, THE ARMY WILL REQUEST PULLMAN ACCOMMODATIONS, "BUT THAT DOESN'T ALWAYS MEAN WE'LL GET IT." THE BRIDES WILL PAY FOR THEIR OWN MEALS IN PULLMAN DINERS.

NEW YORK, JANM 29-(AP)-POSSIBILITY OF PUTTING RADAR SIGNALS, BOUNCED OFF THE MOON, TO WORK IN LONG DISTANCE RADIO TELEGRAPH COMMUNICATION WAS FORESEEN TONIGHT BY HENRI BUSIGNIES, DIRECTOR OF THE LABORATORIES OF THE FEDERAL TELEPHONE AND RADIO CORPORATION.

HE SAID RESEARCH TO THAT END HAS BEEN CARRIED ON BY THE LABORATORIES FOR SOME TIME.

IN ORDINARY TRANSMISSION ALONG THE EARTH'S SURFACE LONG RANGE RADIO COMMUNICATIONS TEND TO DISAPPEAR AT DISTANCES A HUNDRED MILES OR SO FROM THE SENDING STATION, GIVING WHAT IS KNOWN AS THE "LINE OF SIGHT EFFECT."

BUT WITH RADAR SIGNALS POINTED AT THE MOON AND REFLECTED BACK AS WAS DONE BY ARMY ENGINEERS IN THEIR BELMAR, N.J., EXPERIMENTS, BUSIGNIES SAID THEY COULD BE MADE TO CARRY MESSAGES BETWEEN NEW YORK AND PARIS OR BETWEEN OTHER POINTS. HE SAID THE EQUIPMENT REQUIRED WOULD NOT BE PROHIBITIVELY HIGH IN COST.

NOT ONLY COULD THE SYSTEM BE APPLIED TO TELEGRAPH, BUT HE THOUGHT AFTER FURTHER STUDY "RADIO TELEPHONE SERVICE VIA THE MOON CHANNEL" COULD BE ACCOMPLISHED." THE ONLY DRAWBACK MIGHT BE THE PAUSE THAT WOULD ELAPSE BETWEEN NEW YORK'S "HELLO" AND THE ANSWER FROM PARIS, SOMETHING AROUND FIVE SECONDS.

ALSO THE MOON WOULD HAVE TO BE VISIBLE AT BOTH ENDS OF THE CIRCUIT, LIMITING TRANSMISSION TO A DAILY 12-HOUR PERIOD.

(CX) GENERAL MOTORS AND THE CIO UNITED AUTO WORKERS AGREED YESTERDAY (TUE.) TO RESUME WAGE NEGOTIATIONS BUT THE U.S.STEEL CORP. SAID IT WOULD NEED A CEILING PRICE INCREASE OF "VERY MUCH MORE" THAN $4 A TON TO GRANT STRIKING STEELWORKERS EVEN THE 15 CENTS AN HOUR WAGE BOOST ALREADY OFFERED.

IN WASHINGTON, MEANWHILE, HIGH OPTIMISM WAS EXPRESSED BY RECONVERSION DIRECTOR JOHN W.SNYDER OVER PROSPECTS FOR SETTLING THE STEEL, GENERAL MOTORS AND OTHER STRIKES.

SNYDER SAID, HOWEVER, HIS HOPES WERE BASED ON RECENT TRENDS TOWARD "FREE COLLECTIVE BARGAINING" SETTLEMENTS AND COMMENTED: "WHEN YOU SEE THE CUSTOMERS OF STEEL--FORD AND CHRYSLER, FOR INSTANCE--GETTING READY TO DO BUSINESS, THAT'S A HOPEFUL SIGN."

REFERRING TO REPORTS, NEVER OFFICIALLY CONFIRMED, THAT A $4 A TON PRICE INCREASE HAD BEEN OFFERED IN AN EFFORT TO GET "BIG STEEL" CLOSER TO THE CIO DEMAND FOR AN 18 1/2 CENTS HOURLY INCREASE, IRVING S.OLDS, BOARD CHAIRMAN OF U.S.STEEL, SAID IN A STATEMENT:

"ON THE BASIS OF AN ANNUAL PRODUCTION OF 16,000,000 TONS OF FINISHED STEEL, WHICH IS APPROXIMATELY 80 PER CENT OF OUR PRESENT CAPACITY, EITHER A WAGE INCREASE OF 15 CENTS AN HOUR OR ONE OF 18 1/2 CENTS AN HOUR WILL REQUIRE A VERY MUCH LARGER STEEL PRICE INCREASE THAN THE $4 A TON PRICE INCREASE PREVIOUSLY MENTIONED.

"THE FUNDAMENTAL QUESTION ARISES AS TO WHETHER IT IS WISE AND IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST ARTIFICIALLY TO FORCE UP PRICE LEVELS FOR A BASIC PRODUCT SUCH AS STEEL FOR THE PURPOSE OF PAYING A WAGE INCREASE TO STEEL WORKERS BEYOND THE POINT FOR WHICH THERE IS A SOUND JUSTIFICATION."

THE OPA HAS INDICATED IT FAVORED A STEEL PRICE INCREASE OF NO MORE THAN $2.50 A TON TO COVER INCREASED COSTS BUT OFFERS OF HIGHER BOOSTS NEVER HAVE BEEN OFFICIALLY CONFIRMED.

OLDS SAID THE CORPORATION HAD NEITHER MADE NOR CONSIDERED ANY NEW PROPOSAL FOR SETTLING ITS WAGE DISPUTE WITH THE 750,000 STRIKING STEELWORKERS. HE SAID BENJAMIN F.FAIRLESS, PRESIDENT OF U.S. STEEL, WAS IN WASHINNGTON ON A MATTER "QUITE APART FROM THE STEEL STRIKE."

JAMES F.DEWEY, SPECIALLY ASSIGNED FEDERAL LABOR CONCILIATOR, DISCLOSED THAT GENERAL MOTORS AND REPRESENTATIVES OF ITS 175,000 STRIKING PRODUCTION WORKERS WOULD RESUME NEGOTIATIONS IN DETROIT--PROBABLY TODAY. DEWEY CONFERRED WITH BOTH PARTIES YESTERDAY.

A SPOKESMAN FOR THE AFL INTERNATIONAL LONGSHOREMEN'S ASSOCIATION SAID A STRIKE OF 3,500 TUGBOAT WORKERS IN NEW YORK HARBOR HAD BEEN CALLED FOR MONDAY IN A DISPUTE OVER WAGES AND HOURS.

A SHORTAGE OF CATTLE SHIPMENTS PREVENTED RESUMPTION OF NORMAL OPERATIONS IN GOVERNMENT OPERATED PACKINGHOUSES ALTHOUGH PORK WAS BEING PRODUCED IN VOLUME. RUSSIA AND IRAN TO SETTLE DISPUTE BY NEGOTIATION

UNO Council Grants Permission After Long and Heated Debate.

DECISION AVERTS SPLIT

Security Group Reserves Right to Request Information on Progress of Talks.

(PARIS)

LONDON, Jan. 30.—(AP) In its first major action, the United Nations Security Council agreed unanimously tonight to permit Russia and Iran to settle their dispute by direct negotiation but reserved the right to request information on the progress of their negotiations at any time.

The decision climaxed a four-hour debate at times heated. Soviet Vice Foreign Commissar Andrei Vishinsky pounded the table at times. British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin charged that Russia had conducted what "looked to us like a war of nerves" in the Iran case.

Later, as the attempts to reach an agreement progressed, Vishinsky became conciliatory and Bevin assumed a calm but direct attitude on the controversial issue.

Cloak Thrown Off

Thus the big powers threw off the cloak of secret diplomacy and tackled their problems—and those of smaller nations—in the open.

By its agreement, the 11-nation council averted what might have developed into an open split between Russia on the one hand and the United States and Britain on the other over Iran's complaint that Russia had interfered in Iran's internal affairs.

The agreement came on a sudden, expressly conciliatory move by Bevin after Vishinsky vehemently opposed a British-American proposal that the Iranian case be submitted to direct negotiation but that the security council keep the case on its agenda.

"Will you agree to my proposal, Mr. Vishinsky," the British foreign secretary asked, "if I strike out the words 'on the agenda'?"

"Yes," replied Vishinsky.

Both Vishinsky and S. H. Taqizadeh, chief Iranian delegate, had agreed shortly after the council convened that their countries should be permitted to settle their differences by direct negotiation, but the debate flared over whether the security council should maintain jurisdiction.

Vishinsky argued that the question could be kept on the agenda only if the council believed that the dispute endangered international peace and security and this, he declared, it does not do.

Distrust Seen

"The case is empty," he asserted. "It is a manifestation of distrust, the same distrust which has prevented cordial relations among all nations."

Taqizadeh, supported by Bevin and America's Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., argued that the council should retain jurisdiction.

"It will not hurt the Soviet Union if it is on the agenda," Taqizadeh said, "and it may harm us if it is not."

But as debate developed it became obvious that the council members were agreed that Russia and Iran should be allowed to iron out their differences directly. The Netherlands, China, France and Poland all acquiesced in that.

Debate began shortly after Tehran dispatches reported the Soviet Union had turned back to the Iranian State Railways vital lines in the Northern Iran zone of Russian occupation. Iranian delegates said privately this should improve relations between the two countries.

After Vishinsky spoke, Bevin commented that Russia had conducted what appeared to be a "war of nerves" in Iran. He recalled the Russian allegation, made in a document filed with the council several days ago, that conditions in Iran threatened the Russian Azerbaijan and Baku oil field region.

"I cannot imagine the Iranian army as a danger of the Baku fields," Bevin said. "I really cannot. This looked to us like a war of nerves."

To Vishinsky's assertion that the case was a "manifestation of distrust," Bevin argued that the council was "duty bound to see this thing through" and that "we are unable to wash our hands of it."

"It is not a question of distrust," he insisted, "but merely, in my view, abiding by the charter."

In speaking for the Soviet Union, Vishinsky said there was no objection to direct negotiations but "I emphatically deny that the Soviet government should be under control of the security council."

There were times during the discussion when Bevin, Vishinsky and Stettinius conferred, working over drafts of resolutions to bring about an agreement. At times the good humored remarks by Bevin brought a laugh from Vishinsky.

Iran's charge that Soviet troops in Northern Iran interfered in the internal affairs of the country by preventing Iranian forces from suppressing an uprising in Azerbaijan Province was referred to by Vishinsky during the debate.

He said "reactionary elements" might claim the events in Azerbaijan were a "consequence of the presence of Soviet troops" but that the trouble actually arose from what he said was "the wish of the native population to attain autonomy."

Vishinsky declared that Russia refused admission to Azerbaijan Province to the Iranian troops because Russia thought there were plenty of Iranian troops already on hand and more "would not have restored order and might have endangered Soviet communications."

He said Russia "will not allow any bloodshed in this area on insufficient grounds."

Bevin stated that "on Vishinsky's admission," the Iranian troops were stopped by order of the Soviet High Command.

"If they were stopped, they (the Russians) infringed the treaty (the Russian-Iranian-British treaty of 1942 covering British and Soviet forces in Iran)," Bevin added. "That is clear. What is there to negotiate about."

Resolution Adopted

The text of the resolution adopted by the security council follows:

"The security council, having heard statements by representatives of the Soviet Union and of Iran in the course of its meetings of Jan. 28 and Jan. 30, 1946, and having taken cognizance of documents presented by the Soviet and Iranian delegations, and those referred to in the course of oral debate, considering that both parties affirmed their readiness to seek a solution of the matter at issue by negotiations and that such negotiations will be resumed in the near future, requests the parties to inform the council of any results achieved in such negotiations.

"The council in the meanwhile retains the right at any time to request information as to the progress of the negotiations."

Russia And Iran Will Negotiate Dispute (HIGHTOWER)

London, Jan. 30 (AP)—The United Nations Security Council, with Russian agreement, voted unanimously tonight to turn the Russian-Iranian dispute over to direct negotiation between Moscow and Tehran while retining the right to request information on progress of the negotiations at any time.

The decision came after four hours of heated debate during which British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin told the Council that Russia's actions in Iran appeared to constitute a war of nerves and an aggression.

Bevin Backs Iran

Bevin indorsed an Iranian demand that the Security Council maintain control over the Soviet-Iranian dispute, the first between sovereign nations to reach the council.

Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., American member of the Council, supported the British view as expressed by Bevin. Stettinius said he believed the Council should keep the Iranian case on its agenda and retain jurisdiction over it.

Suggests Voluntary Talks

"Cannot the Council agree to admit the two parties to voluntary negotiations and (to have Iran and Russia) keep the Council informed until a mutually satisfactory solution is found in accordance with justice?" Stettinius asked.

Previously, S. H. Taqizadeh, the Iranian delegate, had declared willingness to go into direct negotiations with Russia provided the Security Council made such a recommendation, but said the matter must not "go out of the hands of the Council."

Speaking for the Soviet Union, Andrei Vishinsky told the Council there was no objection to direct negotiations, but "I emphatically deny that the Soviet Government should be under control of the Security Council."

Recalls Russian Allegation

Bevin's "war-of-nerves" assertion came after the British Foreign Secretary had recalled a Russian allegation, in a document filed with the Council several days ago, that conditions in Iran threatened Russian Azerbaijan and the Baku oil-field region.

"I cannot imagine an Iranian Army as a danger of the Baku fields," Bevin said. "I really cannot. This looked to us like a war of nerves. It looks like Litvinoff's (Maxim Litvinoff, former Soviet Foreign Commissar) definition of what constituted aggression."

Bevin said it was all right to have negotiations, but "as a party to the treaty (the Russian-Iranian-British treaty of 1942 covering British and Soviet forces in Iran) I ask the Soviet Government to leave this on the agenda here."

Russ Will Return Railroads

While the Council was discussing the case it was announced in Tehran that Russia was returning key railway lines in the northern part of Iran to the control of the Iran state railways. Iranian officials said privately the Russian move should bring a prompt and basic improvement in the relations between the two countries and might affect significantly the case now before the UNO.

Friends of Iran's new Premier, Ahmed Qavam es Saltaneh, speculated that Russia's action might foreshadow a withdrawal of Red Army troops from Iran.

Action "Not Necessary"

Vishinsky said: "The Security Council always can use its powers under the charter, but my contention is that in the present state of affairs this is not necessary."

Vishinsky touched on the Iranian charge that Soviet troops in northern Iran interfered in the internal affairs of the country by preventing Iranian troops from suppressing an uprising in Azerbaijan province.

He said "reactionary elements" might claim the events in Azerbaijan were a "consequence of the presence of Soviet troops," but actually the trouble arose from what he described as "the wish of the native population to attain autonomy."

"Iranian Troops Not Needed"

Iranian troops were refused admission to Azerbaijan province by the Soviet Union, Vishinsky said, because Russia thought there were plenty of Iranian troops already on hand and more "would not have restored order and might have endangered Soviet communications."

Russia, he said, "will not allow any bloodshed in this area on insufficient grounds."

Bevin said: "On Vishinsky's admission, they (Iranian) troops were stopped by order of the Soviet high command. If they were stopped, they (the Russians) infringed the treaty. That is clear. What is there to negotiate about?"

"Cannot Be Dismissed"

Taqizadeh, speaking before the council for the Government at Tehran, declared:

"Now that the dispute has come before the Council it cannot be dismissed. It must be pursued. Under no circumstances must it go out of the hands of the Council."

However, he added, "we will be prepared to go to direct negotiations if the Security Council recommends that this way be taken."

Must Be Under Council

"This can be done provided as in the (UNO) Charter, it takes place according to the recommendations of the Security Council under its aegis, and the results are reported to it from time to time and the conclusion is in a reasonable time," he said.

Taqizadeh said past efforts at negotiation had produced no results.

Meanwhile, delegates studied closely an apparent bid by Iran for British help in the dispute.

Reaffirms Friendship

On the eve of the Council's meeting, the new Iranian Premier, in a message to Prime Minister Attlee, reaffirmed Iran's friendship with Britain and said he was "certain" the British would help the "Iranian people to achieve its just and legitimate aspirations."

Some Council members were talking of the possibility of a compromise decision between the two countries, but the line which a compromise might take was not clear.

Lie Named As Secretary

While the Iranian dispute held the spotlight, the UNO moved ahead with its final organizational problems. One of the major issues was removed yesterday by the nomination of Norwegian Foreign Minister Trygve Lie for the key post of secretary-general.

The United Nations secretariat announced that Lie had advised he would accept appointment as secretary-general, a post which pays $20,000 a year in salary and $20,000 for expeness. His final election by the General Assembly was expected to be merely a formality.

Lie arrived in London today from Oslo.

Bloom Relief Plan Favored

LONDON, Jan. 30 (AP)—A compromise resolution asking that a United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Committee be set up in the United Nations Organization at once to "facilitate the final stages" of UNRRA's work was adopted today by the UNO Social and Economic Committee.

The resolution, submitted by United States delegate Representative Sol Bloom, Democrat, of New York, called for UNRRA contributions "with the least possible delay" and proposed that all members of the United Nations not signatories of UNRRA join the organization.

Bidault Sits in U. N. O. Council

LONDON, Jan. 30 (AP).—Foreign Minister Georges Bidault took over France's seat in the Security Council this afternoon, and French sources here said his arrival may help break the near-deadlock in the Deputy Foreign Ministers' discussion of the Italian peace treaty.

Parliament Clears M.P. Of Divulging Secret

London, Jan. 30 (AP)—A Liberal member of Parliament was exonerated today of a charge that he had divulged Government war secrets at a cocktail party in London's fashionable West End.

A parliamentary committee ruled a charge of breach of privilege against Edgar Granville had not been proved.

The allegations were contained in a letter written by Dr. Desmond McManus, who attended the party, to a former Conservative member of Parliament in which Granville was declared to have quoted Prime Minister Churchill's remarks at a secret session of the House of Commons April 23, 1942.

COMMONS APPROVES STATE COAL OWNERSHIP

LONDON, Jan. 30—(AP) The House of Commons tonight approved on second reading the Labor Government's bill to bring Britain's entire coal industry under state ownership.

The measure was passed without a counted vote after the House rejected by a vote of 359 to 182 a Conservative Party motion to throw it out. The voting on second reading usually is tantamount to final passage.

The vote brought loud cheers from the Labor benches. Communist Member William Gallacher greeted the result with a shouted: "Who owns the coal mines now?"

The bill, which also provides $6,000,000,000 to re-equip the mines and boost lagging production, was another step in the government's five-year plan for socialization.

GI BRIDES HELP U.S. SAILING STAFF

TIDWORTH, England, Jan. 30.—(AP) At least three GI brides pitched in today to help the overworked American Army staff speed them to their husbands when the Queen Mary sails Sunday.

"This seems to be the best way to help make the sailing day come quicker," said Mrs. Maureen Fahey, wife of Lt. Comdr. John Fahey, of Concord, N. H.

Mrs. Constance Emory, wife of Staff Sgt. Curtis Emory, of Durham, with three years as a British Wac, is working with Mrs. Fahey typing immigration forms 15 hours a day.

"This is easy work after being an ack-ack girl on a gun position," she said.

The third volunteer helper is Mrs. Doris B. Riddle, wife of Cpl. Odis Riddle, Birmingham, Ala.

"I've just filled in a form for a girl named Pat Salisbury, who had the surname before she married Howard Salisbury, of Edmond, Okla. Moreover, Pat's hometown here in England was Salisbury, where she met her husband and where they were married," Mrs. Riddle said.

German prisoners-of-war, who do the manual labor at this 2,000 acre reception center, fingerprint the brides under the supervision of immigration officials, who have cut the routine to a third of what is required for the ordinary immigrant.

French Council Grants Visa To Jose Giral

Paris, Jan. 30 (AP)—The French Council of Ministers today decided to grant a visa to Jose Giral, president of the Spanish Republican Government, who now is in New York.

The decision came a day after President Vincent Auriol had announced the new French Government proposed to continue giving protection and asylum to refugee Spanish Republicans.

Giral's government now is in exile in Mexico.

Giral technically is the president of the Spanish government in exile, although he usually is called the premier. Diego Martinez Barrio is president of the Spanish Republic.

Paris, Jan. 30 (AP)—The Government of France today decided to grant a permanent residential visa to President Diego Martinez Barrio of the exiled Spanish Republican government in Mexico. Martinez Barrio recently left America for London.

Central Government Sought By Postwar German Parties

BERLIN, Jan. 30 (AP)—Three thousand members of four postwar anti-Fascist Democratic parties, holding a mass meeting on the anniversary of Hitler's seizure of power in 1933, asked the Allied powers today for permission to set up a central government in Germany. They also urged all Germans to stick together for "democracy, anti-militarism and cooperation with all nations."

The meeting was held in the Soviet-Controlled Berlin Radio building in the British sector of the German capital.

During the rally Wilhelm Pieck, Moscow-directed German Communist leader, invited "penitent, nominal Nazis who have seen the error of their way and are willing to help in reassuring a democratic, anti-Fascist Germany" to join the Communist Party.

Issue Comes To Head

His invitation brought to a head the issue of participation in German politics by former Nazis.

They were barred from voting in German local elections in the American zone only four days ago. The Communist Party press in Berlin criticized the elections as unfair.

The American denazification policy—more stringent than that of the other three occupying powers—originally called for immediate removal of all Nazi party members from public office and forbade them from holding any job but that of manual laborer.

That policy has been relaxed gradually with the creation of review boards, but the American Military Government stood firm in forbidding Nazis from voting in the first elections and has hedged on the question of absolving "penitent, nominal" Nazis.

Military observers from the four occupying powers were in the audience at the rally.

Plea Made To Allies

Pieck appealed to the Allied powers to give all political parties full opportunity in their work, but he struck out sharply at a Monarchist Movement in Bavaria and at those in Hannover who favor restoration of an old dynasty.

William Kuelz, chairman of the Liberal Democrats, pleaded for early establishment of a central German government "as a means of demonstrating to the world that Germany has become really "democratic."

YANKS TO DESTROY $6,000,000 PLANT

Berlin, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—Americans will start one of the biggest demolition jobs in Germany tomorrow when they blow up the first section of the intricately camouflaged $6,000,000 Hitlerite Goldsberg chemical plant near Kassel. The plant has a small forest on its roof. It made explosives.

Nazis Decided to Lynch Captured Airmen in '44

NUERNBERG, Jan. 30—(AP) Lynch law for captured American and British fliers in reprisal for defeat in the air warfare in 1944 was decided upon by Nazi leaders in a meeting at Adolf Hitler's headquarters on D-Day, June 6, 1944, the International Military Tribunal was told today.

Captured documents presented in evidence by the French prosecution over the objections of Dr. Franz Exner, attorney for Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl, described the special meeting at the Fuehrer's headquarters at which the Nazis agreed that "Lynch law will be the rule—it will not be a question for judgment by tribunal or handling by police."

Records Presented

The prosecution presented Wehrmacht records naming Reichsmarshal Goering, Nazi Foreign Minister, Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, Jodl, and Ernst Kantenbrunner as taking part in the decision to allow German mobs to hang the airmen or the security police to shoot the enemy "terror" airmen. All those Nazis are defendants here.

Dr. Exner said that his client and Keitel claimed that the drafts found in the Wehrmacht files "never became orders because they were prohibited by other quarters."

He did not explain who had intervened.

However, the tribunal admitted the documents as acknowledged records from German sources.

Ostensibly the lynch law was only to be applied to airmen shooting civilians, public transport vehicles, hospitals and trains with red crosses.

But the French assistant prosecutor, Charles DuBost, produced an affidavit of a typical case of the execution of four Allied fliers by German police in October, 1944. Other examples were to be cited at tomorrow's session.

DuBost informed the court that the entire French prosecution probably would be concluded next Tuesday.

Directive Submitted

Earlier, DuBost submitted to the tribunal a document he described as a German high command directive to the German members of the French-German Armistice commission to turn down requests from the French or the International Red Cross for better treatment of prisoners.

This document stated the police was ordered by Hitler, who said "Effective, lasting intimidation of the population cannot be achieved except by the death penalty or by measures which leave the criminal's (deportees) close relations and the population ignorant of his fate."

The tribunal denied the application of Rudolf Hess to be his own defense attorney. Hess made his application last week when his lawyer, Gunther Von Rohrscheidt, broke his ankle. The court appointed Otto Stahmer, Goering's lawyer, to handle Hess' case also.

Allied Flyers' Lynching Backed By High Nazis

(LOUNAN)

Nuernberg, Jan. 30 (AP)—Nazi leaders sponsored "lynch law" for downed American and British flyers in murderous reprisal for losing the air war in 1944, according to captured documents presented in evidence before the international military tribunal today.

The French prosecution introduced a sheaf of German army records naming Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering, Joachim von Ribbentrop, Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl and Ernst Kaltenbrunner—all defendants in the trial here—as participating in a decision to allow German mobs to hang or security police to shoot British and American airmen.

Hess's Plea Denied

The documents showed that a special meeting at Adolf Hitler's headquarters on June 6, 1944, at the time of the Allied landing in Normandy, found the Nazis agreeing that "lynch law will be the rule—it will not be a question for judgment by a tribunal or handling by police."

Rudolf Hess's application to be his own defense attorney was denied by the international military tribunal as "not in his interest."

The court earlier removed Gunther von Rohrscheidt, who is hospitalized with a broken ankle, as counsel for the former deputy Führer and appointed Dr. Otto Stahmer, counsel for Hermann Goering, to act for Hess also.

Rohrscheidt was injured in an accidental fall last week. The gangling Nazi the same day wrote him a curt note saying he wanted no lawyer, no witnesses and no documents, but would conduct his own defense.

Week To Decide

It took the judges of the United States, Great Britain, Russia and France a full week to decide Hess's problem.

Charles Dubost, the French prosecutor, introduced a German high command directive instructing comanders of war-prisoner camps not to observe the Geneva Convention regulation for delay in executions. The convention provides that execution of prisoners cannot be carried out until three months after the protecting power has been notified.

"For war prisoners themselves, it is more humane not to have to wait three months for their execution," the directive said.

Another document showed how the command of the German Air Force attempted to curtail Allied air attacks by placing war-prisoner camps near large German cities.

Dubost told the court Adolf Hitler himself enunciated the Nazi policy of executing deportees in order to intimidate the populations of subjugated European nations.

Better Treatment Refused

Dubost submitted a document he described as a German high command directive instructing German members of the French-German Armistice Commission to reject all requests from the French delegation or the International Red Cross for better treatment of prisoners.

This directive said the policy was ordered by Hitler, who said:

"Effective, lasting intimidation of the population cannot be achieved except by the death penalty or by measures which leave the criminal's (deportee's) close relations and the population ignorant of his fate."

A.M.G. Bans All Deglings In Farben Trust Stocks

Orders Fines and Jail Terms to Halt Heavy Trading

FRANKFURT AM MAIN, Jan. 30 (AP).—Seeking to convince German speculators that the wreck of I. G. Farbenindustrie's chemical empire is permanent, the American military government today ordered an end to all stock exchange dealins in the huge trust's stocks and bonds.

The order, which prescribed fines of 100,000 marks ($10,000), five years' imprisonment or both for vioaltions, was issued to stop almost fabulous trading in the shares of the concern, which American authorities have described as "a name only."

It had the effect of freezing Farben stocks on the Munich and Frankfurt stock exchanges at 112 per cent of par, to which they fell ten days ago when German brokers learned that today's drastic action was coming. At that time, apparent anticipation of the directive brought a halt to trading in the stocks of the Munich exchange.

Previously, under the impetus of German speculation that American dissolution of the combine would be only temporary, the stock had soared in three months from 78 per cent of par to 142 per cent.

3D ARMY TO GET OCCUPATION JOB

Informants Declare It Will Handle Task Alone.

Frankfurt, Germany, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—The United States Third Army will soon take over all occupation duties in the American zone of Germany, currently shared with the United States Seventh Army, and the Seventh will probably be deactivated, informants said here today.

Under Gen. George S. Patton Jr., the Third drove from Normandy into Czecho-Slovakia. The Seventh Army, which Patton commanded in Sicily, invaded southern France under the leadership of Lieut. Gen. Alexander Patch Jr. and swept into Austria. Both generals have died since Germany collapsed.

To Stay Beyond June 1.

Washington, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—The dwindling United States Army is to keep its dual job of occupying and administering the American zone in Germany for many months to come. This became apparent when Secretary of State Byrnes told a news conference yesterday that the War Department has reluctantly agreed to continue Army administration in Germany beyond the June 1 deadline set by Gen. Eisenhower last October.

Byrnes offered no explanation as to why the Government had changed its plan to shift over from military to civil administration in the American zone at the earliest possible moment, but he indicated he had opposed the plan in the first place, believing that Army administration should continue until German central administrative agencies are established.

Once that is achieved and the agencies are operating smoothly, Byrnes said, a small, American civilian administrative set-up can take over and the Army can confine itself to its police role.

Reds Free Nazi Church Bell Loot

VIENNA, Jan. 30 (AP).—The Red Army returned today to the Catholic Church 550 church bells which were seized during the Russian advance into the Austrian capital before the Germans could haul them away. Theodore Cardinal Innitzer, in one of his rare public appearances since the occupation of the city, gave special thanks to Soviet Marshal Ivan S. Konev.

False Belgians Denied Vote

Brussels, Jan. 30 (AP)—Adolphe van Glabbeke, Minister of the Interior, said today that 322,000 Belgians would be barred from voting at the general elections on February 17 on the grounds they collaborated with the Germans during the enemy occupation.

YUGOSLAV REPUBLIC

Belgrade, Jan. 30 (A. P.)).—The Constituent Assembly will vote tonight on a constitution formally establishing Yugoslavia as a republic. Debate ended last night.

London, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—The Belgrade radio last night reported the formation in Albania of a "people's republic" under which private property may be limited or expropriated in the interest of the community.

The final draft of the new Albanian Constitution, displacing the exiled King Zog, was reported complete. The Constitution gives every one 18 years old or older the right to vote and hold office and makes all citizens equal before the law.

"All citizens are guaranteed freedom of conscience and religion," Belgrade said. "The church is separate from the State. Military service is compulsory for all."

U.N.R.R.A. Beans Problem to Russia

Reds Don't Know Whether to Eat or Plant Them

MINSK, U. S. S. R., Jan. 30 (AP). An official of the Byelo-Russian Soviet Republic welcomed the first shipment of U. N. R. R. A. relief goods here today, and raised the question whether the 3,000 tons of American beans in the shipment should be eaten or planted.

"These suplies are greatly appreciated, and my government wants to make the best possible use of them," said P. K. Ponomarenko, chairman of the Council of People's Commissars. He said other items in the shipment from Britain and the United States included a quantity of rice and 380 tons of condensed milk.

"These beans from America appear extra fine, and I am having them tested in a laboratory to see if they could be used as seeds," he told newsmen. "If the beans are suitable, we would like to introduce bean culture here, giving the people who would get them for relief allotments the equivalent in grains. We are very particular about the use of U. N. R. R. A. food."

Ponomarenko asked the views of American correspondents on the propriety of using the beans for planting.

UNRRA Goods Are In White Russia

Minsk, U. S. S. R., Jan. 30 (A. P.).—UNRRA goods are now arriving in White Russia and the Ukraine. The relief supples include 3,000 tons of American beans, 380 tons of American condensed milk and British rice. Several UNRRA ships docked recently in Odessa.

Monthly Quota of 1,500 Set For Jews Entering Palestine

(PALMER)

JERUSALEM, Jan. 30. — (AP) Jewish immigration into Palestine will be continued provisionally at the quota rate of 1,500 monthly despite Arab objections, the government said tonight.

A special communique said consultations with Arab leaders on the quota question "have been proceeding over a long period and have reached no conclusive results."

A Jewish spokesman last Dec. 26 said all immigration had been halted, apparently because of Arab objections.

Jews Disappointed

The British decision brought only "deep disappointment" to the Jews and silent disapproval from the Arabs.

The government announcement came shortly after the Jewish National Council (VAAD LEUMI) called for mass meetings throughout Palestine tomorrow, protesting the stoppage of immigration. All Jewish shops, offices and restaurants were expected to close down, and all Jewish transportation was scheduled to halt for three hours.

Informed sources here said Lt. Gen. Sir Alan Cunningham, high commissioner for Palestine, had advised Arab and Jewish delegations that Britain intended to keep the 1,500 quota in force until completion of an inquiry by the joint British-American commission on Palestine.

Britain previously had suggested that the quota, provided for in the 1939 "White Paper," be continued during the commission inquiry. The Arab High Committee on Jan. 22 rejected this proposal.

Because no conclusive result was reached in the talks with the Arabs, the government communique said, "His Majesty's government have now decided for cogent reasons that they must allow immigration to continue provisionally at the proposed rate of 1,500 monthly."

Illegal immigrants will be deducted from the quota, the communique said.

"Preference will be given these European Jews who have a special claim, such as those to whom the Palestine government have already undertaken obligations," it continued, "and relatives in Europe of Jews already established in Palestine."

Drive Intensified

While British authorities intensified a drive to end disorders throughout the country, the clandestine radio station voice of Israel, operated by the Jewish Resistance Movement, denounced the government's new and rigid defense regulations as "undisguised terror without precedent in modern times."

The broadcast said the resistance groups would ignore the regulations.

"You are warned," the broadcast said. "Tyranny breeds revenge!"

Informed persns said the British intended to enforce strictly the new regulations calling for the death penalty for unauthorized possession of firearms, and for other offenses against the government, and providing severe penalties for persons taking part in any illegal activities.

British military planes circled over Tel Aviv while authorities detained an undisclosed number of persons. The entire southern section of the city was cordoned off for a search, and all traffic into the city was halted and inspected.

In Jerusalem, where similar action was launched by the British yesterday, police continued looking for forbidden arms.

British Lift Palestine Bars To Admit 1500 Jews a Month

Special Communique Announces Action for Cogent Reasons Though Arab Talks Are Still Not Concluded.

Jerusalem, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—The British Government announced tonight in a special communique that Jewish immigration into Palestine would be allowed at the rate of 1,500 a month.

The communique stated that consultations with the Arabs on the question of allowing this number of immigrants "have been proceeding over a long period and have reached no conclusive result."

"In these circumstances," the communique added, "his Majesty's Government have now decided for cogent reasons that they must allow immigration to continue provisionally at the proposed rate of 1,500 monthly."

Illegal immigrants will continue to be deducted from the quota, the communique said, and "preference will be given to those European Jews who have a special claim, such as those to whom the Palestine Government have already undertaken obligations, and relatives in Europe of Jews already established in Palestine."

[Jewish immigration into Palestine, under strict curb in accordance with the British White Paper of 1939, has been completely stopped since New Year's Day, last.]

Wholesale Roundup.

Earlier today the British authorities, pressing an intensified drive to end disorders in Palestine, conducted a large-scale search in Tel Aviv and detained an undisclosed number of persons.

The entire southern section of the city was cordoned off during the search, which followed similar action started in Jerusalem yesterday. All traffic entering the city was halted and examined. Military planes circled overhead during the operation.

In Jerusalem, Barclay's Bank looked like the center of a military operation as troops with tommy guns encircled the building while Government departments drew their pay rolls.

Meanwhile today the British were warned by the Palestine Post that they had "better get ready prisons for 600,000 Jews—the entire Jewish population of Palestine—if they intend to enforce new penalties for assisting illegal immigrants. The penalties were set forth in new British regulations issued on Monday night and include the death sentence for persons taking part in illegal activities against the British.

The Zionist daily made its comment after pointing out that the new regulations threaten with eight years' imprisonment and a fine of £1,000 ($4,000) any person harboring illegal immigrants.

creation of a Jewish state in Palestine would aggravate anti-Semitism.

He was one of four witnesses appearing as representatives of the Jewish Fellowship.

Holding that Jews are citizens of the countries in which they live, the Fellowship proposes that they be encouraged to remain there and that the United Nations Organization be made responsible for the resettlement of Europe's homeless Jews, Gluckstein declared.

Criticism Foreseen

"We regret the idea of a Jewish state . . ." he said. "Anti-Semites would say of Jews, 'What are these people doing in our country when they have a country of their own? Why don't they go there?'"

Testifying on behalf of the Zionist cause, Dr. James Parkes, British author and for sixteen years a student of Jewish affairs, said, "It is unfair to expect Jews to cope with the difficulties of anti-Semitism."

Held Gentile Problem

Declaring "anti-Semitism is a Gentile problem—not a Jewish problem," Dr. Parkes added:

"There will be thousands of Jewish suicides all over the world and thousands of decent youngsters will be turned into desperadoes if Palestine is turned into an Arab state. There would not be one single Arab suicide if Palestine became a Jewish state."

Plan Nationwide Protest.

London, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—Reuters declared in a dispatch from Jerusalem today that Vaad Leumi, the Jewish National Council, has ordered nationwide mass meetings tomorrow in protest against the stoppage of Jewish immigration to Palestine. All Jewish shops, offices and restaurants will be closed and all Jewish transport will be halted for three hours, the dispatch said.

Liberal Jewish Group Fights Zionist Plan

Russia Returns Iran's Railroads In Azerbaijan

Friends of Premier Qavam See Move as First Soviet Gesture of Friendship

TEHRAN, Iran, Jan. 30 (AP).—Russia returned the important railroad lines in the northern provinces of Azerbaijan, Mazanderan and Kazvin to the control of the Iranian State Railways, today.

The action was described by friends of Premier Ahmad Qavam as "the first Russian gesture of friendship toward the new government." They speculated that it was a prelude to a Russian request to use the lines to move Soviet soldiers from the provinces.

Russia is scheduled to evacuate northern Iran on March 2. The presence of Red Army troops in the northern provinces is the base for the Iranian protest to the United Nations Security Council in London in which Iran charged Russian interference in its internal affairs.

The State Railways, which announced the move, said the roads affected were held by the Russians under the war-time agreement for Soviet occupation of the northern provinces.

The main northern line from Tehran to Mianeh via Kazvin, and important branch lines to the Caspian Sea in Mazanderan province between Ghamsar and Bandar-Shah, a community just south of the Soviet Turkmen Republic, were involved.

The director of the Iran railways said he could not say immediately what effect the move would have on the Kazvin-Mianeh section which was seized last month by the self-proclaimed autonomous Azerbaijan government.

Railway Returned.

Tehran, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—The Russian military authorities today returned to the Iranian State Railways control of Iran's vital lines through the northern provinces of Azerbaijan, Mazanderan and Kazvin.

Friends of Iran's new Premier, Ahmed Qavam es Saltaneh, immediately described the move as "the first Russian gesture of friendship toward the new Government." They speculated that the act was a prelude to a Soviet request for the use of the lines to evacuate Red Army troops whose presence in the northern provinces is the basis for the Iranian protest now pending before the World Security Council in London.

The Russians are scheduled to evacuate northern Iran, according to their own interpretation of their agreements, on March 2.

The State Railways which announced the Russian move said that the roads affected had connections through Tehran and had been held by the Russians under the wartime agreement for occupation of the northern provinces. The National Railway Lines of southern Iran, formerly held under a similar agreement by the Americans, were returned to the Iranian Government several months ago.

Involved in the Russian move were the main northern line from Tehran to Mianeh via Kazvin and important branch lines to the Caspian Sea in Mazanderan province between Ghamsar and Bandar Shah, a community just south of the Soviet Turkomen republic. The Iran Railways director said that he was not able immediately to assess the effect of the Russian move on the Kazvin-Mianeh section, which was seized last month by the self-proclaimed autonomous Azerbaijan Government.

Singapore General Strike Is Called Off by Union

200,000 Reported Out in Protest at Labor Leader's Arrest

SINGAPORE, Jan. 30 (AP).—The Singapore General Labor Union today asked its members participating in a general strike to resume work tomorrow, asserting that the strike had shown the British government the "actual strength of the workers."

Union leaders said nearly 200,000 workers were idle in the strike, originally called by the Malayan Communist party in protest against the arrest of certain labor leaders in the state of Johore. Trade and industry in Singapore were virtually paralyzed, and the walkout was reported spreading to Kuala Lumpur and Penang.

In calling for an end to the strike, the General Labor Union said the government's "treatment is definitely oppressing" and that if the government "does not change its attitude, we, the people of Singapore, will show greater unity to safegurad our interests and freedom."

Rise in Price Proposed For Malayan Rubber

SINGAPORE, Jan. 30 (AP).—The present Malayan rubber price of 36 Straits cents a pound is regarding rehabilitation and if maintained will cause hardships among producers, S. B. Palmer, a leading figure in the Malayan rubber industry for thirty-five years, said today.

He urged an increase in the price to the Ceylon level of 18 pence sterling a pound, contending the Malayan figure was fixed arbitrarily by the British government, whereas the Ceylon price was determined after consultation with industry.

A spokesman for the Trade and Industry Department of the British Military Administration, replying to Mr. Palmer's statement, acknowledged there was no evidence that the United States was unwilling to pay for Malayan rubber at the same price as the Ceylon figure.

French Take Over At Saigon

Singapore, Jan. 30 (AP)—Operational control of French Indo-China passed to the French military forces Monday, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten said today. British Maj. Gen. Douglas Gracey left Saigon on the date.

BATAVIA, Java, Jan. 30 (AP)—A British communiqué said today that Japanese-helmeted Indonesians had marched women and children ahead of them to shield an advance southeast of Semarang, but that the natives had been routed by artillery fire.

The statement did not give the nationality of the women and children.

The Indonesians, wearing black uniforms, fled, leaving equipment and various documents behind them after British troops silenced five small roadblocks and then opened up with heavy weapons, the British said.

Near Surabaya, the communiqué said, three Indian soldiers were killed and two wounded when a patrol truck was dynamited. An Indonesian mortar crew was taken prisoner.

The Indies Information Service announced that Netherland forces killed thirty natives resisting installation of the Netherlands-Indies Civil Administration at Kotawaringin in southern Borneo.

Indonese Use 'Live' Shields, British Report

Batavia, Jan. 30 (AP)—British military authorities asserted today that Indonesian Nationalist forces wearing Japanese helmets had employed women and children as a shield to cover an attempted advance southeast of Semarang. The Indonesians were repelled after a brief artillery exchange, the British said.

In sporadic outbursts of fighting elsewhere in eastern Java three Indian soldiers were reported killed by an Indonesian attack on a patrol near Soerabaja. Two Indians were wounded in the dynamiting of a truck in the same area.

The Indies Information Service reported that in southeast Borneo Dutch troops had killed 30 "rebels" while occupying the town of Kotawaringin. The service said the nations had resisted the installation of the Netherlands East Indies civil administration.

STALEMATE HOLDS ON CONSTITUTION ISSUE IN CHINA

CHUNGKING, Jan. 30 (AP) Government and Communist negotiators refused to budge today on China's one major unsolved issue—which party shall have the loudest voice in adopting the nation's new constitution.

The Communists were reported laying down fresh demands, and hope waned that the Political Consultation (Unity) Conference would end the two days scheduled.

Chou En-Lai, head of the Communist delegation, fresh from headquarters at Yenan, was closeted in a long conference with Gen. Chang Chun, one of the leaders of the government's delegation.

Plan Rejected

The government was reported to have offered without success a plan whereby its Kuomintang party would retain a majority in the National Assembly, which will meet May 5 to act on the new constitution.

The subcommittee dealing with the National Assembly question met during the day without reaching an agreement. The nature of the alleged new demands was not made public.

A spokesman at Communist headquarters declared, however, that Chou's report on conference agreements already reached was approved by the Communist Central Committee at Yenan. This laid to rest disquieting rumors that Yenan had balked at some of Chou's report.

30.24 — 685

Minister of Information K. C. Wu told correspondents, meanwhile, that "generally speaking" hostilities had ceased throughout the troubled zone of North China, with only minor clashes persisting.

Wu also said he could not answer a question whether the Chinese or Russians were objecting to the entry of American and British correspondents in parts of Manchuria still occupied by Soviet troops.

Asked when the Russians would finally withdraw from Manchuria, Liu Chieh, vice-minister of foreign affairs, replied that "we are waiting for a report from Manchuria."

scheduled to adjourn tomorrow, with most other major issues solved.

Assembly To Meet May 5

The National Assembly, largely made up of Kuomintang (National) party members, is scheduled to meet May 5 to adopt a revised constitution.

A Chinese Communist demand that the Kuomintang party retain only half the Assembly seats, with one fourth assigned to the Communists and the remaining 25 per cent to other parties, was rejected by Government committeemen.

It was reliably reported that a Government counterproposal to give the Kuomintang a sizable majority met opposition from the Communists and the Democratic League representatives.

Parties May Negotiate

China Assembly Issue Persists In Deadlock

Chungking, Jan. 30 (AP)—The deadlock over composition of the National Assembly persisted today at a meeting of the subcommittee of the Political Consultation (Unity) Conference handling this question.

Both the Government and the Communists refused to budge from their demands and the meeting broke up without the slightest progress having been made.

Failure of the subcommittee came amid rumors that Communist headquarters at Yenan had failed to ratify some decisions reached by other unity conference subcommittees. These rumors said party headquarters had given Gen. Chou En-lai, leader of the Communist delegation, a number of new demands to present. There was no indication of the nature of these reported demands.

Consulted At Yenan

Chou returned here this evening from Yenan, where he had gone to consult with Chairman Mao Tse-tung and other party leaders.

[Associated Press Correspondent John Roderick, in a Yenan dispatch dated Monday, had quoted Chou as saying "everything is going well" at Chungking. "There is hope of success." There was no hint as to the basis for the discontent rumors.]

The conference, called to create a workable, representative government and erase internal friction, is

If the subcommittee fails to break this stalemate, the problem will probably be left for the parties to negotiate.

This procedure was followed when another subcommittee dealing with government reorganization was unable to agree on distribution of seats in the Executive Yuan, or Cabinet.

However, the fact that unity is still a goal and not an actuality in China was lent emphasis through brief but reliable reports from the distant northwest Province of Sinkiang.

These reports indicated that dissident, unorganized elements control one third of Sinkiang's 400,000 to 600,000 square-mile area. Government forces in Sinkiang are outnumbered but are being reinforced slowly.

Autonomy Demanded

The 50,000 or more insurgents, nomadic tribesmen and White Russians, have been demanding autonomy.

At Tsingtao, Shantung province port, between 3,000 and 4,000 Koreans were put aboard United States landing craft for repatriation. They were the first from North China to be sent back to their homeland. At Chinwangtao, 293 Europeans embarked for return home.

Informed Chinese sources at Shanghai said Russian troops had withdrawn from two small villages south of Mukden but the Soviets were still in that large Manchurian city which Chinese Government forces will soon take over.

Admits Hostilities in China

Official Says It Is Not Publicized—States 'Generally Speaking,' Fighting Has Ceased.

Chungking, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—"Generally speaking, hostilities have ceased" in North China, Minister of Information K. C. Wu told a questioner today, then added: "There are some localities where fighting still is in progress, but it is not the Government policy to publicize it."

Wu's statement was made at a press conference, but he gave no further information on recent charges by both Government and Communist spokesmen that each side has violated the truce agreement which theoretically ended civil strife on January 13.

Truce teams, including Government, Communist and American representatives, have been flown into isolated regions to make certain that terms of the truce were known by rival Army commanders. All have reported success, but some areas still are to be visited.

Asked whether the Chinese or Russians were objecting to entry of American and British correspondents into Manchuria, where Soviet forces are stationed, Wu said, "I cannot answer." He said he had a report from Gen. Tu Li-ming, commander of Government forces in Manchuria, that the matter was under consideration.

A correspondent said that American and British newsmen were discontented because they were not given the same privileges as Russian and Chinese newspaper men, who are operating in Russian-controlled areas.

"Your statements are perfectly understood," Wu replied.

[Reports from Moscow state that Russia has no objection to Allied newspaper men entering Manchuria, but Chinese Government generals in North China have declined to permit them to go there, usually saying the Russians objected to their presence.]

Asked when Soviet forces would withdraw from Manchuria,

Liu Chieh, Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs, said "We are waiting for a report from Manchuria."

Wei On Way To D.C.

Chungking, Jan. 30 (AP)—Wei Tao-ming, Chinese Ambassador to the United States, left today for Washington via Shanghai to resume his post—confounding rumors in Chungking recently that he might be replaced.

Red Troops Head North In Exodus From Manchuria

Peiping, Jan. 30 (AP)—The Russians who last summer scattered Japan's vaunted Kwantung Army are now herded north out of Manchuria, Chinese officers said today.

Members of the staff of Gen. Hsiung Shih-hui, director of Chiang Kai-shek's northeast field headquarters, reported that Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's troops were moving by rail to Harbin.

They predicted that because of a shortage of fuel and rolling stock, and Manchuria's rigorous winters, the movement could not be completed by the February 1 deadline, but they expected that all Russians would be able to quit the territory south of Mukden by that time.

China Reds Give Furs To Injured AP Photog

Peiping, Jan. 30 (AP)—A bundle of furs and messages of condolence were sent by China's Communist leaders today to Frank Filan, Pulitzer prize-winning Associated Press photographer injured in a truck accident near Kalgan last week.

Mao Tse-tung, leader of the Chinese Communist party, in a message from Yenan expressed regret that Filan was hurt "on a mission devoted to the cause of peace and unity in China."

Kalgan furs were presented the photographer by Gen. Nieh Jung-chen, Communist commander of the Shansi-Hopeh-Chahar border area.

Fight Way To Surrender Site

Peiping, Jan. 29 [AP—Delayed]. A battalion of some 1,100 Japanese troops was reported reliably today to be cutting its way through Chinese Communist forces in an effort to reach Tsinan to surrender to Government troops.

Members of a truce team returned from the area said they were told that the Japanese commander had promised to surrender to Gen. Li Tsung-jen, Government commander in North China at Tsinan, but refused to turn over their arms to Communist forces.

Four other battalions of Japanese in the Tsinan area are said to be surrounded by Communist forces.

Unconfirmed reports said fighting had broken out at Liehchang, 90 miles west of Tsinan.

The Communist delegation at the conference may soon be hard up for funds.

Yesterday the delegation, en route by air from Yenan, ran into icing conditions over the mountains south of Sian. All baggage was jettisoned to lighten the plane's load—including a trunk full of Chinese bank notes intended to defray the delegation's expenses.

Jap Telegrams Barred

Seoul, Jan. 30 (AP)—The Japanese language will be eliminated from all domestic telegraph traffic in Korea by March 1, a directive from General MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters said today.

INFLATION CURB DECREED IN JAPAN

TOKYO, Jan. 30 — (AP) General MacArthur, in a new move to curb inflation in Japan, today ordered two government bureaus holding investments of the Japanese people to absorb the borrowings of the national and local governments until March 31.

The offices named were the Deposit Funds Management bureau and the Postoffice Life Insurance and Life Annuities bureau.

MacArthur recently ordered the government to cease borrowing from the Bank of Japan except as a last resort, and to draw instead on the current savings of the Japanese people.

Japanese currency in circulation presently totals about 57,000,000,000 yen and is increasing at the rate of 100,000,000 yen daily.

How inflation hits the ordinary householder was illustrated again by press reports that the domestic gas rate in Tokyo would be increased 400 to 600 per cent on Feb. 1.

The government meanwhile took another crack at the black market, inflation's principal ground of operation. It arrested more than 100 textile brokers and wholesale dealers suspected of heavy profiteering.

Public concern over these postwar conditions may find its political expression in the outcome of the March 31 general election, at which men under 25 and women will have their first chance to vote. The newspaper Mainichi estimated today that more than 1,000 candidates would seek office, and said the Social-Democrats had the best chance of emerging as the nation's majority party.

WOULD OCCUPY JAPAN 10 YEARS

Members of Far Eastern Group State Opinions.

Tokyo, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—Allied occupation of Japan should continue for ten to twenty years to insure full democratization and a peaceful future for Nippon, some members of the Far Eastern Commission said today.

"I believe the occupation should last twenty y[illegible] said Col. L. M. Cosgrave, Canada's chief delegate, as the commission prepared to sail Friday on the Mt. McKinley after a three weeks' survey of Japan. "If we pull out before that, we will have a little Balkans."

Tomas Confessor, chief Philippines delegate, urged military occupation of ten years "and then a civilian occupation for another ten years headed by a group such as the Far Eastern Commission."

The chief United States delegate Maj.-Gen. Frank R. McCoy, declined to express an opinion "because, since I am chairman of the commission, it might be viewed as an opinion of the entire group."

McCoy had issued a statement in the name of the FEC saying it "has been impressed by the leadership of the Supreme Commander (Gen. MacArthur) and with the deep thought and energy that characterizes his activities as well as those of his staff."

APPEAL NOTED BY MACARTHUR

General Sends Answer to Hicswa's Mother.

Tokyo, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—The mother of Pfc. Joseph E. Hicswa, "stunned and broken-hearted," appealed to Gen. MacArthur to save her son from a firing squad, and the General has assured her that final authorities in Washington would give "thoughtful consideration" to her defense.

Making public today, the exchange of letters, headquarters said Mrs. Hicswa of Wallington, N. J., wrote on January 16:

"I implore you to act immediately to request a review of the United States Army court martial proceedings under which my soldier son, Pfc. Joseph E. Hicswa, was sentenced to death in Japan for the alleged fatal stabbing of two Japanese."

He was "torn away from his home to serve his country at the age of 18," her letter continued; he was "taught to kill, had heard of many of his friends being killed, and was under the emotional strain of a delayed homecoming—all factors to which might be attributed, to some extent, the cause for such abnormal conduct as is reportedly alleged in his case. Certainly they should be considered before an American soldier receives a death sentence."

MacArthur on January 28 replied that "your letter moved me deeply, as I am fully conscious of the distress occasioned you by this great tragedy."

MacArthur's Answer.

"There is no manner in which I can intercede in this matter, as the record of the trial will go direct from the division commander to the War Department for review, the right of final action on cases involving the death penalty being no longer within my prerogatives. I can assure you, however, that you need have no fear but that all of the circumstances which your mother's love instinctively raises in defense of your son will receive the thoughtful consideration of those who sit in final judgment upon his case. This is in keeping with our American high sense of justice."

Hicswa recently was convicted by a military court of killing two Japanese, allegedly while drunk. No details were made public.

W. C. T. U. Appeals to Truman.

Evanston, Ill., Jan. 30 (A. P.).—President Truman, as Commander in Chief of the Army, was urged today in a telegram by Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, to "order the arrest and trial of those who sold or gave Pfc. Joseph E. Hicswa, 20, the liquor on which he became drunk."

"The case . . . is an aftermath of the Army's stamp of approval on drinking by both officers and enlisted men," Mrs. Colvin said. "Because of his age, Hicswa was obviously not used to alcohol and it acted more violently as a bombshell on his brain."

severe blow from the Allied high command's political-purge decrees, Mainichi said. Liberals, taking advantage of the Progressive party confusion, have been making considerable headway.

Communist's Suggestion

Kyodo news agency quoted Communist Kyuichi Tokusa as asserting that the present "war-guilty" administration ought to be overthrown before the elections, allowing a new government to supervise the balloting.

Yusuke Tsurumi, of the Progressive party, told Kyodo the elections would be conducted in the fairest and most impartial manner.

One of Japan's foremost constitutional authorities, Dr. Tatsukichi Minobe, predicted 90 per cent of the Japanese would support the Emperor system, if it were put to a vote. A known opponent of the militarists, he said he thought the Emperor should remain "as centre of the state."

Kyodo said Japan's Cabinet decided to discharge about seventeen per cent of the officials and employés of the Agriculture and Forestry Ministry in accord with its policy of administrative readjustment.

Other home-front developments:

Jiji news agency said banking circles estimate that of 57,000,000,000 yen circulating in Japan, 20,000,000,000 is believed to be in the pockets of farmers and fishermen.

[Yen are valued at 15 to 1 United States dollar.]

The increasing amount of currency, being issued at the rate of 100,000,000 yen daily, bankers said, goes first into business transactions in the major cities, then finds its way to farming and fishing communities.

Rail Service Extended

The Transportation Ministry decided to expand passenger-carrying capacity of railroads by 25 per cent on February 1, by reopening part of the suspended train services.

[Only a part of Japan's rail facilities have been operative since wartime air raids.]

The Nippon Sangyo contributed another high-cost-of-living note. Cooking gas, it said, will go up in price four to six times on February 1. People in Tokyo still are cooking with gas, incidentally—although pressure is weak and service is offered only in the daytime.

Lead In Next Jap Diet Seen Going To Social Democrats

Tokyo, Jan. 30 (AP)—The newspaper Mainichi today predicted more than 1,000 candidates will seek office in Japan's March 31 general election and credited Social Democrats with the best chance of emerging as the nation's majority party.

The Progressive party, largest in the last Diet, sustained the most

Jap Silk Export Ordered

Tokyo, Jan. 30 (AP)—General MacArthur ordered the Japanese Government today to prepare 343,200 pounds of raw silk for early export. It will be shipped as soon as instructions arrive from Washington.

86 New Jap Papers

Tokyo, Jan. 30 (AP)—Eighty-six new newspapers have started publication in Japan in the five months since the surrender, Kyodo news agency said today.

PW's 'Broke Arms To Avoid Mines'

Yokohama, Jan. 30 (AP)—Testimony that American prisoners of war dreaded Japanese coal mines so much that they "purposely broke their arms to get out of work" was introduced today at the war-crimes trial of Capt. Isao Fukuhara, former commandant of Omuta prison camp.

A deposition by Pfc. Clarence E. Coffelt, of Oklahoma City, said the prisoners were afraid of being killed or disabled in the Mitsui mines and purposely injured themselves.

Fukuhara is charged with responsibility for the death of Corporal Walter R. Johnson, of McPherson, Kan. Affidavit was piled on affidavit against the defendant, including one by Corporal Lester Lee Mote, of Quanah, Texas, who said:

Beatings For Exercise

"It was Fukuhara's custom to beat American prisoners whenever he felt like exercising."

In an adjoining courtroom, Hiroji Honda denied charges that he mistreated prisoners at the Sendai prison camps, of which he was commandant. Honda said he gave orders that prisoners must be "well cared for" and treated equally with Japanese workers.

Many of the affidavits introduced at the Fukuhara trial criticized an American naval lieutenant and a technical sergeant for "collaborating" with Japanese authorities by reporting infractions of rules. Staff Sergeant Charles G. Davis, of Phoenix, Ariz., testified that the lieutenant "announced at a formation of prisoners, at which I was present, that for a theft he had turned Knight (Private William N. Knight, of Warsaw, N.Y.,) over to the Japanese for unlimited punishment.

Knight Died In May

Knight died in the camp last May.

Walter E. Zergman, of Milwaukee, Wis., testified that he and an orderly in charge of delousing clothing were forced to kneel twelve hours "for the guards' entertainment" and deprived of water four days because a change in the wind caused Zergman's clothing to burn instead of boil in the delousing tanks.

Jap Silver Cache Found

Matsuyama, Jan. 30 (AP)—A cache of 30,000 pounds of unreported silver, valued at 4,000,000 yen ($267,666), has been uncovered on the small island of Shodoshima, off Shikoku, by Lieut. W. A. Tomaszewski, Hamtramck, Mich., and an eleven-man patrol from the 24th Division. They also found stocks of raw rubber and bicycles which civilians said were landed by two Japanese navy ships two months after the war.

KAIDAICHI RULE BY U. S. HAILED

KAIDAICHI, Japan, Jan. 30.—(AP) The American occupation of Kaidaichi, witral limited, is a distinct military and social success.

The occupying forces consist of one affable lieutenant and two congenial corporals.

About two and a half months ago Lt. George E. Simon, of West Allis, Wisc., jeeyed into Kaidaichi to become the first American soldier officially to occupy this Southern Japanese village on the mainline of the imperial government railroad.

Soon afterward Cpl. Richard J. Timmer of Preston, Ia., and Cpl. Dave M. Keppler of Rutland, Ill., arrived to assist him.

Village officials quickly built them an office of plywood and translucent glass — more suitable than their Jap railway car -- and are now erecting a three bedroom house and a garage for their jeep. Presents from the townspeople include three American-style davenports, two easy chairs, a large table, and a sunlamp.

The primary task of the three-man occupation team is to see that Allied forces find proper train accommodations through Kaidaichi—but extra duty includes listening to the villagers' troubles, sharing their joys, and attending weddings.

Occasionally they play host to wayfaring American soldiers or correspondents stranded by mixed-up train schedules. Then they are apt to serve a steak dinner with wine, or a lunch of fried chicken and dumplings prepared by any one of several townspeople eager to cook for them. Often their guests decide to remain overnight after this hospitality.

Death March Not Brutal, Declares Jap Observer

Manila, Jan. 30 (AP)—A Japanese colonel already convicted of war crimes testified today in behalf of Lieut. Gen. Masaharu Homma, charged with condoning the Bataan death march and other atrocities.

He is Col. Seiichi Ohta, former commander of military police in the Philippines, who recently was convicted of permitting the torture and execution of countless civilians at Fort Santiago and was sentenced to die.

Ohta said he was ordered by Homma to observe the march of death of Filipino-American prisoners, "especially the behavior of Japanese soldiers. Homma's policy was to treat prisoners magnanimously and eventually to make them co-operate with the Japanese."

Testimony On Water

The witness said he saw prisoners obtain water and food at villages and receiving stations along the route of march. Prosecution witnesses had testified that the marchers not only were denied food and water, but were bayoneted to death if they fell from exhaustion.

"All looked weak, but I assumed that was from malaria," Ohta said.

He testified that he noticed only one instance of misconduct by Japanese soldiers.

"I saw some with two or more wrist watches obtained from prisoners," he told the United States trial commission. "I reprimanded them and had the watches returned to the Americans."

Post-Surrender Firing

Lieut. Gen. Kishio Kitajima, commander of field artillery, was questioned closely about prosecution charges that Japanese artillery continued to fire on Corregidor after General Wainwright ran up a white flag of surrender on May 6, 1943. He replied:

"About fifteen rounds of artillery shells were fired to clear the guns" on May 7. "The shells fell north and south of Corregidor."

Col. Yoshio Nakajima, of Homma's staff, recalled as a defense witness, said "there was absolutely no firing after noon" of May 6 on Corregidor.

Earlier, Nakajima testified that surrendering Filipino and American forces far outnumbered the Japanese, making proper care of prisoners impossible.

He said that the Japanese originally estimated Bataan and Corregidor defense forces at 40,000, but that 70,000 actually surrendered. Japanese forces were so weakened by casualties, he said, that attacks on Bataan had been delayed.

The witness also told the United States trial commission that Count Juichi Terauchi, supreme commander of Japan's southern armies, signed on November 20, 1941, the fateful order which later sent Nipponese legions into the conquest of the Philippines. The war began eighteen days later with Japan's sneak attack on Pearl Harbor.

72 HOLDOUT JAPS KILLED IN LUZON

Manila, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—Seventy-two Japanese holdout soldiers were killed four days ago in the southern Luzon province, Camarines Norte, in combat with a Filipino battalion which had tried for six weeks to persuade them to surrender. There were no Filipino casualties, Western Pacific Army Headquarters said in reporting the action.

Intelligence officers of the Eighty-sixth Division, charged with policing the area, estimated forty-eight Japanese escaped into rugged hills 150 miles south of Manila.

Civilian complaints that the Japanese were raiding, killing and abducting in the vicinity of Labo caused the division to dispatch the Filipino "First Battalion Andersons," commanded by Lieut.-Col. Bernard L. Anderson, a survivor of Bataan, to investigate. They dropped 200,000 surrender leaflets and sent civilian and Japanese prisoner emissaries but failed to win capitulation of the holdout Nipponese.

Finally, on Saturday, the Andersonians began a physical roundup, a "short and decisive" fight followed, said the Army, adding "the Japanese left seventy-two dead on the field while the rest, all poorly equipped, scrambled southward, where they still are the object of a reconnaissance search."

Wermuth Denial Absurd Calls

Manila Nurse Says Wedding Photographs May Overcome Bataan Hero's 'Amnesia.'

Manila, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—Olivia Josephine Oswald Wermuth, who sued yesterday for the annulment of a marriage that made her the wife, she said, of Major Arthur Wermuth, Bataan's famous one-man army, today characterized as fantastic his statement that he does not know her.

"Too many people knew us together on Bataan. Too many people saw us together when he came back from prison camp last September," said Miss Oswald, a civilian nurse. "It certainly is one of the most peculiar cases of amnesia I ever heard of.

"However, group pictures made on our wedding day and other pictures of us together may bring back Arthur's memory."

Miss Oswald's suit, asking annulment on the ground that Wermuth had been married in 1935 to a Chicago girl, stated that she and Wermuth were wed here on December 7, 1941, and that she followed him to Bataan when the war began next day.

Wermuth, in Traverse City, Mich., denied that he knows Miss

Oswald, reiterated the denial, canceled a radio address and several speaking engagements, and left with his wife, Jean, for an unannounced destination.

Miss Oswald, who said she resumed that name after learning of Wermuth's prior marriage, said that that knowledge came as a terrible shock, adding: "All I want is to get it over with as quickly as possible and forget the whole thing. I cannot understand it. It's perfectly obvious Arthur was married when he married me, so this annulment is the only possible way out."

Leo Castillo, her attorney, said he has ample witnesses and documentary evidence of the asserted Manila marriage.

McNutt En Route To Washington

Manila, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—Paul V. McNutt, Philippines High Commissioner, left today for Washington to ask Congress to expedite relief legislation for the war-devastated islands. McNutt expects to arrive in Washington Saturday.

G-M 'Unwilling' to Approve Maintenance-of-Membership Clause in Pact.

FORD ASKS PRICE HIKE

Federal Officials Urged to Lift Controls to End Disputes.

DETROIT, Jan. 30—(AP) Declaring it was "unwilling" to approve a maintenance-of-membership clause in a new contract, General Motors corporation today told the C.I.O.-United Automobile Workers it had "nothing further" to offer until uninterrupted production was assured.

The U.A.W. rejected a management proposal that the union's 175,000 striking employes return to work under its previously-made offer of 13 1-2 cents an hour wage increase pending new contract negotiations.

The [illegible]eal exchanges came just as the two and three-quarter hour GM-U.A.W. conference ended. Government Mediator Dewey, specially assigned to crack the deadlock said he planned to "do a little missionary work" with both union and General Motors representatives before a second conference is held tomorrow.

Dewey said wages were only lightly touched upon and discussions centered on "generalities." Asked whether he considered the wage or the contract issue of greater obstacle toward settlement, he replied that he didn't know.

In the battle over wages, the union originally demanded a 30 per cent rise, but it later accepted the 19 1-2-cent hourly increase recommended by President Truman's fact-finding board, which would amount to 17 1-2 per cent. When GM refused to accept the board's recommendation, the U.A.W.-C.I.O. went back to its original 30 per cent demand.

Union Hits GM

The U.A.W. said GM's renewal of the 13 1-2 cents offer in the face of the recommendation of 19 1-2 cents by the fact - finding board "and in the face of greater increases agreed to by other major auto companies" was an indication that the corporation "is not acting in good faith."

A union statement said the strike would continue until the corporation "meets its public responsibility" and bargains in "good faith" to carry out the recommendations of the President.

GM said it had nothing further to offer in a wage increase until provisions of a new contract were worked out to give the company assurance of "uninterrupted production ,efficient work effort by each employe and other provisions which we believe will contribute to better relations between the union, the employes and the management."

The corporation, which cancelled its contract with the union several weeks ago, said the old agreement contained a provision which "forced us to discharge 1,690 satisfactory employes on the union's demand because these employes were not willing to pay their union dues. We are unwilling to put any such provision in the new contract."

Dewey Sees Progress

In spite of conflicting viewpoints expressed in the GM and union statements, Dewey declared that from his standpoint progress was made in the first meeting between union and company representatives in more than a month. "At least," he said, "we got them talking across the table."

In a press conference tonight, U.A.W.-C.I.O. Vice-President Walter P. Reuther was asked whether he considered the President's fact-finding proposals an actual recommendation.

"He (the President) recommended . . . on the basis of the proposals made to him by the fact-finders," Reuther replied.

Reuther also was asked about the fact GM President C. E. Wilson was not at the negotiations, but as he was about to reply U.A.W.-C.I.O. President R. J. Thomas interrupted, saying, "as far as Mr. Wilson is concerned, we feel General Motors always has the right to bring anyone into the negotiations they want."

Thomas added, however, that when a settlement appears ready, the union would expect Wilson to be present.

The renewal of negotiations came just 71 days after 175,000 production workers left their jobs in 96 GM plants in a dispute over wages.

Contrary to earlier expectations Wilson did not attend today's negotiations session. The company delegation consisted of six members including Harry W. Anderson, vice-president in charge of personnel, and H. B. Coen, director of labor relations.

The union's group numbered 10, headed by President R. J. Thomas and Vice-President Walter P. Reuther.

The size of the respective delegations at the conference table indicated Dewey had been unable to get agreement on a plan to sharply reduce the number of negotiators. Dewey had been represented as feeling that small delegations could obtain quicker results.

Details Undisclosed

Whether he had been successful in persuading the negotiators to dispose of the wage issue first, leaving other matters for subsequent decision, was not disclosed.

The U.A.W.-C.I.O. originally demanded a 30 per cent wage rate increase from General Motors, GM's highest counter-offer was 13 per cent or 13 1-2 cents an hour. The union later agreed to accept the recommendations of the Presidential fact-finding board for settlement of the dispute at an increase of 17.5 per cent or 19 1-2 cents an hour.

General Motors rejected the fact-finders' recommendations.

For a time today it appeared Dewey had run into new complications in his efforts to get the negotiators together again. After having announced yesterday that an agreement had been reached for a reopening of the meetings today the conciliator went into separate conferences again this forenoon with GM President Wilson and union officials, including President Thomas and Vice-President Reuther.

The threat to the resumption of negotiations apparently grew out of the union objection to a reduction in the size of the negotiating groups. Reuther insisted the union's full eight-man negotiating committee participate.

"If General Motors is prepared to negotiate in good faith,' he said, "they can negotiate with the committee present."

Meeting Called

Dewey informed GM of Reuther's stand; the management agreed and the first meeting of the negotiators since late last month was arranged.

Recessed until Feb. 11 was the National Labor Relations Board hearings on U.A.W.-C.I.O. charges that GM had not bargained in good faith. The recess was taken yesterday at the request of counsel for both GM and the union.

The U.A.W.-C.I.O. estimates the strike already has cost GM production workers upward of $80,000,000 in lost wages. The cost to General Motors is not clearly defined but trade circles have placed it upward of $500,000,000 represented in the wholesale value of the more than 400,000 passenger cars that would have been produced during the period of the strike and in parts and equipment whose production also was shut off.

CIO Rejects G-M Proposal Workers Accept Boost Of 13 1-2 Cents Pending Pact

NOTHING FURTHER TO OFFER, FIRM TELLS UAW HEADS

at the conclusion of the first GM-UAW meeting with Special Federal Labor Mediator James F. Dewey, who is seeking an end of the 71-day-old dispute—longest in the history of the auto industry.

Ford Asks Controls Lifted

Simultaneously, Henry Ford II, president of the Ford Motor Company, which last week granted an 18-cent an hour raise to its production workers, made a direct appeal to Federal officials to lift price controls.

Ford, in a telegram to Reconversion Director John W. Snyder, said Ford currently is losing $300 on every car it makes.

"I am convinced that if government control of prices is promptly removed, management and labor will settle their differences without running to government — where price fixing is now forcing them to go," Ford said.

As the two and three-quarter hour GM-U.A.W. conference ended, Government Mediator Dewey, specially assigned to crack the deadlock said he planned to "do a little missionary work" with both union and General Motors representatives before a second conference is held tomorrow.

Dewey said wages were only lightly touched upon and discussions centered on "generalities." Asked whether he considered the wage or the contract issue of greater obstacle toward settlement, he replied that he didn't know.

In the battle over wages, the union originally demanded a 30 per cent rise, but it later accepted the 19 1-2-cent hourly increase recommended by President Truman's fact-finding board, which would amount to 17 1-2 per cent. When GM refused to accept the board's recommendation, the U.A.W.-C.I.O. went back to its original 30 per cent demand.

Union Hits GM

The U.A.W. said GM's renewal of the 13 1-2 cents offer in the face of the recommendation of 19 1-2 cents by the fact - finding board "and in the face of greater increases agreed to by other major auto companies" was an indication that the corporation "is not acting in good faith."

A union statement said the strike would continue until the corporation "meets its public responsibility" and bargains in "good faith" to carry out the recommendations of the President.

GM said it had nothing further to offer in a wage increase until provisions of a new contract were worked out to give the company assurance of "uninterrupted production ,efficient work effort by each employe and other provisions which we believe will contribute to better relations between the union, the employes and the management."

The corporation, which cancelled its contract with the union several weeks ago, said the old agreement contained a provision which "forced us to discharge 1,690 satisfactory employes on the union's demand because these employes were not willing to pay their union dues. We are unwilling to put any such provision in the new contract."

Dewey Sees Progress

In spite of conflicting viewpoints expressed in the GM and union statements, Dewey declared that from his standpoint progress was made in the first meeting between union and company representatives in more than a month. "At least," he said, "we got them talking across the table."

In a press conference tonight, U.A.W.-C.I.O. Vice-President Walter P. Reuther was asked whether he considered the President's fact-finding proposals an actual recommendation.

"He (the President) recommended . . . on the basis of the proposals made to him by the fact-finders," Reuther replied.

Reuther also was asked about the fact GM President C. E. Wilson was not at the negotiations, but as he was about to reply U.A.W.-C.I.O. President R. J. Thomas interrupted, saying, "as far as Mr. Wilson is concerned, we feel General Motors always has the right to bring anyone into the negotiations they want."

Thomas added, however, that when a settlement appears ready, the union would expect Wilson to be present.

The renewal of negotiations came just 71 days after 175,000 production workers left their jobs in 96 GM plants in a dispute over wages.

Contrary to earlier expectations Wilson did not attend today's negotiations session. The company delegation consisted of six members including Harry W. Anderson, vice-president in charge of personnel, and H. B. Coen, director of labor relations.

The union's group numbered 10, headed by President R. J. Thomas and Vice-President Walter P. Reuther.

The size of the respective delegations at the conference table indicated Dewey had been unable to get agreement on a plan to sharply reduce the number of negotiators. Dewey had been represented as feeling that small delegations could obtain quicker results.

Details Undisclosed

Whether he had been successful in persuading the negotiators to dispose of the wage issue first, leaving other matters for subsequent decision, was not disclosed.

The U.A.W.-C.I.O. originally demanded a 30 per cent wage rate increase from General Motors, GM's highest counter-offer was 13 per cent or 13 1-2 cents an hour. The union later agreed to accept the recommendations of the Presidential fact-finding board for settlement of the dispute at an increase of 17.5 per cent or 19 1-2 cents an hour.

General Motors rejected the fact-finders' recommendations.

For a time today it appeared Dewey had run into new complications in his efforts to get the negotiators together again. After having announced yesterday that an agreement had been reached for a reopening of the meetings today the conciliator went into separate conferences again this forenoon with GM President Wilson and union officials, including President Thomas and Vice-President Reuther.

The threat to the resumption of negotiations apparently grew out of the union objection to a reduction in the size of the negotiating groups. Reuther insisted the union's full eight-man negotiating committee participate.

"If General Motors is prepared to negotiate in good faith,' he said, "they can negotiate with the committee present."

Statements By G.M., UAW

Detroit, Jan. 30 (AP)—The statement issued by General Motors Corporation at the conclusion of its meeting with James F. Dewey, special Federal conciliator, and CIO-United Auto Workers officials today follow:

We have nothing further to offer in the way of a wage increase until the provisions of a new contract are worked out that gives General Motors assurance of uninterrupted production, efficient work effort by each employé and other provisions which we believe will contribute to better relations between the union, the employés and the management.

[General Motors terminated its contract with the union several weeks ago.]

Provision Pointed Out

In particular there was a provision in the cancelled contract which forced us to discharge 1,690 satisfactory employés on the union's demand because these employés were not willing to pay their union dues. We are unwilling to put any such provision in the new contract.

If the union wishes to order the employés back to work on the basis of an increase of 13½ cents per hour while such a contract is being negotiated, that will be all right with us.

It should be remembered that the union singled out General Motors for strike action under its labor blockade policy to force an excessive wage increase not only on General Motors but on the whole country.

Our principal competitors were allowed to reconvert their plants and negotiate new contracts satisfactory to them while their employés worked without any increases in wages whatsoever.

Offer Made Months Ago

When the 13½-cent offer was made by General Motors less than three months ago, it was the best wage increase then offered by any company in the automotive industry or by any important company in the heavy-goods industry.

It was made, knowing that the question of increased wages would shortly be under consideration again, as this wage offer and the other provisions of the contract with the UAW-CIO would expire on April 28, 1946, less than three months from now.

This was a fair offer, pending the time when volume production could be reached and until the general level of wages in the heavy-goods industry of the country was reasonably determined.

Statement of UAW

The statement of the CIO-United Automobile Workers follows:

The negotiations this afternoon demonstrated again the corporation's refusal to co-operate with the Government and its refusal to bargain in good faith.

The President recommended that the old contract be reinstated. The union is willing to accept that recommendation.

In demanding elimination of the maintenance-of-membership clause, the corporation is still in defiance of the President.

The corporation itself boasts that under the old agreement our labor-relations record has been fourteen times better than the rest of the industry during the three and one half years the maintenance-of-membership clause has been in effect.

Not Acting In Good Faith

The corporation's renewal of the 13½-cent offer in the face of the recommendation of 19½ cents by President Truman and in the face of greater increases agreed to by other major auto companies is another indication that the corporation is not acting in good faith.

The strike will continue until the corporation meets its public responsibility and bargains in good faith to carry out the recommendations of the President of the United States.

STEEL STRIKE TEN DAYS OLD

Solution Still Hinges On Size Of Price Boost In Products

Pittsburgh, Jan. 30 (AP)—Settlement of the vast steel strike apparently still hinged tonight on whether the industry obtains a price for products which its representatives consider sufficient to enable them to meet wage-increase demands.

The strike, in which the CIO-United Steel Workers asked an 18½-cents-an-hour increase, went through its tenth day.

Thousands of workers have been laid off in allied industries dependent on steel, and many companies are planning furloughing of employés within the next few weeks unless an agreement starts up the wheels of production.

750,000 Reported On Strike

The steel union estimates that "somewhere between 750,000 and 800,000" members are directly engaged in the walkout, but agreements reached independently with 30 smaller fabricating companies have returned approximately 18,000 to their jobs.

The Government was reported to have given its "last word" to the industry on what price increases it would approve.

Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the United States Steel Corporation, who spent yesterday in Washington, returned to his desk in New York, and a spokesman said there was no comment on the issue.

The reconversion director, John W. Snyder, has expressed optimism over the prospects of settlement.

Petition Hearing Delayed

However, top officials at Washington have been sticking with a price boost of $4 a ton, but Chairman Irving S. Olds of United States Steel said today an increase "greatly in excess of $6.25 a ton" would be necessary if wages are increased by 18½ cents an hour, the figure demanded by the workers.

The OPA has been reported staying steadfast with an increase of $2.50 a ton.

Meantime, Judge Sara M. Soffel of the Allegheny County Court of Common Pleas delayed until tomorrow a hearing on a petition of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation asking an injunction to limit picketing at its Homestead (Pa.) Works.

The court had asked the plaintiff and the union to negotiate the dispute.

Conference Is Held On Electrical Strike

Washington, Jan. 30 (AP)—Arthur S. Meyer and William H. Davis, mediators in the strike of 200,000 electrical workers, conferred today with Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach.

They declined to discuss progess of their efforts to settle the dispute. Meyer told reporters merely that they came from New York to "talk things over."

The fifteen-day-old strike has closed Westinghouse, General Electric and General Motors Corporation electrical division plants. The CIO-United Electrical Workers called the walk-out in support of demands for wage increases approximating $2 a day.

Greyhound Officials, AFL Agree On Extension

Washington, Jan. 30 (AP) — The Greyhound Corporation and the AFL drivers' union today agreed to an extension of time for Government-sponsored fact-finding in their wage dispute.

The union had agreed to call off its strike until February 3 for a 30-day investigation period.

Chairman William E. Simkin predicted that the panel would be able to make final findings of fact and recommendations in a comparatively short time after it resumed hearings here on February 8.

With testimony on the wage demands completed today, the parties will produce evidence on a number of so-called "fringe" demands, including vacations and holidays, when the hearing resumes.

Investigation Of Prices For Cattle Indicated

Washington, Jan. 30 (AP)—A source close to Clinton P. Anderson, Secretary of Agriculture, said today the Government is considering an investigation of the prices paid for cattle moving to stockyards since the reopening of strike-bound meat plants.

Anderson has been operating the packing plants since they were seized by the Government last week.

Reports have reached Anderson, an aide said, that buyers other than the Government-operated plants are purchasing a large portion of the cattle at prices above ceiling levels.

As a consequence, this source said, the larger packing plants are unable to obtain enough cattle to meet Government requirements of beef. Preliminary reports indicate, he said, that the cattle is being bought for "black market slaughter."

Labor-Industry Group May Meet

Miami, Fla., Jan. 30 (AP)—Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said tonight he was considering calling the semi-permanent labor-management committee together within the next month.

Johnston, who originated the idea of a continuing committee growing out of President Truman's labor-management conference in November, said it would be impossible to get the eight industrial and labor leaders on the committee together at this time.

He said he thought it would be a "good idea" to bring the committee together for a discussion of the labor-management situation, but discarded the possibility of acting in connection with the new anti-strike legislation which will come up in the House tomorrow.

Johnston is conferring here with the AFL executive council in an effort to avert a new strike over an interunion dispute at Hollywood movie studios.

NATIONAL GROUPS COOL TO PLAN FOR FARMERS' STRIKE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—(AP) Three national farm organizations turned thumbs down today on Mid-Western suggestions for a nation-wide farmers' strike against industrial walkouts.

They were the National Farmers' Union, the National Grange and the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Leaders of these groups agreed that a farm strike—involving the withholding of food products from market until industrial disputes are settled—would be impossible to carry out because of the peculiar character of farm production.

Holiday Proposed

The suggestion for a marketing holiday came from farmers' meetings at Chickaska, Okla., and in Clay County, Nebraska. V. Hubert Johnson, of Edgar, Neb., told the Clay County gathering that farmers "have their Irish up" because they can't get the industrial products they need and want.

While agreeing that a farmers' strike should not be encouraged, leaders of the farm organization disagreed in talking with a reporter as to the merits of wage demands of striking industrial workers.

Russell Smith legislative representative of the farmers union, said his organization was sympathetic to demands of "most of the strikers."

"We feel," he said, "that it is a case of management refusing to give up some of their big war profits. We feel that if farmers are to have good markets, industrial workers must be well paid."

President Edward A. O'Neal of the farm bureau said he sympathized fully with "farmer resentment over efforts of organized labor to obtain monopolistic control of the national economy."

Congress Action Urged

"The solution," said O'Neal in an interview, "is not to be found in a farm strike but in legislative action by Congress to protect the people."

Fred Bailey, legislative representative of the Grange, said a farm strike would hold farmers up to ridicule.

All three of the farm organization leaders pointed out that farm production, unlike industrial production, could not be turned on and off at will. Farmers, they added, would lose much money from milk, eggs and other perishables produced during a farm strike.

HEAD OF N.A.M. ASKS OVER-ALL LABOR POLICY

Mosher Says Program Could Serve as Basis for Industrial Peace.

SEES ROLE FOR FACT-FINDING

Holds It Should Clarify and Not Pass Judgment for Ending of Wage Disputes.

Washington, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—Ira Mosher, head of the National Association of Manufacturers, said today the nation needs an over-all national labor policy that can serve as a foundation for industrial peace.

This would be the only assurance that even if current strikes burn themselves out there would not be fresh ones within three to six months, Mosher said in a statement prepared for the Senate Labor Committee. The committee is considering President Truman's proposal for fact-finding in major labor disputes.

The NAM chief said: "Useful as I personally believe fact-finding can be, it is only a small part of the entire labor-management picture and we will destroy its usefulness by employing it indiscriminately."

Fact-finding, he added, should be used only to "clarify and state the true attitude and position of the parties without passing judgment or making recommendations for the settlement of the dispute."

"Management subscribes to the principle of collective bargaining," Mosher declared, "but collective bargaining will promote industrial peace only under conditions in which both labor and management stand equal before the law."

Both, he continued, must "assume full responsibility for their acts" and "recognize the importance of the public interest."

Mosher suggested that the program adopted by industry delegates to President Truman's labor-management conference last November would "form the framework" of an effective national policy.

He cited these points:

The law should control the activities and define the responsibilities of unions and employers equally.

Both sides should be required to bargain collectively "with full regard for the protection of individuals and the promotion of property against unlawful acts."

Both sides should be equally liable under the law for contract violations.

The law should provide means of settling union jurisdictional disputes without interference to industry operations.

In disputes over union representation the law should ban strikes, boycotts, lockouts or unfair labor practices while the National Labor Relations Board or appropriate State agencies take action.

Matters which are "clearly the function and responsibility of management should be excluded from the area of legally required collective bargaining."

Supervisory employees should be exempted from provisions of the Wagner act because "it is an anomaly for management to be required to bargain collectively with itself."

Against Hasty Laws.

After his prepared statement, Mosher told the committee that his proposals were offered as a long range program and that he did not want to see "hasty" legislation.

Asked what sanctions could be imposed to discourage illegal strikes, he suggested that if a striker violated a law or if an unfair strike was called in an essential service, the employer should not be required to re-instate the strikers after the strike was settled.

Senator Murray (D.-Mont.), chairman of the labor committee, expressed hope today that the committee could act on fact-finding legislation by the middle of next week.

Senator Taft (R.-Ohio) raised the question as the committee met to hear Mosher.

Murray said that he would attempt to speed the hearings, possibly holding sessions both morning and afternoon early next week.

Drastic Bill Approved by Committee Despite Bitter Union Protests.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(AP) A strike control bill far more sweeping than President Truman asked was approved by the House Rules committee today and sent to the House floor for action, amid bitter protests from backers of labor unions.

It would outlaw violent picketing, provide for civil suits against violators of labor contracts and lay unions open to injunctions. Foremen's unions would be deprived of any status.

Board Created

A labor-management board would be created to help settle disputes. Five-day notice of any strikes or lockouts would have to be given to this board. If it took jurisdiction, strikes or lockouts would be prohibited for a 30-day cooling off period.

The board, composed of six or more members appointed by the President, would then try conciliation, mediation (through a special panel or if both parties agreed) binding arbitration by one person.

Conciliation is a process by which the parties are brought together and their offers and counter-offers exchanged and assayed. Mediation goes somewhat farther, with the mediator exerting some pressure for an agreement and perhaps making recommendations. Arbitration is a process by which the parties lay their conflicts before an arbitrator and agree to be bound by his decision.

The measure, on which House debate may open tomorrow, contains many more teeth than the President's plan. He asked Congress to legalize fact-finding boards, give them power of subpoena and prohibit strikes for 30 days while they deliberated.

The new bill was introduced by Rep. Case (R-S.D.) but a powerful coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats got behind it. The rules committee vote of approval was 8 to 3.

Bill Assailed

Strike Curb Measure Sent to House Floor

30.24-689

While its foes assailed it as a move to break unions, sponsors argued that it is "constructive legislation needed to protect the public interest."

Reps. Howard Smith (D-Va.), Cox (D-Ga.) and others told the rules committee the legislation was necessary to prevent labor disputes from harming the public.

Rep. Biemiller (D-Wis.) termed it "a first definite step toward compulsory arbitration" and "a punitive move against organized labor." He said there is "a conspiracy against labor unions on the part of certain Wall Street financial interests."

Rep. Marcantonio (AL-N.Y.) said the new proposal "will pillory the man who toils." He said it "was baked in the oven of the Republican National Committee x x x and salted and peppered by some of the distinguished members" of the Rules committee.

The bill stipulates that Federal courts shall have authority to issue injunctions against labor unions in three situations, regardless of the provisions of any other law:

1. Employers or others could obtain an injunction against illegal picketing.

2. They also could get an injunction to halt an illegal boycott.

3. The proposed mediation board itself could obtain an injunction to enforce compliance with its orders, such as the 30-day strike ban. The board also could obtain an injunction against employers under this section, wherever necessary.

Hits Pickets

In connection with illegal picketing, the bill would make it "unlawful for any reason, by the use of force or violence or threats thereof, to prevent or to attempt to prevent any individual from quitting or continuing in the employment of" an employer, to accept or refuse employment, or to enter or leave "any place of employment."

In the scope of boycotts, the bill would outlaw any "concerted refusal to use, handle, or otherwise deal with articles or materials produced or manufactured" by an employer for the purpose of inducing him "to recognize, deal with, comply with the demands of, or employ members of any labor organization."

Labor-Disputes Bill of 1946

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30 (AP).—Following is the complete text of the strike control bill (H. R. 5262) introduced by Representative Francis Case, Republican, of South Dakota:

A BILL

TO PROVIDE ADDITIONAL FACILITIES FOR THE MEDIATION OF LABOR DISPUTES, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SHORT TITLE

Sec. 1. That this act may be cited as the "labor disputes act, 1946."

Declaration of Policy

Sec. 2. It is declared to be the policy of the United States that labor disputes affecting the public interest should be settled fairly and, so far as possible, without interruption or delay in the production and distribution necessary to the public interest, and to that end it is the duty of both employers and employees to bargain in good faith. The right of labor to organize and bargain collectively with employers is one of the cornerstones of competitive enterprise. The processes of such bargaining must be protected and strengthened. Government is no less the guardian of the general welfare than of individual freedom. In a complex society, warfare in one section of industry affects many others.

Government decision should not be substituted for free agreement, but governmental machinery to promote peaceful settlement of disputes should be improved. Demands of either labor or management should be kept within the bounds of reason and fairness, and both sides must recognize the rights of the general public.

The desired end of bargaining between management and labor is a contract. Once that contract is made, it must be equally binding and enforceable on both parties. Free collective bargaining and contracts resulting therefrom must not be nullified or destroyed by resort on either side to willful violence or unlawful possession, obstruction or destruction of property. Collective bargaining requires that labor be on one side of the table and management on the other. The separate positions, responsibilities, duties, powers and rights of labor and management must be maintained.

Legislation has heretofore been enacted to guarantee the right of collective bargaining. It is equally important that legislation be enacted to protect the rights of labor, industry, and the general public in the processes of collective bargaining. Wrongful and unlawful conduct on either side is destructive of collective bargaining; and conduct in pursuit of objectives that are not proper and legitimate objectives of collective bargaining and which are detrimental to the interests of the general public are likewise destructive of collective bargaining. The use of force, violence and compulsion are declared to be against public policy, as they violate the principles of freedom and self-government upon which our government was formed and the purposes for which it was founded.

To aid in the voluntary and expeditious settlement of labor disputes affecting the public interest, therefore, there are hereby established additional facilities and procedures for the application of collective bargaining, conciliation, mediation and arbitration.

Labor-Management Mediation Board

Sec. 3. (A) Membership.—There is hereby created in the executive branch of the government the "Labor-Management Mediation Board" (in this act called the board), which shall be composed of six or more members appointed by the President, as the President from time to time finds that the work of the board requires. The board shall consist of a number of members representative of employers, a like number representative of employees, and a number of disinterested members representative of the public (in this act called, respectively, employer members, employee members and public members). The President shall appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a chairman, a vice-chairman and secretary of the board from among the public members. The terms of the first chairman, vice-chairman and secretary shall begin as soon as they qualify, and expire as designated by the President at the time of nomination, one on Feb. 1, 1948, one on Feb. 1, 1949, and one on Feb. 1, 1950. The terms of office of all successors shall expire three years after the expiration of the terms for which their predecessors were appointed; but any member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring prior to the expiration of the term for which his predecessor was appointed shall be appointed only for the unexpired term of his predecessor. The President is also authorized to apoint such number of alternate public members, alternate employer members, and alternate employee members as he deems appropriate, subject to salary appropriations approved by the Congress. Upon designation by the chairman, an alternate member may serve upon the panels provided for in Section 6, and may serve as a substitute for any absent regular member in the same representative group, with full power to act as a regular member of the board.

(B) Terms and salaries—The members and alternate members, other than the chairman and vice-chairman, shall be appointed for such terms and shall receive such compensation for their services as the President shall, from time to time, determine. The chairman shall receive compensation at the rate of $12,000 per annum; the vice-chairman and the secretary shall receive compensation at the rate of $10,000 per annum.

(C) Meetings. — The board shall meet on call of the chairman or on the written request of a majority of the board filed with the secretary. In the absence of the chairman of the board, the vice-chairman shall be authorized to act as chairman. The chairman shall designate some public member or alternate public member of the board to act as chairman in the absence of both the chairman and vice-chairman. Two members or alternate members from each representative group shall constitute a quorum of the board. The board shall have an official seal which shall be judicially noticed.

(D) Organization powers.—The board is authorized to employ and fix the compensation of such officers and employees not otherwise provided for, as may be necessary, within appropriations made therefor by the Congress. The board may establish or utilize such regional, local or other agencies and utilize such voluntary and uncompensated services and, with the approval of the President, the services and facilities of such other departments and agencies of the government as may from time to time be needed. The board may delegate to any public member or alternate public member or to an executive secretary such adment a board, to be known as ministrative duties relating to the internal management of the board's affairs as it may deem appropriate.

(E) Office of the board.—The principal office of the board shall be in the District of Columbia, but it may meet and exercise any or all of its powers in any other place.

(F) The national mediation board created by the railway labor act, as amended by the act approved June 21, 1934 (public, numbered 442, Seventy-third Congress), shall hereafter be known as the National Carr Mediation Board.

Duties of Labor And Management

Sec. 4. (A) Employers, employees, and their respective representatives shall have the following duties in the public interest:

(1) Duty of employer.—It shall be the duty of an employer to refrain from conducting a lock-out until after the expiration of five days from the date on which such employer or his representative has given to the chairman of the board the written notice of his intention so to do, containing a statement of his reasons for such intended lock-out; and if the board within such five days assumes jurisdiction of the dispute, it shall be the duty of the employer to refrain from conducting the intended lock-out until after the expiration of thirty days from the date of the notice.

(2) Duty of employees.—It shall be the duty of employees of an employer to refrain from striking until after the expiration of five days from the date on which they, or their representatives, have given to the chairman of the board written notice of their intention so to do, containing a statement of their reasons for such intended strike; and if within such five days the board assumes jurisdiction of the dispute, it shall be the duty of the employees to refrain from striking until after the expiration of thirty days from the date of the notice.

(3) It shall be the duty both of employers, their employees, and their respective representatives, to withhold giving the notices provided for in this section until after other available conciliation and mediation procedures have been attempted, and the notices shall state what has been tried.

(b) For the purposes of this section "employer" does not include any person who regularly has in his employ less than fifty individuals.

Jurisdiction of the Board

Sec. 5. The chairman, vice-chairman and secretary shall determine, in the case of any labor dispute (excluding any matter coming within the purview of the railway labor act), whether such labor dispute is one which substantially affects the public interest and cannot be expeditiously adjusted by collective bargaining. If they so determine, the board shall have jurisdiction of the dispute.

Procedure for Mediation

Sec. 6. After the board has taken jurisdiction of a dispute, the board, under the direction of the chairman, shall make every reasonable effort to assist the parties to adjust and settle the dispute and make agreements for that purpose. To such end, the board may utilize, and the chairman may designate, a mediation panel consisting exclusively of disinterested persons representative of the public, or consisting of one or more persons representative of employers, a like number representative of employees, and a disinterested person or persons representative of the public. The persons designated may be members of the board, alternate members of the board, or other persons named by the board. The chairman or mediation panel may at any time request the parties to a dispute to negotiate by collective bargaining or to meet with any representatives of the board.

Voluntary Arbitration

Sec. 7. In the event a dispute is not settled by collective bargaining or by mediation under Section 6, the chairman of the mediation panel shall endeavor to induce the parties to the dispute voluntarily to submit their differences to arbitration. If the parties consent to such arbitration, they shall file with the board a notice of the agreement to arbitrate the dispute. The award of the arbitrator shall be filed with the board and shall be binding upon all parties consenting to such arbitration.

Maintenance of Status Quo

Sec. 8. (A) After the board has taken jurisdiction of a dispute as provided in Section 6, the chairman, in order to effectuate the purposes of this act, shall have the power to issue an order (1) requiring any person to refrain or cease and desist from calling, or assisting in any manner, a strike arising out of such dispute; or (2) requiring the employer, who is involved in the dispute, to refrain or cease and desist from practices which change the situation existing at the time the dispute arose, or which by changing an existing situation which led to the dispute and which the chairman deems shall be prejudicial to the prompt settlement of the dispute. No order of the chairman or process of any court under this act shall require an individual employee to render labor or services without his consent, nor shall any provision of such order or process be construed to make the refusal to work of an individual employee a violation of such order or process or otherwise an illegal act.

(B) Such order shall be effective for such period as the chairman shall determine, but shall in no event be effective for a longer period than thirty days from the date on which the board took jurisdiction.

(C) The Attorney General, at the request of the chairman, shall petition any District Court of the United States, in any state or in the District of Columbia, or the United States Court of any territory or possession, within the jurisdiction of which any person to whom an order is directed resides, transacts business, or is found, for the enforcement of such order, and for appropriate temporary relief or restraining order. Upon the filing of such petition, the court shall have jurisdiction of the proceedings, and shall have power to grant such temporary relief or restraining order as it deems just and proper, and to make and enter a decree enforcing the order of the chairman. Notice or process of the court under this section may be served in any judicial district, either personally or by leaving a copy thereof at the residence or principal office or place of business of the person to be served. Petitions filed under this section shall be heard with all possible expedition. The judgment and decree of the court shall be subject to review by the appropriate circuit court of appeals, or the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in the case of a judgment of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, and by the Supreme Court of the United States upon writ of certiorari.

(D) When granting temporary relief or restraining order, or making or entering a decree enforcing an order of the chairman, as provided in this section, the jurisdiction of courts sitting in equity shall not be limited by the act entitled "an act to amend the judicial code, to define and limit the jurisdiction of courts sitting in equity, and for other purposes," approved March 23, 1932, except that sections 11 and 12 of such act shall apply in cases of contempt.

Regulations of the Board

Sec. 9. The board shall have authority, in conformity with the provisions of this act, from time to time to make, amend, and rescind regulations providing appropriate procedures for carrying out the powers vested in it.

Miscellaneous Provisions

Sec. 10. Binding effect of collective-bargaining contracts. All collective-bargaining contracts shall be mutually and equally binding and enforceable either at law or in equity against each of the parties thereto, any other law to the contrary notwithstanding. In the event of a breach of any contract or of any agreement contained in such contract by either party thereto, then, in addition to any other remedy or remedies existing either in law or equity, a suit for damages for such breach or for injunctive relief in equity may be maintained by the other party or parties in any United States District Court having jurisdiction of the parties. If the defendant against whom action is sought to be commenced and maintained is a labor organization, such action may be filed in the United States District Court of any district wherein any officer of such labor organization resides or may be found.

Sec. 11. Violence and Intimidation—(A). It shall be unlawful for any person, by the use of force or violence or threats thereof, to prevent or to attempt to prevent any individual from quitting or continuing in the employment of, or from accepting or refusing employment by, any employer, or from entering or leaving any place of employment of such employer. The district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction, notwithstanding the act of March 23, 1932, entitled "An act to amend the Judicial Code and to define and limit the jurisdiction of courts siting in equity, and for other purposes," to enjoin violations and threatened violations of any of the provisions of this section, and by appropriate order or decree to compel compliance with such provisions. Any individual who violates any of the provisions of this section shall on and after such violation cease to have, and cease to be entitled to, the status of an employee for the purposes of Sections 7, 8 and 9 of the national labor relations act, or the status of a representative for the purposes of such act.

(B) An employee whom a preponderance of the testimony taken (in appropriate proceedings before the National Labor Relations Board) shows has willfully engaged in violence, intimidation, or unlawful destruction or seizure of property in connection with a labor dispute involving his employer, or in connection with any organizational activities of a labor organization among employees of his employer, shall not be entitled to reinstatement by, or any back pay from, such employer under Section 10 of the national labor relations act.

Sec. 12. Supervisory Employees—(A) As used in this section the term "supervisory employee" means an employee whose duties include:

(1) The direction or supervision of the activities of other employees; or

(2) The computation of the pay of other employees; or

(3) The determination of the time worked by other employees; or the supervision or administration of the factors on the basis of which the pay of other employees is computed;

But does not include any employee within the purview of the railway labor act.

(B) Hereafter no supervisory employee shall have the status of an "employee" for the purpose of Section 7, 8 and 9 of the national labor relations act.

Sec. 13. Boycott and s forth—(A) It shall be unlawful (1) by means of a concerted refusal to use, handle, or otherwise deal with articles or materials produced or manufactured by any person, to induce or require or to attempt to induce or require another person to recognize, deal with, comply with the demands of, or employ members of, any labor organization; or (2) by means of a concerted refusal to use, handle, or otherwise deal with articles or materials purchased, produced, manufactured or used by an employer, to induce or require or to attempt to induce or require such employer to recognize, deal with, comply with the demands of, or employ members of, one labor organization instead of another labor organization with which such employer has an applicable collective-bargaining agreement.

(B) The districts courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction, notwithstanding the act of March 23, 1932, entitled "an act to amend the judicial code and to define and limit the jurisdiction of courts sitting in equity, and for other purposes," to enjoin violations and threatened violations of any of the provisions of this section. Any individual who violates any of the provisions of this section shall, on and after such violation cease to have, and cease to be entitled to, the status of an employee for the purposes of Sections 7, 8 and 9 of the national labor relations act, or the status of a representative for the purposes of such act.

Sec. 14. Definitions—As used in this act—

(A) "Person" means an individual, partnership, association, corporation, business trust or any organized group of persons.

(B) The terms "employer," "employee," "representative," "labor organization" and "labor dispute" shall have the same meaning as in Section 2 of the national labor relations act.

Sec. 15. If any part of this act shall be held unconstitutional, it shall not affect the validity of the remaining provisions of the act.

Sec. 16. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of the Treasury any sums necessary to the purposes of this act not otherwise appropriated.

CHIEFS IGNORED HIS WAR WARNING, CAPTAIN CHARGES

Dispatch Wound Up in Wastebasket, M'Collum Tells Probers.

BLAMES TWO ADMIRALS

Doubts Navy Intercepted 'Winds' Message Indicating Jap Break with U.S.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30 — (AP) Navy Capt. A. H. McCollum said today he drafted a war warning for fleet commanders shortly before Pearl Harbor but it wound up in the wastebasket after submission to two admirals.

McCollum told the Senate-House Committee investigating the Dec. 7, 1941, attack that he wrote the proposed dispatch on Dec. 4 or 5. At the time, he was head of the Far Eastern Section of Naval Intelligence.

Admirals Named

He named Adm. Theodore S. Wilkinson, director of naval intelligence, and Adm. R. K. Turner, head of the War Plans Division, as the admirals who looked it over and decided against sending it.

McCollum also testified that:

The Navy, in his opinion, never intercepted prior to the attack any Japanese broadcast in the so-called "WINDS" code indicating a break in relations with the United States.

On the morning of Dec. 7, Wilkinson suggested to Adm. Harold R. Stark, then Chief of Naval Operations, that additional warning be sent to fleet commanders.

McCollum said Wilkinson's suggestion was made at a conference which began in Stark's office shortly after 9 a. m., Eastern Standard Time, or 3:30 a. m., Hawaiian time.

Stark has testified that he felt that the fleet commanders had received sufficient warning, but agreed to a recommendation by Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, that a fresh one be sent out.

Marshall's recommendation was based on information that the Japanese ambassadors would present a note to Secretary of State Hull at one o'clock. Marshall dispatched a warning shortly before noon, Washington time, but it did not reach Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, Army Commander in Hawaii, until hours after the attack.

Telling of his proposed war warning, McCollum related that he prepared a memorandum summary of the situation and read it at a conference in Stark's office on Dec. 1. He said he "pointed out that war or a rupture of diplomatic relations was imminent" and asked senior officers whether fleet commanders had been warned.

Both Stark and Turner gave the conference "categorical assurance" that ample warning had gone out, McCollum added.

Message Never Sent

The witness said he had not seen the warning message, however and on Wednesday or Thursday composed his proposed message and showed it to Wilkinson, his immediate superior.

Wilkinson told him to take it to Turner, who looked it over and struck out several parts. Turner then showed him a copy of the message Stark sent on Nov. 27 to fleet commanders.

This message opened with the words that it was to be considered a "war warning."

"I said, good gosh, you put in the words 'war warning' and I don't know what could be plainer than that," McCollum added.

But he still wanted his message sent. McCollum went on, and Turner told him that if it was sent it would have to go with the changes he had made, then he told him to take it back to Wilkinson.

It never was sent, he said. Asked if he had a copy of it, McCollum said he did not because such a proposed dispatch, if not used, "goes into the wastebasket."

The story of McCollum's message was developed in connection with questioning about the "WINDS" code.

The committee has received testimony that in November, 1941, the Japanese set up an arrangement whereby inclusion in their news broadcasts of certain words relating to the weather would be a signal of a break with the United States, Britain or Russia.

The code words for a break with the United States were "East Wind, Rain."

Code Inquiry Pressed

The committee has been trying to find out whether a broadcast of this code was intercepted before the attack.

Samuel H. Kaufman, of committee counsel, told McCollum that Navy Capt. L. F. Safford had told a secret Navy investigating board that such a broadcast was heard on Dec. 3 or Dec. 4 and that McCollum wrote a war warning dispatch on the basis of it.

McCollum said Safford was mistaken. He wrote his proposed dispatch solely on the basis of his analysis of the situation, McCollum added.

McCollum, who was born in Japan and spent years studying the language, said the value of the WINDS code depended on "particular and precise Japanese words in a particular sequence."

If they were not the exact words in the proper sequence, references to the weather had to be considered as ordinary broadcasts, he said.

Truman Urges British Loan 1946 Be Voted

Washington, Jan. 30 (AP)—President Truman today asked Congress to vote a $3,750,000,000 loan to Britain, saying it would lead to expanded "production, consumption and employment and rising standards of living everywhere."

Urging prompt action on the agreement, which also includes an additional credit of $650,000,000 settling lend-lease obligations, Mr. Truman said the loan will permit this nation and Britain to "move side by side" toward the goal of expanded world trade.

Approval Bill Introduced

Within a few minutes after the President's message reached the House, Chairman Spence (D., Ky.) of the Banking Committee introduced legislation calling for approval of the loan. He said in a statement the committee would hold "fair and full" hearings to "bring out all the facts."

"From what I have heard of the sentiment of the House—Republican as well as Democratic—we are going to consider this question with open minds," Spence added.

Barkley Unsuccessful

In the Senate, however, Democratic Leader Barkley, of Kentucky, was balked in his attempt to introduce similar legislation.

He asked unanimous consent for its introduction, along with an accompanying statement, but Senator Langer (R., N.D.) objected. Langer did not state his reasons, but a filibuster is on and introduction of bills is not in order except by unanimous consent.

Barkley backed up Mr. Truman's request for prompt action.

"Britain is our best customer,"

30.24-691

he said in the statement he released to the press.

Declares Importance Recognized

Barkley is a member of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, to which the bill is expected to be referred. He declared the Senate is "fully aware of the importance of this agreement to our foreign policy and to our economic policy."

Nevertheless, there were unmistakable indications that the loan faced trouble in the Senate.

Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) indorsed it without reservation. Many of the other members, however, said they would have to be shown: (a) That the loan can and will be repaid, (b) that it is really to our national interest to make it, and, (c) that we can afford to lend money abroad.

Sees Market For U.S. Goods

"Britain needs this credit and she needs it now," the President declared in a special message to the Senate and House. "It will enable her to buy from the world the supplies of food and raw materials which are essential to the life and work of the British people. At the same time it will keep open a market for those surpluses of the United States which are customarily exported to the United Kingdom. These are the important short-term purposes of the credit."

More important from the American point of view, Mr. Truman said, is that it will make possible the removal of British emergency controls over foreign exchange and imports and provide for return to peacetime practices "designed to promote the recovery of world trade."

Better Living Standards

"The financial agreement will enable the United Kingdom, through the prompt relaxation of exchange restrictions and discriminations, to move side by side with the United States toward the common goal of expanded world trade, which means expanded production, consumption and employment and rising standards of living everywhere," he said.

In addition to the direct benefits from the stimulus to Anglo-American trade, he said, there will be "the added benefits derived from the ability of other nations to relax their restrictions once the United Kingdom has led the way."

Congressional approval of the agreement, the President declared, will be "a great contribution to the establishment of a permanent state of peace and prosperity," and added:

"We are all aware of the dangers inherent in unchecked economic rivalry and economic warfare. These dangers can be eliminated by the firm resolution of this nation and the United Kingdom to carry forward the work which has been so well begun."

Mentions Bretton Woods

Mr. Truman said that Congress laid the cornerstone "for the construction of an orderly economic peace" in approving the Bretton Woods monetary agreement to stabilize world currency and provide for rehabilitation of war-stricken nations.

Among other important steps in this direction he mentioned ratification of the treaty establishing the United Nations Organization, passage of legislation supporting the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, extension of reciprocal trade agreements act and the expansion of the Export-Import Bank.

While these steps take the country a long way "on the road to world-wide security and prosperity," he said, "they should not make us blind, however, to the job that has not been done."

Needs Working Capital

The United Kingdom, he said, "must continue for a long period many of its emergency wartime financial controls unless it obtains additional working capital" provided in the proposed loan.

Now is the time to take action "to enable the United Kingdom to move with us toward the prompt abolition of these restrictions," he said.

The agreement will come into operation only after Congress makes available the funds necessary for the loan. The credit may be drawn upon until the end of 1951. At that time, the United Kingdom will be obligated to begin repayment of the principal with interest and those payments will continue over a period of 50 years, Mr. Truman said.

Praises Terms

The President said the terms "are neither unusual nor difficult to understand."

He described as "one new concept" the recognition by this Government that conditions may exist temporarily which would make payment of interest on such a large amount difficult. Accordingly, he said, provision has been made for the waiver of interest after a certification by the International Monetary Fund that such action would be desirable.

"It is not to our advantage to press for payment of interest when payment is impossible and thus force default and a crumbling of international economic relations," Mr. Truman added.

President's Plea to Congress on British Loan

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30 (AP)—The following is the text of President Truman's message to Congress today on the proposed loan to Britain:

To the Congress of the United States:

The establishment of a permanent state of peace and prosperity is not a simple matter. The creation and maintenance of conditions under which nations can be prosperous and remain peaceful involves a series of highly complex and difficult problems. If we are to reach this greatly desired goal, we must be prepared at all times to face the issues that will constantly present themselves and we must be determined to solve them. If peace is to be permanent, we must never relax our efforts to make it so.

In his message to the Congress recommending the approval of the Bretton Woods agreements, President Roosevelt called these proposals "the cornerstone for international economic cooperation." By enacting the Bretton Woods Agreements Act, the Seventy-ninth Congress laid this cornerstone for the construction of an orderly economic peace.

The Structure of Peace

The Congress took many other steps during the same session which enlarged the structure, and its achievements in this field are just cause for pride. Among the most important of these other steps were the ratification and implementation of the treaty establishing the United Nations Organization, the enactment of legislation to support the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization and to carry on the operations of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, the extension in a broader form of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, and the expansion of the Export-Import Bank.

These steps will take us a long way on the road to world-wide security and prosperity. They should not make us blind, however, to the job that has not been done—to the work that lies ahead.

In approving the establishment of the International Monetary Fund and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the Congress specifically expressed its belief that additional measures for international economic cooperation would be necessary to render most effective the operations of the fund and bank. In the Bretton Woods Agreements Act the Congress declared it to be the policy of the United States to seek to bring about further international agreement and cooperation along these lines.

The International Monetary Fund Agreement was drafted and the Bretton Woods Agreements Act was enacted during the war. Both recognized the financial condition of some countries resulting from the war might make it impossible for them to apply at once the fundamental rule of nondiscrimination in their monetary and financial transactions. Therefore, provision was made for a transition period which might postpone as long as five years the complete application of this fundamental rule.

Holds Grace Period Is Needed

Now in time of peace as we rapidly proceed with the organization of the International Monetary Fund we find that the fears which were responsible for this period of grace are verified by the facts. The most important of these facts is that the United Kingdom as a result of the war must continue for a long period many of its emergency wartime financial controls unless it obtains additional working capital.

It is apparent that, in the case of a principal member of the International Monetary Fund, we can ill afford to wait for the period permitted by the Bretton Woods agreements for the removal of these hindrances to the financial and commercial relationships between nations. Now is the time to establish post-war monetary and financial policies of the United Nations. Now is the time to take action to enable the United Kingdom to move with us toward the prompt abolition of these restrictions.

The financial agreement will by its terms come into operation only after the Congress has made available the funds necessary to extend to the United Kingdom the line of credit of $3.75 billion in accordance with the terms set forth in the agreement. Britain needs this credit and she needs it now. It will assist her to meet the expected deficit in her balance of payments during the next six years. It will enable her to buy from the world the supplies of food and raw materials which are essential to the life and work of the British people. At the same time it will keep open a market for those surpluses of the United States which are customarily exported to the United Kingdom. These are the important short-term purposes of the credit.

Calls It More Than a Credit

But the financial agreement is much more than a credit. Let me repeat, its most important purpose from our point of view is to cause the removal of emergency controls exercised by the United Kingdom over its international transactions far more speedily than is required by the Bretton Woods agreements. The financial agreement will enable the United Kingdom, through the prompt relaxation of exchange restrictions and discriminations, to move side by side with the United States toward the common goal of expanded world trade which means expanded production, consumption and employment and rising standards of living everywhere.

The line of credit which will be extended to the United Kingdom under the agreement may be drawn upon until the end of 1951. At that time the United Kingdom will be obligated to begin repayment of the principal with interest and those payments will continue over a period of fifty years. These terms are neither unusual nor difficult to understand. There is one new concept, however, embodied in the terms of the credit.

We have recognized that conditions may exist temporarily during such a long period of time which would make the payment of interest on such a large amount difficult if not impossible. Accordingly, provision has been made for the waiver of interest by the United States Government after a certification by the International Monetary Fund as to the facts regarding the balance of payments position of the United Kingdom. It is not to our advantage to press for payment of interest when payment is impossible and thus force default and a crumbling of international economic relations.

Effect on World Trade

The financial assistance which the United Kingdom would receive under the agreement has made it possible for the two Governments to agree on a specific course of action which in a short period of time will result in the removal of emergency controls over foreign exchange and discriminatory import restrictions and the re-establishment of peacetime practices designed to promote the recovery of world trade.

Britain has agreed to abolish the so-called "sterling area dollar pool." She has agreed to give up most of her rights during the transition period provided for in the International Monetary Fund Agreement and thus to abandon controls over foreign exchange which she would otherwise be permitted by the terms of that agreement to continue for a considerable period of time. In addition to the direct benefits which will flow from this stimulus to Anglo-American trade there will be the added benefits derived from the ability of other nations to relax their restrictions once the United Kingdom has led the way.

Another troublesome financial problem which has been fully and frankly discussed by the two nations is that of the sterling liabilities of Great Britain which have resulted from her large expenditures abroad during the war. In the financial agreement the British Government has undertaken to adjust and settle these obligations out of resources other than the American credit and has outlined its intentions with respect to their settlement.

Our concern in this connection is twofold. In the first place we want other countries which are in a position to do so to grant assistance to the United Kingdom within their means. Those which hold large sterling balances can do so by scaling them down. In the second place we want to be certain that the liquidation of these balances will not discriminate against American trade. The financial agreement contains a specific undertaking by the Government of the United Kingdom that no such discrimination shall result from these settlements.

On World Trade Expansion

The financial agreement also makes it possible for the United Kingdom to give whole-hearted support to the proposals for expansion of world trade and employment which the United States has recently put forward as a basis for international discussions by the United Nations. In the joint statement on commercial policy published at the same time as the financial agreement the United Kingdom has undertaken to support these proposals and to use its best endeavors in cooperation with the United States to bring to a successful conclusion international discussions based upon them.

For these reasons the next order of international business before the Congress should be our financial relations with the United Kingdom. The problems involved, which are severe but not insoluble, are direct consequences of the war. They are matters of great urgency and I believe that the financial agreement which I am transmitting herewith furnishes a real basis for their solution. It is my earnest hope that the Congress will implement the financial agreement as speedily as is consistent with careful legislative consideration.

It is not too much to say that the agreement now transmitted will set the course of American and British economic relations for many years to come. In so doing it will have a decisive influence on the international trade of the whole world.

Those who represented the United States in these discussions and those who represented the United Kingdom were fully aware of the fundamental nature of the problems before them. After long and careful consideration they agreed upon the arrangements which in my opinion will provide a solid foundation for the successful conduct of our economic relations with each other and with the world.

Other implementation of the financial agreement will be a great contribution to the establishment of a permanent state of peace and prosperity. We are all aware of the dangers inherent in unchecked economic rivalry and economic warfare. These dangers can be eliminated by the firm resolution of this nation and the United Kingdom to carry forward the work which has been so well begun.

The financial agreement transmitted herewith means that instead of economic controversy between the two countries, the wise rules of the Bretton Woods agreements will be fully effective much sooner than we believed possible when the Congress enacted the Bretton Woods Agreements Act. I urge that Congress act on the financial agreement promptly.

BRITAIN SHOULD PAY DEBT TO U.S., CANADIAN SAYS

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 30 — (AP) Canada's war-time munitions chief said tonight that Britain should pay her debt to America in Western Hemisphere bases or by other "mutually satisfactory" settlement.

William Flockert Drysdale, speaking as "a private citizen," declared the "grim specter" of debt forgiveness must not arise "in this new age of infinite threats and dangers" as it "so unhappily arose after the First World war."

Obligations Remain

Drysdale, in a speech prepared for delivery to the Albany County Historical Society, said Britain's obligations to the United States "are and remain debts until they are fully acknowledged and liquidated."

"Contractual arrangements for payment," he said, could be "either by permanent cession or by leases of lengthened tenure of present or different lands in or contiguous to the waters of the Western Hemisphere; and or by such other media of installment payments as are mutually satisfactory."

He said England's "staggering" war losses, especially the destruction or damaging of 4,000,000 homes, must be replaced "if Britain is to continue as a useful ally in the company of enlightened nations.

"Between neighbors and allies and comrades in past times of peril, that may arise again, there must be no sordid question of the cost of such human and necessary help. x x x Past, present and future they are debts of moneys and credits of health and safety, desperately cared for and gallantly provided."

"Specious pleas" for debt acquittance or forgiveness are not "admissible between courageously honest and realistic minds," he declared.

Close Ties with U. S. Urged

Canadians, proud of their "independence combined with loyalty to the Crown," he said, "are no less proud of our free allegiance to the British Empire and commonwealth of nations." But, he added, British policy ignoring or running counter to the "fundamental affinity" of the Dominions and the United States would have a "disruptive effect on the commonwealth as a whole."

Drysdale said Canadians "must emancipate" themselves from "misgivings" that too close liaison would enable the United States to dominate the economy and "indirectly affect the governmental integrity of the Dominion." Canada "must welcome the closest economic liaison."

A. F. L. BACKS FOES OF FRANCO'S RULE

Miami, Fla., Jan. 30 (A. P.).—The American Federation of Labor today called upon the State Department to recognize the Spanish Republican Government in Exile

The A. F. of L. executive council issued a statement which President William Green said was unanimously approved at a meeting today, asserting that recognition of the exile Government "should greatly hasten the triumphant evolution of democracy in Spain."

The Republican Government, the council said, already has been recognized by Mexico, Guatemala, Bolivia, and Panama. Other Latin-American countries have indicated that they were about to extend it de juro recognition.

BILBO PREPARES TO TALK 60 DAYS AGAINST FEPC

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—(AP) Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, Mississippi's non-stop one-man debate team, headed down the filibuster road this afternoon for a projected 60-day saunter.

He was 12 days and two hours late joining the Southern delaying action against the Fair Employment Practice Bill, which had started on Jan. 18, but it wasn't because he hadn't tried.

The Southerners' high command had wanted to save him for the all-night sessions that may be coming soon. But Bilbo saw his chance at 2:50 p.m., (Eastern Standard Time), and claimed the floor when South Carolina's Olin Johnson concluded a two-hour speech.

Bilbo Plunges In

Scorning the mild-measured approach adopted by some of the previous speakers, Bilbo plunged into the mechanics of operating a Fair Employment Practice Commission with power to bar discrimination in employment because of race, religion, color or national origin.

"Isn't this a free country any more?" he inquired

"Are we going to let some little peckerwood come around without any right and go into your office and examine your books?

"It will lead to a riot if you do."

Bilbo complained that the bill furnished no protection for the white folks—"the white Gentiles, that is." He figured out that if jobs were allocated in proportion to population, no business should be allowed to have more than one negro among every nine employes, or more than one Jew among each 28.

"I'll insist on that amendment if the bill ever gets around to the amending stage," he announced.

Senator Glen Taylor (D-Idaho), who had been following Bilbo's discourse with interest, asked if he thought it ever would.

"Frankly, I do not," the Mississippian replied. "I think that in 45 or 50 days the Senate may be ready to send this bill back to committee for perfection."

Urges Study of Bill

A few minutes earlier, however, he had declared that while he didn't want to take up the time of the Senate needlessly, "60 days is not too long."

Bilbo advised his colleagues to take the bill home and study it.

"What's the use of studying it if we will not be permitted to vote?" Taylor asked.

"It would be a fine education for a man like you," Bilbo said.

Bilbo spoke in moderate, voice-saving tones, in contrast to the previous speaker, Johnson, a big man with a booming delivery.

Senator Lucas (D-Ill) wandered into the chamber at one point when only a half dozen Senators were on the floor. He stood a foot from Johnston. Unperturbed, the South Carolinian kept shouting in tones that could be heard far down the Capitol corridors. Lucas explained that he was standing up close "so I can hear the Senator better."

"I thank the Lord for my voice," Johnston said. "People can hear me when I speak."

Proceeding, he told of a man who consistently refused to hire any man who parted his hair in the middle. Johnston wanted to know if the Congress should legislate against that kind of discrimination.

URGE HIGHER RATE, WIDER COVERAGE FOR SECURITY TAX

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20. — (AP) The House Ways and Means committee was advised by its research staff today that the social security tax should be increased one-half per cent next year and coverage be extended to 20,000,000 additional workers.

Approximately 30,000,000 jobs now are covered, entitling workers to old age and survivors insurance. The committee's staff of experts would have virtually all jobs covered under a plan filed with the group.

There no longer is any reason, the report said, why coverage should not be made available to nearly all of the 9,000,000 self-employed, including farm operators; 4,000,000 agricultural workers; 2,600,000 normally in domestic service; 1,100,000 employed by non profit organizations, and millions in other uncovered employment.

Meeting Called

Chairman Doughton (D-NC) called the committee to meet tomorrow for the beginning of a reexamination of the social security law, to determine what expansions should be made and what the future tax should be.

The staff suggested that the tax on employes' pay and employers' payrolls, now one per cent, be boosted in 1947 to 1.5 per cent against each.

Moreover, it advised that the social security levy should increase by another one-half per cent each 10 years until a three per cent maximum rate was reached in 1977. This tax covers payments of old age and survivors insurance.

The staff, headed by Leonard J. Calhoun, a Mississippi lawyer, called the committee's attention to the fact that social security insurance covered over a little more than half the jobs of American workers, and the report declared:

"No one would contend that workers in the excepted areas of employment are less in need of the protection afforded under old age and survivors insurance than those who work in covered jobs."

Congress, in writing the original security act, restricted its coverage principally because of administrative difficulties in certain areas of employment, such as the self-employed, farm workers, and domestic workers, where collection of the tax might be difficult.

Gerald Smith Declares Strike Wave Is Rehearsal

Tells House Hearing Reds Seek a General Walkout

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30 (AP).—Gerald L. K. Smith, head of the America First party, told Congress today "the current strike epidemic is just a rehearsal for a general strike later."

Mr. Smith asserted that "Communists and other left wingers" were promoting strikes.

He offered these comments before the House committee investigating un-American activities, which called him for questioning regarding his party.

A group of Congressmen had filed with the committee a statement describing Mr. Smith as a "Fascist propagandist" and as "America's most raucous purveyor of anti-Semitism and of racial and religious bigotry."

Mr. Smith heatedly denied being a Fascist, an anti-Semite or a bigot and asserted: "I'm being branded by traitors as a traitor." He referred to the signers of the statement as "left-wing Congressmen following the Communist party line."

Those signing the statement included Representatives Ellis Patterson, Democrat, of California; Charles R. Savage, Democrat, of Washington; Hugh De Lacy, Democrat, of Washington, and Vito Marcantonio, American Laborite, of New York.

Mr. Smith sharply criticized the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt and his administration, asserting Mr. Roosevelt "was very much of an imitator of Hitler, and . . . the New Deal used the ideology of Communism and the techniques of the Fascists."

House Again Passes War Funds Cutback

Washington, Jan. 30 (AP)—The House passed by voice vote today and sent to the Senate a bill canceling $51,786,811,921 in appropriations voted previously for war purposes.

The amount involved in the same cutback that Congress voted last year but President Truman pocket-vetoed the legislation because of a provision to return the United States Employment Service to state control within 100 days.

HOUSE REBUFFS TRUMAN ON JOB SERVICE SHIFT

Senate Gets Measure to Let States Take Control by July 1.

LEGISLATION FACES VETO

USES Bill Was First Item on Program of President to Reach Congress Vote.

Washington, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—A decisive defeat in the House jolted President Truman's hopes today for continued Federal control of the United States employment service—a top item on his program.

The House rejected the President's proposal by a vote of 263 to 113 yesterday and directed that USES be returned to the States not later than June 30.

The legislation went to the Senate which has gone on record in previous unsuccessful measures as favoring restoration of the agency to the States.

The promising outlook for the return legislation set Capitol Hill speculating on the likelihood of another veto when and if the measure reaches the White House.

Mr. Truman refused in December to sign legislation providing for the transfer of USES to the states within 100 days. He asked, instead, that the switch be delayed until June 30, 1947. He said earlier action would damage the reconversion program, particularly re-employment of veterans.

The House Labor Committee approved his proposal, but a coalition of House Republicans and Southern Democrats rejected the committee bill yesterday and instead passed a substitute by Representative Dirksen (R.-Ill.) setting the deadline a year earlier.

Dirksen told reporters that even if Mr. Truman vetoes the new bill he believes he has enough backing to insure passage over a veto. A two-thirds vote is required for such action.

The USES bill was the first major item in the President's program for this session of Congress to reach a vote in either chamber. A filibuster-snarled Senate has up for consideration the fair employment practice measure, another of Mr. Truman's prime proposals, but its prospects of passage are dubious.

House Group Named To Draft Defense Act

Washington, Jan. 30 (AP)—Chairman May (D., Ky.) today named a nine-member subcommittee of the House Military Committee to draft a new national defense act.

The group, May said, will undertake to solve problems dealing with the permanent postwar army.

May will serve as chairman. Other members are Representatives Thomason, of Texas; Sparkman, of Alabama; Kilday, of Texas, and Brooks, of Louisiana, Democrats, and Andrews, of New York; Martin, of Iowa; Elston, of Ohio, and Harness, of Indiana, Republicans.

Super Battleship May Be Built To Atomic Era Specifications

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30. — (AP) The Superbattleship Kentucky, now building, may be the first American dreadnaught built to atomic bomb era specifications.

Cmdr. Frank Nash, of the Navy's Bureau of Ships, told the House Naval committee today there will be a review of the design of the big, 45,000 tonner on the ways at Norfolk, Va., after the results of the atomic bomb test against warships this spring and summer have been assessed.

Among other things, the Navy wants to see what damage is done to the superstructure of warships, including guns and armor, in the explosion of an A-bomb, Nash said.

Armament Question

In light of Nash's testimony, it became evident that the question of armament not only for future ships but for the existing, postwar fleet may hinge on the outcome of the tests.

While the percentage of cost of guns, fire control instruments, ammunition facilities and other items making up armament vary considerably with different categories, some naval men estimate that 10 per cent would be a conservative average figure. In the case of the Iowa class battleships of 45,000 tons, the nation's newest, this would translate into about $10,000,000 of armament which might have to be changed.

The Kentucky was planned as a powerful anti-aircraft ship, designed as an offensive, striking weapon as well as defensive. Her building will be carried along in a manner which will allow for extensive changes to meet standards set in the atom bomb test without tearing expensive, complicated construction out of her, it was explained.

Firepower Issue

One of the questions to be settled, in view of the appearance of atom bombs, high speed planes and V-weapons, is the type of major firepower to be built in new ships and put into existing ones—whether such weapons as rockets should be transferred from the small, specialized craft of World War II to the battlewagons.

At today's committee hearing Rep. Cole (D-NY) criticized the Navy for first agreeing to scrap 37 ships under construction, then deciding to complete the majority of them.

Reconversion Director John W. Snyder had ordered scrapping of the ships. Nash told the committee that after more study, it was agreed that 19 should be finished, 18 built through the launching stage and eight scrapped. The 18 launched would be berthed for later commissioning.

Atom Test Secrecy Approved

House Committee Gives Some Leeway to War and Navy Secretaries.

Washington, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—The House Naval Committee today approved a legal ban against disclosure to foreign governments of technical data obtained in the planned Pacific Ocean atom bomb tests.

The proviso written by the Navy Department and approved intact by the committee, however, includes a clause giving the Secretaries of War and Navy some leeway in disclosing data to foreign governments.

Representative Cole (R.-N. Y.) objected to the provision stipulating that the secretaries may disclose to foreign governments that part of the test results which they may determine to be not prejudicial to the best interests of the United States.

The committee approved the Navy version, however, after Chairman Vinson (D.-Ga.) said that members could strengthen it by amendment on the House floor.

The secrecy requirement was included in a bill authorizing the Navy to use approximately 100 American and captured enemy warships in the Pacific tests beginning next day, but requiring consent of the congressional naval committees to be obtained for the selected vessels.

Vice-Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, in charge of the forthcoming tests, told the committee he expected a directive from the joint chiefs of staff imposing strict security regulations.

"We've got to trust somebody I suppose," commented Representative Robert A. Grant (R.-Ind.). "But I just hope we don't wake up some morning and find out there was another meeting like Yalta and the whole atom story has been told."

On the Senate side, a witness suggested that the Senate atomic energy committee call in some psychiatrists for advice on what he called the mania of national sovereignty. The committee is considering drafting atomic energy control legislation.

Watson Davis, director of science service, declared that peoples, like persons, suffer from manias.

"One of these is national sovereignty," he said. "Germany under the Nazis was a Napoleon among nations. We should be alert, as we were not before both world wars, to the danger signs—so plain and unmistakable. The committee should call in psychologists and psychiatrists to give them information on these aspects."

Atomic Scientist Skeptical Of Tests Planned by Navy

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—(AP) Dr. W. A. Higinbotham, atomic bomb scientist, said today, "I do not see much object" in tests planned for this spring and summer to determine the effect of the new explosive on seapower.

The effects of aerial and surface detonation of atomic bombs are already known from the initial test in New Mexico and from the combat use of two bombs in Japan, said Higinbotham, who is chairman of the Federation of American Scientists.

"Damage to a large fleet spread out is not going to be very impressive, and unless people are warned in advance, the results of the test will sound like a considerable disappointment," he told a reporter. "The effects may be minimized not only by the navy but by everyone else."

Real Test Doubted

Higinbotham, who was a member of the faculty of Cornell university before becoming engaged in the preparation of the atomic bomb, said the navy wouldn't get a real test of the effect of an atomic bomb on a fleet until a subsurface detonation planned next year.

(The navy has announced an aerial detoniation for May, a surface detoniation for July, and a sub-surface detoniation for sometime in 1947).

"Such a test," he said, "will produce the only unknown and unmeasured effects."

Without referring to any test in particular, Higinbotham declared:

"It does not seem rational that the navy would run tests that would prove that the fleet was obsolete."

Asked to elaborate on his prediction that damage to a spread-out fleet would not be "impressive" if the bombs were detonated in the air or at the surface of the water, the scientist said:

"The ground areas affected in Japan by such detonation were roughly only four miles in diameter. In any normal fleet operation such as will be held in the navy's test in a Pacific lagoon measuring 12 by 27 miles in area, the ships will probably be spread out considerably.

"Another thing to remember is that naval vessels are built more strongly mechanically than are buildings, so that over comparable distances, the effect of a bomb on a warship would be less than on a building."

"I don't think," he said, "that we can learn much more of a scientific nature from the aerial and surface detonations than we already know."

On Capitol Hill pleas were heard today against any further atomic bombmaking in the United States.

In the House Rep. Burgin (D-N.C.) filed a bill to bar such manufacture until the United Nations complete effective control machinery. A member of the House Foreign Affairs committee, Burgin told a reporter this country already has enough bombs for the Pacific tests. "It's no use to pile up these bombs until we know how the United Nations intends to control military use of atomic energy," he said.

Raymond Gram Swing, a radio commentator, told the Senate Atomic committee the nation should quit bomb manufacture and should place atomic plants in civilian hands as soon as possible.

Meanwhile the House Naval committee approved legislation barring any disclosure to foreign nations or results obtained from the forthcoming tests.

Rep. Cole of New York, ranking Republican member of the House Naval committee, protested against a clause in the legislation. This would allow U. S. armed forces chiefs to divulge atomic test data to foreign governments if they felt it was not against the national interest to do so.

However, Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) said he was sure the army and navy realize that Congress wants the secrets closely kept.

Postmortems Held to Learn Atomic Effects on Japanese

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—(AP) Postmortem studies of Japanese killed by atomic bombs have been undertaken by military scientists here in an effort to learn more about the effects of atomic energy on the human body.

One objective of the research will be to determine whether specific antidotes can be provided for injuries sustained by victims of A-bomb explosions.

Specimens Brought Back

This was learned today from members of army and navy technical commissions who returned recently from Japan.

They brought specimens from the bodies of more than 200 Japanese "of all age groups" who were killed or fatally injured at Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The commission also brought back "hundreds of blood specimens" and other clinical records of persons who incurred non-fatal injuries during the bombings.

They also have extensive records based on questionnaires submitted to approximately 16,000 Japanese who were in or near the bombed areas and who either escaped injury or who recovered.

The pathological material is being examined at the Army Institute of Pathology, a division of the Army Surgeon General's Office, and at the Naval Medical Research Institute at Bethesda, Md.

Colonel J. E. Ash, director of the institute, told a reporter:

"We want to find out what effect the radiant energy from an atomic bomb has on body tissue, and the present studies offer the first opportunity that American scientists have had to make such investigations on the tissues of persons killed by the bomb.

"Based on what we already know of the effects of the radiant energy of X-Ray on human tissue, we will probably find that the radiant energy from the atomic bombs had its most marked effect on the blood forming tissues—especially the bone marrow.

"However, the radiant energy from the bombs may be disclosed to be entirely different from any other radiant energy we now know, and its effects on the body may be entirely different."

Captain Shields Warren headed the navy commission and Col. A. W. Oughterson the army's.

ATOM BOMB PROPOSED FOR POLAR PROSPECTING

NEW YORK, Jan. 30. — (AP) Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker said today he had proposed to the Army, Navy and Coast Guard that the atom bomb be used to "prospect" for gold and other minerals in the ice-covered South Polar region.

Briefly, he said his idea was that the explosive force of the bomb could be used to blast the ice-cap into fragments and "unlock the icy doors that withhold from human knowledge the potential riches of the Antarctic continent."

Speaking at a luncheon, Rickenbacker, president of Eastern Air Lines, conceded the suggestion "at first flush sounds like a fantastic story from the pen of Jules Verne."

"But I believe," he said, "that it is well within reach of potential execution."

Use of Radar to Detect Storm Fronts Predicted

NEW YORK, Jan. 30. — (AP) Use of radar by weather forecasters to detect the approach of storms and hurricanes was predicted today at a meeting of the American Meteorological society and the Institute of Aeronautical Science.

Lt. Col. Harry Wexler, attached to headquarters of the Army Air Forces weather service at Langley field, Va., told the session the radar scope permits details of weather disturbances to be observed as never before.

It is "very likely," he said, "that provisions could be made for "a weather scope for the weather man."

Overseas Training Cut to 8 Weeks

Washington, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—The Army reduced today the period of training to eight weeks for soldiers destined to be sent overseas as replacements.

The War Department said the action followed consultation with overseas theater commanders on the "critical situation" regarding troops for occupation duty.

G. I.s to Lose Air Priority

O. D. T. to Free Reserved Space on Planes From West Coast

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30 (AP).—The Office of Defense Transportation announced today that air lines operating from the west coast would not have to set aside passenger space for service men after noon Feb. 15.

The O. D. T. said it was revoking as of that date the only order it had issued affecting air traffic. This required air lines operating from Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego to make available to returning service men from the Pacific area not less than 70 per cent of passenger space to Boston, New York, Baltimore, Washington, Norfolk and Jacksonville. Since the order became effective on Dec. 3, the O. D. T. said, the air lines have carried about 20,000 soldiers, sailors and marines across the country each month.

Revocation was made possible, it was stated, because the troop movement has passed its peak.

VA Requests National Policy On Nonservice Disability

Washington, Jan. 30 (AP)—The Veterans Administration moved today for a clear-cut definition of national policy regarding future medical care and hospitalization of veterans with nonservice-connected disabilities.

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, administrator, drafted a letter to President Truman outlining the critical situation he said has arisen in handling such cases, due to the shortage of doctors, nurses and hospital space.

The point might be reached, Bradley noted, where no more veterans with nonservice disabilities could be accommodated.

Outlines Situation

Under existing policy, many veterans with nonservice connected disabilities have been receiving free Government medical care. VA officials said this has resulted in the following situation:

1. About 70 per cent of currently hospitalized veterans from all previous wars have disabilities in no way connected with their military service.

2. World War II veterans with nonservice disabilities already slightly exceed those with service-connected disabilities, and their number is increasing.

Present laws give veterans with service-connected disabilities first call on hospital facilities. If additional space is available, veterans with nonservice-connected cases may be received, but they must sign a statement saying they are unable to pay a hospital or doctor's bill.

Veterans' organizations have been trying to liberalize the rules. The American Legion wants the pauper's oath abolished; the Veterans of Foreign Wars have approved resolutions that all disabled veterans be cared for.

Alarmed VA officials claim if Government policy is liberalized much further there might be so many patients "we couldn't find the doctors to care for them."

Under present rules, they estimate they will have about 250,000 veterans in hospitals by 1975, or about three times the number now hospitalized. They consider this a "conservative" estimate of the future, based on experience after World War I.

Cases Might Double

"If the rules are liberalized, hospital cases might jump to 500,000 by 1975," one official said.

Both Bradley and VA's medical director, Gen. Paul R. Hawley, are of the opinion that "Congress or authority higher than the Veterans Administration" will have to decide soon what future policy is going to be.

As they see it, either hospitalization will have to be restricted to veterans with service-connected disabilities or else a greatly enlarged hospital construction program will be necessary to handle nonservice disability cases.

Army Discharge Plan Scored

House Committee Finds Present System Often Leads to Injustices.

Washington, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—The House Military Affairs Committee declared today that the Army's so-called "blue discharges" present too many opportunities for injustice and should be abolished.

Blue discharges are neither honorable nor dishonorable. They generally are issued, the committee said in a formal report, to men whom the Army does not want but cannot dismiss honorably.

An examination of case histories, the committee said, shows that in actual practice the procedure is frequently less than just to the man involved. The procedure lends itself to dismissals based on prejudice and antagonism, the report added.

The effects on the man involved, the report asserted, "differ little from those of a dishonorable discharge. The discharged man finds it difficult to get or keep a job. The suspicion of society is aroused against him, all the worse in some ways for carrying an atmosphere of mystery."

If the Army found these men to be misfits after drafting them into uniform, the committee said, the nation "has a special obligation to see that they are dismissed with as little prejudice as possible."

Review Is Urged.

The committee recommended that:

There be automatic review all blue discharges with a vi[ew] replacing many of them wit[h] orable discharges.

Where an honorable discharge is substituted it be dated back to the time of the blue discharge.

The Army should be required to show that it made repeated attempts at rehabilitation before stigmatizing a man with a blue discharge.

Men called up for blue discharges should be provided with a counsel or permitted to engage counsel of their own.

Copies of procedure of boards of officers handling blue discharges should be furnished to the enlisted men involved, upon request.

Discharges "without specification as to the character of service" should plainly state that they are not dishonorable.

The Army should consider classifying all discharges as honorable, under honorable conditions, general, and dishonorable.

Classifications Defined.

1. Honorable, the same as now.
2. "Under honorable conditions," replacing the present blue discharge.
3. General, to cover cases such as continued misconduct, fraudulent enlistment, or conviction of a serious offense by a civil court.
4. Dishonorable, the same as now.

Army to Allow Families to Join Officers, High Non-Coms Abroad

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30 — (AP) The Army held out inducements today to officers and high non-coms to stay overseas by announcing that their families would be permitted to join them.

Priority will be given to families of men who agree to remain abroad one or two more years.

To speed the flow of replacements for soldiers who come home, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower announced that the training period for recruits in this country had been cut from 13 to eight weeks.

Extent Limited

The extent to which families may join officers and non-coms in Europe and the Orient depends upon the decision of theater commanders as to available housing, subsistence and medical care.

Under existing law, only families of commissioned officers, of master, first, technical and staff sergeants, and of certain War department civilian personnel are allowed to travel at government expense.

Amplifying a formal announcement, War department officials said that for the time being dependents of privates and others in the lowest four enlisted grades would not be permitted to go overseas, because of lack of housing. A proposal to include them in the provision later is under study, it was said.

The War department said that no funds would be authorized for construction of housing for dependents in occupied areas.

Travel of dependents to the European theater is expected to start some time after April 1, and after May 1 to the Philippines, Japan, Korea and the Ryukyus islands. Such travel has already been sanctioned to the Caribbean, Newfoundland, Alaska, the Aleutians, Hawaii and the Marianas.

The War department stressed applications must come from men overseas and not their dependents.

Priorities Set

First priority will be given by theater commanders to military and civilian personnel who indicate willingness to serve abroad a further two years, or more. Second priority will be for those who promise to stay one year.

Within these priorities, preference will be based upon cumulative service since Dec. 7, 1941.

The training reduction order was issued by General Eisenhower after consultation with Lt. General Joseph H. McNarney, the European commander, and with General Douglas MacArthur in the Pacific. They agreed on-the-job training abroad would be practicable, the War department said.

The eight-week training in the United States will be exclusive of time spent in the process of induction. Before going overseas replacements will be given seven days to visit their homes. A limited number will be trained longer periods in the United States to qualify them for specialist duties.

ANOTHER IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENT WAS A RECOMMENDATION BY THE UNO GENERAL COMMITTEE THAT THE WORLD FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS BE LINKED TO THE UNITED NATIONS ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL IN AN ADVISORY CAPACITY.

PROPOSALS WHICH WOULD LINK THE WFTU AND THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY IN CONSULTATIVE CAPACITIES WERE DEFEATED.

SENATOR CONNALLY (D-TEX) OF THE U.S. DELEGATION, WHO OFFERED THE PROPOSAL THAT THE AFL BE MADE AN ADJUNCT OF THE UNO, SAID ITS DEFEAT WAS "GLARING DISCRIMINATION AGAINST THE AFL." THE CIO IS A MEMBER OF THE WFTU AND, THEREFORE, WOULD HAVE INDIRECT REPRESENTATION.

IT TAKES NOTE WITH SATISFACTION OF THE PURPORT OF YOUR STATEMENTS TO THE EFFECT THAT HENCEFORTH SUCH INCIDENTS WILL NOT REPEAT THEMSELVES."

I WILL NOT LOSE THE TIME OF THE DELEGATES IN PHILOLOGICAL DISCUSSION. . .

IN SPITE OF THE FACT THAT I RECEIVED FROM THE SOVIET EMBASSY IN TEHRAN AND RECHECKED THE TEXTS WE HAVE ALREADY SUBMITTED, AND WHICH WOULD BE AS FOLLOWS:

"THE MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS EXPRESSES ITS SATISFACTION WITH THE CONTENTS OF YOUR LETTER WHEN YOU STATE THA INTERFERENCE MENTIONED DOES NOT CORRESPOND TO FACT AND WOULD NOT IN ANY CASE, REPEAT THEMSELVES. WE ALSO EXPRESS OUR SATISFACTION FROM THE DECLARATION OF TEHRAN AS MADE ON THE 29TH OF JANUARY, 1942, AND THIS DECLARATION OF TEHRAN IS ALSO A SOURCE OF SATISFACTION TO THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT."

WHATEVER TEXT WE TAKE.....IT SEEMS WUITE CLEAR THAT THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT ARRIVED AT A CONCLUSION WHICH MIGHT HAVE BEEN SOMETHING LIKE THIS:

"THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT DENIES THE CHARGES WE HAVE MADE, BUT, AS IT DECLARES THAT SUCH INCIDENTS WILL NOT BE REPEATED, WE UNDERSTAND THAT IT IS NOT NECESSARY TO INVESTIGATE THE QUESTION FURTHER. WE WILL MAKE A CLEAN SLATE OF IT AND WE WILL LOOK AHEAD TO CONSTRUCTIVE SOLUTIONS.....

THE REPLY OF THE 1ST OF DECEMBER BEARS THE EXPRESS MARKS OF THE SATISFACTION WHICH THE REPRESENTATIVE OF IRAN IN THIS COUNCIL DOES NOT SEEM TO TAKE INTO ACCOUNT.

I WOULD LIKE TO REMIND THE SECURITY COUNCIL THAT THE SOVIET DELEGATION, ACTING ON INSTRUCTIONS OF THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT, WOULD LIKE TO STATE THE CASE AS FOLLOWS:

PARIS.JAN.30-(AP)-SEN.TUNNELL (D-DEL) QUESTIONED TODAY THE WISDOM OF PLACING CEILINGS ON BIDS FOR SURPLUS U.S. ARMY AND NAVY STOCKS.

TUNNELL AND SEN. KNOWLAND (R-CALIF) ARE ON A SENATE SUBCOMMITTEE WHICH IS CONDUCTING A WORLDWIDE INVESTIGATION OF THE DISPOSAL OF SUCH STOCKS.

OFFICIALS OF THE EUROPEAN HEADQUARTERS OF THE FOREIGN LIQUIDATION COMMITTEE TESTIFIED IT WAS POLICY NOT TO PROFIT BY LOCAL SCARCITIES. CEILING PRICES ARE ATTACHED TO STOCKS BEING OFFERED AND BIDS ARE ACCEPTED FOR LESS, BUT NOT FOR MORE THAN THE CEILINGS, THE SENATORS LEARNED.

"I'VE HEARD OF SALES IN WHICH NO BIDS WOULD BE ACCEPTED BELOW A CERTAIN PRICE, BUT NEVER IN WHICH THEY WERE REFUSED ABOVE A PRICE," TUNNELL COMMENTED. "DOES THE SALE GO TO THE LOWEST BIDDER?"

KNOWLAND DECLARED THAT PREVIOUS TESTIMONY SHOWED THAT SOME BUYERS HAD RESOLD SURPLUS STOCKS AT MARKED UP PRICES, SO THAT THE COMMISSION'S POLICY HAD NOT HELPED THE ULTIMATE BUYER.

CAPT.D.W.ROSE OF THE NAVY, DEPUTY LIQUIDATION COMMISSIONER, SAID HE HAD HEARD IN THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN THAT "THE BRITISH MADE A LOT OF ENEMIES" BY SELLING THEIR SURPLUS STOCKS "MARKED UP AS MUCH AS 500 PER CENT."

THE COMMISSION FROM THE START OF ITS OPERATIONS IN EUROPE LAST JULY THROUGH JAN. 19 HAS SOLD GOODS WITH A TOTAL DECLARED CEILING PRICE VALUE OF $116,312.62 FOR $80,039,319.86. ABOUT TWO THIRDS WENT TO UNRRA.

(CX) GENERAL MOTORS LAST (WED) NIGHT SERVED NOTICE THAT IT WAS UNWILLING TO RENEW ANY MAINTENANCE OF UNION MEMBERSHIP CLAUSE IN A NEW CONTRACT AND REOFFERED A TEMPORARY 13 1/2 PER HOUR WAGE INCREASE--WHICH UNION LEADERS PROMPTLY REJECTED.

THE CORPORATION PROPOSED THAT CIO UNITED AUTO WORKERS RETURN TO WORK AT THE 13 1/2 CENT RAISE, ORIGINALLY OFFERED THREE MONTHS AGO, DURING NEW CONTRACT NEGOTIATIONS.

IN BREAKING WITH THE UNION REGARDING MEMBERSHIP MAINTENANCE, GENERAL MOTORS SAID APROVISION IN THE OLD CONTRACT "FORCED US TO DISCHARGE 1,690 SATISFACTORY EMPLOYES ON THE UNION'S DEMAND BECAUSE THESE EMPLOYES WERE NOT WILLING TO PAY THEIR UNION DUES."

"WE ARE UNWILLING TO PUT ANY SUCH PROVISION IN THE NEW CONTRACT," GENERAL MOTORS STATED. [illegible]

THE CORPORATION SERVED NOTICE ALSO IT HAD "NOTHING FURTHER" TO OFFER AS A WAGE BOOST UNTIL IT OBTAINS A CONTRACT WITH THE CIO-UAW ASSURING "UNINTERRUPTED PRODUCTION" AND "EFFICIENT WORK EFFORT."

SAID A CORPORATION STATEMENT: "IF THE UNION WISHES TO ORDER THE EMPLOYES BACK TO WORK ON THE BASIS OF AN INCREASE OF 13 1/2 CENTS PER HOUR WHILE SUCH A CONTRACT IS BEING NEGOTIATED, THAT WILL BE ALL RIGHT WITH US."

JAN 31 1946

SAID A UNION STATEMENT: THE STRIKE WILL CONTINUE "UNTIL THE CORPORATION MEETS ITS PUBLIC RESPONSIBILITY AND BARGAINS IN GOOD FAITH TO CARRY OUT RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES."

PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S FACT-FINDING BOARD PROPOSED A 19 1/2 CENTS AN HOUR INCREASE.

THE DIVERGENT STATEMENTS WERE ISSUED AFTER THE FIRST ACROSS-THE-TABLE NEGOTIATIONS BETWEEN THE PARTIES IN MORE THAN A MONTH IN A RENEWED ATTEMPT TO SETTLE THE 71-DAY STRIKE OF 175,000 CIO PRODUCTION WORKERS.

HOWEVER, JAMES F.DEWEY, SPECIALLY ASSIGNED GOVERNMENT CONCILIATOR WHO BROUGHT THE PARTIES TOGETHER IN RENEWED EFFORTS TO SETTLE THE DISPUTE, SAID HE WAS NOT DISCOURAGED BY THE RESULTS AND THAT NEGOTIATIONS WOULD BE RESUMED TODAY.

IRVING S.OLDS, CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF U.S.STEEL SAID YESTERDAY (WED) THAT A PRICE INCREASE "GREATLY IN EXCESS OF $6.25 A TON" WAS NEEDED TO MEET THE 18 1/2 CENTS HOURLY WAGE BOOST THE UNION HAS AGREED TO ACCEPT. IT WAS UNDERSTOOD DEWEY HAD HOPED TO HOLD DOWN THE SIZE OF THE NEGOTIATING GROUPS ON THE THEORY SMALLER NUMBERS COULD ACCOMPLISH SWIFTER RESULTS.

THERE WERE NO IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENTS IN THE STRIKE OF 750,000 STEELWORKERS WHICH RECONVERSION DIRECTOR JOHN W.SNYDER RECENTLY EXPRESSED HOPES OF EARLY SETTLEMENT. SNYDER SAID HIS OPTIMISM STEMMED FROM RECENT TRENDS TOWARD "FREE COLLECTIVE BARGAINING SETTLEMENTS."

THE NEW STRIKE CONTROL BILL, APPROVED BY THE HOUSE RULES COMMITTEE AND SENT TO THE HOUSE FLOOR FOR DEBATE TODAY, WOULD OUTLAW VIOLENT PICKETING, PROVIDE FOR CIVIL SUITS AGAINST VIOLATORS OF LABOR CONTRACTS, SUBJECT UNIONS TO INJUNCTIONS AND NULLIFY FOREMEN'S UNIONS.

THE MEASURE, BITTERLY OPPOSED BY BACKERS OF LABOR UNIONS, ALSO WOULD CREATE A LABOR-MANAGEMENT BOARD TO HELP SETTLE DISPUTES AND REQUIRE "COOLING OFF" PERIODS FOR STRIKES AND LOCKOUTS.

A SPOKESMAN FOR THE INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY, WHOSE WAGE BOOST TENDER WAS REJECTED TUESDAY BY REPRESENTATIVES OF 30,000 STRIKING CIO UNITED FARM EQUIPMENT WORKERS, DISCLOSED TODAY THE COMPANY HAD OFFERED THE MEN A 17 CENTS AN HOUR INCREASE. GREEK ISSUE RAISED AGAIN

Soviet Radio Assails Presence Of British Troops There

(PARRIS)

London, Jan. 31 (AP)—The Moscow radio today criticized the presence of British troops in Greece as the United Nations Security Council prepared to consider tomorrow its next big problem—Russian charges of British interference in the affairs of Greece.

This first issue directly between two of the world's major powers is scheduled to come before the Security Council at 8 P.M. 1946

The Moscow broadcast, following the line of Russia's complaint to the Security Council, described the position of Greece as "desperate" and declared that her rehabilitation "is not furthered" by the presence of foreign troops.

Bevin To Answer Charges

British officials expressed confidence that the situation would be worked out, saying the "give-and-take" attitude among the Security Council members at yesterday's heated debate on the Iranian issue was "a good omen."

The chief Soviet delegate, Andrei Vishinsky, was expected to open the discussion with an elaboration of Russian charges.

British sources said Ernest Bevin, Foreign Secretary, would answer, and that his reply would be determined by what the Russian had to say.

A Full Day Of Rest

They added that Bevin was "not spoiling for a fight."

Aside from the Greek case, the Security Council's agenda calls for consideration of the Ukrainian Soviet Republic's request for an investigation of British military actions in Indonesia.

The delegates enjoyed a full day of rest today. They generally expressed satisfaction with the disposition of the Soviet-Iranian dispute. The Security Council yesterday unanimously agreed for Russia and Iran to undertake direct negotiations to seek a settlement of their dispute and received the right to call for progress reports on the discussions.

Speed-Up Orders Given

Senator Tom Connally chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and an American delegate, told newsmen that "the fully public nature of the discussions thus far proves one of the chief values of the United Nations Organization—that it can bring out into the open these vexing problems."

United Nations leaders were reported agreed to adjourn the first Assembly February 9 and move to permanent headquarters in the United States. The site of the permanent headquarters has not yet been announced.

Orders went out today to speed up committee and staff work. Two plenary sessions of the Assembly and four committee meetings in addition to the Security Council session are scheduled for tomorrow.

Sir Alexander Cadogan, permanent British Under Secretary of Foreign Affairs, has been chosen permanen British representative on the Security Council, the Foreign Office announced tonight. Sir Alexande will be succeeded at the Foreign Office by Sir Orme Sargent his deputy.

Java And Greek Settlement Is UNO Aim

(SMITH)

London, Jan. 31 (AP)—United Nations delegates privately expressed hope today that the Security Council's compromise decision on the Russian-Iranian dispute might point the way to an amicable settlement of the Greek and Indonesian cases which come before the peace agency tomorrow.

Whether the latter two cases can be settled without UNO intervention, however, depends largely upon the Russians, who filed complaints with the Council charging the British were endangering the peace by military actions in Greece and Indonesia.

The Russians, if they press the cases, will find themselves in the unique position of asking the UNO to act in the absence of complaints from the countries involved.

Greeks To Back British

Greek delegates, planning to be on hand when the questions come up, were ready to argue that British troops are necessary in Greece to maintain order. The Netherlands, as a member of the eleven-nation council, is known to favor the maintenance of British troops in Java, and even the unrecognized Indonesian Government has expressed the view that British troops should remain there until all Japanese troops have been disarmed and removed.

Soviet delegates have given no intimation of their position since the complaints were filed. Moscow radio, however, accused Britain today of exerting "political pressure" in Greece.

"Hamper Recovery"

A Russian commentator said Greece was in the throes of a "national economic disaster," charged that the presence of British troops hampered recovery and added that British troops have "become a means of bringing pressure to bear on the political situation."

The Council voted yesterday to permit the Soviet Union and Iran to resume direct negotiations but reserved the right to call for progress reports on the discussions.

Russia had demanded that the dispute be removed from the Council's agenda, but the United States and Britain objected. A phrase saying the case would remain on the agenda was stricken from the Council's resolution, but a clause providing for progress reports was inserted. The resolution then was carried unanimously.

Discussions In Moscow

S. H. Taqizadeh, Iran's chief delegate, said today that negotiations would be conducted in Moscow and Tehran and not in London. Asked if he was satisfied with the Council's decision, he only shrugged his shoulders. In the debate he had insisted on the agenda clause.

Andrei Vishinsky, Soviet Vice Commissar of Foreign Affairs, said the "dignity" of Russia and the Council would be wounded if the issue remained on the agenda. He urged that a settlement could be reached by direct negotiation and said that insistence on the agenda clause signified "distrust" among the nations.

The UNO's first job, he added, should be to wipe out distrust.

Bevin Answers

British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin replied that the world would misunderstand if the UNO withdrew and left Iran, a small nation, to negotiate while Soviet troops remained on her soil.

The chief United States delegate, Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., said that retention of the issue before the Council would not be incompatible with the dignity of the Council or any of its members, and asked the peace agency to permit Russia and Iran to negotiate and "keep the Council informed" until a just solution is found.

All UNO organizations were in recess today to permit the secretariat to clear up accumulated work.

Will Adjourn February 9

United Nations leaders were reported in agreement today on February 9 as the virtually certain date for adjournment of the London meeting of the Assembly.

Immediately after that date all UNO establishments, including the staff and the Security Council, will be moved to the United States. The exact site has not yet been selected, although it will be in the vicinity of Boston or New York.

Word of the probable adjournment date, together with plans for carrying on a high-speed program until that time, was given to the United States delegation today by American officials handling arrangements.

U. S. Correspondents Object to Being Barred From 'Bride Ship'

LONDON, Jan. 31 (AP)—The Association of American Correspondents in London appealed to President Truman and Prime Minister Clement Attlee today after being informed that American newspaper men would not be allowed to sail on the Queen Mary's soldier bride voyage to the United States on Feb. 3.

Charles [illegible] Smith, association president, said he had been informed that the British Ministry of War Transport had refused passage for twelve news agency, newspaper and magazine correspondents after they had been accredited for the ship by United States Army headquarters at Frankfort, Germany.

In a message urging Mr. Attlee to intervene, Mr. Smith said the ruling was based "apparently on the ground it would give too much publicity" to the brides' voyage and might cause unfavorable reaction among British service men still abroad.

Belgians Tell Of Massacre By Nazis Near St. Vith

Nuernberg, Jan. 31 (AP)—The German massacre of 129 American prisoners at a crossroads near St. Vith, Belgium, during the Battle of the Bulge was described graphically today in a statement by Belgian civilians which was placed before the international military tribunal.

The French prosecution also presented the tribunal, trying 22 high Nazis, with more than a score of examples in charging that the Nazis employed a policy of mass executions of civilians to terrorize the people of western Europe.

The examples charged the mass slaughter of the entire community of Oradour-sur-Glane and the indiscriminate hanging from the lampposts of Tulle of 120 men of that village, some of them said to have been pro-Nazi.

Says Men Used As Targets

The statement of Belgian civilians describing the St. Vith massacre of December 17, 1944, said a German officer used a group of unarmed prisoners of war for target practice before unleashing the rain of lead from German machine guns mounted on armored vehicles.

The statement said the Americans, who were defending the crossroads, took to the ditches as German tanks approached. The tanks fired into the ditches until the Americans surrendered.

Then they were led to a near-by field and a German armored vehicle rolled up. Its guns were trained on the prisoners. An officer mounted on the vehicle drew his pistol, and fired at the group. One prisoner fell. He fired again and another prisoner fell, the statement continued.

Reported As Reprisals

Then the armored vehicle machine gunned the men. This vehicle moved on and three others, also firing, moved past. The statement said that German soldiers later walked among the Americans, killing the wounded.

The prosecution said that in the village of Oradour-sur-Glane, the "Das Reich" SS Division shot all males and herded women and children into a church which was then set afire to explode the munitions the Germans had placed there. Of the entire population of more than 800, fewer than ten persons escaped, the French said.

The executions of the Frenchmen in Tulle were in reprisal for an attack by French Partisans, the prosecution charged.

Defect Seen In Nazi Trial

In a radio interview tonight Justice Robert H. Jackson, chief United States prosecutor, declared that he feared former German industrialists — "one of the chief causes of the war"—would never be tried for their crime.

Jackson said United States proposals to indict a number of German industrialists were rejected by all three other prosecutors.

"They believed we could not handle a larger number of defendants in this trial and suggested a later trial for the industrialists," Jackson said. "I believed we could handle a larger number even if it took somewhat longer, and doubted whether we could go through a second trial repeating much of the same evidence against this new group of defendants. I feared failure to include them in this trial would mean they never would be tried. Time only will tell which was right."

Nazi Used Yank PW's As Gun-Practice Target

Nuernberg, Jan. 31 (AP)—A German officer used a group of unarmed American prisoners of war for target practice as a prelude to the cold-blooded execution of 129 captured soldiers during the Battle of the Bulge last winter, the international military tribunal was told today.

The French prosecution introduced a statement by Belgian civilians describing the massacre, which occurred at a crossroads near St. Vith.

The Americans, defending the crossroads against a Nazi offensive, took to the ditches as German tanks approached, the statement said, and the tanks fired into the ditches until the Americans threw down their guns and raised their hands in surrender.

Each Man Searched

They were led to a field a short distance away, where the Germans searched each man, taking watches, rings and other personal effects, the soldier's statement continued.

Then a German armored vehicle was rolled up and its guns trained on the group of prisoners. A Nazi officer mounted on the vehicle drew his pistol, aimed at the group, and fired. One of the prisoners fell, the statement said.

He aimed and fired again. Another American fell.

As the second man went down, the statement went on, machine guns on the armored vehicle opened up and sprayed lead for two or three minutes. Then the vehicle moved on and three others rolled past, machine-gunning the knot of men, most of them already dead.

Later, German soldiers walked among the Americans, finishing off the wounded, the statement said.

"The soldiers struck them with gun butts or fired from a short distance into their temples or between their eyes," the document asserted.

"The shame of this deed will remain upon the German Army," it said. "We knew these men were unarmed and had surrendered."

Medical Research

Former Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering, his sore throat muffled in a maroon scarf, glumly heard French Assistant Prosecutor Charles Dubost tell the court about his Luftwaffe physicians' experiments.

"German medical literature is very rich in experiments on adults in good health who died suddenly between the hours of 5 and 6 A.M.," Dubost asserted, after describing experiments in which thyroid glands were removed from 21 concentration camp inmates and livers from 24 others.

He said another German experiment in which a poisoned bullet was fired into a living victim's leg so that his slow death might be observed could not be matched except among "savage tribes."

Downed Flyers Shot

Earlier, the tribunal heard that fifteen survivors of two American Liberator bombers which crashed in Germany on June 21, 1944, were shot to death by SS police, who cynically reported the airmen were slain "while attempting to escape."

Nine bomber crewmen were taken prisoner by a German naval lieutenant after their plane lost two motors to anti-aircraft fire and was forced down in Mecklenburg province, captured documents submitted to the court said.

An SS officer took charge of the prisoners, despite their violent protests, and ostensibly set out to transport them to a nearby air base. Seven were shot en route, the documents said, and two were shot later in the day.

At the same time and in the same locality, according to the German record, another Liberator crashed and seven other airmen were taken prisoner by Luftwaffe personnel and turned over to security police. One was so gravely wounded he was taken to a military hospital at Schwerin. The other six were shot "attempting escape."

Charles Dubost, assistant French prosecutor, declared that this murder policy of the Nazis, shown in their files, was laid down at a series of conferences attended by Hermann Goering, Joachim von Ribbentrop, Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, Col.-Gen. Alfred Jodl and Ernst Kaltenbrunner, all defendants here.

Victims from one bomber were identified in a Luftwaffe report as Lieut. Edwin M. Helto, Lieut. Richard J. Ludka, Sgt. Warren C. Rankin, Sgt. Carmine Margiasso, Pvt. Charles L. Knowles Jr., Sgt. Stanley Brazzezski, Sgt. Frank Borchick, Sgt. Thomas A. Gensert, and Lieut. Maurice L. Nelson. Only three of the six dead from a second crew were named. They were Sgt. Sammie D. Winson, Sgt. George J. Brubrea and Victor D. Solecek, rank unknown. The wounded man was listed as Cleve J. Holwet.

Jackson Fears Industrialists May Escape War Crime Trial

American Prosecutor at Nuernberg Says Time Will Tell—Explains Case Against Nazi Generals.

Nuernberg, Jan. 31 (A. P.)—Justice Robert H. Jackson, the chief American prosecutor at the Nuernberg trials, told American soldiers in a radio interview tonight that he fears the German industrialists—who were among the "chief causes of the war"—would never be tried for their crime.

Speaking over the armed forces network in Germany, he recalled that the American proposals to indict not only Gustav and Alfred Krupp but a number of other industrialists, were rejected by all three of the other prosecutors. Gustav Krupp, head of the great steel and munitions combine, was indicted but excused from trial because of senile softening of the brain.

"They believed we could not handle a larger number of defendants in this trial and suggested a later trial for the industrialists," Jackson continued. "I believed we could handle a larger number even if it took somewhat longer, and doubted whether we could go through a second trial repeating much of the same evidence against this new group of defendants. I feared that failure to include them in this trial would mean they never would be tried. Time only will tell which was right.

No Disagreement on Principle.

The disagreement among the prosecutors was a difference in judgment as to procedure, but there has never been any disagreement among the prosecutors with the G. I. who points to the industrialist as one of the chief causes of the war."

Sergt. Ted Pierz of Lebanon, N. J., reading questions submitted by Harold Burson of Memphis, Tenn., Army Forces network correspondent, had told Jackson that American soldiers were puzzled by the sight of the undamaged I. G. Farben Industries building in bomb-ruined Frankfurt, and said: "We do not understand why there are no trials for the Krupps and officials of the Farben trust."

Avoids the Spectacular.

Requested to clarify the prosecution's condemnation of the German High Command and General staff, Jackson said: "We are not trying soldiers because of their profession any more than we are trying the several defendants who happen to be lawyers for being lawyers. We are accusing these military leaders of violating their own code of honor and of behaving in utterly unmilitary fashion as, for example, in executing grounded American airmen, in mistreating prisoners of war, in resorting to slave labor and other specific crimes.

"We are also accusing them of inciting an illegal war of aggression. Our contention is not that being generals makes them guilty of a crime, but that being generals is no excuse for committing crimes."

Jackson told his Army audience that the American prosecution had declined to present its case in a way that would be spectacular but had confined it to captured German documents and testimony of a very few well-informed witnesses. "This has made a sober trial and, to some extent, a colorless one," he admitted, "but our case will stand the closest scrutiny of historians."

U. S. UPHOLDS BAR ON NAZI RAIL MEN

Refuses to Halt Dismissal of 4,300 Despite Threat of Paralysis in Traffic

FRANKFORT ON THE MAIN, Germany, Jan. 31 (AP)—Despite the prospect of a railroad paralysis throughout its occupation zone, the American military government declined today to hold up its denazification program under which 4,300 key railway workers will be ousted from their jobs at midnight.

The American authorities stood firmly against German railroad officials who failed to find replacements for workers suspected of being Nazis. They told the German people that weeks of hunger and a transportation tie-up might lie ahead.

Dr. George Bauer, Nazi transportation authority who has been head of railroads in the American zone, is one of those to be dismissed. It was learned that he had been suspended from his American-appointed position "a couple of days ago." The Nazis had been allowed to hold their jobs pending further investigation and clearance by denazification boards.

Military government officers said that Bauer and other German officials had not provided replacements for the workers still to be cleared and that Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, the American commander in Europe, had taken the stand that the denazification policy could not be halted, despite the threat of disrupted traffic. One American transportation official said that the discharge of the 4,300 was likely to interfere—possibly critically—with the movement of military supplies, but that denazification was considered the primary objective.

One concession was made to the Germans and to Army authorities who fear too serious a breakdown. The dismissal of about 2,400 key workers in the Regensburg division, although effective at midnight, will be spread over two months.

"We have told the German Minister-Presidents that their people are likely to go hungry as the result of their failure," a transportation officer said. "Military traffic has priority and secondary military transportation, such as United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration supplies, has second priority. German food and civilian travel likely will be hard hit as a result."

Approximately 186,000 German railroad employes work under the military government's jurisdiction. About 10,000 have already been let out because of their Nazi affiliations, and, an official said, "thousands more are expected to be discharged shortly."

Bauer, who formerly headed a division of the State railroad system now included in the American zone, was appointed to his job last September. He was screened by the military government's special branch and was believed to be acceptable.

"However, it was found quite by chance that Bauer had been classified incorrectly and should have been a mandatory-arrest case," a spokesman revealed. He added that Bauer "will not be permitted to resume his position until he is cleared by a denazification board."

Press Freedom Gains Point In Army Row

Frankfurt, Jan. 31 (AP)—Gen. Joseph T. McNarney entered the prolonged dispute between the Army and correspondents over military restrictions on news gathering and instructed all personnel under his command today that they were at liberty to talk freely to the press.

The American commander in the European theater intervened after reporters attached to his headquarters protested to Secretary of War Patterson at a recent press conference that they were hampered by "unprecedented censorship directives."

Reiterates Free-Press Stand

McNarney issued a directive reiterating that the Army had accepted the principle of freedom of the press. He said there were only two reasons for refusing to issue news: observance of security requirements and cognizance of information that would materially injure good relations with United States allies.

The dispute between the Army and reporters resulted from a directive of November 12, 1945, which channelized queries from correspondents through the public relations division of headquarters and specially appointed press officers.

"At that time, Lieut. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, then chief of staff at USFET, promised that if at the end of 30 days the plan did not meet with approval of the correspondents, it would be revoked," the correspondents recalled in their letter of protest to Patterson.

Sealed News Sources

The reporters found the directive, in effect, sealed the lips of their news sources. In several cases officers frankly told Associated Press men they were "afraid to talk" because of the directive.

The reporters made many individual protests to the public relations division director, Col. Clarence E. Lovejoy, and on January 12 the Army issued a new directive. The order, however, did not materially change the original directive and the reporters formed a committee which proposed changes in the second order.

These were presented to Maj. Gen. Harold R. Bull, present chief of staff, who said he felt the directive was satisfactory as it stood.

The committee on January 21 drafted a letter to Patterson, who was in Frankfurt, pointing out that "75 days have now passed (since the original directive) and the policy, although slightly modified by the second directive, still stands."

Asks Revocation

"We would like the Army to keep its promise to revoke the original order," the letter said. The letter was signed by John B. McDermott, of the United Press, chairman of the correspondents' committee. The following day, Patterson told a press conference he would take the matter up with General McNarney.

The General's directive, issued yesterday, eliminated the necessity for the reporters to approach their news sources through public relations or press-contact officers.

RUSSIANS BAN REPORT ON OIL

Red Marshal Explains Only That Story Is 'Untrue'

By MAURICE E. MORAN

Vienna, Jan. 31 (AP)—Marshal Klementi Y. Voroshilov and a Red Army security officer have advised me that a story filed for the Associated Press from Budapest, on January 22, on the Russian-American oil situation in Hungary, was withheld from transmission on the ground it was untrue.

The dispatch, answering an inquiry from the AP's New York office and quoting American sources, said American representatives of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey had been served formal notice that the Russians intended to take over the management of properties of the Lispe oil fields, near the Yugoslav border.

A Budapest report to the New York Times January 20 said the Red Army had seized the fields and "within the last few days it also took physical possession of the largest Lispe field—that owned by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey—and is operating it."

Acheson Comments

[Dean Acheson, as Acting Secretary of State, told a Washington news conference two days later that from time to time the Government had taken up with the Soviet Government (the occupying power) the matter of readmitting American representatives of the company to govern that property and some have been, but progress has not been altogether as fast as would be liked.]

After filing the January 22 dispatch by commercial facilities in Budapest, I was summoned to meet a subordinate Russian security officer. I was told that the story was "not true" and that, therefore, it was withheld. The officer added "stronger measures" would be taken if I persisted in filing "untrue" stories.

This was the first known instance of a dispatch to the American press being withheld in Budapest, though the Russians' scrutiny of copy had resulted in some delays.

Common Ground Sought

I explained that the Associated Press was interested in presenting both sides of any issue, but that this was impossible unless correspondents could meet the Russians on common ground.

The Russian argument that no seizure ever was intended, that the only difference was one of production methods, then was presented. The officer was told that I would be delighted to present the Soviet view.

"If you want to write the truth, that's a private matter," he said.

A story was then filed saying the Russians denied as untrue reports that they intended to take over the management of the Standard field. [This dispatch, dated January 24, was received and transmitted by the Associated Press on January 26.]

Interpretation In U.S.

It was learned later that the interpretation of intent to seize was placed on the Russian action by United States diplomatic and military officials, as well as by the United States oil men.

Maj. Gen. William S. Key, chief of the United States military delegation on the Allied Control Council for Hungary, protested withholding of the January 22 story as a violation of the freedom-of-the-press principle agreed upon at Potsdam and arranged an interview with Voroshilov, Soviet commander in Hungary. The interview was brief.

Voroshilov greeted me with the remark that, by accident or design, I had written—but was unable to send—a story which was "not the truth."

My reply was that American news services were interested only in presenting both sides of any issue. No answer to this reply has been received.

Plot Is Reported Unknown To Pope

Vatican City, Jan. 31 (AP)—The Vatican newspaper, Osservatore Romano, said today that Pope Pius XII had no forehand knowledge of the 1944 bomb plot against Adolf Hitler.

A dispatch from Nuernberg Tuesday said that according to unpublished documents, high Vatican officials, the late President Roosevelt, former Prime Minister Churchill and a number of other persons outside of Germany knew of the plot for months beforehand. The Pope was not specifically mentioned as having been informed.

The dispatch said a German general told interrogators that the Vatican was informed indirectly by Admiral Wilhelm Canaris, chief of the German counterintelligence, through papal offices in Vienna.

Observatore in commenting on the dispatch said:

"In this connection, we believe it opportune to note that the Holy Father for years had received repeatedly information about a political-military movement in Germany aiming to overthrow national socialism, both party and government, in the hope to obtain for Germany better conditions of peace, but never any mention of a personal plot against Hitler. His Holiness, therefore, had no previous knowledge of a plot against Hitler's life."

Schuschnigg Suggested As Envoy To Holy See

Rome, Jan. 31 (AP)—Kurt Schuschnigg, former chancellor of Austria, said today he "might" accept the post of Austrian Ambassador to the Holy See, which Vatican sources said they understood had been offered to him.

"It would be a fine post, which I might accept after some consideration," Schuschnigg said. He added, however, that he had not yet received a formal offer.

3-HOUR STRIKE STAGED BY JEWS IN TEL AVIV

TEL AVIV, Jan. 31.—(AP) A three-hour strike of Jewish workers protesting against immigration restrictions in Palestine passed quietly here today. Explosion of a "leaflet bomb" at a mass meeting was the only incident.

Two RAF huts near the Haifa-Mount Carmel radar station in Jerusalem were destroyed by fire tonight, but officials said they did not know whether the blaze was accidental or caused by sabotage.

Large army and police forces cordoned the area while fire brigades extinguished the blaze.

Mayor Israel Rokach of this all-Jewish city addressed the meeting. He urged that the "gates of Palestine be fully opened to Jewish immigration," and asserted the Jewish people would "not be satisfied" with Britain's action in permitting 1,500 Jews to enter Palestine monthly during the investigation by the British-American Committee of Inquiry.

been reached.

The Jewish Agency was informed officially, meanwhile, that 900 illegal immigrants who were captured aboard the ship Enzo Screni off the coast of Palestine two weeks ago would be released from the Atlith Camp next Sunday. Certificates for these immigrants will be deducted from the interim immigration quota announced yesterday.

Meanwhile today the Jewish National Council went ahead with its plans for nationwide mass meetings scheduled for this afternoon. All Jewish businesses and Jewish transport were idle from 3 to 5 P. M. The meetings, called before the British announced the new quotas, were planned as a protest against immigration restrictions.

TRUSTEESHIP IN JAVA HINTED

Effort Made To Squelch Suggestion By Clark Kerr

Singapore, Jan. 31 (AP)—Sir Archibald Clark Kerr said at a news conference today that he believed there was a "strong possibility" that the Netherlands East Indies would become a trusteeship under the United Nations "after the present difficulties are settled."

He disclosed that Dr. Hubertus J. van Mook, acting governor-general of the Netherlands East Indies, was bringing a fifteen-point program from his Government for settling the Indonesian problem, but said he was not at liberty to discuss any of the points until the Dutch announce their plan.

"Only An Observation"

The British special envoy to the Dutch East Indies made it clear that his statement on United Nations trusteeship, given in response to a question, was only an observation and not a recommendation.

[After the dispatch on the news conference had been filed, British public relations officials at Singapore asked elimination of the portion dealing with Sir Archibald's statement on trusteeship, on the grounds that he had not understood the question that evoked his remarks.

[Lief Erickson, Associated Press bureau chief at Singapore, said that before the dispatch was filed he read it to a major detailed to check it with him by telephone, and the major "understood it exactly as I did and thought it all right."

Quoted Also By Aneta

[The official Dutch news agency Aneta in a dispatch from Singapore also quoted Sir Archibald as saying there was a "strong possibility" Indonesia might come under a United Nations trusteeship agreement.

[In London, British and Dutch circles expressed consternation at Sir Archibald's statement. British Colonial and Foreign Office spokesmen said they did not believe the Netherlands would relinquish Indonesia to trusteeship, and the Dutch said they doubted if the Ambassador had made the statement.

[American officials agreed it seemed unlikely that the Netherlands would take such a step. They said they understood the Dutch plan was to divide their empire into three autonomous federated units—the East Indies, the West Indies and the Netherlands. Presumably Indonesia could become a United Nations member under such a federated system on a basis similar to that of India.

[A Dutch statement issued both in London and The Hague said: "Dutch circles have no confirmation that Ambassador Sir Archibald Clark Kerr made the statement attributed to him by the Associated Press and have some difficulty in believing that he made such a statement."]

To Be Ambassador To U.S.

Sir Archibald, who will assume his duteis as British Ambassador to the United States in May, emphasized that the question of committing Indonesian territory to United Nations trusteeship was one for the Dutch Government to decide.

He will fly to Batavia tomorrow with Lieutenant General Sir Montagu George North Stopford, newly assigned British military commander in the Netherlands East Indies.

The British envoy said he would make himself easily accessible to the Dutch, the Indonesians, and anyone else interested in the Indonesian problem, and expressed hope a solution would be reached quickly so he could have his first holiday in eight years before going to Washington.

He said anyone thinking that the British were in Java for imperialist reasons was wrong, adding "we're too old and too bored to be imperialist any longer."

Erickson said, "understood it exactly as I did and thought it all right." However, the "top echelon" wanted the prediction of a United Nations trusteeship withdrawn.]

Explains Mission.

In a prepared statement, Clark Kerr said his mission was "to keep his Majesty's Government informed of political developments in the Netherlands East Indies and to do all I can to bring about a solution of the present political difficulties between the Netherlands Government and Indonesian Nationalists."

"My Government do not propose to concern themselves," he added, "with the constitutional issues which must clearly be settled between these parties themselves. Nevertheless, I shall be ready at any time to use my good offices for this purpose."

Clark Kerr planned to fly to Batavia Friday with Major-Gen. Montagu Stopford, newly assigned British military commander in the East Indies, who will succeed Lieut.-Gen. Sir Philip Christison. He said he hoped a solution would be reached quickly so he could have his first holiday in eight years before going to Washington to assume his new post as Ambassador to the United States.

Palestine Jews Dissatisfied

Decision to Admit 1500 Immigrants a Month Is Called a Deep Disappointment.

Jerusalem, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—The British Government's decision to continue Jewish immigration into Palestine at the quota rate of 1,500 a month brought immediate criticism from the Jews today.

A Jewish Agency spokesman said the decision would save a few Jews, but described it as a deep disappointment in view of the agency's request for 100,000 permits. A special communique, announcing the provisional quota rate yesterday, said that consultations on the question have been proceeding over a long period with the Arab leaders, but that no conclusive results have

Sees Indonesia as Trusteeship

Clark Kerr Believes UNO May Rule East Indies When Present Trouble Is Settled.

Singapore, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Sir Archibald Clark Kerr, en route to Batavia to represent Great Britain at negotiations between the Netherlands Government and the unrecognized Indonesian republic, said today that he believed Indonesia might become a United Nations trusteeship "when the present difficulties are settled."

Sir Archibald, who will become British Ambassador to the United States in May, voiced this opinion at a press conference in response to questions on the Indonesian situation. He made it clear that his statement was merely a personal observation and not a recommendation, declaring that the question of committing Indonesian territory to trusteeship was one for the Dutch Government to decide and not an affair of the British Government until the matter had reached the United Nations Organization.

Has Seen Dutch Plan.

He disclosed that he had seen the fifteen-point plan of Dr. Hubertus J. van Mook, Acting Governor-General of the Dutch East Indies, for settling the Indonesian problem but was not at liberty to discuss the plan until the Dutch made it public.

[After this dispatch was filed, British public relations officials at Singapore asked elimination of the passage in which Clark Kerr was quoted as expressing belief that Indonesia might become a United Nations trusteeship "when the present difficulties are settled." The claim was made that Clark Kerr had not understood the question which evoked this remark. Lief Erickson, A. P. bureau chief, said that before his dispatch was filed he read it to a major detailed to check it with him by phone. The major,

CHIANG PLEDGES FREEDOM FOR ALL CHINESE PARTIES

CHUNGKING, Friday, Feb. 1—(AP) Full, immediate freedom of all political parties in China was pledged by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek last night in closing the historic Political Consultation Conference.

The conference, called to bring order out of civil strife, just had reached decisions under which Chiang's 18 years of one-party rule may be abolished before the year's end.

Freedom Pledged

"Political parties," he said, "can henceforth conduct their activities and even political campaigns and openly organize themselves in accordance with legal rights and procedures provided in unified laws and decrees of the state.

"They should no longer resort to armed violence or organize themselves secretly in various parts of the country."

He expressed belief there would be no private armed forces or regional political setups to undermine China's administrative integrity and unity of military command.

The generalissimo himself presided at the closing session of the conference, which laid the groundwork for an all-party government to supplant the unfettered leadership he exercised during the blackest hours of the war with Japan.

In a final burst of speed punctuated with compromises by all sides, a subcommittee aportioned the representation for a national assembly to meet May 5 and adopt a new constitution. This erased the last issue remaining before the conference.

Amity Tide High

The tide of compromise and amity ran so high at the finish that there was talk Communist Leader Mao Tse-Tung might go to Nanking and join the projected all-powerful state council, which with Chiang would rule in the interim before a constitutional government took over.

Lo Lung-Chi, spokesman for the Democratic League, was author for the report. He said he had from Chou En-Lai, head of Communist delegation, who emphasized, however, that this did not mean headquarters long established at Yenan would be abolished.

The Kuomintang, Chiang's National Party, summoned its powerful standing committee into session earlier in the afternoon and formally approved all decisions of the conference subcommittees.

It acted after a subcommittee threshed out the question of representation at the national assembly. The Communists waived a demand for half the number of assembly seats granted the Kuomintang.

Both the Communists and the Democratic League dropped demands for election of a new slate of delegates. The subcommittee then agreed:

1. The 900 delegates chosen before the war with Japan will keep their seats. The government said 60 per cent of these delegates belonged to the Kuomintang.

2. An additional 450 delegates will be elected, including 150 from Manchuria and Formosa which once more are a part of China after years under Japanese rule.

3. Another 700 delegates will be appointed—220 by the Kuomintang, 190 by the Communists, 120 by the Democratic League, 100 by the Youth Party, and 70 by non-partisans.

The draft of the constitution will be prepared by a 35-man all-party committee. If the constitution is adopted, elections will be called within six months thereafter throughout the provinces. China then will have a government representing other parties for the first time since the Kuomintang and the Communists split in the 1920's.

Marshall Acts

With such questions as government reorganization and the creation of a national army embracing Communist troops, at least temporarily resolved, General Marshall once more went into action.

The special U. S. presidential envoy sent the government and Communists a letter suggesting that the Manchurian port of Yingkow be placed under the jurisdiction of the three-man committee which negotiated China's truce Jan. 1.

The Communists seized the southern port after the Jan. 13 cease-fire deadline, driving off a small

UNITY MEETING IN CHINA ENDS IN AGREEMENT

Political Conference Accepts All the Decisions of Sub-committees.

CHIANG KAI-SHEK PRESIDES

Full Accord Finally Reached on Make-up of General Assembly.

(1 TOSA)

Chungking, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—China's political consultation conference, with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek presiding, formally approved today all decisions reached by subcommittees charting the nation's future. With that action taken, the unity conference then adjourned—twenty-one days after it was convened.

Chiang entertained the delegates afterward at a dinner in the Hall of Ceremonies at Government Headquarters, where the all-party deliberations began January 10. The Generalissimo had presided when the powerful standing committee of the Kuomintang (National) party earlier in the day approved the work of the subcommittees.

The committee's action was made possible when a conference sub-committee dealing with the reorganization of the National Assembly reached an agreement on its composition after a long deadlock.

The action paved the way for the twice-postponed adjournment tonight of the Political Conference.

Lo Lung-chi, spokesman for the Democratic League, credited Chou En-lai, No. 2 Communist, with a statement that Mao Tse-tung, Communist party chairman, might join the projected all-party State Council and go to Nanking when that body is established there. This did not mean, however, that Communist headquarters would be moved from Yenan to Nanking.

Chou May Make Tour.

Lo also credited Chou with saying he intended to tour various Communist-held areas personally to acquaint the inhabitants with decisions of the conference and to enjoin their observance and support.

[He possibly decided upon this course because of difficulties encountered the last three weeks in enforcing terms of the January 10 truce which declared an end to China's civil strife.]

Earlier, Gen. George Marshall sent a letter to the Government and the Communists suggesting that the disputed Manchurian port of Yingkow be placed under jurisdiction of the three-man committee that negotiated the truce.

Seized After Deadline

Communist troops seized Yingkow after the January 13 cease-fire deadline specified in the truce.

The three-member group that negotiated the truce includes Marshall, President Truman's special envoy to China; Gen. Chang Chun, representing the Government, and Chou.

Chou visited Marshall at his home this morning in a round of calls following his return from Yenan last night. There was no indication what they discussed.

Makeup Of Assembly

Under the subcommittee agreement, the National Assembly will include 900 members chosen before the war. The Government reports 60 per cent of these are members of the Kuomintang party.

Four hundred and fifty seats, including 150 apportioned to Manchuria and Formosa, will be filled by election.

The remaining 700, to be filled by nomination, were apportioned: Kuomintang 200, Communists 190, Democratic League 120, Youth party 100 and Nonpartisans 70.

It also was agreed that a three-fourths majority would be required to adopt the constitution. This satisfied the Communists and Democratic League, which said they should be able to prevent a majority alignment for changes they might disapprove.

The agreement on the Assembly makeup was reached only after concessions by all parties. The Communists waived a previous demand for half the number of seats held by the Kuomintang. The Government canceled a plan whereby all members of the central executive and central supervisory committees of the Kuomintang party would be ex officio members of the Assembly.

Chinese Troops At Sinmin

Tientsin, Jan. 30 [AP—Delayed] Three troop trains carrying the third echelon of the Chinese 6th Army have arrived at Sinmin, 35 miles northwest of Mukden, Chinese sources said today.

The troop trains left January 27 from Chingwanto the day after being brought from Shanghai on ships of the American 7th Fleet.

Reports were received from Manchuria that Communist forces claim to have evacuated Yingkow, important port above Hlatao, after having taken it away from Government troops early in the month. There have been no authentic reports that Government troops have re-entered Yingkow.

Chinese Appoint New Emissary Here

Chungking, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Dr. P. H. Chang, Chinese Cabinet spokesman since 1943, has been appointed Consul-General at New York city, succeeding Yu Tsung-chi, who now is in Chungking. The 43-year-old Chang speaks English fluently. He was educated in England and Germany.

SHANGHAI IS GAY ON NEW YEAR'S EVE

Shanghai, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—The sale of Chinese lanterns and firecrackers zoomed, and the stock market gyrated wildly today because the Chinese lunar New Year holidays begins tomorrow.

The price of gold rose by 20 per cent in a few hours and the price of Chinese currency in relation to the American dollar rose even further as the Chinese paid off their year's debts according to tradition—even if it meant borrowing from some one else to do it. Customary bonuses of one month's pay have generally been given to business employees and domestics. The failure of some foreign firms to comply with this custom has caused serious strikes.

The holiday lasts for anywhere from three days to a week. The Chinese go back to work when they have had enough of celebrating.

Draft Emphasizing Monarchy Expected To Be Opposed

Tokyo, Friday, Feb. 1 (AP)—The tentative draft on a new constitution for occupied Japan, beginning, "Japan shall be a monarchy," was announced today by the Government.

Kyodo news agency promptly reported the Government was "disregarding the trend of public opinion."

Article Two says the Emperor will be sovereign and will rule according to provisions of the Constitution. Article Three provides that the succession to the imperial throne will be males of one line for ages eternal. Article Four says the Emperor will not be responsible for his actions.

Little Change Noted

The first four articles of the tentative draft provide little change from the first four of the old document concerning the Emperor except to leave out the words, "the Emperor is sacred and inviolable."

Kyodo news agency predicted "strong opposition from civilian quarters" after quoting Joji Matsumoto, State Minister, who prepared the draft, as seeing no need for sharply altering articles concerning imperial rule.

The news agency noted that all political parties but the progressive party hold that sovereignty rests with the people."

Russians To Join Tribunal

Meanwhile, the occupational forces announced Russian nominations for official representation at forthcoming war crimes trials and the impending arrival of British Commonwealth occupation forces.

Joseph B. Keenan, chief of the international prosecution staff of Allied headquarters, announced that the Soviet Union has nominated for judge on the tribunal, Maj. Gen. of Justice I. M. Zaryanov, of the Military Collegium, supreme court of the Soviet Union.

'Unbeaten' Japs Now At Home Held Threat

(BRINES)

Tokyo, Jan. 31 (AP)—Signs of resentment and sullen anger of tens of thousands of "unbeaten" repatriated Japanese have appeared in home islands and present a potential menace to occupation forces, the Canadian member of the Far Eastern Commission said today.

In an interview before departing for Canada, Col. L. M. Cosgrave said evidences of the repatriates' attitude which have appeared in the countryside are "too small to put your finger on now, but they must be watched."

By promptly smashing any evidence of subversive activity, the colonel suggested, a relatively small number of counterintelligence agents will be able to minimize the threat of these elements.

Most From China

The "unbeaten" Japanese, he said, include some from the United States and Canada, but mainly consist of demobilized troops from China.

"Remember they were never beaten in China. They never saw the Allied power that was demonstrated to the Japanese coming back from other Pacific regions. Instead they had been swaggering top dogs for years.

"Now they are back as ordinary citizens. Instead of a lot of power and money they are unemployed, ignored by other Japanese and perhaps soon will become hungry. They may attempt to stir up trouble."

Million Returned

More than a million Japanese have been repatriated from Japan's one-time empire. Those in China have been given a high priority, say Allied officials, to minimize their chances of causing trouble there. More than 5,000,000 other Japanese, mostly demobilized servicemen, are awaiting return home.

Cosgrave, a wartime intelligence officer, said American counterintelligence agents are well aware of the potential threat of these repatriates.

"I am amazed," he said, "at the job they have done patrolling Japan with a small number of men. Part of this, of course, is due to the surprising amount of co-operation received from the Japanese Government. But we must watch every nook and cranny."

Emperor A Problem

Another member of the commission, Thomas Confessor, chief Philippine delegate, said one of the most ticklish problems facing the Allies was the question of what to do about the Emperor. The masses, he said, still cling to the belief their ruler is divine.

Peasants, school teachers and public officials alike remain unshaken in their belief, Confessor said. "I asked Provincial Governor Jun Kimura, in Kyoto, who has held foreign posts, what he thought of the Emperor's rescript denying his divinity and he told me:

"That shows the generosity of the Emperor. We are very thankful."

The Philippine delegate said his observations made him optomistic that Japan could become a peace-loving nation but that "this doesn't mean that we should not impose a penalty for what it has done in plunging the Pacific into war."

AUSTRALIANS DUE IN JAPAN

Russia Turned Down Invitation to Send Troops—China Unable to Do So.

(SPENCER)

Tokyo, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Gen. MacArthur today extended a warm welcome to British Commonwealth troops who will share in the occupation of Japan and disclosed that their presence will enable a reduction in the strength of American forces in Japan.

At the same time, he said officially that while China and Russia were invited to provide contingents of troops, China replied that it is not in a position to do so and Russia had not accepted the invitation.

"The present occupation forces in Japan extend the heartiest possible welcome to the British Commonwealth forces who are about to share with them the arduous and difficult duties which are involved," MacArthur said in his greeting.

"Their presence materially broadens the base along international lines of the burden which up to this time has of necessity been carried to large extent unilaterally by United States forces, and cannot fail to be of overall beneficial effect."

The Allied Commander noted that the resulting reduction in American forces "will bring welcome relief to many individuals."

"The Australian contingent served under my personal command with brilliant honor to itself during the long, arduous campaigns on the road back and I take personal pride in again being associated with it. Reception of the entire force will be of the warmest."

The Public Relations office said MacArthur will determine the number and schedule of withdrawal of American troops from his command when the exact composition and time of arrival of the British forces is known.

An Associated Press dispatch from the Australian flagship Hobart, off Kure, said the advance port party's landing at Kure had been delayed twenty-four hours and indicated the men might go ashore tomorrow. There was no indication when the occupation force would be landed.

Washington Announces Plan.

Washington, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Plans for British Commonwealth forces to take part in the occupation of Japan were made public today. The terms are set forth in an agreement between the United States and Australia, acting on behalf of the Commonwealth.

FEB 1 1946

30.24—713

Under it the force will be drawn from the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand, and India with Lieut.-Gen. J. Northcott of Australia serving as commander in chief under the supreme command of Gen. MacArthur.

The force will include base troops from each of the contributing countries; a land component organized as a corps, consisting of one British division and two brigade groups—one each from Australia and New Zealand; an air component with squadrons from each of the four countries, and a squadron of the British Pacific Fleet.

The force will be located initially in the Hiroshima prefecture, including the cities of Kure and Fukuyama, to handle demilitarization tasks.

Delayed by Search.

Aboard Australian Flagship Hobart, Off Kure, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Landing of the advance detachment of British occupation forces which will take over southern Honshu island was delayed twenty-four hours by a search for missing American airmen, it was announced today.

The British ship H. M. S. Glenairn, steaming from Hongkong with an advance port party to open the way for British Commonwealth occupation troops, turned aside to search for possible survivors of a downed American plane yesterday.

JAPANESE PLEAD FOR GI

Civilians Urge Clemency fo Hicswa, Convicted of Killing

TOKYO, Friday, Feb. 1 (AP)—Gen. MacArthur's headquarter disclosed today that Japanese civilians have written letters pleading clemency for an American soldier condemned to die before a firing squad for the fatal stabbing of two Japanese civilians.

The soldier, Pfc. Joseph Hicswa of Wallington, N. J., was adjudged guilty at court-martial of having killed the two with a bayonet in a park at Nara, during a drunken celebration of an impending furlough.

Headquarters said not one of the letters received from Japanese has urged that the death sentence be carried out.

A letter signed by "citizens of Nara Prefecture" asked that Hicswa be freed and said the two slain Japanese "were no good." One note urged that Hicswa be acquitted "because the Japanese people are all guilty for disturbing the world's peace."

Nisei Bigger; Japs Puzzled

Tokyo, Jan. 31 (AP)—After taking a close look at the husky Nisei (American-born) among the occupation troops, the Nippon Times asked editorially today why they were so superior physically to Japanese.

"It must come as a revelation to the Japanese people to see Nisei, who are of the same racial stock, so superior to the average Japanese in physical build and bearing," the paper said.

Food was a major factor, the Times conceded, since "the narrow impoverished isles of Japan cannot hope to compete with bountiful California," but it added:

"The difference in physique also suggests that military drills and regimented calisthenics which heretofore have been given such prominence in Japan are of dubious value. It would see mthat . . . spontaneous sports common in America are more conducive to sound bodily development."

New Job For Jap

Tokyo, Jan. 31 (AP)—Foreign Minister Shigeru Yoshida was appointed director of the Central Liaison Office today in addition to his Cabinet duties.

MacArthur Orders Census Of Japan

Tokyo, Jan. 31 (AP)—General MacArthur today ordered the Japanese Government to complete a census of Japan during April.

The Japan Bureau of Statistics was told to insure that the basic tabulations would be made available to general headquarters not later than 30 days after completion of the census.

8 Japs Face Trial On U.S. Supplies Charge

Yokohama, Jan. 31 (AP)—Eight Japanese accused of illegal possession of undescribed army supplies will soon be arraigned before the provost court at 97th Division headquarters at Kumagaya.

Formerly, Japanese accused of such crimes or other civil breaches have been tried in Japanese courts. Specific authority for the change to military court was granted by Allied headquarters. No explanation was given.

Jap Warned On Eyes Before Beating PW's

Yokohama, Jan. 31 (AP)—One affidavit introduced as evidence today at the war-crimes trial of Corporal Kitaro Ishida, charged with beatings and other atrocities against Allied prisoners of war, stated:

"I will say this for him. He would first motion prisoners to cover up their eyes before beating them so they would not suffer eye injuries."

New Zealand Formally Ends War With Siam

Wellington, N.Z., Jan. 31 (AP)—The New Zealand Government issued a proclamation today formally declaring the war with Siam terminated as of January 1, 1946.

Acting Prime Minister Walter Nash said that Siam was the first enemy country with which New Zealand has formally made peace.

Aide Says Homma Fired Camp Head

Manila, Jan. 31 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Masaharu Homma, charged with condoning war atrocities, removed the commander of the infamous Camp O'Donnell in an effort to improve conditions for its 70,000 inmates, a defense witness testified today.

Lieut. Col. Moriya Wada, a member of the Japanese military administration staff during the occupation of the Philippines, testified that Homma concluded two inspections of the prison camp by saying conditions were "very unsatisfactory."

"He told me," Wada told the war crimes commission trying Homma, "to find some solution, and the first matter was a change in commandants."

Homma also recommended the transfer of American prisoners to Japan to better conditions, Wada said, because "first, the weather is warm here and the prisoners were easily infected with disease; second, fresh meat and vegetables were hard to get; and, third, it was hard to construct good housing here."

Prisoners of the rank of colonel and higher were sent to Formosa, he testified, but transfer of the rest "was impossible."

The witness related seeing the Bataan death march where he "saw an almost continual procession of prisoners. I saw about five dead." The prosecution charges that many died of exhaustion and others were bayoneted when they dropped by the wayside.

Program For Island

Wada said Homma had sanctioned this seven-point program for governing the islands:

1. The Philippines' governmental reorganization should be retained wherever possible without change of personnel.
2. Japanese supervision should be kept to a minimum with pro-American employés used if possible.
3. The mode of living, customs and religions of the Filipinos should be respected.
4. All industries should be developed.
5. A Filipino police force should be organized immediately to preserve order.
6. An attempt should be made to win the hearts of the Filipino people.
7. Neutrals, even enemy aliens, should be employed unless found guilty of committing hostile actions against the Japanese.

Corregidor Map Shown

MANILA, Jan. 31 (AP)—A big United States Army map marked "secret" and brought into the Philippines by the Japanese was introduced today as evidence during testimony by Lieut. Gen. Kitajima, Homma's artillery commander. It was not explained how the map came into Japanese possession, but General Kitajima showed the military commission the positions of 152 artillery weapons used in the conquest of Corregidor.

Japs Plundered Korea, UNRRA Official Says

Manila, Jan. 31 (AP)—Korea was decimated and plundered by the Japanese "as completely as if it had been ravaged by war," Frank S. Gaines, UNRRA official, said today after a factfinding mission returned from a survey there.

Gaines said the mission found evidences of deterioration and depreciation of virtually every essential element of Korea's agriculture and industry.

A four-member mission went to learn how UNRRA aid best could be extended to the peninsula. Members besides Gaines were Glen Briggs, United States; Dr. William Wood, Canada, and Constance Duncan, Australia. Miss Duncan remained at Seoul, Korea.

CANADIANS RELAX PRICE-PAY CONTROL

Ottawa, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Mackenzie King today announced initial steps toward the eventual removal of price and wage controls, and said that they would provide greater flexibility without weakening the essential fabric of the anti-inflation program.

In a 5,000-word statement he declared (1) that the removal of wage controls is not yet feasible but changes have been made that will "provide more latitude for the operation of collective bargaining and for the exercise of administrative discretion in minimum wage matters and working conditions by the provinces," and (2) that price ceilings on some 300 non-stable goods and services —"a great many of them of minor importance in the budget of the average household"—have been suspended, but will be reimposed if price reactions warrant such action.

It is no longer feasible "to attempt rigid maintenance of the price level and it is quite conceivable that by the time full 'decontrol' is achieved the level of prices may be moderately higher than is the case today," the Prime Minister added.

BY HOUSE LEADERS

Members to Take Up Bill as Substitute for Fact-Finding Legislation.

ASSAILED BY UNIONS

Foes of Measure Count on Senate to Defeat It, or Presidential Veto.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31 — (AP) A strike control bill armed with formidable teeth won a House test vote today by such an emphatic margin that leaders predicted it, or some similar measure, would pass the chamber.

Members voted 258 to 114 to consider the bill as a substitute for fact-finding legislation asked by President Truman.

Offered by Rep. Case (R.-S. D.) the bill would make unions liable to injunctions, outlaw violent picketing or organized boycotts. It would provide for civil suits against either employers or workers violating labor contracts.

Would Set Up Board

It also would create a national labor-management mediation board to help settle disputes which it believed affected the public interest. Strikes would be barred for 30 days, while the board sought to settle the disputes.

Voting to begin debate on it forthwith were 152 Republicans and 106 Democrats, mostly southerners. Against were 96 Democrats, 16 Republicans and both minor party members.

The bill was attacked by supporters of labor unions as a "union-breaking bill" but praised by its sponsors as necessary to protect the public from damage due to labor strife.

House leaders told newsmen privately that they looked for House approval within a few days of the far-reaching bill, or one closely following its lines. In that case, its foes count on the Senate to defeat it or, as a last resort, on the possibility of a Presidential veto.

Truman Has No Comment

At his news conference today, the President was non-committal on the House action. He said merely that it was the House's business.

About the only resemblance the Case substitute bore to Mr. Truman's requested legislation was the 30-day cooling off provision. Mr. Truman had asked that fact-finding boards be set up, given power to subpoena records and witnesses and that strikes be banned for 30 days while the boards deliberated.

The House Labor committee approved a diluted version of the President's plan. It set up the boards, but denied them subpoena authority and made no provision for the cooling off periods.

Heated debate continued in the House after today's vote, and it will be at least Saturday and probably next week before final action is taken.

Sabath Leads Opposition

Chairman Sabath (D-Ill) of the Rules committee led the opponents of the Case bill, declaring that "instead of giving the President the aid he asked we give him this vicious legislation."

Rep. Marcantonio (AL-NY) termed the substitute "the most vicious anti-labor bill ever before the House" and predicted it "will incite industrial strife and make industry, bloated with profits, arrogant and powerful." He said it "will strip labor of its rights and result in government by injunction."

Rep. Howard Smith (D-Va) replied, however, that "this is just another case of the C.I.O. supporters crying 'wolf, wolf' when they have no reasons for doing so." He declared the Case proposal is "based on the theory that Congress should prevent unions from hiding behind present laws to pursue practices against the public welfare." He said Congress "never intended to give organized labor unfair exemptions not accorded other citizens."

Rep. Biemmiller (D-Wis) assailed Case's plan as one "sired by malice and foaled by deceit." He asserted "this measure will make the corporations feel they are above the law x x x and make goons the order of the day again."

Rep. Halleck (R-Ind) supported the substitute, declaring: "The President told Congress that if it didn't like his plan to set up one of its own, x x x This is it."

TAX LAW STUDIED FOR STRIKE LINK

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—(AP) The Treasury Department disclosed today it is making a study to determine what relation, if any, the corporation tax laws have to the current wave of strikes, and soon will submit a report to Congress.

Numerous bills have been introduced in Congress, intended to repeal or restrict excess profits tax refunds, since Philip Murray, C.I.O. president, charged in Pittsburgh a week ago that such refunds guarantee business profits during strikes.

The Ways and Means committee of the House asked Secretary of the Treasury Fred M. Vinson for his opinion.

Joseph J. O'Connell, Jr., treasury general counsel, wrote Ways and Means Chairman Doughton (D-NC) that "this matter will have consideration and a report thereon will be submitted to your committee as soon as possible."

Murray had a conference today with Secretary Vinson and a treasury official said he understood it dealt with the tax issue.

Spokesmen for some industries now closed by strikes deny that substantial profits can be maintained by tax refunds.

Congress repealed the war-imposed excess profits tax last January 1, but provided a carryback credit whereby corporations that failed to make profits this year equal to average pre-war earnings could file claims for refunds of portions of the excess profits taxes they had paid in wartime.

Anti-Petrillo Bill To Floor

Washington, Jan. 31 (AP)—The way was cleared today for House action on a bill to curb the activities of James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians (AFL).

The Rules Committee gave it right of way to the floor.

'Superseniority' Appeal Impends

Detroit, Jan. 31 (AP)—Federal officials said today they would appeal Federal Judge F. Lederle's ruling that returning veterans may not displace other workers with equal or greater seniority rights.

Assistant United States Attorney Morris Zwerdling said the appeal would be made in behalf of George A. Droste, World War II veteran.

Judge Lederle yesterday dismissed Droste's suit against Nash-Kelvinator Corporation, in which he claimed he was entitled to employment in his classification as long as the company employed any men in that rating who were not veterans of World War II.

Zwerdling said Department of Justice and selective service officials uphold Droste's contention that the company violated the Selective Service Act in failing to grant him "superseniority" over nonveterans.

In his decision Judge Lederle said, "There is nothing in the act to indicate Congress intended to cause a fellow employé to make an unequal sacrifice for the benefit of the returned veteran."

Wage Parley To Continue, Thomas Says

CIO President Hits Failure of Wilson to Attend Conferences.

HUDSON, UAW CONFER

Second Charge of Unfair Labor Practices Filed Against Packard.

DETROIT, Jan. 31—(AP) President R. J. Thomas of the C.I.O. United Auto Workers said tonight he would not take part in further negotiations with General Motors for the time being, but that other union negotiators would carry on the conferences.

Thomas said his absence would continue "until there is some indication that GM wants to settle the strike."

"As long as C. E. Wilson (GM president) or someone else who has authority to settle the strike does not attend the meetings, why should I attend?" the union chieftain asked.

Thomas emphasized that he was speaking only for himself and added that "this does not mean a breakdown of negotiations between the company and ourselves."

He made the statement as he returned to U.A.W.-C.I.O. headquarters after attending the second session in the presence of Special Government Mediator James F. Dewey.

It appeared probable, therefore, that U.A.W.-C.I.O. vice-president Walter P. Reuther would be in charge of the union delegation when the third company-union meeting is held tomorrow.

Dewey said that wages were not one of the main subjects of discussion at today's meeting but that agreement would be sought on as many other issues as possible "before we take up the main issues."

The government mediator said that a company-union dispute over maintenance of membership was one of the top issues, along with wages.

Thus the meeting brought the union and corporation no closer together in wage differences, which find General Motors sticking to its offer of 13 1-2 cents an hour increase (about 12 per cent) and union leaders asking for a 30 per cent increase. GM made the 13 1-2 cents offer early in December.

Dewey characterized today's session as a "very pleasant meeting." This was in contrast to yesterday's first conference which was reportedly marked by much bickering, sometimes in heated manner, by the participants.

Promotions Discussed

Dewey disclosed that the union and the corporation at this time are attempting to reach an understanding on promotions in the ranks of General Motors employes represented by the U.A.W.-C.I.O.

This involves the necessity of balancing corporation and union principles in regard to "seniority" and "skill," he explained the problem has been whether to place greater weight on one or the other, and Dewey said he hopes to clear up this problem at an early date so the way can be opened to other discussions, wages included.

Dewey himself said the problem involves the "right of a man to get a better job on the basis of seniority."

Vice president Harry W. Anderson of GM, in charge of corporation personnel, emerged smiling from today's conference but declined comment, saying he preferred to leave that to Mediator Dewey.

At a recess Thomas also appeared in good humor, although when asked if progress was being made he shook his head and was noncommittal.

Neither the company nor the union issued prepared statements following today's session.

Statements from both sides following yesterday's first negotiating meeting in more than a month disclosed that the wage stand of management and union had not been altered and that maintenance of membership had been added as a major issue in the dispute.

The management has offered 13 1-2 cent (12 cent) hourly wage increase while the union has demanded GM accept the recommendations of a presidential fact-finding board calling for a 19 1-2 cent (17 1-2 per cent) rise.

GM announced it was unwilling to agree to a maintenance-of-membership provision in any new contract; the U.A.W. demands its inclusion, asserting it was part of the recently terminated contract which President Truman recommended be reinstated.

Rejected by the union was a management proposal that the 13 1-2 cents an hour increase be accepted while further negotiations were carried on.

Other Developments

Other developments in Detroit included:

1. Disclosure that negotiations had begun between the U.A.W.-C.I.O. and Hudson Motor Car Co., with the union seeking an increase similar to the 18 1-2 cents an hour raise granted by Chrysler Corporation last Saturday.

2. A union request that Chrysler and Ford workers, who received an 18 cents an hour boost the same day, donate the first week's added earnings to the General Motors strike fund. The union attributed the "success" of the Ford and Chrysler negotiations to the "determined stand of the GM strikers.

3. Filing of a second charge of unfair labor practices against the Packard Motor Car Co., by the Foreman's Association of America (Independent). The association told the National Labor Relations Board that Samuel K. Sacks was discharged by the Packard management because he "sided, joined and assisted the FAA for the purpose of collective bargaining and other mutual aid and protection."

The NLRB has carried the first charge—that Packard refused to bargain with the union on the ground that foremen are part of management—to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals at Cincinnati for an enforcement order.

TRUMAN REJECTS FORD PLEA TO LIFT AUTO PRICE BARS

President Says Removal of Controls Impossible Without Wild Inflation.

STEEL PARLEYS STALLED

Seizure of Plants Not Now Under Contemplation, Truman Says.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—(AP) President Truman rejected today a suggestion from Henry Ford II that price control be removed from the automobile industry and its suppliers in the interest of industrial peace.

You can't do it, Mr. Truman declared, without wild inflation.

Ford had made the proposal last night in a telegram to Reconversion Director John W. Snyder. The motor manufacturer also warned in the telegram that his company would have to close down completely this week unless it got steel quickly.

Steel Parleys Stalled

Mr. Truman, in response to queries at a news conference, declined to predict any early end of the steel strike and top officials reported settlement efforts at a standstill.

The President expressed belief that the labor situation was improving all the time. But that was his only optimistic statement on the matter, and he left the generalization at that. In previous news conferences ever since the current strikes started the President had expressed specific hopes for settlements but he voiced none today although reporters gave him the opening.

He was asked whether he saw "any chance of a break" in the 11-day steel strike. His only reply was that he would give that answer at the proper time.

Government seizure of the steel mills, he said, was not now under contemplation.

He reported that the OPA was still working on its study of the steel price question and he could not tell when it would be ready. He had no comment on the statement of Irving S. Olds, chairman of the Board of the U. S. Steel corporation, that it would need a price increase "greatly in excess" of $6.25 a ton to grant a wage increase of 18 1-2 cents an hour.

A government official who asked to remain anonymous reported earlier this week that OPA's steel price report already had been submitted to the White House.

OPA Seeks Data

Asked for comment on the President's statement that the agency still was working on the report, an OPA spokesman issued this official statement:

"We have forwarded to the Office of Stabilization Administration and the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion data on steel covering the period through Nov. 30. It was our understanding that this data was sufficient to meet the President's request.

"If a formal report embodying this data is requested, we shall be glad to furnish it. Additional information will be forthcoming as it becomes available."

Normally, complete fourth quarter data does not become available until March 1.

The officials who reported the steel negotiations stalemated took a somewhat less pessimistic view of the General Motors strike although the company and the C.I.O. United Auto Workers were far apart on wages and maintenance of membership issues. The officials, who could not be quoted by name, saw hope in the resumption of negotiations.

Philip Murray, president of both the C.I.O. and the Steel Workers Union, conferred today with Secretary of the Treasury Vinson.

Murray has contended—and a U. S. Steel official has said he misstated the facts—that existing tax laws will enable the steel industry to benefit financially even though it is shut down by strikes.

At the Capitol, 40 House members signed a round-robin letter calling on U. S. Steel to accept the wage boost proposed by the President and on General Motors to agree to a fact-finding board's recommendation for a 19 1-2 cents increase.

"The unions have accepted the compromise proposals," the letter said, "and have charged that the refusal of these corporations is part of a concerted plan to destroy labor unions and endanger the welfare of the American people."

Signers included 38 Democrats, a Republican and an American Laborite.

Long Idle Period Seen By Steel Fabricators

Pittsburgh, Jan. 31 (AP)—The Tri-State Industrial Association, representing 56 steel fabricators in Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, declared in a statement today that a large percentage of the 350,000 steel workers striking in fabricating plants would remain out of work a long time, or be permanently out of jobs, regardless of what agreement may be reached between the CIO-United Steelworkers and the United States Steel Corporation.

Ray Booth, secretary of the association, said "our members are caught in the middle between a steel price increase and wage increase demand which many of them cannot meet."

Don't Know About Prices

Booth asserted: "It is absolutely foolish to expect these steel-using companies to settle with the union for 18½ cents when they do not know—and have been unable to find out—just how much steel prices will be increased and whether they will get relief on the prices of their products. It may require months to adjust prices, because of the multiplicity of items manufactured."

The Tri-State Association charged in its statement that one of its members—the West Penn Machine Shops, Inc., of Pittsburgh—"had been contacted by a union 'negotiator' whose negotiations consisted only of an ultimatum of 18½ cents."

"Out Of Business"

"R. B. Russell, personnel director of the company, told the union representative that the firm could not pay 18½ cents. 'What is going to be done with companies like ours who cannot meet that wage increase?' Russell asked the representative. 'You'll just have to go out of business,' was the reply. The representative also informed Russell that the 18½ cent figure had been set by the union's national policy committee and that the locals had no alternative or authority to talk about anything else."

Meanwhile, four small fabricating plants employing 728 workers, signed agreements with the USW, and workers returned to their jobs. About 50 such agreements have been signed since the beginning of the steel strike, most of them giving an 18½ cent raise. Nearly 19,000 employes were returned to work.

Hearings Ended On Meat Dispute

Washington, Jan. 31 (AP)—A Federal fact-finding board ended public hearings in the meat-packing strike today, with industry spokesmen demanding that the panel make recommendations for price increases when it proposes wage boosts.

The board is to make its report to Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach this week end if possible.

Company representatives declared in closing arguments that meat price increases and wage increases should become effective at the same time.

The industry, they contended, was in a profit position so dubious that it could not absorb wage boosts and continue in business.

"You hold the industry in the palm of your hand," Frank Madden, general counsel of the Cudahy Company, told the panel.

Madden denied an earlier CIO contention that the board should be guided in wage recommendations by what union spokesmen called the "national pattern" of wage settlement and recommended increases. These settlements have run around 18 to 20 cents an hour.

"Other settlements have nothing to do with this case," Madden declared.

George Leonard, representing the Armour Company, said that for every penny in wage increases, meat prices would have to be advanced 4 cents a hundred pounds.

Ralph Helstein, counsel for the CIO meat-packing workers, told the board earlier that the Government, in seizing the meat industry, had assumed a "moral obligation" to give packing-house workers a "fair" wage increase.

Arbitrators Are Named For Railway Pay Disputes

2 Boards Chosen to Decide on Demands of 18 Unions

CHICAGO, Jan. 31 (AP).—Members of two boards representing railroads and brotherhoods to arbitrate wage demands of eighteen railroad unions were announced today by the carriers' conference committee.

For a three-man board to arbitrate the case of three operating brotherhoods, the locomotive firemen and enginemen, the conductors and the switchmen, Revelle W. Brown, of Philadelphia, president of the Reading Railroad Company, and Carl J. Goff, of Cleveland, assistant president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, were selected. They will select the third or public member.

For a six-man board to arbitrate the demands of fifteen brotherhoods of non-operative employees, such as clerks, shop craftsmen and maintenance workers, the following were selected: Ralph Budd, of Chicago, president of the Burlington Railrad; J. Carter Fort, of Washington, vice-president of the law department of the Association of American Railroads; E. E. Millman, of Detroit, president of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees, and Felix H. Knight, of Kansas City, Mo., president of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America. They will select two public members.

If the members selected are unable to agree on the other members the National (Railway) Mediation Board will select the public members.

The eighteen brotherhoods, representing 1,250,000 workers, and the railroads agreed Saturday to submit the wage demands to arbitration after weeks of conferences under auspices of the mediation board. Arbitration decisions are binding on both parties.

Operating workers asked for a wage increase of $2.50 a day and non-operating employees asked for 30 cents an hour more pay.

Renamed to Mediation Board

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31 (AP).—Frank P. Douglass, of Oklahoma, was nominated by President Truman today for another term as a member of the National Mediation Board which considers railway labor disputes.

NEGOTIATIONS CONTINUE IN W. E. DISPUTE

NEW YORK, Jan. 31—(AP) Representatives of the Western Electric Company and the Association of Communications Equipment Workers (Ind) today concluded the 13th day of negotiations without comment on a wage dispute, the main issue in their labor differences.

Both sides said they discussed wages today and that consideration of the issue had been put over to another meeting tomorrow.

The union struck Jan. 8 but returned to work Jan. 14 at the request of its parent organization, the National Federation of Telephone Workers, (Ind). The union demanded an average weekly increase of $8 for its 8,000 members.

Stock-Yards Strike Set

Los Angeles, Jan. 31 (AP)—Southern California, which suffered only slightly during the recent meat strike, may start to feel the pinch tomorrow.

The CIO United Packing House Workers' Union, whose national strike against Armour, Cudahy, Swift and Wilson was halted by government intervention, called a walkout for 12.01 A.M. at the Los Angeles union stock yards. The yards were not involved in the earlier dispute, pending negotiations.

Charles Lumpp, yard manager, says the union seeks an increase of 25 cents an hour on basic wages now ranging from 70 to 90 cents hourly. He asserted that with overtime, the average wage approximates $1.35.

Only 45 employes are involved, but movement of live stock to 26 independents who kept supplies at an estimated 70 per cent of normal during the recent ten-day walkout against major plants is chiefly channeled through the stock yards. The four major plants, Lumpp said, obtained stock largely from their own sources.

A. F. L. COUNCIL ENDS, URGES ALL UNIONS TO RETURN

FEB 1

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 31—(AP) The A.F.L. executive council adjourned its mid-winter sessions tonight with an appeal to all labor unions —including the rival C.I.O.—to "come back home to the parent federation."

New Quarters Sought

As if to bear out the federation's plans for future expansion, A.F.L. President William Green disclosed the A.F.L. would build or buy a new headquarters structure in Washington. A committee was named to choose the site.

Describing the session as the "most constructive in years" because of the return of John L. Lewis and his 600,000 United Mine Workers, and the anticipated reaffiliation of 50,000 members of the brewery and soft drink workers, Green urged others to follow suit.

The sessions were ended after a final day crammed with these major developments:

1. The council made no commitment in the Hollywood jurisdictional squabble between the Carpenters and the International Association of Theatrical Stage Employes, effect, this upheld a committee report for the time being at least, and was a rejection of the carpenters' protest. Hollywood leaders, including Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Producers Association, had pleaded for a settlement.

Strike Bill Protested

2. Telegrams were sent to every member of the House protesting the consideration of the strike control bill introduced by Rep. Case (R-S.D.). The A.F.L. said the bill "will not bring peace and harmony in industrial relations, but on the contrary, will cause confusion, chaos, injustice and will disrupt industrial relations."

3. Pledged "solidarity" with the Chilean Federation of Labor in its general strike in protest to the penalizing of the Chilean nitrate workers.

4. Proposed a ten-point plan for advancing democracy in the American zone of occupation in Germany.

Lacked Reconnaissance Force, Pearl Harbor Air Chief Says

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—(AP) Vice Admiral P. N. L. Bellinger, naval air wing commander at Pearl Harbor when the Japanese struck, testified today that he lacked the force for continuing long-range reconnaissance, and the information to indicate emergency operations.

The admiral, first naval flier ever to come under enemy guntire told the Senate-House committee investigating the Dec. 7, 1941 attack:

1. He was not told of war warning messages from Washington and it was "days after" the December 7, 1941 attack before he learned there had been any.

2. He likes to think he would have guessed that the Japanese were going to attack the fleet at the Pacific base. If he had had the information available to Washington, but "only God knows."

3. He had not recommended to Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, commander in chief of the fleet, that his plane-short forces undertake long-distance reconnaissance in the days before the attack.

Daily Patrol Kept Up

4. After the attack, with fewer than half the number of planes available before the raid, he managed to run a daily patrol of 25 to 30 planes covering waters 700 to 800 miles from Oahu.

Sparse Information

"The information available to me—limited and unofficial as it was—did not indicate that I should recommend to the commander in chief, Pacific fleet that the distant patrol plane search for the security of Pearl Harbor be undertaken at that time."

Richardson asked whether Bellinger would have expected an attack on Pearl Harbor if he had seen warning communications from Washington plus information contained in intercepted Japanese messages.

"I would like to have done it. I like to think I would have done it, but only God knows whether I would have," was the reply.

Richardson stirred Bellinger to red-faced anger in a discussion of whether he had ever asked the army in Hawaii for bombers to supplement long-range searches.

"If I had asked for them entirely on the information I had, not concurred in by the army, I wouldn't have gotten them," Bellinger told Richardson.

"Why fence about this?" Richardson demanded.

"There's no fencing about it," the admiral replied angrily. "But you have to be clear about these things."

Richardson asked his question again, Bellinger replying, "I did not."

Bellinger, one of the navy's pioneer fliers, was a rear admiral at the time war started. As a young pilot he flew over Mexican territory in the Vera Cruz occupation of 1914 and his official biography records that rifle hits on his plane "constituted the first attack on a U. S. naval aircraft by enemy gunfire."

He commanded the NC-1 in the first transAtlantic flight in 1919 and for this won the Navy Cross.

Bellinger opened his appearance today by reading a statement, after which he was subjected to vigorous questioning by committee counsel Seth W. Richardson and to inquiries from committee members.

In the statement, he said:

"I never knew of any warning dispatches until a few days after the attack. x x x During October, November and December my only information concerning our relations with Japan and the imminence of war came from the Honolulu newspapers.

LEND-LEASE REPORT GIVEN

Truman Cites Last Quarterly Total As $1,895,000,000

Washington, Jan. 31 (AP)—President Truman told Congress today that final lend-lease settlements would be completed for the most part by July 1 and reaffirmed the pledge of the original agreement that they should "not burden commerce."

Negotiations already have been started, he said, with many of the nations who received lend-lease aid, totaling $46,040,000,000 from March, 1941, through September, 1945. The final settlement with the United Kingdom, the largest single recipient, has been concluded.

The President's report, the twenty-first to Congress on the program, covered operations for the third quarter of 1945 ended September 30. In that period, which saw the end of hostilities, lend-lease aid totaled $1,895,000,000.

China An Exception

The report noted that an exception to the policy of discontinuing lend-lease aid after V-J day was "necessary" in the case of China. It said that transfers of equipment to the Chinese Army "continued in substantial quantities under the directives of the joint chiefs of staff and with the approval of the President."

"Large numbers of Japanese troops were in China at the time of the Japanese surrender, which made impossible a large-scale demobilization of Chinese forces," the report explained. "It was essential that these forces which had been seriously underequipped during the entire war be provided with the equipment necessary to expel Japanese forces from Chinese areas. . . .

"Withdrawal of United States troops from China has been speeded by this program."

Totals By Nations

China received total lend-lease aid through September 30 of $631,509,000. France received $1,406,600,000, Russia, $10,801,131,000, and the British Empire, $30,269,210,000.

Lend-lease shipments to Russia for the war in Europe ended on V-E day but aid to the Soviet Far East continued. It was on August 8 that Russia declared war on Japan, but the report said that "in July $150,000,000 worth of lend-lease goods left West Coast ports for Siberia."

FEB 1 1946

Shipments to Russia under the entire program included 14,795 planes, 7,056 tanks, 51,503 jeeps, 35,170 motorcycles, 8,071 tractors and 375,883 trucks.

Aid To Russia

"A United States Army officer who visited the Soviet front stated that in certain areas United States trucks made up as much as 30 per cent of the transportation equipment of the Soviet forces," the report said, without identifying the officer.

"This same officer estimated that lend-lease trucks represented between ten and fifteen per cent of the total trucks used on the entire Soviet front."

There also was furnished to Russia $1,078,965,000 of machinery and machine equipment, along with such items as 106,893,000 yards of cotton cloth, 62,485,000 yards of woolen cloth and $1,647,000 worth of buttons.

RUSSIAN ATTACK ON SPELLMAN HIT BY HOUSE LEADER

FEB 1 1946

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31 — (AP) House Democratic Leader John W. McCormack of Massachusetts, assailing a Russian attack on Cardinal-Designate Francis J. Spellman of New York, said today that "such attacks impair the chances of future world peace."

In a statement given to reporters, the Democratic leader suggested that if Premier Stalin "used common sense and if he wanted to make a real contribution toward permanent peace and progress, he would cause such attacks to cease and instead of attacking he would try to reconcile."

The criticism of Archbishop Spellman was contained in a recent issue of the Soviet-controlled newspaper, Izvestia, which charged that the selection of a group of new cardinals was made by the Vatican for political purposes.

Red Charges Blasted

McCormack, a Catholic, called the Izvestia charges "baseless x x x false and malicious" and said they appeared to be "part of a deliberate plan of misrepresentation aimed to divide the people of countries where western civilization exists."

"These attacks and other actions of the Soviet Union are causing many who believe in world peace to wonder if the Soviet Union is sincere," he added.

"To defend the Catholic church is unnecessary. To expose the reasons for the false attack is necessary."

McCormack said the Soviet Union apparently was "trying to prevent world peace through international action."

"This and past attacks contrary to the truth," he said, "are the wrong journey to take to contribute to future world peace. . . They show a dictatorial attitude and an attempt to impose the will of the Soviet Union on the rest of the world."

McCormack referred to Archbishop Spellman as a man respected by "Americans of all creeds" and a leader in "progressive and humane activities."

LADY ASTOR HITS BRITAIN'S CRITICS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—(AP) Scornfully, little Lady Astor advised Britain's critics today not to "hit a man when he is down."

"What's Great Britain's crime?" she snapped at a news conference when asked to comment on criticism of the projected $3,750,000,000 loan to Britain. "They (the critics) better get down on their knees and thank God there was a Britain."

"And," she added, "it's not the English way to hit a man when he is down. Nor America's."

Other Comments

Then the first woman member of the House of Commons turned the Astorian asperity on a number of other subjects, to wit:

Occupation—"If I had my way, I would send a Salvation Army to Europe with Bibles translated in all the languages."

The Press—"I don't believe in it. The conscience of the people is much more powerful in bringing about reforms." (Incidentally Lady Astor's husband is a publisher.)

German women—"One East End woman in London with her adenoids and all, has more guts than all the German women."

Anglo-American relations—"The best way for the world to get peace is for the U. S. and Britain to cooperate. We understand freedom better than the rest."

Possibility the Labor government will revamp the House of Lords—"I don't think you'll see much change there. If you touch it it might fall down. And too many people wont to get in there."

And women's place in world's affairs?

Take it from Lady Astor, they should step right up and contribute their tuppeny's worth toward leading this troubled world back to tranquility and a spiritual rebirth.

Women's Role Stressed

For, she said, women have "greater spiritual values and more strength than men."

"And," she added, "no past."

"No past?" asked a newsman.

"No past," said Lady Astor firmly. "It wasn't the women who have started these wars."

"Do you see any duties left for us to perform?" inquired one worried newsman.

Lady Astor did.

"I think you should take a rest," she said.

Before she got under way, a British embassy spokesman explained that she was over here on a private visit and that anything she had to say were her own private views, not the British government's.

"Hear, hear" agreed Lady Astor.

All Repatriables to Quit Germany During Spring

Poles Are Largest Group; Nazis Used 8,500,000 Slave Workers

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 31 (AP).—A State Department adviser said today the return home of displaced persons from Germany probably will be completed during the spring.

In an address prepared for the Radcliffe College School of International Relations, George L. Warren, department adviser on refugees and displaced persons, estimated that at one time 8,500,000 slave laborers had been used by the Nazis in Germany.

Only after repatriation has been completed, he said, "will it be possible to determine the numbers of the non-repatriables who will be unable or unwilling to return to their countries of origin."

Mr. Warren said the Poles constitute the largest national group yet remaining to be repatriated. Their return, he added, has been delayed "by the large movement of Russians eastward" and the lack of adequate living facilities in Poland.

Mr. Warren asserted that "practically all" of the western European displaced persons have been returned to their homelands, along with Soviet and Italian nationals.

The State Department adviser ddisclosed also that the return of Germans from the eastern European countries they had overrun "has been gaining momentum."

"It is expected that between 6,500,000 and 8,000,000 Germans will return to Germany during the first six months of 1946," he said.

ATC Denies Report On Rome Airfield Use

Washington, Jan. 31 (AP) — The Army Air Transport Command said today that no American aircraft operating on a commercial basis is going into Ciampino airfield at Rome and that it could not understand the basis for a story in the Rome edition of Stars And Stripes.

The army newspaper said ATC officers and men at Ciampino had complained to Washington that they were being kept there to rebuild the field for commercial airline use and that it was handling more civilian than military air traffic.

An ATC public-relations officer said a check showed that at the moment men at Ciampino are "not eligible for discharge as they do not have sufficient points."

Alaska to Vote on Statehood

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31 (AP).—A House Territories subcommittee recommendation that no Congressional action be taken on the question of statehood for Alaska until after a referendum vote in the territory, was reported today by a member of Congress.

White House Link Charged In Pauley Mexican Oil Deal

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—(AP) Max Thornburg, former petroleum advisor to the State Department, told the Senate Naval Committee today that the White House in 1942 applied "pressure" for a Mexican oil project with which Edwin W. Pauley was connected.

The testimony was brought out in a hearing on the nomination of Pauley, California oil magnate and former treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, to be undersecretary of the Navy.

Pauley himself, first witness at the hearing, told the committee he had not been active in his oil business since 1941 and would not resume activity so long as he was in the government.

Project Opposed

Thornburg, former official of the Standard Oil Company of California and petroleum adviser to the State Department from July, 1941, to August, 1943, said he opposed the Mexican project because its terms were so unfavorable to Mexico that it would harm relations with that country.

Pauley and his associates proposed to build a refinery to manufacture high octane gasoline at the Posa Rica Field, in Mexico, in return for which the promoters would receive from 70 to 80 per cent of the aviation gasoline production, together with the right to buy 50 percent of all other production at a price to be agreed upon.

Thornburg said the department received a number of "chits" from President Roosevelt asking "what's holding up the Mexican program?" and similar queries.

The original Pauley proposal was never approved, he said, though later, after the Monterey meeting of Mr. Roosevelt and President Avila Camacho of Mexico, an agreement was reached by which certain work was undertaken through a loan to the Mexico government.

After one "particularly sharp" note from President Roosevelt, Thornburg said, Secretary Hull called a conference in the department.

Thornburg said at that conference he suggested it was "high time that the President be given all the facts which I was sure he didn't have, and an explanation of why the department was opposed." Thornburg drafted a memorandum for the chief executive.

Welles Summoned

The witness said Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles was quickly summoned to the White House and came back with instructions that the President was not interested in any one man or any interests, but was interested only in getting the project started.

After the department was instructed to work out its own program with Mexico, but before any contracts had been signed, he said, he was told by Pauley that he was taking his case to the White House and that time was running short in which he could withdraw his opposition.

Pauley was questioned closely by committeemen on the issue of State vs. Federal ownership of submerged petroleum lands. He said he believes they belong to the states.

He quickly added, however, that he never had sought to head off a Supreme Court decision on the issue, nor to influence congressional action on the Federal quit-claim measure.

Specifically, he denied under questioning by Senator Tobey (R-NH) that he had ever told Secretary of the Interior Ickes that he could guarantee large campaign contributions to the Democratic Party if Ickes would use his influence for withdrawal of the government's suit to fix the title to lands between low water mark and the three-mile limit.

Hatch Objects

Up jumped Senator Hatch (D-NM). He remarked tartly that if every Senator talks endlessly against everything, there will be no more Senate tradition of free debate.

"If I want some fatherly advice," Bilbo came back, "I'll put an adviser on my payroll."

President Truman asked Congress yesterday to approve a $3,750,000,000 loan to Britain. An Anglo-American agreement provides for an additional credit of $650,000,000 to settle lend-lease debts. Congressional action on that is not required.

Administration leaders admit fierce opposition is in store for the loan. Senate and House Banking Committees showed no signs of prompt action.

In the House, Rep. J. Parnell Thomas (R-NJ) read a letter he said he had sent to Mr. Truman asking whether Congress also will be asked to agree to loans to Russia, France, China and other nations.

Thomas said it might be embarrassing to grant a loan to Britain and not to Russia and "the other powers."

Bilbo Seeks Record

On the FEPC bill, to establish a permanent agency to deal with racial and religious discrimination in employment, Bilbo has declared he will set an all-time talking record. In a three-hour installment today, he told Senator Chavez (D-NM), who is circulating a petition to choke off debate:

Bilbo to Talk Against Loan 'Until Hell Freezes,' He Says

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31 — (AP) A threat to filibuster against a loan to Britain "until Hell freezes over" came today from Senator Theodore G. Bilbo.

And the durable Mississippi Democrat was scarcely started on his personal contribution — 60 days, he said — to a filibuster already going against a permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission.

Bilbo told the Senate he hoped to "save the taxpayers four billion, four hundred million" by marathon talk against the British loan.

"I'm willing to be a cousin of the British," he said. "I believe in good fellowship, and I'm pro-British. But I'm tired of seeing Uncle Sam be a Santa Claus."

"I promise you I'll speak for 60 days and I'll stay on the subject."

"I won't be reading the Bible and the Almanac."

"Go take your name off the cloture petition."

He referred to the debate limitation paper which has signatures of 44 of the 96 senators. But a majority of two-thirds of those voting is required to clamp on a gag.

Bilbo suggested it might be necessary to place an aisle between Southern and Northern Democrats similar to the one now separating Republicans and Democrats.

"The senators from states south of the Mason and Dixon Line are standing side to side, shoulder to shoulder against this thing—except for Claude Pepper of Florida," the Mississippian said. "I know he says he'll vote against the bill but he says he'll vote for cloture, and if cloture were worked, the bill would pass.

Mead Speaks

Senator Mead (D-NY), a supporter of the FEPC bill, followed Bilbo. He said he would speak only briefly since he did not want to contribute to the filibuster.

His address lasted only an hour. When he attempted to insert a number of pro-FEPC editorials into the Congressional Record, Senator Olin Johnston (D-SC) objected—"unless you read them out loud." Mead didn't press the point.

"We're all for the Atlantic Charter and for the elimination of want at home," Mead said. "The best way to achieve that is to pass this bill . . . The goal of 60,000,000 jobs after reconversion will never be achieved if we fail to grant equality of opportunity to all our citizens."

Hannegan Plan To Push Bills Is Praised

Washington, Jan. 31 (AP)—A new, one-at-a-time plan for trying to push President Truman's 21-point program through Congress appeared today to appeal to Administration forces on Capitol Hill.

Representative Sparkman, of Alabama, New Democratic whip of the House, said the idea advanced by Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan sounded "very good" to him.

"The trouble with the other way," Sparkman said, "has been that the program has been fished out all at one time. There is so much in it that some say they are for some parts of it and not other parts. Not many say they are for it 100 per cent."

Opposition Comment

As for the Republicans, their spokesman, Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, said only:

"We'll take them as they come and judge them on their merits. Whether they succeed with their plan depends on what they bring up."

Hannegan, who, as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, is rounding up a group of aides to work as liaison men with Congress in pressing the point-at-a-time idea, said yesterday that Mr. Truman favors the plan.

It is Hannegan's belief, he said after a White House visit yesterday, that much of the program delay has been due to the fact that it was presented in mass lots, with little emphasis on which measures should come first. The Roosevelt technique was to generalize the opening messages to Congress and follow them up with specific proposals later.

Hannegan's Team

The team Hannegan is asking to help push specific measures in Congree—minimum wages, housing, price control and second war powers (rationing) extensions as the first four in that order—will consist of:

Edward F. Prichard, Jr., of Lexington, Ky., 30-year-old former assistant to Fred M. Vinson in the office of Reconversion and the Treasury. Prichard's appointment as general counsel of the Democratic National Committee was announced last night. He will continue to practice law in Kentucky.

Paul Porter Member

Paul Porter, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission and another Kentuckian.

Gael Sullivan, 41, of Chicago, now Second Assistant Postmaster General.

Joseph E. DuBois, New Jersey attorney, assistant to Treasury Secretary Vinson.

Robert R. Nathan, 37-year-old economist who formerly served with wartime production agencies.

Not all of these men will do duty on Capitol Hill. Some will merely sit in on advisory council meetings from time to time.

Draft-Law Action Put Aside For Defense Act

FEB 1 1946

Washington, Jan. 31 (AP)—The House Military Committee today spiked Administration hopes of early action on a continued draft law and universal military training.

It decided to concentrate instead on a new national defense act. And Chairman May (D., Ky.) pointed out that all other army proposals necessarily will hinge on the new act's contents.

The committee has already held long hearings on universal training, but the new move evidently wiped out plans to resume them now. No hearing date has been set on the question of extending the draft, which is due to expire May 15.

Special Group Assigned

A special nine-man subcommittee was assigned to work out recommendations for the defense act which will blueprint the Army's overall structure.

The Army, meanwhile, moved to step up the flow of replacements for long-service GI's overseas. The training period for future replacements was ordered cut to eight weeks. Previously, thirteen to seventeen weeks' training was required.

The War Department has been claiming that it is hard put to provide sufficient replacements to keep pace with the present rate of demobilization.

Will Make Recommendations

Apropos of the new defense act, Chairman May said the special subcommittee will make recommendations for legislation after questioning army heads and others interested.

The subcommittee is expected to determine first how large the regular peacetime Army should be.

Once that is decided, it may undertake to decide how the necessary personnel should be obtained—by voluntary enlistment, universal training or a continued draft.

Members' Opinions

While most committee members favor the voluntary system, they are inclined to doubt that it will provide the necessary numbers. Others believe a small volunteer army will be adequate provided it is backed by large numbers of reserves under universal military training.

The Army's announcement of a reduction in replacement-training time brought cheers from senators connected with the recent investigation of the demobilization program.

"That's wonderful," said Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Col.). "Don't tell me that the subcommittee's work is not getting results."

Directed Probe

Johnson referred to a three-man special subcommittee which he directed in the demobilization probe which followed mass protests of soldiers overseas against any delay in their return to this country for discharge.

Chairman Elbert Thomas (D., Utah) of the Senate Military Committee also applauded the replacement-training cut.

"That's all to the good," he said. "These men are not being trained for battle, but for occupational duty and the training should have been reduced."

MRS. LUCE INTRODUCES BILL FOR EQUAL PAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—(AP)—Clare Boothe Luce introduced legislation today to declare a national policy of equal pay for equal work without respect to sex or color of the worker.

The Connecticut Republican's bill would commit Congress to the policy that:

"Equal pay in respect to actual wages, hours of work and working conditions, shall be given to all those who perform equal tasks with equal efficiency, irrespective of whether such employes are men or women, white or colored."

WALLACE WARNS ON ATOM CONTROL

Washington, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Secretary of Commerce Wallace said today that domestic control of atomic energy should be vested in a civilian commission "to avoid any possibility of military dictatorship."

Testifying before the Senate atomic energy committee, the former Vice-President indorsed the control legislation introduced by the committee chairman, Brien McMahon, (D.-Conn.), but suggested a few modifications.

McMahon has proposed a control commission of five full-time civilian members to be appointed by the President.

Wallace said the legislation should emphasize the development of peaceful uses, within the framework of proposed international control.

"To my mind," he said, "it would be most unfortunate if international suspicions, and the frailties and weaknesses of mankind, should force the world to forego even for a short time the benefits of the energy of the atom."

Dr. John Von Neumann of the Institute of Advanced Study at Princeton, recommended to the committee that Cabinet members be given about half the seats on the Control Commission. The other members, he said, should be "definitely technical."

The professor, who worked on the atomic bomb at Los Alamos, N. M., pleaded for freedom of research.

"We still know very little about nuclear physics," he said. "It is likely that developments in that field will be more rapid in the next five years than they have been in the past five."

Atom Bomb Made Japs' Gold Teeth Radioactive

Washington, Jan. 31 (AP)—The atomic bomb which fell on Nagasaki literally loosened the teeth of those who survived and left some with radioactive gold fillings.

It also caused many to lose their hair, but no one wound up completely bald.

This was reported today by Commander Joseph Timmes of the Navy Medical Corps, who examined some of the living victims about a month after the blast.

Anemia Produced

He also said the "radiation sickness" produced a form of anemia, due directly to the fact that rays from the bomb interfered with the functions of the bone marrow, one of the principal manufacturing sites of red blood cells.

Some victims, he said in a report in the naval Medical Bulletin, also showed a deficiency of white blood cells, nature's protective mechanism against disease invasion.

Even though those effects were noted, Timmes said the victims did no absorb radiant energy "in large amounts."

Films Attached To Limbs

This was indicated, he declared, by attaching X-ray films to the limbs of atomic victims in hospitals and keeping the films in place for eighteen hours.

"All of these films," he said, "failed to reveal radiation which may be explained by the fact that although these victims were exposed to forms of radiant energy they did not absorb any in large amounts."

Timmes's report appeared shortly after it was learned that army and navy scientists have begun laboratory examination of the organs of many of the Japanese who were killed by the blasts at Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Postmortem Studies

The postmortem studies on material flown here from Japan are being conducted at the Army Institute of Pathology and at the Naval Medical Research Institute.

In the medical bulletin article Timmes wrote:

"Many cases of alopecia (loss of hair) were seen. Some of these victims began to lose their hair four or five days after the explosion, while others first noted this phenomenon about the third week.

"None of the cases exhibited complete loss of hair. At the end of a month a few of the patients had already begun to grow new hair of a downy nature. The permanency of the alopecia at this time is purely speculative."

Teeth Removed By Hand

He said other naval investigators had found that the teeth of the victims "were generally loose and easily removed by hand."

He added that Capt. Shields Warren, who headed a special naval commission to Nagasaki, had found that some of the gold removed from the teeth of some of the victims "contained radiant energy."

New Bomb Carries Television Sender

Washington, Jan. 31 (AP)—The Army Air Forces has several new type bombs guided by radio or other means ready for experiments to be conducted by a new technical group, the War Department announced today.

The radio-steered "azon" bomb which knocked out Jap bridges in Burma has been supplemented by others. They will be tested by the First Experimental-Guided Missile Group with headquarters at Elgin Field, Fla.

The group is commanded by Col. Harvey T. Alness, former commander of the 7th Bomb Group in India. It includes 715 enlisted men and 130 officers, almost all highly trained specialists.

In addition to its "azon" bomb, the AAF already has lifted the lid on an improved version called the "razon" bomb, the "Felix" bomb attracted to heat, and the "roc," a 1,000-pound missile equipped with television to scan a target and relay information back to the aircraft.

AIR FORCES TO TEST RADIO GUIDED BOMBS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31. — (AP) The Army Air Forces has several new type bombs guided by radio or other means ready for experiments to be conducted by a new technical group, the War department announced today.

The radio-steered "Azon" bomb which knocked out Jap bridges in Burma has been supplemented by others. They will be tested by the First Experimental Guided Missile Group with headquarters at Eglin Field, Florida.

The group is commanded by Col. Harvey T. Alness, former commander of the 7th Bomb Group in India. It includes 715 enlisted men and 130 officers, almost all highly-trained specialists.

The Eglin Field unit has the task of developing tactics for the use of guided missiles. The weapons themselves will continue to be perfected at Wright Field, Dayton Ohio.

GI Family Travel Ban Assailed

Washington, Jan. 31 (AP) — The American Legion complained today that it was a "ridiculous mistake" for the Army to pay travel expenses overseas only for families of officers and high noncoms.

Congressmen charged "discrimination" and questioned the effect on GI morale.

The War Department announced yesterday a plan to let some wives and children join service men abroad. It said the Government was authorized by law to pay for the travel of dependents of officers, the three top grades of noncommissioned officers, and certain civilian employés of the department.

Housing Shortage Blamed

Families of enlisted men in lower grades will not be permitted to go under present arrangements, even if they should pay their way, but plans to include them later are under study, the War Department said.

The department said a housing shortage was primarily responsible for the present ban against the enlisted men's families.

John H. Stelle, national commander of the American Legion, said in a statement that it was "the lowly paid privates, privates first class, corporals and duty sergeants" who needed help and encouragement, not the higher-ranking personnel.

He said the War Department was "making the same ridiculous mistake in handling this matter as it had in the handling of the point system of discharges."

Equal Treatment Urged

Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) told the Senate the department ought to treat everybody alike.

"Instead of building up morale by the plan," he said, "this will tear it down."

Senator Hatch (D., N.M.) suggested all enlisted men be put on the free list.

Representative Pace (D., Ga.) expressed a similar thought in the House.

The War Department announced today that it would start bringing wives and children of American service men from Italy to America next month. About 400 of the estimated 1,700 Italian war brides and children will sail from Naples on the Algonquin about February 10.

ROTC Course Reactivated

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31 (AP) — The War Department ordered today reactivation of the advance course of the Reserve Officers Training Corps, suspended during the war. The training will be re-established in 129 unversities and colleges in the continental United States, Hawaii and Alaska. The training authorized will continue until superseded by a permanent post-war ROTC program to train junior Army officers.

Women Marines' Point Score To Be Lowered

Washington, Jan. 31 (AP)—The point score for release of women Marines will be lowered tomorrow from eighteen to seventeen.

The Marine Corps said today this will mean that about 800 more women officers and enlisted personnel will be eligible for discharge.

NEW STEPS TAKEN FOR VETERANS' HOSPITAL CARE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—(AP) The Veterans Administration, already busy with a big hospital building program, started making arrangements today for care of ex-servicemen in civilian hospitals.

Officials of both the VA and the American Legion, none of whom would speak for attribution, said the move followed recent correspondence with the "White House"—though not with President Truman himself—on the point of how far the government should go in providing care for veterans whose ills were not service connected.

President Truman said at his news conference this afternoon that he did not know about any such correspondence.

Start Made

The VA and Legion officials agreed that the "White House" communication was non-committal, but they took it as approval for the recent trend of VA policy which had been toward some degree of liberalization.

The start on use of civilian hospital space is being made in Michigan, where VA announced it was signing a contract with the Michigan Hospital Association to make available an unspecified number of beds. One official said the number of beds VA might use in all the hospitals covered by the contract could run into the hundreds, perhaps thousands."

Officials have said the plan will be extended to other states if the Michigan trial works out.

VA spokesmen have said that if care were limited to combat or service-connected disabilities, the 97 Veterans Administration hospitals would have "more than enough space" for the current job.

Approximately 70 per cent of the 83,000 now in veterans hospitals are non-service connected. There is a waiting list of 10,000 such cases. VA is trying to borrow 40,000 beds from army, navy and private hospitals. It has a $380,000,000 building program under way.

Law Provides Care

The law provides that the government shall care for all veterans who can trace disability to war or military service. Then if additional space is available other veterans may be admitted to government hospitals but they must sign a statement that they do not have funds to pay for a private physician or hospital.

If hospital service is offered to all veterans who report they cannot afford to pay for it, VA officials have estimated, the case load may climb to 500,000 by 1975. They have figured that the number of actually service connected cases probably will never rise above 100,000.

ARMY RETURNING SUGAR FROM PACIFIC

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 31—(AP) The second installment of some 21 million pounds of sugar which the armed services in the Pacific are returning because they won't need it is en route here aboard the S. S. Sword Knot, the navy said today.

The Sword Knot, to arrive early in February from Wellington, New Zealand, is bringing 5 1-2 million pounds. Just before Christmas 15,830,860 pounds arrived. The sugar will go to replenish navy stocks, but indirectly will help ease the civilian supply.

U. S. Dealings with Darlan Upheld in Churchill Speech

NEW YORK, Jan. 31—(AP)—Winston Churchill was disclosed today to have told the House of Commons in a secret speech in 1942 that American dealings with Admiral Jean Darlan of France at the time of the North African campaign were justified as a wartime expedient.

The text of Churchill's speech, delivered Dec. 10, 1942—a month after Allied landings in North Africa—will be published for the first time tomorrow as a copyrighted feature in the Feb. 4 issue of Life magazine.

(In supreme command of all French naval forces at the outbreak of the war, Darlan was accused by many persons of turning to German collaboration, after collapse of French land resistance, to become Vichy vice premier under Marshal Petain.

Darlan Shifted

(Later, captured in Algiers during the North African invasion, Darlan shifted to Allied support, ordering French forces in Algeria and Morocco to surrender Nov. 11. In so doing, Darlan said he was carrying out the mandate of the aged marshal who he said was a virtual German prisoner and no longer able to give voice to his own thoughts.

(Darlan was assassinated in 1942).

Churchill, the speech disclosed, informed Commons that the British government was not consulted "in any way" in negotiations that led to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's recognition of Darlan as "the supreme French authority in Northwest Africa."

"I must however say," Britain's wartime prime minister added, "that personally I consider that in the circumstances prevailing Gen. Eisenhower was right, and even if he was not quite right I should have been very reluctant to hamper or impede his action when so many lives and such vitally important issues hung in the balance."

Gen. Eisenhower, Churchill said, advised Washington from Algiers on Nov. 14,1942, "that he had reached an agreement with Frenchmen, that they would accept only Darlan's leadership and that Darlan would cooperate with the Allied army."

"This was not a treaty," the prime minister said. "It was an arrangement made by the American commander in chief in the field with the local authorities to facilitate the safe landing of his troops and the eastward movement of his army.

"Not only all the American generals but Admiral Cunningham, who knows the Mediterranean from end to end and who had been in the Torch Enterprise for several months, and also the representatives of the Foreign Office and the State Department who were present, strongly urged acceptance of the subsequent agreement by their governments."

Way Eased

Following Eisenhower's action, Churchill said, "all the French forces and officials came over to our side, thus relieving the Americans of the anxieties and difficulties which a forcible taking-over of the administration of these vast regions have imposed upon them and us, and of the still more imminent risk of sabotage of our communications to the eastward."

Pointing out that the then President Roosevelt backed up Eisenhower, Churchill said:

"The question before us was whether we should repudiate Gen. Eisenhower at the risk of a very serious break with the United States. I have no doubt whatever that we should have been very careless of the lives of our men and the interests of the common cause if we have done anything of the kind."

However, the Prime Minister said, he later sought and received assurances from both Gen. Eisenhower and President Roosevelt that the United States was not supporting Darlan in any claims other than that he was merely the temporary head of the local government.

FRANKFURT, GERMANY, JAN. 31-(AP)-GEN.JOSEPH T.MCNARNEY HAS AUTHORIZED PERSONNEL UNDER HIS COMMAND TO GIVE FACTUAL INFORMATION TO NEWSMEN, THUS PERSONALLY ENDING MILITARY RESTRICTIONS ON NEWS GATHERING WHICH HAD CAUSED THE CORRESPONDENTS TO LAY THEIR CASE BEFORE THE SECRETARY OF WAR.

MCNARNEY, COMMANDER OF U.S. FORCES IN THE EUROPEAN THEATER, ISSUED A DIRECTIVE WHICH ELIMINATED THE NECESSITY OF REPORTERS' APPROACHING THEIR ARMY NEWS SOURCES THROUGH PUBLIC RELATIONS OR PRESS CONTACT OFFICERS. THE DIRECTIVE SAID:

TOKYO,JAN.31-(AP)-BRITISH COMMONWEALTH PARTICIPATION IN THE OCCUPATION OF JAPAN WILL PERMIT FURTHER REDUCTION IN AMERICAN FORCES, GENERAL MACARTHUR DISCLOSED TODAY IN A STATEMENT WELCOMING THE ADVANCE PARTY DUE TO LAND AT KURE FRIDAY.

MACARTHUR'S PUBLIC RELATIONS OFFICE SAID THE NUMBER AND SCHEDULE OF WITHDRAWAL OF AMERICAN TROOPS WOULD BE DETERMINED AFTER THE EXACT COMPOSITION AND ARRIVAL TIME OF THE FULL BRITISH FORCE BECAME KNOWN.

PREVIOUS DISPATCHES FROM AUSTRALIA HAVE SAID A MIXED CORPS OF 35,000 AUSTRALIAN, NEW ZEALAND, AND BRITISH INDIAN TROOPS WOULD MAKE UP THE OCCUPATION FORCE, LED BY LT.GEN. JOHN NORTHCOTT OF AUSTRALIA.

IT WAS ALSO ANNOUNCED IN WASHINGTON TODAY THAT THE FORCE ALSO WOULD INCLUDE MEN FROM THE UNITED KINGDOM AND A SQUADRON OF THE ROYAL NAVY.

THE BRITISH ZONE WILL EMBRACE 3,000 SQUARE MILES IN HIROSHIMA PREFECTURE OF SOUTHERN HONSHU ISLAND, INCLUDING THE KURE NAVAL BASE. IT WAS EXPECTED TO REQUIRE SEVERAL WEEKS TO PREPARE HEAVILY-BOMBED KURE FOR TROOPS IN ADDITION TO THE ADVANCE PARTY OF SEVERAL HUNDRED.

IN WELCOMING BRITISH COMMONWEALTH FORCES, MACARTHUR DISCLOSED THAT INVITATIONS ALSO HAD BEEN SENT TO CHINA AND RUSSIA TO SHARE IN THE OCCUPATION. CHINA REPLIED SHE WAS UNABLE TO DO SO AT PRESENT, AND RUSSIA DID NOT ACCEPT.

MACARTHUR SAID THE BRITISH ACCEPTANCE OF OCCUPATION DUTIES "WILL MATERIALLY BROADEN THE BASE ALONG INTERNATIONAL LINES OF A BURDEN WHICH, UP TO THIS TIME, HAS, OF NECESSITY, BEEN CARRIED TO A LARGE EXTENT UNILATERALLY BY THE UNITED STATES." HE ADDED IT WOULD "ENABLE A DIMINUTION IN OUR OWN STRENGTH, AND WILL THEREBY BRING WELCOME RELIEF TO MANY INDIVIDUALS."

SYDNEY, JAN. 31-(AP)-AUSTRALIAN SCIENTISTS USING RADAR EQUIPMENT HAVE CALCULATED "APPARENT" TEMPERATURES IN THE SUN RANGING FROM 1,000,000 TO 13,000,000 DEGREES CENTIGRADE, AN AUSTRALIAN RADIOPHYSICIST ASSERTED TODAY.

DR. E. G. BOWEN, DEPUTY CHIEF OF RADIOPHYSICS OF THE AUSTRALIAN COUNCIL FOR SCIENTIFIC AND INDUSTRIAL RESEARCH, SAID PREVIOUS CALCULATIONS BY OPTICAL METHODS OF THE SUN'S SURFACE TEMPERATURE--ABOUT 6,000 DEGREES CENTIGRADE--WERE NOT DISPUTED BY THE NEW RESEARCH.

"WE BELIEVE WE WERE REACHING THROUGH HOLES IN THE SURFACE OF THE SUN TO THE INTERIOR TO MEASURE THESE APPARENT TEMPERATURES OR ELSE THERE MIGHT HAVE BEEN SOME PHENOMENON SUCH AS ATOMIC DISINTEGRATON," DR. BOWEN SAID IN AN INTERVIEW.

(TEMPERATURE AT THE CENTER OF THE SUN HAVE BEEN ESTIMATED AT FROM $30,000,000 TO 60,000,000 DEGREES).

HE SAID THE USUAL TEMPERATURE RECORDED OVER THE PAST TWO TO THREE MONTHS OF OBSERVATIONS WAS 1,000,000 DEGREES, BUT OCCASIONALLY IT RANGED UP TO 13,000,000, THE HIGHER TEMPERATURES, DR. BOWEN ADDED, WERE CLOSELY RELATED TO THE APPEARANCE OF SUNSPOTS AND APPARENTLY WERE CAUSED BY "A TERRIFIC BLOWOUT OF EMERGY."

THE TEMPERATURES WERE CALCULATED FROM THE VOLUME OF NOISE--SIMILAR TO STATIC--WHICH THE AUSTRALIANS PICKED UP FROM THE SUN WITH THEIR RADAR EQUIPMENT.

FEB 1 1946

EVERY MATERIAL BODY GIVES OFF NOISES, THE NATURE OF WHICH DEPEND PARTLY ON THE TEMPERATURE OF THAT BODY. DR. BOWEN EXPLAINED.

"FOR INSTANCE, WHEN WIRELESS ANTENNAE WERE POINTED AT THE EARTH IT WAS FOUND THAT THE TEMPERATURE OF THE EARTH CALCULATED FROM THE NOISES RECEIVED CORRESPONDED TO THE THERMOMETER READING," HE CONTINUED. "IF THE ANTENNAE ARE POINTED INTO FREE SPACE, NO NOISE IS HEARD."

WASHINGTON,JAN. 31-(AP)-PRESIDENT TRUMAN DISCLOSED TODAY THAT HE HAD LEARNED OF THE SECRET YALTA AGREEMENT ON THE KURILE ISLANDS BEFORE HE WENT TO GERMANY FOR THE BIG THREE CONFERENCE LAST JULY.

THE PRESIDENT TOLD HIS NEWS CONFERENCE HE COULD NOT RECALL THE EXACT DATE ON WHICH HE LEARNED THAT THE LATE PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT HAD PLEDGED AMERICAN SUPPORT FOR RUSSIAN CLAIMS TO THE KURILES, BUT THAT IT HAD BEEN PRIOR TO THE POTSDAM MEETING.

IT WAS NECESSARY FOR HIM TO BE FAMILIAR WITH IT BEFORE ENGAGING IN HIS FIRST CONFERENCE WITH GENERALISSIMO STALIN OF RUSSIA AND PRIME MINISTERS CHURCHILL AND ATTLEE OF GREAT BRITAIN, MR.TRUMAN SAID. HIS COMMENT WAS AIMED DIRECTLY AT SPECULATION THAT THE TWO TOP AMERICAN OFFICIALS--PRESIDENT AND SECRETARY OF STATE--ENTERED THE POTSDAM MEETING WITHOUT KNOWLEDGE OF THE COMMITMENT.

(480) NIGHT LEAD POLAND

FEB 4[illegible]

BY GRAHAM HOVEY

WASHINGTON,JAN. 31-(AP)-THE UNITED STATES, LINING UP BESIDE BRITAIN, ASSERTED TODAY THAT POLISH SECURITY POLICE APPEARED TO HAVE BEEN IMPLICATED" IN RECENT MURDERS OF SOME POLISH POLITICAL LEADERS.

SECRETARY OF STATE BYRNES MADE THE ACCUSATION IN A STATEMENT. VIRTUALLY THE SAME CHARGE WAS MADE BY BRITISH FOREIGN SECRETARY BEVIN IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS NINE DAYS AGO.

THE BYRNES STATEMENT BROUGHT A SHARP REPLY FROM POLISH AMBASSADOR OSCAR LANGE, WHO BLAMED A SECRET UNDERGROUND ORGANIZATION, DIRECTED BY "REMNANTS OF THE FORMER GOVERNMENT-IN-EXILE" IN LONDON FOR WHAT HE CALLED "A SYSTEMATIC TERRORISM" AGAINST THE PRESENT WARSAW REGIME.

LANGE IMPLIED THAT THIS COUNTRY INDIRECTLY WAS ASSISTING THE UNDERGROUND GROUP, CALLED THE "NATIONALIST ARMED FORCES". HE SAID THE CONTACT BETWEEN THE TERRORISTS AND THE MAN TO WHOM THEY CLAIM ALLEGIANCE--GEN.WLADYSLAW ANDERS--WAS MAINTAINED THROUGH A GROUP STATIONED IN COBURG IN THE U.S. OCCUPATION ZONE OF GERMANY.

ANDERS, A BITTER CRITIC OF THE PRESENT WARSAW GOVERNMENT AS WELL AS OF THE SOVIET UNION, IS COMMANDER OF THE POLISH CORPS WHICH FOUGHT AS PART OF THE BRITISH EIGHTH ARMY IN ITALY.

BYRNES SAID THAT THIS COUNTRY ATTACHED "THE GREATEST IMPORTANCE" TO FULFILLMENT OF POLAND'S PLEDGE TO HOLD FREE ELECTIONS.

AMBASSADOR ARTHUR BLISS LANE IN WARSAW HAS TOLD THE POLISH GOVERNMENT SEVERAL TIMES THAT "ACTIVITIES OF THE SECURITY POLICE HINDER THE FULFILLMENT OF THIS COMMITMENT," BYRNES SAID.

BEVIN HAD TOLD COMMONS HE REGARDED IT AS "IMPERATIVE" THAT POLAND "PUT AN IMMEDIATE STOP TO THESE CRIMES IN ORDER THAT FREE AND UNFETTERED ELECTIONS MIGHT BE HELD AS SOON AS POSSIBLE."

IN HIS STATEMENT, ISSUED AT THE POLISH EMBASSY, LANGE SAID THAT TO HIS KNOWLEDGE THERE WAS "NO EVIDENCE THAT THE ACTIVITIES OF THE POLISH SECURITY POLICE HINDERED THE FULFILLMENT OF POLAND'S ELECTION COMMITMENTS, WHICH STAND AND WILL BE FULFILLED."

A72WX

FEB 1 1[illegible]

LANGE SAID THE UNDERGROUND FORCES HAD COMMITTED MORE THAN 1,200 MURDERS AND HAD ENGAGED IN ANTI-SEMITIC EXCESSES.

"GEN.ANDERS AND HIS FOLLOWERS IN POLAND ATTACKED WITHOUT DISCRIMINATION ALL MEMBERS OF THE PRESENT GOVERNMENT COALITION, MR.MIKOLAJCZYK'S PARTY AS WELL AS PARTICIPANTS OF THE FORMER LUBLIN COMMITTEE," THE AMBASSADOR SAID.

THE REFERENCE WAS TO STANISLAW MIKOLAJCZYK, VICE PREMIER, AGRICULTURE MINISTER AND PRESIDENT OF THE POLISH PEASANT PARTY, SOME OF WHOSE MEMBERS HAVE BEEN AMONG THE RECENT MURDER VICTIMS.

"THE CONTACT BETWEEN GEN.ANDERS AND THE TERRORISTS IN POLAND IS MAINTAINED THROUGH A GROUP OF THE NATIONAL ARMED FORCES STATION IN COBOURG IN THE AMERICAN ZONE OF GERMANY," LANGE SAID.

"IN ORDER TO STOP POLITICAL TERRORISM IN POLAND, IT IS NECESSARY TO END THE PRESENT SITUATION IN WHICH A POLISH ARMY IS TOLERATED AND FINANCED WHICH IS NOT SUBJECT TO THE AUTHORITY OF THE POLISH GOVERNMENT."

U.S. OFFICIALS FAMILIAR WITH THE POLISH SITUATION SAID THE BYRNES STATEMENT DID NOT MEAN THAT THIS GOVERNMENT BELIEVED THE SECURITY POLICE WERE RESPONSIBLE FOR ALL RECENT MURDERS OF POLITICAL LEADERS.

THESE OFFICIALS POINTED TO BYRNES' REFERENCE TO "THE UNSETTLED CONDITIONS WHICH NECESSARILY EXISTED IN POLAND UPON ITS LIBERATION AFTER ALMOST SIX YEARS' OCCUPATION," AND HIS STATEMENT THAT THE U.S. REALIZED THE DIFFICULTIES OF RESTORING ORDER UNDER SUCH CONDITIONS.

WASHINGTON,JAN. 31-(AP)-PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S LETTER TRANSMITTING TO CONGRESS THE 21ST REPORT OF LEND-LEASE OPERATIONS FOLLOWS: (275)

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA:

I AM TRANSMITTING HEREWITH THE 21ST REPORT OF OPERATIONS UNDER THE LEND-LEASE ACT FOR THE PERIOD ENDING SEPTEMBER 30, 1945.

UNTIL VJ-DAY, LEND-LEASE AND REVERSE LEND-LEASE OPERATED TO SPEED THE REDEPLOYMENT OF OUR TROOPS FROM EUROPE AND TO INSURE THE FINAL VICTORY OVER JAPAN. THIS REPORT PRIMARILY DESCRIBES THE EXTENT OF AID RENDERED UNDER THE LEND-LEASE ACT PRIOR TO THE CESSATION OF HOSTILITIES. THE SURRENDER OF JAPAN SIGNALED THE TERMINATION OF LEND-LEASE AS A WEAPON FOR VICTORY AND PROMPT STEPS WERE TAKEN BY THIS GOVERNMENT TO INSURE A RAPID BUT ORDERLY REDUCTION OF LEND-LEASE EXPENDITURES AND TO BRING TO A CLOSE THE EMPLOYMENT OF LEND-LEASE PROCEDURES IN SUPPLYING ESSENTIAL WAR NEEDS TO OUR ALLIES.

CONCURRENTLY, NEGOTIATIONS HAVE BEGUN WITH MANY OF THE LEND-LEASE GOVERNMENTS LOOKING TOWARD A FINAL SETTLEMENT OF THE LEND-LEASE AND REVERSE LEND-LEASE ACCOUNTS. AT THE PRESENT TIME, SUCH LEND-LEASE NEGOTIATIONS HAVE BEEN SUCCESSFULLY CONCLUDED WITH THE UNITED KINGDOM, THE LARGEST SINGLE RECIPIENT OF LEND-LEASE SUPPLIES. THE MEASURES TAKEN TO WIND UP AND SETTLE THE LEND-LEASE PROGRAM ARE OUTLINED ONLY BRIEFLY IN THIS REPORT BUT WILL BE DESCRIBED IN FULL IN SUBSEQUENT REPORTS.

THE MASTER AGREEMENTS THAT HAVE BEEN CONCLUDED WITH THE VARIOUS LEND-LEASE GOVERNMENTS CONTAIN THE PLEDGE THAT THE TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF THE LEND-LEASE SETTLEMENTS ARE TO BE "SUCH AS NOT TO BURDEN COMMERCE BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES, BUT TO PROMOTE MUTUALLY ADVANTAGEOUS ECONOMIC RELATIONS BETWEEN THEM AND THE BETTERMENT OF WORLD-WIDE ECONOMIC RELATIONS." IN THE PROCESS OF TERMINATING LEND-LEASE AND IN CARRYING ON OUR NEGOTIATIONS FOR FINAL SETTLEMENTS WITH THE VARIOUS GOVERNMENTS, THESE PRINCIPLES OF ARTICLE VII WILL BE BEFORE US AS A REMINDER OF THE GOAL WHICH THIS GOVERNMENT MUST CONSTANTLY SEEK.

HARRY S.TRUMAN.

BOSTON, JAN 31-(AP)-ALTHOUGH AMERICAN NAVY MEN WHO SAILED ON T GERMAN CRUISER, PRINZ EUGEN, TO THIS COUNTRY REPORTED SHE SANK THE BRITISH BATTLESHIP HOOD, THE PRINZ EUGEN'S GERMAN SKIPPER, THINKS A 15-INCH SHELL FROM THE BATTLESHIP BISMARCK PROBABLY DID THE JOB, NAVY SPOKESMEN SAID TODAY.

PUBLISHED ACCOUNTS OF THE SEA BATTLE, AT THE TIME, CREDITED THE BISMARCK WITH SINKING THE HOOD.

CAPTAIN HANS JURGEN REINICKE, WAR-TIME COMMANDER OF THE GERMAN CRUISER, INTERVIEWED AFTER THE PRINZ EUGEN CAME INTO BOSTON, SAID AN EIGHT-INCH SHELL FROM HIS SHIP'S GUNS SCORED A DIRECT HIT ON THE BIG BRITISH FIGHTING SHIP, STARTING A FIRE--APPARENTLY IN A GASOLINE SUPPLY--AND CAUSING CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE, THE NAVY SPOKESMAN SAID.

BUT HE ADDED, IN THE COURSE OF THE INTERVIEW, ACCORDING TO THE PUBLIC INFORMATION OFFICE OF THE NAVY IN BOSTON, THAT IT WAS MORE LIKELY THAT A 15-INCH SHELL FROM THE BISMARCK ULTMATELY FINISHED THE HOOD.

NIGHT LEAD UNDATED STRIKES

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

(CX) A STRONG-TOOTHED STRIKE CONTROL BILL WON ITS INITIAL TEST IN THE HOUSE BY A WIDE MARGAIN YESTERDAY (THU.) AS HOPES FOR EARLY SETTLEMENT OF THE STEEL AND GENERAL MOTORS STRIKES GREW DIMMER.

THE HOUSE VOTED 255 TO 114 TO CONSIDER THE BILL AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR FACT-FINDING LEGISLATION ADVOCATED BY PRESIDENT TRUMAN. THIS EMPHATIC MARGIN PROMPTED HOUSE LEADERS TO PREDICT THE MEASURE--OR SIMILAR LEGISLATION--WOULD PASS THE HOUSE WHEN THE FINAL VOTE COMES UP.

THE BILL WOULD MAKE LABOR UNIONS LIABLE TO INJUNCTIONS, OUTLAW VIOLENT PICKETING OR ORGANIZED BOYCOTTS, PROVIDE CIVIL SUITS FOR LABOR CONTRACT VIOLATIONS AND BAN STRIKES FOR 30 DAYS WHILE A NATIONAL LABOR-MANAGEMENT MEDIATION BOARD CONSIDERED THE DISPUTE.

THE HOUSE VOTE CAME AS TOP GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS WHO COULD NOT BE QUOTED SAID EFFORTS TO SETTLE THE STEEL STRIKE HAD REACHED A STALEMATE AND GENERAL MOTORS AND ITS STRIKING 175,000 PRODUCTION WORKERS REMAINED AS FAR APART AS EVER.

HOWEVER, PRESIDENT TRUMAN TOLD HIS NEWS CONFERENCE THAT THE ADMINISTRATION STILL IS WORKING ON A POSSIBLE PRICE INCREASE FOR STEEL. HE ADDED THAT SEIZURE OF THE INDUSTRY WAS NOT YET UNDER CONSIDERATION.

AT THE SAME TIME MR. TRUMAN SAID THE SUGGESTION OF HENRY FORD 2ND FOR RELAXATION OF SOME GOVERNMENT PRICE CONTROLS WOULD LEAD TO WILD INFLATION.

THE PRESIDENT WAS REMINDED HE HAD INDICATED PREVIOUSLY THAT REPORTS FROM THE LAST QUARTER ON STEEL OPERATIONS WOULD BE STUDIED TO DETERMINE JUST WHAT INCREASED PRICES MIGHT BE JUSTIFIED. HE REPLIED THE FIGURES HAD JUST COME IN AND THAT THE OFFICE OF PRICE
